Paul says,—"Behold I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed; for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." We have no immortality till the last trump shall sound. Blessed day! haste, O haste thy dawning! Methinks I hear an echo—"It is coming, coming speedily." In this argument he says, "But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is not Christ raised. . . . . Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." This is not much like modern theology. We never hear a word about the resurrection at many funerals. What a sad departure from the teaching of Christ and his apostles!

Paul says, "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." He also says—"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself [not his spirit] shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

David said, "Then shall I be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." In his thirty-seventh Psalm he gives us a clear view of the inheritance of the saints. In that one Psalm he tells us six times that the righteous shall inherit the earth, and dwell therein forever. Jesus confirms this when he says—"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." When he gathers all nations for the final separation, he says to the good, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." In Dan. 7: 27 we read,—"And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." God told Daniel, after that great image had passed down into its divided state, representing ten kings,—the divided state of the Roman empire,—"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." This harmonizes with David,—"Their inheritance shall be for ever."

This will be at the time when God gives to his Son the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost part of the earth for his possession; and says to him, "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." This does not look like the conversion of the world. Christ says it shall be as it was in the days of Noah and Lot. Paul says—"When they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." Our ears are often saluted by ministers, who, amid all this confusion, darkness, corruption and apostasy, with a multitude of glaring signs as clearly indicating the coming of the Lord, as the red sky in the east indicates foul weather, are prophesying peace and safety for an apostate church and wicked world;—thus plainly contradicting God's Word.

In view of this terrible tide of wickedness and infidelity, my daily prayer is, "Let thy kingdom come." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

"WHAT SAITH THE LORD?"

Of the dominion of Canada, I mean, upon the subject of disturbing "any assemblage of persons met for religious worship"? A wholesome law, and one that ought to be known, at least by those careless persons who are liable to disturb meetings by sheer accident, and so come in unawares for the penalty.

In the 4th and 5th of Victoria, chap. 27, the law is found as follows:—"And be it enacted, that if any person shall willfully disturb, interrupt, or disquiet any assemblage of persons met for religious worship, by profane discourse, by rude or indecent behavior, or by making a noise, either within the place of worship, or so near it as to disturb the order or solemnity of the meeting; such person shall, upon conviction thereof, before any Justice of the Peace, on the oath of one or more credible witnesses, forfeit and pay such a sum of money, not exceeding five pounds, as the said Justice shall see fit." And in default of payment within a specified time, be imprisoned in in the district jail, not exceeding one month.

Such a law upon the Statute Book of a country is a tribute to Christianity; and other countries than our "Dominion" have similar stringent laws,—all countries where God is scripturally worshiped, and the equal rights of the citizens are regarded and duly protected. We have much to thank God for, since by his mercy and providence he has caused the body politic to secure our rights of property and conscience. We are not living in a "martyr age," but in an age of lax theology, of coldness and inexcusable indifference; in an age of "perils," an age of superabounding wickedness. Let us fear God, honor the King, Queen, or President, as the case may require; obey duly constituted authority, that we may lead peaceable lives in all godliness and honesty; for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God.

WERE WRONGS RIGHTED.

If stolen money, like laying hens, could cackle, what a racket there would be in some men's pockets and premises. If stolen goods, like chanticleer, could only crow, how many persons would be broken of their rest and kept awake by night. If the hire of laborers kept back by fraud could talk, what braying would din some employers' ears. If the wrongs of the widow and the orphan could speak, how many unjust ones would be continually troubled by the ringing of voices in their ears, saying, "Give us our rights." If some lordly mansions, reared by ill-gotten gains, could articulate, many a stone would cry out of the wall, and many a brick and beam from the timber would answer it: "Woe to him that procureth wicked gain for his house, that he may establish his nest on high."

If all things unfairly gotten and wrongly detained could be set free and remanded to their rightful owners, what a wonderful exodus would there be from house to house, from person to person, from purse to purse, from capital to labor, from labor to capital. If some "spirit medium" going from house to house could enter all the parlors and chambers—plain and princely—whose furniture was bought with other men's money, and could set the several articles in motion—each in the direction of its rightful owner—what a movement there would be among the mirrors, what a rattling among the silver plate, knives, forks and spoons; what bustling of chairs and tipping of tables; and would not many a bed take up itself and walk?

If evil spirits, at the present day, could enter into the various forms of property gotten by fraud, some things besides swine would rush into the sea! Many a fat, fancy horse—in the carriage or under the saddle—would, I ween, make its way rapidly down "the steep" and choke rider and all in the depths!

"As the partridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not, so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool." It is a great thing to have a conscience void of offence toward God and man; a great thing to be able to say, I have wronged no one, corrupted no one, defrauded no one.—Christian Union.

CONFORMITY TO THE WORLD.

To this vile world be not conformed, in holy writ we read;
We find no license to adorn, where there exists no need.
Shall we for naught spend time and means, but like the world t' appear?
And yet profess that we have done with all things needless here?

We must account for what we spend in all this extra show;
And whose approval shall we gain? Not that of God, we know;
Nor yet the world's; its just remarks reproach us for the same;
So we add naught in heaven or earth, by this, to our good name.

The bands of velvet, taste, and braid, but for a moment please;
And can we ask the Lord to bless while working over these?
Says one, "I feel reproved for this." Would you if it were right?
True freedom we can only find while walking in the light.

By thoughtless wandering from the light we fall into the snare;
But conscience will, if we'll obey, all condemnation spare.
We give our souls the wounds they feel, by self-indulgence here;
Self-conquest is the only path unto a holier sphere.

By this keen process let us be refined, exalted too,
And with the King of kings at last the city's gates go through.
Our height of glory there will be as here our works have been;
Each self denying act of love will be rewarded then.

MY EXPERIENCE.

E. T. ELDRIDGE.

For the encouragement of any of God's afflicted children who may read these lines, I will relate a little of my experience and God's dealings with me.

In the year 1849, though young, I became weary of the transitory joys of earth, and gave my heart to God; and in return received the pardon of my sins, with the assurance that my name was written in the Lamb's book of life. I was enabled to "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory"; and for four years I was permitted to meet with God's children in the sanctuary, and labor in my blessed Master's cause. But that privilege I was not long to enjoy; for God, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to lay his afflicting hand upon me, and I was stricken down by disease from which I have never recovered. Although my sufferings have at times been somewhat alleviated, yet I am still a sufferer. But in all these years of deprivation, God's grace has wonderfully sustained me. The Lord has been a present help in every time of need. Often has my heart been cheered by the thought that the bitter cup from which I have been obliged to drink was presented by the kind and loving hand of my heavenly Father, who does not willingly afflict his children. And today I can testify that the religion of Christ is perfectly adapted to the wants of the soul, both in prosperity and in adversity. I am rejoicing in the hope of a blissful immortality beyond the grave. I am looking forward with blessed anticipation to the glorious appearing of my Savior, who shall change these frail mortal bodies, and fashion them like unto his most glorious body. How transporting the thought that in that bright and beautiful home, which the Savior has gone to prepare for his faithful children, sickness, sorrow, pain or death can never enter. I love the Word of God. Precious treasure! Great is the consolation derived from the promises contained therein.

The Lord has been my burden-bearer, and I will trust him still. By the kindness of a good brother, I have of late been permitted to peruse the columns of the Crisis, and very highly do I prize it as it comes laden with the rich truths of the Bible. I receive various other religious papers, but none are so highly valued by me as the Crisis.

To the Editors, and those employed in its publication, I would say, Go on, dear brethren, in your noble work of spreading scriptural truths and winning laurels for your Master; and great will be your reward. Although your hearts may often be cheered by the testimonies of those who have been blest through your instrumentalities, yet eternity alone can reveal the vast amount of good you have accomplished. I ask the prayers of God's children that my faith fail not, and that I may have my lamp trimmed and burning, ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Chatham Mass., Feb. 27th, 1874.

Gems.

— Some hearts, like evening primroses, open most beautifully in the shadows of life.

— He who does evil that good may come, pays a toll to the devil to let him to heaven.

— Do not dread possible worldly trials; perhaps they will never come, and if they do, God will strengthen you.

There is nothing like a broken and contrite heart to teach us our need of prayer.

— There are two sorts of trials, the one of God's sending, the other of our own making. The former are wisely sent, but we must expect to suffer under those we bring upon ourselves.

— Drunkenness is a pair of spectacles to see the devil and all his works.

— Repentance without amendment is like pumping without stopping the leak.

— Let a christian's character be such that those cannot fail to admire it who live with him in his home.

— Whoever would be a pardoned sinner, must be first made a penitent sinner.

— There will be no need to teach a man to be virtuous, if God has made him holy.

— Children of God, like lillies of the valley, flourish best in lowly situations.

— When the multitude applaud, you should inquire what wrong you have done.

— Conformity to the divine will, is one of the desires always uppermost in a believers prayer.

— We make a wrong use of the Bible when we cannot bless God for its commands.

ADVICE TO MINISTERS.

The following excellent advice to ministers, by Prof. Finney, is worthy of a careful consideration by all who are engaged in preaching the gospel. Prof. F. is a man of very extensive experience and observation, who has had remarkable success as a minister of Christ, and is especially qualified to give advice to others.

M. G.

PREACHER, SAVE THYSELF.

I am not going to preach to preachers, but to suggest certain conditions upon which the salvation promised in this text may be secured by them.

1. See that you are constrained by love to preach the gospel, as Christ was to provide a gospel.

2. See that you have the special enduement of power from on high, by the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

3. See that you have a heart, and not merely a head call to undertake the preaching of the gospel. By this I mean, be heartily and most intensely inclined to seek the salvation of souls as the great work of life, and do not undertake what you have no heart to.

4. Constantly maintain a close walk with God.

5. Make the Bible your book of books. Study it much, upon your knees, waiting for divine light.

6. Beware of leaning on commentaries. Consult them when convenient; but judge for yourself, in the light of the Holy Ghost.

7. Keep yourself pure—in will, in thought, in feeling, in word and action.

8. Contemplate much the guilt and danger of sinners, that your zeal for their salvation may be intensified.

9. Also deeply ponder and dwell much upon the boundless love and compassion of Christ for them.

10. So love them yourself as to be willing to die for them.

11. Give your most intense thought to the study of ways and means by which you may save them. Make this the great and intense study of your life.

12. Refuse to be diverted from this work. Guard against every temptation that would abate your interest in it.

13. Believe the assertion of Christ that he is with you in this work always and everywhere, to give you all the help you need.

14. "He that winneth souls is wise;" and "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given" "But let him ask in faith." Remember, therefore, that you are bound to have the wisdom that shall win souls to Christ.

15. Being called of God to the work, make your calling your constant argument with God for all that you need for the accomplishment of the work.

16. Be diligent and laborious, "in season and out of season."

17. Converse much with all classes of your hearers on the question of their salvation, that you may understand their opinions, errors, and wants. Ascertain their prejudices, ignorance, temper, habits, and whatever you need to know to adapt your instruction to their necessities.

18. See that your own habits are in all respects correct; that you are temperate in all things—free from the stain or smell of tobacco, alcohol, drugs, or anything of which you have reason to be ashamed, and which may stumble others.

19. Be not "light-minded," but "Set the Lord always before you."

20. Bridle your tongue, and be not given to idle and unprofitable conversation.

21. Always let your people see that you are in solemn earnest with them, both in the pulpit and out of it; and let not your daily intercourse with them nullify your serious teaching on the Sabbath.

22. Resolve to "know nothing" among your people "save Jesus Christ and him crucified;" and let them understand that, as an ambassador of Christ, your business with them relates wholly to the salvation of their souls.

23. Be sure to teach them as well by example as by precept. Practice yourself what you preach.

24. Be especially guarded in your intercourse with women, to raise no thought or suspicion of the least impurity in yourself.

25. Guard your weak points. If naturally tending to gayety and trifling, watch against occasions of failure in this direction.

26. If naturally sombre and unsocial, guard against moroseness and unsociability.

27. Avoid all affectation and sham in all things. Be what you profess to be, and you will have no temptation to "make believe."

28. Let simplicity sincerity, and christian propriety stamp your whole life.

29. Spend much time every day and night in prayer and direct communion with God. This will make you a power for salvation. No amount of learning and study can compensate for the loss of this communion. If you fail to maintain communion with God, you are "weak as another man."

30. Beware of the error that there are no means of regeneration; and, consequently, no connection of means and ends in the regeneration of souls.

31. Understand that regeneration is a moral, and, therefore, a voluntary change.

32. Understand that the gospel is adapted to change the hearts of men, and in a wise presentation of it you may expect the efficient co-operation of the Holy Spirit.

33. In the selection and treatment of your texts, always secure the direct teaching of the Holy Spirit.

34. Let all your sermons be heart and not merely head sermons.

35. Preach from experience, and not from hearsay, or mere reading and study.

36. Always present the subject which the Holy Spirit lays upon your heart for the occasion. Seize the points presented by the Holy Spirit to your own mind, and present them with the greatest possible directness to your congregation.

37. Be full of prayer whenever you attempt to preach, and go from your closet to your pulpit with the inward groanings of the Spirit pressing for utterance at your lips.

38. Get your mind fully imbued with your subject, so that it will press for utterance; then open your mouth, and let it forth like a torrent.

69. See that "the fear of man that bringeth a snare" is not upon you. Let your people understand that you fear God too much to be afraid of them.

40. Never let the question of your popularity with your people influence your preaching.

41. Never let the question of salary deter you from "declaring the whole counsel of God, whether men will hear or forbear."

42. Do not temporize, lest you lose the confidence of your people, and thus fail to save them. They cannot thoroughly respect you as an ambassador of Christ, if they see that you dare not do your duty.

43. Be sure to "commend yourself to every man's conscience in the sight of God."

44. Be "not a lover of filthy lucre."

45. Avoid every appearance of vanity.

46. Compel your people to respect your sincerity and your spiritual wisdom.

47. Let them not for one moment suppose that you can be influenced in your preaching by any considerations of salary, more or less, or none at all.

48. Do not make the impression that you are fond of good dinners, and like to be invited out to dine; for this will be a snare to you, and a stumbling-block to them.

49. Keep your body under, lest, after having preached to others, yourself should be a castaway.

50. "Watch for souls as one who must give an account to God."

51. Be a diligent student, and thoroughly instruct your people in all that is essential to their salvation.

52. Never flatter the rich.

53. Be especially attentive to the wants and instruction of the poor.

54. Suffer not yourself to be bribed into a compromise with sin by donation parties.

55. Suffer not yourself to be publicly treated as a mendicant, or you will come to be despised by a large class of your hearers.

56. Repel every attempt to close your mouth against whatever is extravagant, wrong, or injurious amongst your people.

57. Maintain your pastoral integrity and independence, lest you sear your conscience, quench the Holy Spirit, forfeit the confidence of your people, and lose the favor of God.

58. Be an example to the flock, and let your life illustrate your teaching. Remember that your actions and spirit will teach even more impressively than your sermons.

59. If you preach that men should offer to God and their neighbor a love service, see that you do this yourself, and avoid all that tends to the belief that you are working for pay.

60. Give to your people a love service, and encourage them to render to you, not a money equivalent for your labor, but a love reward that will refresh both you and them.

61. Repel every proposal to get money for you or for church purposes that will naturally disgust and excite the contempt of worldly but thoughtful men.

62. Resist the introduction of tea parties, amusing lectures, and dissipating sociables, especially at those seasons most favorable for united efforts to convert souls to Christ. Be sure the devil will try to head you off in this direction. When you are praying and planning for a revival of God's work, some of your worldly church members will invite you to a party. Go not, or you are in for a circle of them, that will defeat your prayers.

63. Do not be deceived. Your spiritual power with your people will never be increased by accepting such invitations at such times. If it is a good time to have parties, because the people have leisure, it is also a good time for religious meetings, and your influence should be used to draw the people to the house of God.

64. See that you personally know and daily live upon Christ.

BY AND BY.

When wearied with life's journey,
And we often wish to die,
O let us all remember
There is rest by and by.

Sailor, the ship's deck pacing,
Without one star in the sky,
You soon will reach the harbor,—
There is rest by and by.

Pale woman at your stitching,
Who often grieve and sigh,
Remember, at your labor,
There is rest by and by.

Lone mother, by the bedside
Of your boy who soon must die,
There is an end to sorrow;
There is rest by and by.

Our task will soon be over;
Oh, swift the moments fly;
Let all of us remember
There is rest by and by.

"IN THE SWEET BY AND BY."

"In the sweet by and by" is a sweet, sweet song, gushing forth from hearts filled with joy and gladness in anticipation of the eternal spring-time and the dawn of the brighter day when the darkness of earth shall have passed away and the long looked-for kingdom of Shilo shall come.

"In the sweet by and by" there are beautiful flowers and sweet singing birds. Our hands may grasp the one, and our ears catch the sweet warblings of the other. Yes, for all the good—the ransomed and redeemed—there is a "sweet by and by," and they shall come to Zion with songs, and palms, and with crowns of glory on their heads. Be of good cheer, then; for when the hills and vales of time are all passed; when the cares and disappointments of life are all over; then there is the place, and the rest, and the glory unfading, appointed of God. O glorious inheritance, cleansed from sin! homestead, over whose roof is no darkening shadow or even cloud, and over whose threshold no voice of sorrow shall ever be heard, built upon the eternal hills, and standing amid the spires and pinnacles of celestial beauty, and among the palm-trees of the "city of foundations" from on high! all those who love the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ shall rest beneath thy shadows and bask in thy glories, in the "sweet by and by."—Ex.

The Power of Tracts.—A popular writer says "It is my conviction that more will have to be done through the press. Tracts can go everywhere. Tracts know no fear. Tracts never tire. Tracts never die. Tracts can be multiplied without end by the press. Tracts can travel at little expense. They run up and down like the angels of God, blessing all, giving to all, and asking no gift in return. They can talk to one as well as to a multitude; and to a multitude as well as to one. They require no public room to tell their story in. They can tell it in the kitchen or the shop, the parlor or the closet, in the railway carriage or in the omnibus, on the broad highway or in the footpath through the fields. They take no note of scoffs, or jeers, or taunts. No one can betray them into hasty or random expressions. Though they will not always answer questions, they will tell their story twice, or thrice, or four times over, if you wish them. And they can be made to speak on every subject, and on every subject they may be made to speak wisely and well. They can, in short, be made vehicles of all truth, teachers of all classes, the benefactors of all lands."—Wayside.

Pray right up.—Some years ago a slave in Virginia, named Jack, was remarkable for his knowledge of the gospel; and especially for his freedom from all gloomy fears in regard to his future eternal happiness.

A professing christian, a white man, who was of a very different temperament, once said to him:

Jack, you seem to be always happy. I wish you would tell me how you manage to keep steadily in this blessed frame of mind."

"Why, massa," replied Jack, "I just fall flat on the promise, and I pray right up!"

How many desponding christians there are who might profit by these words of the happy slave, now a freedman?

"Why do you show favor to your enemies instead of destroying them?" said a chieftain to the Emperor Sigusmund." "Do I not destroy my enemies by making them my friends?" was the Emperor's noble reply. Kindness is the best weapon with which to kill an adversary.

The seed sown will never spring up unless it is watered by prayer. I heard a man once say of his minister, "I love to hear him preach, because his preaching always causes me to pray."—Rowland Hill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE HUMAN MOUTH.

The mouth was doubtless originally designed for a two-fold purpose only; the first, to receive and masticate the food calculated to nourish the body; the second, to give utterance to the sentiment, and convey the ideas of the inner and true man to the outer world, by producing articulate sounds. It is composed of two lips, thirty-two teeth, upper and lower maxillary bones, one palate, two cheeks, and a tongue. It is also supplied with three salivary glands on each side. These glands furnish the only needful drink for our food, and of a quality, too, which is best adapted, in every respect, for the work of digestion. Hence, we should masticate or chew our food well, and give it time to mix with the fluids of the mouth, and drink but little of any kind of fluids while eating.

The mouth is so endowed as to enable it to break up and refine the food, the tongue throws it about, the teeth grind it, the palate and tongue taste it, and will not allow anything to pass this point unless it is of a proper kind, and properly prepared to enter into the sanctum sanctorum of the human constitution. Unless the sentinel station here is overpowered by main force, and an unnatural substance introduced, the working of the bodily functions will be conducted in perfect harmony. Nature has also intended that the mouth should rest between the hours of eating, so that the glands have time to gain strength, and prepare to conduct the next meal.

Drinking water, or talking, disturbs the glands of the mouth but little. Place, however, tobacco, or any other nauseous substance, in the mouth immediately after meals—as many unwisely do—and you keep up a constant working of those glands, and by-and-by they are prostrated, and the food must be washed down by drinks, thus depriving the stomach of the necessary fluids of the mouth to assist in digesting the food, forcing too much work upon the stomach, until its function is impaired, and dyspepsia is the result.—Health Reformer.

ENGLISH CHILDREN.

The new-born English aristocrat receives, as soon as born, a little bed with a hard mattrass. From its earliest age it is taken, warmly wrapped, into the fresh air. After the first year, its meals are reduced to three, and this rule is so unchangeable that no child thinks of requiring anything more. After breakfast it remains several hours in the open air, and then sleeps. The whole afternoon is passed outside. From earliest childhood, the children of the aristocracy have the extremities clothed in the warmest manner. Never are English children intrusted to the care of a young nursery maid, but to an elderly, experienced person, under whose direction they constantly are.

As soon as the young girl goes to school, the carriage of the head and shoulders becomes an object of attention, and under no circumstances is she permitted to sit otherwise than upright. "My child grows but once," says an English mother, "and therefore nothing is so important as her physical development." Everything else can be acquired later. An English child rises at seven, breakfasts at eight, dines at one, sups at seven, and at nine o'clock goes to bed. Until twelve years of age, it passes the greater part of the day in the open air, with only about four hours' mental work. An English maiden, at eighteen, is fresh and blooming as a rose, with light step, and eyes beaming with pleasure and life.

Of course, the life of gay society undermines to some extent what the early training has accomplished; but the sensible physical education of the first years leaves permanent effects, and the English woman remains equal to the duties of life and the requirements of wife and mother. If she does not continue perfectly well, she retains enough health to be ever beautiful.

One sees in Great Britain ladies of sixty with complexions fairer than those of our youngest maidens, and whose hair, though silvered, is yet abundant and handsome.—Galaxy.

Cure for Lock-jaw.—A correspondent of the Scientific American recommends turpentine as a cure for lock-jaw. He says: "Let any one who has an attack of lock-jaw take a small quantity of turpentine, warm it, and pour it on the wound, no matter where it is, or of what nature it is, and relief will follow in less than one minute. Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine; it will give certain relief almost instantly. Turpentine is also a sovereign remedy for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and spread the flannel on the throat and chest, and in very severe cases, three to five drops on a lump of sugar may be taken inwardly.

Prof. Gilman says, "The application of opium to the true skin of an infant is very likely to produce death;" and "a single drop of laudanum will often destroy the life of an infant." Thousands of infants are slaughtered by the use of opium in its various preparations, such as morphine, laudanum, paregoric, soothing syrups, and cordials. Parents, if you love your children, give them none of these things.

Protect Chest and Shoulders.—Exposing the lungs by inadequate shielding of the chest and back from the cold is too generally practiced, especially among the ladies. To cover the chest alone, most carefully, is not enough; there should be thick covering between the shoulders.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

JESUS, MY REDEEMER, LIVES.

Jesus, my Redeemer, lives,
Christ, my strength, is dead no more;
In the strength this knowledge gives,
Shall not all my fears be o'er;
Calm, though death's long night be fraught
Still with many an anxious thought?

Jesus, my Redeemer, lives,
And his life I once shall see;
Bright the hope this promise gives,
Where he is I too shall be.
Shall I fear then? Can the Head
Rise and leave the members dead?

I shall see him with these eyes,
Him whom I shall surely know;
Not another shall I rise,
With his love this heart shall glow;
Only there shall disappear
Weakness in and round me here.

Body, be thou of good cheer,
In thy Savior's care rejoice;
Give not place to gloom and fear,
Dead, thou yet shalt know his voice,
When the final trump is heard,
And the deaf, cold grave is stirred.

Laugh to scorn, then, death and hell;
Laugh to scorn the gloomy grave;
Caught into the air to dwell
With the Lord who comes to save,
We shall trample on our foes,
Mortal weakness, fear, and woes.

CONSOLATION.

"Brethren, concerning them who are asleep, ... comfort one another."—1 THESS. 4: 13-18.

"Comfort one another." We are accustomed to say that the believer needs comfort, specially when suffering from affliction, bereavement, or persecution. But indeed there are no times in his history when the consolation which may be derived from the passage under review may not be suitable.

It contains the "consolation with which we are comforted of God." In it "Life and Immortality are brought to light. Let us open our hearts to welcome the things which are wrapped up in these gracious and prophetic words.

The Thessalonian Church seems to have been greatly approved by the apostle Paul; it was a pattern church; it embraced men who had turned from the servitude of "idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." They were not waiting for what is termed the out pouring of the Spirit; not waiting for the fulfillment of predicted troubles, nor for the conversion of the world; but they were waiting for the Son of God, the Lord Jesus Christ; they knew that when he came from heaven their true dignity and happiness would commence, that Christ's waiting, watching, living saints would be changed.

But what of the dead? Paul meets their anxiety; he "would not have them ignorant concerning them who are asleep," and proceeds to make the following statements, viz.

1. That those dying in the faith, sleep in Jesus.

2. That those sleeping ones shall arise at the coming of the Lord in the air, and before the change of those then living.

3. That after their resurrection, the living waiting, watching ones, shall be caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air,—and

4. That those raised, and those changed, shall ever be with the Lord.

Other things are also implied which yield material for comfort. But these statements are emphatically made by the apostle as affording great consolation to the church. We will briefly examine them.

1. That those dying in the faith, sleep in Jesus. Such as by the operation of the word of the Lord, and through the power of the divine Spirit have become new creatures in Christ Jesus, have exercised repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, have turned from the service of idols to serve the living and the true God; these also live in a watchful state, waiting for the coming of the Lord. But whilst the Lord tarries, they die. The Thessalonians died; all of them have long since fallen under the power of death; they are waiting for the Lord from heaven, they expected the angelic prophecy would have been fulfilled in their day. (Acts I: 11.) And multitudes have since their time lived a life of faith on the Son of God, lived praying, hoping, expecting, but Jesus did not come, and they died; and unless there be a resurrection, they have perished; the apostle clearly shows this. (1 Cor. 15: 18.) And if so it be with them, they are unconscious, for they are at least as though perished until the morning of the resurrection.

Is not this a legitimate conclusion? There can be no consciousness in anything which is as though it had perished. But there will be a resurrection. Yes; and it is because there must be a resurrection, that therefore they are said to be asleep. Beautiful figure, not spoken of the body; that absolutely perishes, and at the resurrection God will give a body as it pleaseth him. (1 Cor. 15: 38.) But the spirit "sleepeth;" at death, it is taken charge of by Jesus, as Stephen's was (Acts 7: 59); it returns to God who gave it, remains hidden in God with Christ, and is, though living,—as we are whilst in deep slumber during the night's dark hours, —unconscious, knowing nothing of aught that passes in the heavens or upon the earth, until recalled by the voice of Jesus. We are at death in the same state and condition as was Lazarus, of whom Jesus said, "Our friend sleepeth." Just such a sleep was that of Lazarus, as a heavy slumberer's after a long day's toil, unbroken by all the din and bustle that may perchance take place around, and at the moment of awaking like Lazarus, utterly ignorant of anything which had occurred during his slumber, and ready to take up life's action from the moment of that life's arrest by death. And so we may, on the great Master's authority, change the words and say, the believer does not die, he only sleeps.

Jesus died for us—he died, and this death he feared, not suffering; no, but death he feared, or perhaps more correctly we should say, the result of death; he feared to be left in a state of death, and "he cried with strong cries and tears, to him that was able to deliver," that he might not be left in death; not left to remain dead; and he was heard in that (thing which) he feared. For our sakes he placed himself under the law to which humanity was subject, put himself on a level with mortals; he who knew no sin "was made sin for us," took upon him our sins, was treated as a sinner on our account, became amenable to the law against sin—to the penalty of non-immortality, or death. But as the result of his life, which was an embodiment of God's righteous law, and of his death, which was the God-demanded atonement, and as the apostle adds, on account of his strong cries and tears, which were based upon his life, and the atonement which he was about to make; he was heard in that thing which he feared; and though he died, which he came to do, he was delivered out from death, and rose the conqueror, robbing the grave of victory, and taking the sting from death. He ascended, the Immortal One, with power to give immortality to whosoever believeth in him; and thus, when the christian dies, he does so knowing that he also shall be delivered out from death at the morning of the resurrection, and therefore in the mean time, he only sleeps—only sleeps—has entered a state of repose after life's toil—a state of safety from every foe; a state predictive of restoration at the commencement of the millennial day.

The doctrine of the Resurrection we have not now to prove. Paul has settled that question in his wonderful writing to the Corinthian church, in the fifteenth chapter of his epistle.

2. That these sleeping ones shall arise at the coming of the Lord into the air, and before the change of the living (v. 15; 16.) That the Lord Jesus is coming from heaven to earth, that he will remain for a while over the earth, and summon his saints to meet him there, and farther, that the time of such coming is now approximately near, is the aspect of sacred truth generally accepted by the readers of the Rainbow.

That the coming of the Lord does not mean death, we think to be clearly shown by the fact that the sleeping ones to whom the apostle alluded had died, and had not arisen, but were predicted so to do at the advent of the Lord.

The apostle alludes to the personal manifestation of Jesus to his saints at a time prior to the millennial age, for the early church hoped it would take place in their day. The Thessalonians were "waiting," and were full of anxious thoughts relative to those who had died; but Paul assures them that the dead saints must rise again before the living should be changed. And note well the fact; the apostle did not chide them for their expectation, or intimate that it was a premature hope which must be cut off; neither did he inform them that the world must be converted to Christ before he could come again, but only in his second epistle, did he warn them that they were not to consider the trials to which they were then subjected as indicative that the crisis was upon them, but showed that certain definite and worse troubles would befall the church before the manifestation of the personal Antichrist. All the teachings of Paul in this, and throughout the whole of his epistles, go to show that he thought the coming of the Lord might be near, and that all christians were justified in, and to be praised for, such expectation. See the conclusion of the first chapter of his first epistle to the Thessalonians, and also his commendation of the church at Corinth, that "they came behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," and this because "the testimony of Christ was confirmed in them." (1 Cor. 1: 6, 7.)

It would appear from the language of the apostle that those to whom he wrote were sorrowing, even as those might sorrow who had no hope; for whilst the Thessalonians knew that the living believers should be changed at the coming of their Lord, and at once enter upon the glory, and partake of the dignity of Christ, they seemed to think it possible that the dead might be left in the grave till the general resurrection; to all such erroneous surmises the apostle gives an emphatic negative, "he would not have them ignorant concerning them who slept," —though a glorious truth that Jesus was coming, and that the living, watching ones, should be changed and raised into his glorious presence; yet, before they could be thus blessed, the dead must rise; those who had fallen asleep in Christ, must have the pre-eminence; "the dead in Christ shall rise first."

3. That after those sleeping ones have been raised from among the dead, the living, waiting, watching ones shall be caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air. (v. 17; 1 Cor. 15: 51.)

The testimony of the apostle is very clear upon this point also, and for this, the rapture of the church, they were waiting, they were "looking for that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God and Savior of us, Jesus Christ." This is very blessed.

There are many believers who profess to realize pardon and acceptance in Christ, and find it in their hearts to serve the living and true God; but comparatively few see it to be their happy privilege to wait for his Son from heaven.

Many are waiting for the conversion of the nations, and misquoting and misunderstanding the prophetic word; are expecting the heathen to be given to Christ as his inheritance, as the subjects of his grace before he comes to reign.

Many are looking for the return of the Jews; the manifestation of Israel; the open showing and rule of the personal Antichrist.

But not so the Thessalonians; not so the Corinthians, who were God-gifted to "wait for his Son;" not so many of the Church of Thyatira, who expected the "Morning Star;" nor many of the Church of Sardis, who had not defiled their garments," and had to watch lest their Lord should come over them as a thief; and yet again, the Church of Philadelphia was on the alert, for they had a measure of divine strength, and kept Christ's word, and therefore to them the especial promise that because they had kept the word of his patience (had patiently done his will and waited for him), therefore he would keep them away from the hour of tribulation, which should come upon all the world to try them that (love to) dwell upon the earth—"love to;" such is the force of the Greek text.

How is it that so many professing attachment to Christ shrink from the thought of his return? Is it not because their hearts have yet too great affinity to earthly things? And from this, or from some other reasons, their faith in their own security is not strong? They are not grasping with firm tenacity that their acceptance and faith in the Lord Jesus, as God's unspeakable gift, with all the heart, renders them secure. They love not the sound of the Lord's second coming.

The Thessalonians knew they were delivered from the "wrath to come;" they were so, if we view these words—"the wrath to come"—as referring to the terrors of the second death; and they were so if we read these words as more consistently referring to the time of fearful tribulation which is yet to come upon the world. They were delivered from it, for if they should, as they did, fall asleep before the Master came, they were free from it; or if living at the time of Christ's coming, they would have, in consequence of their faith in Jesus, and the promise of their Lord, been called up to meet him in the air before that time of trial came; and knowing this, they patiently waited and watched, and whilst watching they fell asleep, and that falling asleep is to them the moment of awaking. How so? Because to them time ceased. Because they slumbered, and still slumber, in deep sleep. Their works have stopped; their thoughts have perished; they know nothing, and in accordance with Scripture, are conscious of no device, and no imagination. When they awake, they will know nothing of history from their day till ours, nor of the rise and fall of kingdoms, or the changing dynasties which have passed away; so that, virtually, to the true believer in Jesus, the day of death is the day of the Lord's coming. "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching;" and if they fall asleep, dying in the faith, whilst watching, they are also watched by the Omniscient and Omnipotent Redeemer, are accepted as his waiting ones; and when he comes into the air, to hurl thence Satan to the earth, and to welcome his watching ones into his presence, these, the slumbering ones, shall rise first. "Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds." Yes; rapt up from the earth at some most unexpected moment. Watch!—Rainbow.

WHAT SHALL BE THE SIGN OF HIS COMING?

N. S. BRIAN.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—MATT 24: 30.

The question often arises in the minds of those who are looking for the appearing of the Savior, What will be the nature of the sign of his coming? Does the inspired Word show any light upon this subject? We believe it does. Christ said to his disciples, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." The place here spoken of, Paul says, is "a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

We believe when our Savior returns to earth he will bring this city with him. John says, "I saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven." We think the approach of this wonderful city, whose pearly gates, golden street, and walls of precious stones, the dazzling splendor of which will outshine anything this world has ever beheld, will be "the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." Then the tribes of the earth will mourn; and those who have been scoffing, and saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" will suddenly find their lamps going out. They go to those who have long looked, in faith, for the coming of the heavenly Bridegroom, and with tears and entreaties they pray them for help. But it is too late. The Savior has left the mediatorial seat. No priest remains to plead the sacrifice. Then a voice shall be heard, saying, "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast." The last trump sounds,—the dead arise. "Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together . . . to meet the Lord in the air"; and then comes the fiery indignation and perdition of ungodly men. "The wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." Ps. 37: 20.

"But we, according to the promise, look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." When the earth is renewed, the curse removed, and the glory of God fills it, and the wilderness and solitary places made glad, then this great city comes down and becomes the metropolis of the new earth—the capital of God's everlasting kingdom.

Let us continue to pray, "Thy kingdom come," for this prayer, taught us by our Savior, will be answered, and that very soon. We live in the most grand and glorious, as well as the most critical period of the world's history. Let us watch, and keep ourselves pure and unspotted from the world; for we know not what hour our Lord may come. What a glorious day it will be for those who are truly ready, when the sign of the Son of man appears in the heavens. We can then say, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us.

SIGNS OF THE NEARING ADVENT OF CHRIST.

REV. HORATIUS BONAR.

(Concluded.)

7. The spread of knowledge.—"Many are running to and fro, and knowledge is increasing." Dan. 12: 4. Nor is it knowledge of one kind, but of every kind, secular and sacred. It is, however, for the former that this age is specially distinguished. And Satan is putting forth his utmost resources of power and craft thus to lead men at his will. "He is the prince of all knowledge, where God is not known; of all power where God is not acknowledged; the bright archangel of the natural man, revealing himself in his angelic glories of natural knowledge, natural beauty, natural wisdom, and natural humanity." Thus does he play his part in this last age. Under these radiant disguises, he is bewildering the eyes of men, and persuading them that this diffusion of knowledge is the appearing of the Millennial dawn. So specious are his counterfeits that it is hard to separate the real from the false, the precious from the vile, for when he thus comes forth as an angel of light, clothed in every perfection that the natural heart loves and the carnal eye admires, who shall penetrate the deception and escape the snare, save those who "know all things," by reason of "the unction from the Holy One?" 1 John 2: 20. Most truly has the present state of the world been described by one of the world's own poets, when picturing the gay glitter of an evening assembly, over which was thrown—

"A dazzling mass of artificial light,
Which showed all things, but nothing
as they were."

So it is now upon the earth, among the heedless multitudes of the children of men. It is the world's midnight. They are eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage. Literature, science, art, philosophy, are all their own! Yet there is an artificial coloring, an unreal brightness, over all. There is music; but it is of the syren kind. There is eloquence, too, but it is "the words of man's wisdom," not that which speaks for God and "winneth souls." There is fervor, too, but it is the warmth of wild excitement, born in novelty and nursed by perpetual change. There is high thought, too, but it is often of the unhealthful cast, wrought off at the midnight lamp; not the deep musings begot in fellowship with God, and ceaseless converse with that inspired word which maketh wise the simple. And, in connection with all this, there is a proud air of independence, like that which said, "Our lips are our own; who is Lord over us?" There is a reckless determination to hold what opinions men please, unchecked and unreproved.

8. The Maturity of the Papal Antichrist.—Popery itself is no new thing on earth, so that its mere existence is no peculiar sign of the last day. But its progress and prevalence are entirely new. There is a maturity about it which, in other ages it could not claim. It is rising in stature, and fast hastening to its consummation. In extent of circle she stretches far beyond the territories of other days. In all regions of the earth she is planting her banner and claiming dominion over the nations. Never did she show herself more thoroughly in earnest. She is flinging her chains across the globe. With stealthy foot she has been advancing step by step, till now she walks abroad at noonday with the sound of the trumpet, lifting up her head in bold defiance. Her hand, like Amelek's, is "upon the throne of the Lord;" and she acts and speaks as if in nothing she would be restrained of all that she has imagined to do.

Never, since the Reformation, has Popery made so deadly and determined a struggle for the recovery of throne and altar. Hundreds of missionary priests are thrusting themselves into every corner, winding themselves into the confidence of the influential, and insinuating themselves with serpent-stealth and subtlety into all seats of power. They mark off their districts, and rear their churches everywhere, carrying on their work of proselytism at any expense, and by every method. They build with costly splendor; they adorn with most attractive grace; they cast the net with consummate art, that beneath its ample stretch they may entangle the thousands of every age, and class, and temper, who love a theatrical religion, that will gratify the carnal sense, and furnish men with a license for the commission of any amount of iniquity. They talk proudly, too, and boast openly of their success, casting off the mask of meekness and modesty which they had in some measure assumed; proclaiming loudly that as no heresy was ever allowed more than a duration of three centuries, the British apostacy has now reached its close. Thus they prophecy of their own speedy triumph, and of our hastening doom.

It is not my part either to confirm or to confute the prophecy. A few years will unfold it all. There may be darker days in reserve for Britain than many will believe. Her day has been long bright, her sky long cloudless. What nation has ever enjoyed a century of such profound tranquillity as we have experienced, unbroken save by a few political commotions, or a few murmurs of fretful discontent. The cup of trembling, which was put into the hands and pressed to the lips of every nation in Europe, in 1793 —1815, passed us by. The revolutionary earthquake shocks that have during this century successively laid waste every kingdom around us, convulsing nations and overturning thrones, tearing up a thousand hearths, and agitating ten thousand fearful bosoms with alternate despair and hope, reached us not, nor stirred even one ripple on our sea-bound shore. When God raised up Napoleon Bonaparte as the scourge of the Papal empires; when he called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made him ruler over kings, giving them as dust to his sword and as driven stubble to his bow, he appointed him his bounds that he could not pass over, and we were preserved, unmolested and secure. When every capital in Europe was in flames, from Moscow to Madrid, we were sitting each man under his own vine and fig-tree, with none to make us afraid. The enemy, with the vanquished might of Europe in his train, prepared to overwhelm us. He threatened, boasted, numbered his armies, talked of a second Armada; but in vain! We were secure. We needed "no bulwarks, no towers along the steep." We were Protestant, and therefore invincible. Our protest was our paladium. From our far-off lonely island, there went forth upon the earth the solitary voice that testified for Christ against Antichrist, in the midst of a world of idolatry and darkness. God heard the testimony, and he blessed the witness.

But since that time what has taken place? We have laid aside our protest, as too bigoted for an enlightened age like ours. We have struck our Protestant colors, and hung out the flag of neutrality; or rather we should say, of religious indifference. With our own hands, we have taken down the old ancestral standard which has braved three centuries of storm; allowing the spoiler to tear in pieces and trample under foot the inheritance of our fathers, the birthright of our sons; proclaiming to the world that our past protest was a stain upon our history, and that it matters nothing to a nation's well-being whether the Bible or the Koran be the basis of her statute book, or whether the national ensign be surmounted by the cross, the crescent, or the triple crown. We have little reason to hope that we shall ride out another storm as we have done the last. The anchor of our National Protestant testimony is gone!

9. The diffusion of Infidelity.—This at least is new. Our fathers knew comparatively little of this; and our fathers' fathers almost nothing. An infidel was rare indeed in their day; a man wondered at and shunned. Towards the close of the last century infidelity burst forth in France, and partially extended itself elsewhere. Of late years it has developed itself with prodigious swiftness, and assumed a bold and lofty attitude of assault. Its extent is incredible. The masses are thoroughly leavened with it. It has insinuated itself everywhere, and is eating out the very heart of everything like deep principle among men. It has corroded the cement by which society hangs together, so that nations and communities are now like walls or towers without mortar, ready to fall to pieces of themselves, or be levelled by the first blast. Its ferocity is alarming; its activity unceasing. Much of it is undisguised and confessed; but very much of it is still secret and unavowed. It taints the air; it blights life; it ossifies conscience; under it all good things wither. It is the worm at the root of all that is noble and excellent in these last days. Hence the hollow condition of things amongst us; the chill that is upon life's warm fellowships and offices of love. Social, political, kindred ties are worm-eaten and ready to break asunder. The erect bearing and manly vigor which religion imparts is no longer visible. Superstition has come to the rescue, and is trying to supply its place. But in vain! Expediency rules. Large masses of the people are either openly or secretly infidel, if not atheistical. God is not acknowledged. His yoke seems to gall men's shoulders. The nations are ready to cast it off. And what hope is there, what token, that this is to end before the Lord return to end it? Is it not a sign of his approach, and a denial of the possibility of a previous Millennium of holy blessedness upon the earth?

10. The increase of Immorality.—Like a flood it is swelling and widening in its course. It is without shame and without fear. Crimes that our fathers knew not of, are common among the nations. Licentiousness riots fearfully, perpetrating deeds without a name, so that it is "a shame even to speak of those things that are done of them in secret." Drunkenness staggers along every street. Blasphemy pours itself forth, till we shudder and close the ear against its horrid sounds. Murder has broken loose, and every day our newspapers are telling some horrible tale of bloodshed; man slaying his fellow-man, in fiendish hatred, or more fiendish love of gain; none spared; the parent slaying his children, the child his parent, the husband the wife, the wife the husband: no sanctity of relationship is any safeguard from the poison, or the bullet, or the knife, or the more brutal hammer. Oh, what a cry is going up to God from this land of ours, the cry of innocent blood, blood which a righteous God will yet avenge!

But the picture of our spreading immorality is one not easily drawn, save by the record of facts, facts which one man scarcely ventures to whisper to an other, too awful to be laid bare before the public eye. It calls for a prophet's eye to see it, a prophet's pen to record it, and a prophet's soul to weep over it "in secret places" before the Lord. Men are truly "lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-bearers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." All this is to come to pass in the last days, and to wax worse and worse till the Lord come. How vivid, then, and how numerous are the signs of the Advent,—signs of whose nature, whose progress and whose termination demonstrate irresistibly that there can be no Millennium before his coming.

11. The prevalence of superficiality and formalism in religion.—Form without power, a body without a soul, religion without vitality,—these are among the signs of the last days. The show of piety is wide-spread, but the thing itself occupies a narrow circle. There is much profession, but profession lies on the surface, and underneath all may be worldliness. Depth and solidity are wanting; the aspect of religion is unhealthy; the fresh hue of primitive times is departed; the intense vitality, which of right belongs to it, is dried up, so that, instead of its being the living source of motion to the world without, controlling or counteracting, or impelling its currents, it lies inert and passive, at the mercy of every outword movement. It is a worldly self-pleasing religion, adopted for fashions' sake, and used according to convenience.

Satan has now transformed himself into an angel of light, and under this fair disguise he is working with marvellous success. He is teaching us to build the tombs of our fathers, that we may rest content with the mere approbation of their principles without any imitation of their practice. He leads some astray into fatal error under the pretext of candor and the love of truth; others he saturates with the orthodoxy of the head, that they may become indifferent to the state of their heart before God. Some he persuades to deny the Bible; to others he lauds it, that he may make it a substitute for the God of the Bible. He allows us a wide range of religious feeling and sentiment, if he can only succeed in making them a substitute for God. He hinders not our being serious, earnest, solemn, if he can thereby feed the cravings of a restless, empty soul with something which may prevent us from seeking the bread of life. He permits us to denounce the world's vanity and hollow pleasures—to be weary of its unsatisfying round of folly, that he may delude us into the idea that this dissatisfaction with the world is a proof that we are religious, and thereby cause us to sit down contented when yet a great way off from our Father's house.

These outward things may be in themselves right and good, but what are they without the indwelling Spirit? What is truth without the True One? What is the perfection of church order without the vital power from above?—The body is there, but the living spirit has fled.

And are not these the signs of the last days? Is it not when the virgins are slumbering that the midnight cry is to be heard, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh?" And when the Son of Man cometh, "shall he find faith on the earth?" Where, then, is there room for a Millennium before the Advent?—Signs of our Times.

THE HOME OF THE BLESSED.

R. L. DYER.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." REV. 21: 1-3.

Then comes the reign of peace, when the true Israel shall inhabit the city, New Jerusalem, which is coming down on the same place where old Jerusalem now stands. And Jesus, the Crucified, will return, and be crowned King of kings and Lord of lords. The loved ones that now sleep beneath the clods of the valley will be there, and we shall be there, if faithful, and help crown our blessed Master.

It is glorious to anticipate the coming of that day, but how much more blessed it will be to enjoy the fruition of this blessed hope. Then we can sing, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" We cannot sing that while our loved ones are sleeping in the earth. "But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." This corruptible will put on incorruption, and this mortal will put on immortality. This is the Bible hope;—the hope of the apostles and prophets, and all the early fathers.

There is a theory that we get our reward when we die; but it is not Bible, and I shall use it as did Justin Martyr when in dialogue with Trypho. He said, "If, therefore, you fall in with certain who are called christians, who confess not this truth, but dare to blaspheme the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in that they say there is no resurrection of the dead, but that immediately when they die, their souls are received up into heaven, avoid them. The Bible teaches that there will be a resurrection of the flesh, and a thousand years in the city of the New Jerusalem, built and enlarged and adorned according to the prophets. Thus, therefore, those that are of faith are blest with faithful Abraham; and the same are the children of Abraham. God repeatedly promised the inheritance of the land to him and his seed; but they have never enjoyed any inheritance in it. They will receive it at the resurrection of the just. Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." The Psalmist says, "The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever."

Now to my mind it is impossible for these passages to have a fulfillment unless there be a resurrection from the dead.

Some say that it makes no difference what we believe, if we are sincere in that belief. I think it will make a great difference whether we believe the words of inspiration or man's theory. The prophet Isaiah says, —"Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out her dead." This will take place when the New Jerusalem comes down from God out of heaven. This is to be the capital of the new earth, and the home of the righteous.

I mean to be there—God helping me—and claim my mansion, and receive a crown of life, and live forever.

NO PLACE FOR THE ENDLESS SUFFERING OF THE LOST.

C. H. SHEPHERD.

The wicked are to be punished for their sins. The punishment is death. Everlasting death they will receive—the reward for their deeds in the earth. "Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner." Prov. 11: 37.

The righteous are to live and reign with Christ forever on the earth. It follows that the wicked must first be rewarded, in order for Christ and his saints to possess the earth. Therefore it is certain the earth will give them no place for endless suffering. We have sufficient proof, also, from the Word of life, that there is no other place in the universe for them. The Psalmist says, —"Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forever more." Again, "Whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me." Ps. 139: 7-10.

The presence of the Almighty fills the immensity of space. Where, then, can endless suffering exist? "For in the presence of the Lord is fulness of joy, at his right hand there are pleasures forever more."

Not only shall the righteous live eternally, by the wonderful love and mercy of the Most High, but the death of the wicked will also be demanded by it.

All praise to him who sitteth upon the circle of the earth,—who one day will look over his vast empire, and nowhere discover suffering; but all will be joy and happiness.

THE SAVIOR'S BITTER AGONY.

H. P. SIKES.

"And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." Luke 22: 44.

How great were our Redeemer's sufferings! Alas! my callous, unbelieving heart can have little realization of such terrible agony. Sometimes we think our trials are great, but what are they compared to his? Be ashamed, O my soul, that you should ever shrink from trial or suffering! Let them be patiently endured for Jesus' sake.

"Sweat, as it were great drops of blood." Perhaps some human beings may have been so weighed down with distress and sorrow as to cause perspiration; but what son or daughter of Adam ever experienced anguish deep enough to cause such sweat as this? O, what a depth of agony! Imagination tires when we try to fathom it. Even our divine Redeemer received the assistance of an angel to help him bear this terrible burden. What love he must have possessed to constrain him to be willing to go through such an awful scene! O, how great was the cost of man's salvation!

How insignificant do our own petty trials appear when placed beside those of our dear Redeemer. My brother, my sister, are your trials severe? Does your cup of sorrows seem to run over? Then look at them in comparison with those of your Savior, and they will dwindle away to a mere speck. Let us often make such comparison; it will do us good. Remember, it is written, "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him."

And why must the Lamb of God endure such awful agony? Alas! so despairing was our case, so wretched and hopeless our condition, that nothing short of this would save us. So strong the love of sin in our hearts, so naturally bent upon our own destruction are we, and withal so great are the machinations of the arch deceiver, that it takes the life-blood of the Son of God himself to redeem us. And love constrained him to do all this. Then what ardent love should we render in return. And what implicit, child-like confidence or faith should we repose in him. Well might the apostle say, "He that spared not his own Son, but gave him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." Surely, if my dear Redeemer would voluntarily undergo such untold agony for me, he will do anything else that he has promised.

THE SONG OF A TIRED SERVANT.

One more day's work for Jesus—
One less of life for me!
But heaven is nearer,
And Christ is dearer
Than yesterday, to me.
His love and light
Fill all my soul to-night.

One more day's work for Jesus:
How glorious is my King!
'Tis joy, not duty,
To speak his beauty;
My soul mounts on the wing
At the mere thought
How Christ her life hath bought.

One more day's work for Jesus;
Sweet, sweet the work has been
To tell his story,
To show the glory
Where Christ's flock enter in.
How it did shine
In this poor heart of mine.

One more day's work for Jesus;
In hope, in faith, in prayer,
His word I've spoken,
His bread I've broken
To souls faint with despair;
And bade them flee
To him who hath saved me.

One more day's work for Jesus,
Yes, and a weary day,
But heaven shines clearer,
And rest comes nearer,
At each step of the way,
And Christ is all;
Before his face I fall.

O blessed work for Jesus!
O rest at Jesus' feet!
There toil seems pleasure,
My wants are treasure,
And pain for him looks sweet.
Lord, if I may,
I'll serve thee more another day!—Ex.

"JUDGE NOT."

J. H. WHITMORE.

The errors of our fellow men do not in most cases call for the unmeasured denunciation and relentless severity that we are quite too apt to inflict upon the men who have committed them. An error, whether intentional or otherwise, is always a mistake. What can be plainer than the fact that a perfect man in every respect is incapable of making mistakes? But we all make mistakes; therefore we are all imperfect. Again, what can be plainer than that a perfect judgment requires on the part of the judge not only a perfect knowledge of what exact justice in each case demands, but also a thorough acquaintance of the motives, history and character of the person judged, together with a complete understanding of all his surroundings? But these requirements none of us possess; therefore we can never give a perfect judgment of men.

All human judgments therefore being necessarily imperfect, it is certain that every time we judge a man we are unjust to him, and an injustice to him is also an injustice to ourselves. As judges we are constantly making mistakes. We judge with the relentless severity of Draco, or with the leniency of some among the moderns who say that no man is blameable for anything that he may do or say. Let any one carefully read and solemnly consider the first five verses of the seventh chapter of Matthew, before he judges his brother man.

It may be asked, "Are we not then to judge any one?" No. Let us answer boldly, "No, we are not to judge men." But let me not be misunderstood. Though we are not to judge men, yet we may judge of their actions. In other words, we may, indeed we must judge of abstractions, of acts, by some standard of right and wrong. This right to judge of men's actions grows out of the necessity of our judging and knowing good and evil. The argument against judging men is not composed solely of the reason that we are necessarily imperfect judges, because a similar reason might be urged against our doing or saying anything; for it is obvious that we neither say nor do anything perfectly. None of our senses or powers are perfect. We never see anything exactly as it is, either with our physical or mental eye. But this is no good reason for not trying to see. But judging men as to their moral or religious standing is entirely different from anything else in the world. What a man does, his act, may be, perhaps must be, absolutely good or evil; but it is impossible that the doer of the deed should be as the deed itself, either wholly good or wholly bad. So that when we judge that a man is absolutely bad because some act of his is absolutely bad, we do him the grossest injustice.

A man is what his character is. But character is not made up of any single quality, nor is it shown by any single act. The motives or hidden springs of action, hidden from human eyes, are of the essence of character, and essential to its being understood. For instance, a man in passing a beggar hands him a silver dollar. The poor man, grateful for this unusual gift at once says, What a good man! how benevolent, how kind, how generous! And yet this man whom the beggar pronounced to be so good may have stolen a thousand dollars within a week, or cheated some poor orphan or widow of a large sum; and perhaps it was with the thought of assuaging the feelings of remorse that he gave the pittance to the beggar. The act did not prove that the man was either good or benevolent; though the dollar did the beggar just as much good as though it had been given with the purest motives. An act, in its immediate results at least, is in no wise affected by the motives which prompted it. A gun accidentally discharged may be as fatal to one's dearest friend as though it had been purposely aimed and discharged by an assassin.

"But," it may be asked, "did not our Savior say, "By their fruits ye shall know them"? Yes, but he did not say, By their actions ye shall judge men. He said, "Judge not." Knowing men, or forming an opinion of them from what they do, is not wrong; because we cannot help having opinions of mens' capacities and morals from what they do. Besides, men usually judge prematurely. They do not wait for the fruit; they judge by the blossom. The verdict of posterity is usually more just than that of one's contemporaries. We are all more or less ignorant, prejudiced, one-sided and selfish in our judgments.

Our Savior in speaking of false prophets said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." If a man predicts that a certain event will take place at a certain time, and the time passes and the event does not take place, then the prediction was a false one, and the prophet was a false prophet. But though we may know that he has proved himself a false prophet, we should not be justified in judging that he was a bad and wicked man. Possibly his motives were pure. If so, though his prophecy proved false, and he was false as a prophet, yet he was not false as a man or as a christian.

Let us remember the admonition of the Master, "Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." Luke 6: 36.

If we harshly judge and condemn men, we shall not only be unjust to them, but we shall ourselves become harsh, censorious, and unloveable. The merciful shall obtain mercy. Better that we should be deceived, than that we should condemn unjustly. "Therefore, judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts." Paul. Let us be sure to keep our own garden clear of weeds, our own eyes clear of beams; and in proportion as we do this honestly and intelligently, shall we learn to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with our God.

Gloversville, N. Y., March 5th, 1874.

LETTER FROM SR. M. M. EASTMAN.

My mother, Mrs. Mary Clark, died in Landaff, N. H., Feb. 3d, 1874, aged eighty-two years. She was a consistent Bible christian for over sixty years. She belonged to the Methodist church, but loved the doctrine of Christ's coming, and enjoyed reading the Crisis. She did not appear to have any disease, but she often said to people, "The lamp has about burned down." Though she loved life, yet she was willing to die; and when asked if she felt fully ready, she replied with earnestness, "Why, yes." She commenced failing about the middle of Dec. last, and slowly sank away, dying so easy we could hardly tell when she was gone. Her blessed hope imprinted a calm, peaceful expression upon her face, just as her life had always been. I never heard her express her faith about the state of the dead, till a short time before she died; when she said to an aged Methodist sister, "I believe we sleep till the resurrection."

Many of our Advent ministers, who came here to preach, fed her soul with the meat she loved. I am sure of this; and she wanted me to read to her as long as she had strength to hear. We feel deeply the loss of one of the best mothers with whom children were ever blest. While we stood over that lone grave, the sun shining so brightly into the narrow house in which the loved form was so soon to be shut up in darkness and silence, we thought, O, how terrible is death! But a little beyond is a glorious light; for Christ is soon coming to destroy Death. God's Word reveals a glorious resurrection from the dead. Isaiah, the prince of all the prophets, touched with inspiration from the Almighty, breaks out,—"Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise." Jeremiah looked down through the vista of time, and heard a voice of "lamentation and bitter weeping. Rachel weeping for her children, refused to be comforted for her children because they were not." "Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears; . . . they shall come again from the land of the enemy." In Matt. 2: 17, we have a record of the fulfillment of Rachel's weeping; but the last part is to be fulfilled when Christ comes and brings these children, whom Herod slew, and all who sleep in Jesus, from the land of the enemy; and as surely as the lamentation and bitter weeping has been fulfilled, so surely will the last part be fulfilled. Every christian should be comforted by this assurance.

God's inspired patriarch Job said,—"For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself and not another." Job was not here when the Son of God trod the earth, and he must be resurrected to see him in his flesh, when his Redeemer stands upon the earth in the latter day. The weeping sister Martha said to Jesus, "I know (like Job she was confident) that he [Lazarus] shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." Jesus said unto her, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." And to give a proof of his almighty power and ability to raise the dead, he restored the dead brother to life and to his weeping sisters. Can we doubt Jesus' words?

Jesus says, "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."

Says Paul,—"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" Paul might have said, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe," when Christ has demonstrated the fact in raising Lazarus and the widow's son.

Again Jesus says, "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more." Comforting thought! "Death can have no more dominion over them." In view of those Jesus had raised, he said "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

Paul says,—"Behold I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed; for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." We have no immortality till the last trump shall sound. Blessed day! haste, O haste thy dawning! Methinks I hear an echo—"It is coming, coming speedily." In this argument he says, "But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is not Christ raised. . . . Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." This is not much like modern theology. We never hear a word about the resurrection at many funerals. What a sad departure from the teaching of Christ and his apostles!

Paul says, "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." He also says—"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself [not his spirit] shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

David said, "Then shall I be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." In his thirty-seventh Psalm he gives us a clear view of the inheritance of the saints. In that one Psalm he tells us six times that the righteous shall inherit the earth, and dwell therein forever. Jesus confirms this when he says—"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." When he gathers all nations for the final separation, he says to the good, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." In Dan. 7: 27 we read,—"And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." God told Daniel, after that great image had passed down into its divided state, representing ten kings,—the divided state of the Roman empire,—"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." This harmonizes with David,—"Their inheritance shall be for ever."

This will be at the time when God gives to his Son the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost part of the earth for his possession; and says to him, "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." This does not look like the conversion of the world. Christ says it shall be as it was in the days of Noah and Lot. Paul says—"When they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." Our ears are often saluted by ministers, who, amid all this confusion, darkness, corruption and apostasy, with a multitude of glaring signs as clearly indicating the coming of the Lord, as the red sky in the east indicates foul weather, are prophesying peace and safety for an apostate church and wicked world;—thus plainly contradicting God's Word.

In view of this terrible tide of wickedness and infidelity, my daily prayer is, "Let thy kingdom come." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Landaff, N. H.

"WHAT SAITH THE LORD?"

Of the dominion of Canada, I mean, upon the subject of disturbing "any assemblage of persons met for religious worship"? A wholesome law, and one that ought to be known, at least by those careless persons who are liable to disturb meetings by sheer accident, and so come in unawares for the penalty.

In the 4th and 5th of Victoria, chap. 27, the law is found as follows:—"And be it enacted, that if any person shall willfully disturb, interrupt, or disquiet any assemblage of persons met for religious worship, by profane discourse, by rude or indecent behavior, or by making a noise, either within the place of worship, or so near it as to disturb the order or solemnity of the meeting; such person shall, upon conviction thereof, before any Justice of the Peace, on the oath of one or more credible witnesses, forfeit and pay such a sum of money, not exceeding five pounds, as the said Justice shall see fit." And in default of payment within a specified time, be imprisoned in in the district jail, not exceeding one month.

Such a law upon the Statute Book of a country is a tribute to Christianity; and other countries than our "Dominion" have similar stringent laws,—all countries where God is scripturally worshiped, and the equal rights of the citizens are regarded and duly protected. We have much to thank God for, since by his mercy and providence he has caused the body politic to secure our rights of property and conscience. We are not living in a "martyr age," but in an age of lax theology, of coldness and inexcusable indifference; in an age of "perils," an age of superabounding wickedness. Let us fear God, honor the King, Queen, or President, as the case may require; obey duly constituted authority, that we may lead peaceable lives in all godliness and honesty; for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God. C. P. DOW.

WERE WRONGS RIGHTED.

If stolen money, like laying hens, could cackle, what a racket there would be in some men's pockets and premises. If stolen goods, like chanticleer, could only crow, how many persons would be broken of their rest and kept awake by night. If the hire of laborers kept back by fraud could talk, what braying would din some employers' ears. If the wrongs of the widow and the orphan could speak, how many unjust ones would be continually troubled by the ringing of voices in their ears, saying, "Give us our rights." If some lordly mansions, reared by ill-gotten gains, could articulate, many a stone would cry out of the wall, and many a brick and beam from the timber would answer it: "Woe to him that procureth wicked gain for his house, that he may establish his nest on high."

If all things unfairly gotten and wrongly detained could be set free and remanded to their rightful owners, what a wonderful exodus would there be from house to house, from person to person, from purse to purse, from capital to labor, from labor to capital. If some "spirit medium" going from house to house could enter all the parlors and chambers—plain and princely—whose furniture was bought with other men's money, and could set the several articles in motion—each in the direction of its rightful owner—what a movement there would be among the mirrors, what a rattling among the silver plate, knives, forks and spoons; what bustling of chairs and tipping of tables; and would not many a bed take up itself and walk?

If evil spirits, at the present day, could enter into the various forms of property gotten by fraud, some things besides swine would rush into the sea! Many a fat, fancy horse—in the carriage or under the saddle—would, I ween, make its way rapidly down "the steep" and choke rider and all in the depths!

"As the partridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not, so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool." It is a great thing to have a conscience void of offence toward God and man; a great thing to be able to say, I have wronged no one, corrupted no one, defrauded no one.—Christian Union.

CONFORMITY TO THE WORLD.

To this vile world be not conformed, in holy writ we read;
We find no license to adorn, where there exists no need.
Shall we for naught spend time and means, but like the world t' appear?
And yet profess that we have done with all things needless here?

We must account for what we spend in all this extra show;
And whose approval shall we gain? Not that of God, we know;
Nor yet the world's; its just remarks reproach us for the same;
So we add naught in heaven or earth, by this, to our good name.

The bands of velvet, taste, and braid, but for a moment please;
And can we ask the Lord to bless while working over these?
Says one, "I feel reproved for this." Would you if it were right?
True freedom we can only find while walking in the light.

By thoughtless wandering from the light we fall into the snare;
But conscience will, if we'll obey, all condemnation spare.
We give our souls the wounds they feel, by self-indulgence here;
Self-conquest is the only path unto a holier sphere.

By this keen process let us be refined, exalted too,
And with the King of kings at last the city's gates go through.
Our height of glory there will be as here our works have been;
Each self denying act of love will be rewarded then.

MY EXPERIENCE.

R. T. ELDRIDGE.

For the encouragement of any of God's afflicted children who may read these lines, I will relate a little of my experience and God's dealings with me.

In the year 1849, though young, I became weary of the transitory joys of earth, and gave my heart to God; and in return received the pardon of my sins, with the assurance that my name was written in the Lamb's book of life. I was enabled to "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory"; and for four years I was permitted to meet with God's children in the sanctuary, and labor in my blessed Master's cause. But that privilege I was not long to enjoy; for God, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to lay his afflicting hand upon me, and I was stricken down by disease from which I have never recovered. Although my sufferings have at times been somewhat alleviated, yet I am still a sufferer. But in all these years of deprivation, God's grace has wonderfully sustained me. The Lord has been a present help in every time of need. Often has my heart been cheered by the thought that the bitter cup from which I have been obliged to drink was presented by the kind and loving hand of my heavenly Father, who does not willingly afflict his children. And today I can testify that the religion of Christ is perfectly adapted to the wants of the soul, both in prosperity and in adversity. I am rejoicing in the hope of a blissful immortality beyond the grave. I am looking forward with blessed anticipation to the glorious appearing of my Savior, who shall change these frail mortal bodies, and fashion them like unto his most glorious body. How transporting the thought that in that bright and beautiful home, which the Savior has gone to prepare for his faithful children, sickness, sorrow, pain or death can never enter. I love the Word of God. Precious treasure! Great is the consolation derived from the promises contained therein.

The Lord has been my burden-bearer, and I will trust him still. By the kindness of a good brother, I have of late been permitted to peruse the columns of the Crisis, and very highly do I prize it as it comes laden with the rich truths of the Bible. I receive various other religious papers, but none are so highly valued by me as the Crisis.

To the Editors, and those employed in its publication, I would say, Go on, dear brethren, in your noble work of spreading scriptural truths and winning laurels for your Master; and great will be your reward. Although your hearts may often be cheered by the testimonies of those who have been blest through your instrumentalities, yet eternity alone can reveal the vast amount of good you have accomplished. I ask the prayers of God's children that my faith fail not, and that I may have my lamp trimmed and burning, ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Chatham Mass., Feb. 27th, 1874.

Gems.

— Some hearts, like evening primroses, open most beautifully in the shadows of life.

— He who does evil that good may come, pays a toll to the devil to let him to heaven.

— Do not dread possible worldly trials; perhaps they will never come, and if they do, God will strengthen you.

There is nothing like a broken and contrite heart to teach us our need of prayer.

— There are two sorts of trials, the one of God's sending, the other of our own making. The former are wisely sent, but we must expect to suffer under those we bring upon ourselves.

— Drunkenness is a pair of spectacles to see the devil and all his works.

— Repentance without amendment is like pumping without stopping the leak.

— Let a christian's character be such that those cannot fail to admire it who live with him in his home.

— Whoever would be a pardoned sinner, must be first made a penitent sinner.

— There will be no need to teach a man to be virtuous, if God has made him holy.

— Children of God, like lillies of the valley, flourish best in lowly situations.

— When the multitude applaud, you should inquire what wrong you have done.

— Conformity to the divine will, is one of the desires always uppermost in a believers prayer.

— We make a wrong use of the Bible when we cannot bless God for its commands.

ADVICE TO MINISTERS.

The following excellent advice to ministers, by Prof. Finney, is worthy of a careful consideration by all who are engaged in preaching the gospel. Prof. F. is a man of very extensive experience and observation, who has had remarkable success as a minister of Christ, and is especially qualified to give advice to others. M. G.

PREACHER, SAVE THYSELF.

I am not going to preach to preachers, but to suggest certain conditions upon which the salvation promised in this text may be secured by them.

1. See that you are constrained by love to preach the gospel, as Christ was to provide a gospel.

2. See that you have the special enduement of power from on high, by the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

3. See that you have a heart, and not merely a head call to undertake the preaching of the gospel. By this I mean, be heartily and most intensely inclined to seek the salvation of souls as the great work of life, and do not undertake what you have no heart to.

4. Constantly maintain a close walk with God.

5. Make the Bible your book of books. Study it much, upon your knees, waiting for divine light.

6. Beware of leaning on commentaries. Consult them when convenient; but judge for yourself, in the light of the Holy Ghost.

7. Keep yourself pure—in will, in thought, in feeling, in word and action.

8. Contemplate much the guilt and danger of sinners, that your zeal for their salvation may be intensified.

9. Also deeply ponder and dwell much upon the boundless love and compassion of Christ for them.

10. So love them yourself as to be willing to die for them.

11. Give your most intense thought to the study of ways and means by which you may save them. Make this the great and intense study of your life.

12. Refuse to be diverted from this work. Guard against every temptation that would abate your interest in it.

13. Believe the assertion of Christ that he is with you in this work always and everywhere, to give you all the help you need.

14. "He that winneth souls is wise;" and "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given" "But let him ask in faith." Remember, therefore, that you are bound to have the wisdom that shall win souls to Christ.

15. Being called of God to the work, make your calling your constant argument with God for all that you need for the accomplishment of the work.

16. Be diligent and laborious, "in season and out of season."

17. Converse much with all classes of your hearers on the question of their salvation, that you may understand their opinions, errors, and wants. Ascertain their prejudices, ignorance, temper, habits, and whatever you need to know to adapt your instruction to their necessities.

18. See that your own habits are in all respects correct; that you are temperate in all things—free from the stain or smell of tobacco, alcohol, drugs, or anything of which you have reason to be ashamed, and which may stumble others.

19. Be not "light-minded," but "Set the Lord always before you."

20. Bridle your tongue, and be not given to idle and unprofitable conversation.

21. Always let your people see that you are in solemn earnest with them, both in the pulpit and out of it; and let not your daily intercourse with them nullify your serious teaching on the Sabbath.

22. Resolve to "know nothing" among your people "save Jesus Christ and him crucified;" and let them understand that, as an ambassador of Christ, your business with them relates wholly to the salvation of their souls.

23. Be sure to teach them as well by example as by precept. Practice yourself what you preach.

24. Be especially guarded in your intercourse with women, to raise no thought or suspicion of the least impurity in yourself.

25. Guard your weak points. If naturally tending to gayety and trifling, watch against occasions of failure in this direction.

26. If naturally sombre and unsocial, guard against moroseness and unsociability.

27. Avoid all affectation and sham in all things. Be what you profess to be, and you will have no temptation to "make believe."

28. Let simplicity sincerity, and christian propriety stamp your whole life.

29. Spend much time every day and night in prayer and direct communion with God. This will make you a power for salvation. No amount of learning and study can compensate for the loss of this communion. If you fail to maintain communion with God, you are "weak as another man."

30. Beware of the error that there are no means of regeneration; and, consequently, no connection of means and ends in the regeneration of souls.

31. Understand that regeneration is a moral, and, therefore, a voluntary change.

32. Understand that the gospel is adapted to change the hearts of men, and in a wise presentation of it you may expect the efficient co-operation of the Holy Spirit.

33. In the selection and treatment of your texts, always secure the direct teaching of the Holy Spirit.

34. Let all your sermons be heart and not merely head sermons.

35. Preach from experience, and not from hearsay, or mere reading and study.

36. Always present the subject which the Holy Spirit lays upon your heart for the occasion. Seize the points presented by the Holy Spirit to your own mind, and present them with the greatest possible directness to your congregation.

37. Be full of prayer whenever you attempt to preach, and go from your closet to your pulpit with the inward groanings of the Spirit pressing for utterance at your lips.

38. Get your mind fully imbued with your subject, so that it will press for utterance; then open your mouth, and let it forth like a torrent.

69. See that "the fear of man that bringeth a snare" is not upon you. Let your people understand that you fear God too much to be afraid of them.

40. Never let the question of your popularity with your people influence your preaching.

41. Never let the question of salary deter you from "declaring the whole counsel of God, whether men will hear or forbear."

42. Do not temporize, lest you lose the confidence of your people, and thus fail to save them. They cannot thoroughly respect you as an ambassador of Christ, if they see that you dare not do your duty.

43. Be sure to "commend yourself to every man's conscience in the sight of God."

44. Be "not a lover of filthy lucre."

45. Avoid every appearance of vanity.

46. Compel your people to respect your sincerity and your spiritual wisdom.

47. Let them not for one moment suppose that you can be influenced in your preaching by any considerations of salary, more or less, or none at all.

48. Do not make the impression that you are fond of good dinners, and like to be invited out to dine; for this will be a snare to you, and a stumbling-block to them.

49. Keep your body under, lest, after having preached to others, yourself should be a castaway.

50. "Watch for souls as one who must give an account to God."

51. Be a diligent student, and thoroughly instruct your people in all that is essential to their salvation.

52. Never flatter the rich.

53. Be especially attentive to the wants and instruction of the poor.

54. Suffer not yourself to be bribed into a compromise with sin by donation parties.

55. Suffer not yourself to be publicly treated as a mendicant, or you will come to be despised by a large class of your hearers.

56. Repel every attempt to close your mouth against whatever is extravagant, wrong, or injurious amongst your people.

57. Maintain your pastoral integrity and independence, lest you sear your conscience, quench the Holy Spirit, forfeit the confidence of your people, and lose the favor of God.

58. Be an example to the flock, and let your life illustrate your teaching. Remember that your actions and spirit will teach even more impressively than your sermons.

59. If you preach that men should offer to God and their neighbor a love service, see that you do this yourself, and avoid all that tends to the belief that you are working for pay.

60. Give to your people a love service, and encourage them to render to you, not a money equivalent for your labor, but a love reward that will refresh both you and them.

61. Repel every proposal to get money for you or for church purposes that will naturally disgust and excite the contempt of worldly but thoughtful men.

62. Resist the introduction of tea parties, amusing lectures, and dissipating sociables, especially at those seasons most favorable for united efforts to convert souls to Christ. Be sure the devil will try to head you off in this direction. When you are praying and planning for a revival of God's work, some of your worldly church members will invite you to a party. Go not, or you are in for a circle of them, that will defeat your prayers.

63. Do not be deceived. Your spiritual power with your people will never be increased by accepting such invitations at such times. If it is a good time to have parties, because the people have leisure, it is also a good time for religious meetings, and your influence should be used to draw the people to the house of God.

64. See that you personally know and daily live upon Christ.

BY AND BY.

When wearied with life's journey,
And we often wish to die,
O let us all remember
There is rest by and by.

Sailor, the ship's deck pacing,
Without one star in the sky,
You soon will reach the harbor,—
There is rest by and by.

Pale woman at your stitching,
Who often grieve and sigh,
Remember, at your labor,
There is rest by and by.

Lone mother, by the bedside
Of your boy who soon must die,
There is an end to sorrow;
There is rest by and by.

Our task will soon be over;
Oh, swift the moments fly;
Let all of us remember
There is rest by and by.

"IN THE SWEET BY AND BY."

"In the sweet by and by" is a sweet, sweet song, gushing forth from hearts filled with joy and gladness in anticipation of the eternal spring-time and the dawn of the brighter day when the darkness of earth shall have passed away and the long looked-for kingdom of Shilo shall come.

"In the sweet by and by" there are beautiful flowers and sweet singing birds. Our hands may grasp the one, and our ears catch the sweet warblings of the other. Yes, for all the good—the ransomed and redeemed—there is a "sweet by and by," and they shall come to Zion with songs, and palms, and with crowns of glory on their heads. Be of good cheer, then; for when the hills and vales of time are all passed; when the cares and disappointments of life are all over; then there is the place, and the rest, and the glory unfading, appointed of God. O glorious inheritance, cleansed from sin! homestead, over whose roof is no darkening shadow or even cloud, and over whose threshold no voice of sorrow shall ever be heard, built upon the eternal hills, and standing amid the spires and pinnacles of celestial beauty, and among the palm-trees of the "city of foundations" from on high! all those who love the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ shall rest beneath thy shadows and bask in thy glories, in the "sweet by and by."—Ez.

THE POWER OF TRACTS.—A popular writer says "It is my conviction that more will have to be done through the press. Tracts can go everywhere. Tracts know no fear. Tracts never tire. Tracts never die. Tracts can be multiplied without end by the press. Tracts can travel at little expense. They run up and down like the angels of God, blessing all, giving to all, and asking no gift in return. They can talk to one as well as to a multitude; and to a multitude as well as to one. They require no public room to tell their story in. They can tell it in the kitchen or the shop, the parlor or the closet, in the railway carriage or in the omnibus, on the broad highway or in the footpath through the fields. They take no note of scoffs, or jeers, or taunts. No one can betray them into hasty or random expressions. Though they will not always answer questions, they will tell their story twice, or thrice, or four times over, if you wish them. And they can be made to speak on every subject, and on every subject they may be made to speak wisely and well. They can, in short, be made vehicles of all truth, teachers of all classes, the benefactors of all lands."—Wayside.

PRAY RIGHT UP.—Some years ago a slave in Virginia, named Jack, was remarkable for his knowledge of the gospel, and especially for his freedom from all gloomy fears in regard to his future eternal happiness.

A professing christian, a white man, who was of a very different temperament, once said to him:

Jack, you seem to be always happy. I wish you would tell me how you manage to keep steadily in this blessed frame of mind."

"Why, massa," replied Jack, "I just fall flat on the promise, and I pray right up!"

How many desponding christians there are who might profit by these words of the happy slave, now a freedman?

"WHY do you show favor to your enemies instead of destroying them?" said a chieftain to the Emperor Sigusmund." "Do I not destroy my enemies by making them my friends?" was the Emperor's noble reply. Kindness is the best weapon with which to kill an adversary.

THE seed sown will never spring up unless it is watered by prayer. I heard a man once say of his minister, "I love to hear him preach, because his preaching always causes me to pray."—Rowland Hill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE HUMAN MOUTH.

The mouth was doubtless originally designed for a two-fold purpose only; the first, to receive and masticate the food calculated to nourish the body; the second, to give utterance to the sentiment, and convey the ideas of the inner and true man to the outer world, by producing articulate sounds. It is composed of two lips, thirty-two teeth, upper and lower maxillary bones, one palate, two cheeks, and a tongue. It is also supplied with three salivary glands on each side. These glands furnish the only needful drink for our food, and of a quality, too, which is best adapted, in every respect, for the work of digestion. Hence, we should masticate or chew our food well, and give it time to mix with the fluids of the mouth, and drink but little of any kind of fluids while eating.

The mouth is so endowed as to enable it to break up and refine the food, the tongue throws it about, the teeth grind it, the palate and tongue taste it, and will not allow anything to pass this point unless it is of a proper kind, and properly prepared to enter into the sanctum sanctorum of the human constitution. Unless the sentinel station here is overpowered by main force, and an unnatural substance introduced, the working of the bodily functions will be conducted in perfect harmony. Nature has also intended that the mouth should rest between the hours of eating, so that the glands have time to gain strength, and prepare to conduct the next meal.

Drinking water, or talking, disturbs the glands of the mouth but little. Place, however, tobacco, or any other nauseous substance, in the mouth immediately after meals—as many unwisely do—and you keep up a constant working of those glands, and by-and-by they are prostrated, and the food must be washed down by drinks, thus depriving the stomach of the necessary fluids of the mouth to assist in digesting the food, forcing too much work upon the stomach, until its function is impaired, and dyspepsia is the result.—Health Reformer.

ENGLISH CHILDREN.

The new-born English aristocrat receives, as soon as born, a little bed with a hard mattrass. From its earliest age it is taken, warmly wrapped, into the fresh air. After the first year, its meals are reduced to three, and this rule is so unchangeable that no child thinks of requiring anything more. After breakfast it remains several hours in the open air, and then sleeps. The whole afternoon is passed outside. From earliest childhood, the children of the aristocracy have the extremities clothed in the warmest manner. Never are English children intrusted to the care of a young nursery maid, but to an elderly, experienced person, under whose direction they constantly are.

As soon as the young girl goes to school, the carriage of the head and shoulders becomes an object of attention, and under no circumstances is she permitted to sit otherwise than upright. "My child grows but once," says an English mother, "and therefore nothing is so important as her physical development." Everything else can be acquired later. An English child rises at seven, breakfasts at eight, dines at one, sups at seven, and at nine o'clock goes to bed. Until twelve years of age, it passes the greater part of the day in the open air, with only about four hours' mental work. An English maiden, at eighteen, is fresh and blooming as a rose, with light step, and eyes beaming with pleasure and life.

Of course, the life of gay society undermines to some extent what the early training has accomplished; but the sensible physical education of the first years leaves permanent effects, and the English woman remains equal to the duties of life and the requirements of wife and mother. If she does not continue perfectly well, she retains enough health to be ever beautiful.

One sees in Great Britain ladies of sixty with complexions fairer than those of our youngest maidens, and whose hair, though silvered, is yet abundant and handsome.—Galaxy.

CURE FOR LOCK-JAW.—A correspondent of the Scientific American recommends turpentine as a cure for lock-jaw. He says: "Let any one who has an attack of lock-jaw take a small quantity of turpentine, warm it, and pour it on the wound, no matter where it is, or of what nature it is, and relief will follow in less than one minute. Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine; it will give certain relief almost instantly. Turpentine is also a sovereign remedy for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and spread the flannel on the throat and chest, and in very severe cases, three to five drops on a lump of sugar may be taken inwardly.

PROF. GILMAN says, "The application of opium to the true skin of an infant is very likely to produce death;" and "a single drop of laudanum will often destroy the life of an infant." Thousands of infants are slaughtered by the use of opium in its various preparations, such as morphine, laudanum, paregoric, soothing syrups, and cordials. Parents, if you love your children, give them none of these things.

PROTECT CHEST AND SHOULDERS.—Exposing the lungs by inadequate shielding of the chest and back from the cold is too generally practiced, especially among the ladies. To cover the chest alone, most carefully, is not enough; there should be thick covering between the shoulders.

The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

JESUS, MY REDEEMER, LIVES.

Jesus, my Redeemer, lives,
Christ, my strength, is dead no more;
In the strength this knowledge gives,
Shall not all my fears be o'er;
Calm, though death's long night be fraught
Still with many an anxious thought?

Jesus, my Redeemer, lives,
And his life I once shall see;
Bright the hope this promise gives,
Where he is I too shall be.
Shall I fear then? Can the Head
Rise and leave the members dead?

I shall see him with these eyes,
Him whom I shall surely know;
Not another shall I rise,
With his love this heart shall glow;
Only there shall disappear
Weakness in and round me here.

Body, be thou of good cheer,
In thy Savior's care rejoice;
Give not place to gloom and fear,
Dead, thou yet shalt know his voice,
When the final trump is heard,
And the deaf, cold grave is stirred.

Laugh to scorn, then, death and hell;
Laugh to scorn the gloomy grave;
Caught into the air to dwell
With the Lord who comes to save,
We shall trample on our foes,
Mortal weakness, fear, and woes.

CONSOLATION.

"Brethren, concerning them who are asleep, ... comfort one another."—1 Thess. 4: 13-18.

"Comfort one another." We are accustomed to say that the believer needs comfort, specially when suffering from affliction, bereavement, or persecution. But indeed there are no times in his history when the consolation which may be derived from the passage under review may not be suitable.

It contains the "consolation with which we are comforted of God." In it "Life and Immortality are brought to light. Let us open our hearts to welcome the things which are wrapped up in these gracious and prophetic words.

The Thessalonian Church seems to have been greatly approved by the apostle Paul; it was a pattern church; it embraced men who had turned from the servitude of "idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." They were not waiting for what is termed the out pouring of the Spirit; not waiting for the fulfillment of predicted troubles, nor for the conversion of the world; but they were waiting for the Son of God, the Lord Jesus Christ; they knew that when he came from heaven their true dignity and happiness would commence, that Christ's waiting, watching, living saints would be changed.

But what of the dead? Paul meets their anxiety; he "would not have them ignorant concerning them who are asleep," and proceeds to make the following statements, viz.

1. That those dying in the faith, sleep in Jesus.

2. That those sleeping ones shall arise at the coming of the Lord in the air, and before the change of those then living.

3. That after their resurrection, the living waiting, watching ones, shall be caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air,—and

4. That those raised, and those changed, shall ever be with the Lord.

Other things are also implied which yield material for comfort. But these statements are emphatically made by the apostle as affording great consolation to the church. We will briefly examine them.

1. That those dying in the faith, sleep in Jesus. Such as by the operation of the word of the Lord, and through the power of the divine Spirit have become new creatures in Christ Jesus, have exercised repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, have turned from the service of idols to serve the living and the true God; these also live in a watchful state, waiting for the coming of the Lord. But whilst the Lord tarries, they die. The Thessalonians died; all of them have long since fallen under the power of death; they are waiting for the Lord from heaven, they expected the angelic prophecy would have been fulfilled in their day. (Acts I: 11.) And multitudes have since their time lived a life of faith on the Son of God, lived praying, hoping, expecting, but Jesus did not come, and they died; and unless there be a resurrection, they have perished; the apostle clearly shows this. (1 Cor. 15: 18.) And if so it be with them, they are unconscious, for they are at least as though perished until the morning of the resurrection.

Is not this a legitimate conclusion? There can be no consciousness in anything which is as though it had perished. But there will be a resurrection. Yes; and it is because there must be a resurrection, that therefore they are said to be asleep. Beautiful figure, not spoken of the body; that absolutely perishes, and at the resurrection God will give a body as it pleaseth him. (1 Cor. 15: 38.) But the spirit "sleepeth;" at death, it is taken charge of by Jesus, as Stephen's was (Acts 7: 59); it returns to God who gave it, remains hidden in God with Christ, and is, though living,—as we are whilst in deep slumber during the night's dark hours,—unconscious, knowing nothing of aught that passes in the heavens or upon the earth, until recalled by the voice of Jesus. We are at death in the same state and condition as was Lazarus, of whom Jesus said, "Our friend sleepeth." Just such a sleep was that of Lazarus, as a heavy slumberer's after a long day's toil, unbroken by all the din and bustle that may perchance take place around, and at the moment of awaking like Lazarus, utterly ignorant of anything which had occurred during his slumber, and ready to take up life's action from the moment of that life's arrest by death. And so we may, on the great Master's authority, change the words and say, the believer does not die, he only sleeps.

Jesus died for us—he died, and this death he feared, not suffering; no, but death he feared, or perhaps more correctly we should say, the result of death; he feared to be left in a state of death, and "he cried with strong cries and tears, to him that was able to deliver," that he might not be left in death; not left to remain dead; and he was heard in that (thing which) he feared. For our sakes he placed himself under the law to which humanity was subject, put himself on a level with mortals; he who knew no sin "was made sin for us," took upon him our sins, was treated as a sinner on our account, became amenable to the law against sin—to the penalty of non-immortality, or death. But as the result of his life, which was an embodiment of God's righteous law, and of his death, which was the God-demanded atonement, and as the apostle adds, on account of his strong cries and tears, which were based upon his life, and the atonement which he was about to make; he was heard in that thing which he feared; and though he died, which he came to do, he was delivered out from death, and rose the conqueror, robbing the grave of victory, and taking the sting from death. He ascended, the Immortal One, with power to give immortality to whosoever believeth in him; and thus, when the christian dies, he does so knowing that he also shall be delivered out from death at the morning of the resurrection, and therefore in the mean time, he only sleeps—only sleeps—has entered a state of repose after life's toil—a state of safety from every foe; a state predictive of restoration at the commencement of the millennial day.

The doctrine of the Resurrection we have not now to prove. Paul has settled that question in his wonderful writing to the Corinthian church, in the fifteenth chapter of his epistle.

2. That these sleeping ones shall arise at the coming of the Lord into the air, and before the change of the living (v. 15; 16.) That the Lord Jesus is coming from heaven to earth, that he will remain for a while over the earth, and summon his saints to meet him there, and farther, that the time of such coming is now approximately near, is the aspect of sacred truth generally accepted by the readers of the Rainbow.

That the coming of the Lord does not mean death, we think to be clearly shown by the fact that the sleeping ones to whom the apostle alluded had died, and had not arisen, but were predicted so to do at the advent of the Lord.

The apostle alludes to the personal manifestation of Jesus to his saints at a time prior to the millennial age, for the early church hoped it would take place in their day. The Thessalonians were "waiting," and were full of anxious thoughts relative to those who had died; but Paul assures them that the dead saints must rise again before the living should be changed. And note well the fact; the apostle did not chide them for their expectation, or intimate that it was a premature hope which must be cut off; neither did he inform them that the world must be converted to Christ before he could come again, but only in his second epistle, did he warn them that they were not to consider the trials to which they were then subjected as indicative that the crisis was upon them, but showed that certain definite and worse troubles would befall the church before the manifestation of the personal Antichrist. All the teachings of Paul in this, and throughout the whole of his epistles, go to show that he thought the coming of the Lord might be near, and that all christians were justified in, and to be praised for, such expectation. See the conclusion of the first chapter of his first epistle to the Thessalonians, and also his commendation of the church at Corinth, that "they came behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," and this because "the testimony of Christ was confirmed in them." (1 Cor. 1: 6, 7.)

It would appear from the language of the apostle that those to whom he wrote were sorrowing, even as those might sorrow who had no hope; for whilst the Thessalonians knew that the living believers should be changed at the coming of their Lord, and at once enter upon the glory, and partake of the dignity of Christ, they seemed to think it possible that the dead might be left in the grave till the general resurrection; to all such erroneous surmises the apostle gives an emphatic negative, "he would not have them ignorant concerning them who slept,"—though a glorious truth that Jesus was coming, and that the living, watching ones, should be changed and raised into his glorious presence; yet, before they could be thus blessed, the dead must rise; those who had fallen asleep in Christ, must have the pre-eminence; "the dead in Christ shall rise first."

3. That after those sleeping ones have been raised from among the dead, the living, waiting, watching ones shall be caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air. (v. 17; 1 Cor. 15: 51.)

The testimony of the apostle is very clear upon this point also, and for this, the rapture of the church, they were waiting, they were "looking for that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God and Savior of us, Jesus Christ." This is very blessed.

There are many believers who profess to realize pardon and acceptance in Christ, and find it in their hearts to serve the living and true God; but comparatively few see it to be their happy privilege to wait for his Son from heaven.

Many are waiting for the conversion of the nations, and misquoting and misunderstanding the prophetic word; are expecting the heathen to be given to Christ as his inheritance, as the subjects of his grace before he comes to reign.

Many are looking for the return of the Jews; the manifestation of Israel; the open showing and rule of the personal Antichrist.

But not so the Thessalonians; not so the Corinthians, who were God-gifted to "wait for his Son;" not so many of the Church of Thyatira, who expected the "Morning Star;" nor many of the Church of Sardis, who had not defiled their garments," and had to watch lest their Lord should come over them as a thief; and yet again, the Church of Philadelphia was on the alert, for they had a measure of divine strength, and kept Christ's word, and therefore to them the especial promise that because they had kept the word of his patience (had patiently done his will and waited for him), therefore he would keep them away from the hour of tribulation, which should come upon all the world to try them that (love to) dwell upon the earth—"love to;" such is the force of the Greek text.

How is it that so many professing attachment to Christ shrink from the thought of his return? Is it not because their hearts have yet too great affinity to earthly things? And from this, or from some other reasons, their faith in their own security is not strong? They are not grasping with firm tenacity that their acceptance and faith in the Lord Jesus, as God's unspeakable gift, with all the heart, renders them secure. They love not the sound of the Lord's second coming.

The Thessalonians knew they were delivered from the "wrath to come;" they were so, if we view these words—"the wrath to come"—as referring to the terrors of the second death; and they were so if we read these words as more consistently referring to the time of fearful tribulation which is yet to come upon the world. They were delivered from it, for if they should, as they did, fall asleep before the Master came, they were free from it; or if living at the time of Christ's coming, they would have, in consequence of their faith in Jesus, and the promise of their Lord, been called up to meet him in the air before that time of trial came; and knowing this, they patiently waited and watched, and whilst watching they fell asleep, and that falling asleep is to them the moment of awaking. How so? Because to them time ceased. Because they slumbered, and still slumber, in deep sleep. Their works have stopped; their thoughts have perished; they know nothing, and in accordance with Scripture, are conscious of no device, and no imagination. When they awake, they will know nothing of history from their day till ours, nor of the rise and fall of kingdoms, or the changing dynasties which have passed away; so that, virtually, to the true believer in Jesus, the day of death is the day of the Lord's coming. "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching;" and if they fall asleep, dying in the faith, whilst watching, they are also watched by the Omniscient and Omnipotent Redeemer, are accepted as his waiting ones; and when he comes into the air, to hurl thence Satan to the earth, and to welcome his watching ones into his presence, these, the slumbering ones, shall rise first. "Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds." Yes; rapt up from the earth at some most unexpected moment. Watch!—Rainbow.

WHAT SHALL BE THE SIGN OF HIS COMING?

N. S. BRIAN.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—Matt 24: 30.

The question often arises in the minds of those who are looking for the appearing of the Savior, What will be the nature of the sign of his coming? Does the inspired Word show any light upon this subject? We believe it does. Christ said to his disciples, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." The place here spoken of, Paul says, is "a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

We believe when our Savior returns to earth he will bring this city with him. John says, "I saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven." We think the approach of this wonderful city, whose pearly gates, golden street, and walls of precious stones, the dazzling splendor of which will outshine anything this world has ever beheld, will be "the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." Then the tribes of the earth will mourn; and those who have been scoffing, and saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" will suddenly find their lamps going out. They go to those who have long looked, in faith, for the coming of the heavenly Bridegroom, and with tears and entreaties they pray them for help. But it is too late. The Savior has left the mediatorial seat. No priest remains to plead the sacrifice. Then a voice shall be heard, saying, "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast." The last trump sounds,—the dead arise. "Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together . . . to meet the Lord in the air"; and then comes the fiery indignation and perdition of ungodly men. "The wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." Ps. 37: 20.

"But we, according to the promise, look for a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." When the earth is renewed, the curse removed, and the glory of God fills it, and the wilderness and solitary places made glad, then this great city comes down and becomes the metropolis of the new earth—the capital of God's everlasting kingdom.

Let us continue to pray, "Thy kingdom come," for this prayer, taught us by our Savior, will be answered, and that very soon. We live in the most grand and glorious, as well as the most critical period of the world's history. Let us watch, and keep ourselves pure and unspotted from the world; for we know not what hour our Lord may come. What a glorious day it will be for those who are truly ready, when the sign of the Son of man appears in the heavens. We can then say, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us.

SIGNS OF THE NEARING ADVENT OF CHRIST.

REV. HORATIUS BONAR.

(Concluded.)

7. The spread of knowledge.—"Many are running to and fro, and knowledge is increasing." Dan. 12: 4. Nor is it knowledge of one kind, but of every kind, secular and sacred. It is, however, for the former that this age is specially distinguished. And Satan is putting forth his utmost resources of power and craft thus to lead men at his will. "He is the prince of all knowledge, where God is not known; of all power where God is not acknowledged; the bright archangel of the natural man, revealing himself in his angelic glories of natural knowl edge, natural beauty, natural wisdom, and natural humanity." Thus does he play his part in this last age. Under these radiant disguises, he is bewildering the eyes of men, and persuading them that this diffusion of knowledge is the appearing of the Millennial dawn. So specious are his counterfeits that it is hard to separate the real from the false, the precious from the vile, for when he thus comes forth as an angel of light, clothed in every perfection that the natural heart loves and the carnal eye admires, who shall penetrate the deception and escape the snare, save those who "know all things," by reason of "the unction from the Holy One?" 1 John 2: 20. Most truly has the present state of the world been described by one of the world's own poets, when picturing the gay glitter of an evening assembly, over which was thrown—

"A dazzling mass of artificial light,
Which showed all things, but nothing
as they were."

So it is now upon the earth, among the heedless multitudes of the children of men. It is the world's midnight. They are eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage. Literature, science, art, philosophy, are all their own! Yet there is an artificial coloring, an unreal brightness, over all. There is music; but it is of the syren kind. There is eloquence, too, but it is "the words of man's wisdom," not that which speaks for God and "winneth souls." There is fervor, too, but it is the warmth of wild excitement, born in novelty and nursed by perpetual change. There is high thought, too, but it is often of the unhealthful cast, wrought off at the midnight lamp; not the deep musings begot in fellowship with God, and ceaseless converse with that inspired word which maketh wise the simple. And, in connection with all this, there is a proud air of independence, like that which said, "Our lips are our own; who is Lord over us?" There is a reckless determination to hold what opinions men please, unchecked and unreproved.

8. The Maturity of the Papal Antichrist.—Popery itself is no new thing on earth, so that its mere existence is no peculiar sign of the last day. But its progress and prevalence are entirely new. There is a maturity about it which, in other ages it could not claim. It is rising in stature, and fast hastening to its consummation. In extent of circle she stretches far beyond the territories of other days. In all regions of the earth she is planting her banner and claiming dominion over the nations. Never did she show herself more thoroughly in earnest. She is flinging her chains across the globe. With stealthy foot she has been advancing step by step, till now she walks abroad at noonday with the sound of the trumpet, lifting up her head in bold defiance. Her hand, like Amelek's, is "upon the throne of the Lord;" and she acts and speaks as if in nothing she would be restrained of all that she has imagined to do.

Never, since the Reformation, has Popery made so deadly and determined a struggle for the recovery of throne and altar. Hundreds of missionary priests are thrusting themselves into every corner, winding themselves into the confidence of the influential, and insinuating themselves with serpent-stealth and subtlety into all seats of power. They mark off their districts, and rear their churches everywhere, carrying on their work of proselytism at any expense, and by every method. They build with costly splendor; they adorn with most attractive grace; they cast the net with consummate art, that beneath its ample stretch they may entangle the thousands of every age, and class, and temper, who love a theatrical religion, that will gratify the carnal sense, and furnish men with a license for the commission of any amount of iniquity. They talk proudly, too, and boast openly of their success, casting off the mask of meekness and modesty which they had in some measure assumed; proclaiming loudly that as no heresy was ever allowed more than a duration of three centuries, the British apostacy has now reached its close. Thus they prophecy of their own speedy triumph, and of our hastening doom.

It is not my part either to confirm or to confute the prophecy. A few years will unfold it all. There may be darker days in reserve for Britain than many will believe. Her day has been long bright, her sky long cloudless. What nation has ever enjoyed a century of such profound tranquillity as we have experienced, unbroken save by a few political commotions, or a few murmurs of fretful discontent. The cup of trembling, which was put into the hands and pressed to the lips of every nation in Europe, in 1793—1815, passed us by. The revolutionary earthquake shocks that have during this century successively laid waste every kingdom around us, convulsing nations and overturning thrones, tearing up a thousand hearths, and agitating ten thousand fearful bosoms with alternate despair and hope, reached us not, nor stirred even one ripple on our sea-bound shore. When God raised up Napoleon Bonaparte as the scourge of the Papal empires; when he called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made him ruler over kings, giving them as dust to his sword and as driven stubble to his bow, he appointed him his bounds that he could not pass over, and we were preserved, unmolested and secure. When every capital in Europe was in flames, from Moscow to Madrid, we were sitting each man under his own vine and fig-tree, with none to make us afraid. The enemy, with the vanquished might of Europe in his train, prepared to overwhelm us. He threatened, boasted, numbered his armies, talked of a second Armada; but in vain! We were secure. We needed "no bulwarks, no towers along the steep." We were Protestant, and therefore invincible. Our protest was our paladium. From our far-off lonely island, there went forth upon the earth the solitary voice that testified for Christ against Antichrist, in the midst of a world of idolatry and darkness. God heard the testimony, and he blessed the witness.

But since that time what has taken place? We have laid aside our protest, as too bigoted for an enlightened age like ours. We have struck our Protestant colors, and hung out the flag of neutrality; or rather we should say, of religious indifference. With our own hands, we have taken down the old ancestral standard which has braved three centuries of storm; allowing the spoiler to tear in pieces and trample under foot the inheritance of our fathers, the birthright of our sons; proclaiming to the world that our past protest was a stain upon our history, and that it matters nothing to a nation's well-being whether the Bible or the Koran be the basis of her statute book, or whether the national ensign be surmounted by the cross, the crescent, or the triple crown. We have little reason to hope that we shall ride out another storm as we have done the last. The anchor of our National Protestant testimony is gone!

9. The diffusion of Infidelity.—This at least is new. Our fathers knew comparatively little of this; and our fathers' fathers almost nothing. An infidel was rare indeed in their day; a man wondered at and shunned. Towards the close of the last century infidelity burst forth in France, and partially extended itself elsewhere. Of late years it has developed itself with prodigious swiftness, and assumed a bold and lofty attitude of assault. Its extent is incredible. The masses are thoroughly leavened with it. It has insinuated itself everywhere, and is eating out the very heart of everything like deep principle among men. It has corroded the cement by which society hangs together, so that nations and communities are now like walls or towers without mortar, ready to fall to pieces of themselves, or be levelled by the first blast. Its ferocity is alarming; its activity unceasing. Much of it is undisguised and confessed; but very much of it is still secret and unavowed. It taints the air; it blights life; it ossifies conscience; under it all good things wither. It is the worm at the root of all that is noble and excellent in these last days. Hence the hollow condition of things amongst us; the chill that is upon life's warm fellowships and offices of love. Social, political, kindred ties are worm-eaten and ready to break asunder. The erect bearing and manly vigor which religion imparts is no longer visible. Superstition has come to the rescue, and is trying to supply its place. But in vain! Expediency rules. Large masses of the people are either openly or secretly infidel, if not atheistical. God is not acknowledged. His yoke seems to gall men's shoulders. The nations are ready to cast it off. And what hope is there, what token, that this is to end before the Lord return to end it? Is it not a sign of his approach, and a denial of the possibility of a previous Millennium of holy blessedness upon the earth?

10. The increase of Immorality.—Like a flood it is swelling and widening in its course. It is without shame and without fear. Crimes that our fathers knew not of, are common among the nations. Licentiousness riots fearfully, perpetrating deeds without a name, so that it is "a shame even to speak of those things that are done of them in secret." Drunkenness staggers along every street. Blasphemy pours itself forth, till we shudder and close the ear against its horrid sounds. Murder has broken loose, and every day our newspapers are telling some horrible tale of bloodshed; man slaying his fellow-man, in fiendish hatred, or more fiendish love of gain; none spared; the parent slaying his children, the child his parent, the husband the wife, the wife the husband: no sanctity of relationship is any safeguard from the poison, or the bullet, or the knife, or the more brutal hammer. Oh, what a cry is going up to God from this land of ours, the cry of innocent blood, blood which a righteous God will yet avenge!

But the picture of our spreading immorality is one not easily drawn, save by the record of facts, facts which one man scarcely ventures to whisper to an other, too awful to be laid bare before the public eye. It calls for a prophet's eye to see it, a prophet's pen to record it, and a prophet's soul to weep over it "in secret places" before the Lord. Men are truly "lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-bearers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." All this is to come to pass in the last days, and to wax worse and worse till the Lord come. How vivid, then, and how numerous are the signs of the Advent,—signs of whose nature, whose progress and whose termination demonstrate irresistibly that there can be no Millennium before his coming.

11. The prevalence of superficiality and formalism in religion.—Form without power, a body without a soul, religion without vitality,—these are among the signs of the last days. The show of piety is wide-spread, but the thing itself occupies a narrow circle. There is much profession, but profession lies on the surface, and underneath all may be worldliness. Depth and solidity are wanting; the aspect of religion is unhealthy; the fresh hue of primitive times is departed; the intense vitality, which of right belongs to it, is dried up, so that, instead of its being the living source of motion to the world without, controlling or counteracting, or impelling its currents, it lies inert and passive, at the mercy of every outword movement. It is a worldly self-pleasing religion, adopted for fashions' sake, and used according to convenience.

Satan has now transformed himself into an angel of light, and under this fair disguise he is working with marvellous success. He is teaching us to build the tombs of our fathers, that we may rest content with the mere approbation of their principles without any imitation of their practice. He leads some astray into fatal error under the pretext of candor and the love of truth; others he saturates with the orthodoxy of the head, that they may become indifferent to the state of their heart before God. Some he persuades to deny the Bible; to others he lauds it, that he may make it a substitute for the God of the Bible. He allows us a wide range of religious feeling and sentiment, if he can only succeed in making them a substitute for God. He hinders not our being serious, earnest, solemn, if he can thereby feed the cravings of a restless, empty soul with something which may prevent us from seeking the bread of life. He permits us to denounce the world's vanity and hollow pleasures—to be weary of its unsatisfying round of folly, that he may delude us into the idea that this dissatisfaction with the world is a proof that we are religious, and thereby cause us to sit down contented when yet a great way off from our Father's house.

These outward things may be in themselves right and good, but what are they without the indwelling Spirit? What is truth without the True One? What is the perfection of church order without the vital power from above?—The body is there, but the living spirit has fled.

And are not these the signs of the last days? Is it not when the virgins are slumbering that the midnight cry is to be heard, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh?" And when the Son of Man cometh, "shall he find faith on the earth?" Where, then, is there room for a Millennium before the Advent?—Signs of our Times.

THE HOME OF THE BLESSED.

R. L. DYER.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Rev. 21: 1-3.

Then comes the reign of peace, when the true Israel shall inhabit the city, New Jerusalem, which is coming down on the same place where old Jerusalem now stands. And Jesus, the Crucified, will return, and be crowned King of kings and Lord of lords. The loved ones that now sleep beneath the clods of the valley will be there, and we shall be there, if faithful, and help crown our blessed Master.

It is glorious to anticipate the coming of that day, but how much more blessed it will be to enjoy the fruition of this blessed hope. Then we can sing, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" We cannot sing that while our loved ones are sleeping in the earth. "But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." This corruptible will put on incorruption, and this mortal will put on immortality. This is the Bible hope;—the hope of the apostles and prophets, and all the early fathers.

There is a theory that we get our reward when we die; but it is not Bible, and I shall use it as did Justin Martyr when in dialogue with Trypho. He said, "If, therefore, you fall in with certain who are called christians, who confess not this truth, but dare to blaspheme the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in that they say there is no resurrection of the dead, but that immediately when they die, their souls are received up into heaven, avoid them. The Bible teaches that there will be a resurrection of the flesh, and a thousand years in the city of the New Jerusalem, built and enlarged and adorned according to the prophets. Thus, therefore, those that are of faith are blest with faithful Abraham; and the same are the children of Abraham. God repeatedly promised the inheritance of the land to him and his seed; but they have never enjoyed any inheritance in it. They will receive it at the resurrection of the just. Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." The Psalmist says, "The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever."

Now to my mind it is impossible for these passages to have a fulfillment unless there be a resurrection from the dead.

Some say that it makes no difference what we believe, if we are sincere in that belief. I think it will make a great difference whether we believe the words of inspiration or man's theory. The prophet Isaiah says,—"Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out her dead." This will take place when the New Jerusalem comes down from God out of heaven. This is to be the capital of the new earth, and the home of the righteous.

I mean to be there—God helping me—and claim my mansion, and receive a crown of life, and live forever.

Portland, Me.

NO PLACE FOR THE ENDLESS SUFFERING OF THE LOST.

C. H. SHEPHERD.

The wicked are to be punished for their sins. The punishment is death. Everlasting death they will receive—the reward for their deeds in the earth. "Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner." Prov. 11: 37.

The righteous are to live and reign with Christ forever on the earth. It follows that the wicked must first be rewarded, in order for Christ and his saints to possess the earth. Therefore it is certain the earth will give them no place for endless suffering. We have sufficient proof, also, from the Word of life, that there is no other place in the universe for them. The Psalmist says,—"Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forever more." Again, "Whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me." Ps. 139: 7-10.

The presence of the Almighty fills the immensity of space. Where, then, can endless suffering exist? "For in the presence of the Lord is fulness of joy, at his right hand there are pleasures forever more."

Not only shall the righteous live eternally, by the wonderful love and mercy of the Most High, but the death of the wicked will also be demanded by it.

All praise to him who sitteth upon the circle of the earth,—who one day will look over his vast empire, and nowhere discover suffering; but all will be joy and happiness.

THE SAVIOR'S BITTER AGONY.

M. P. SIKES.

"And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." Luke 22: 44.

How great were our Redeemer's sufferings! Alas! my callous, unbelieving heart can have little realization of such terrible agony. Sometimes we think our trials are great, but what are they compared to his? Be ashamed, O my soul, that you should ever shrink from trial or suffering! Let them be patiently endured for Jesus' sake.

"Sweat, as it were great drops of blood." Perhaps some human beings may have been so weighed down with distress and sorrow as to cause perspiration; but what son or daughter of Adam ever experienced anguish deep enough to cause such sweat as this? O, what a depth of agony! Imagination tires when we try to fathom it. Even our divine Redeemer received the assistance of an angel to help him bear this terrible burden. What love he must have possessed to constrain him to be willing to go through such an awful scene! O, how great was the cost of man's salvation!

How insignificant do our own petty trials appear when placed beside those of our dear Redeemer. My brother, my sister, are your trials severe? Does your cup of sorrows seem to run over? Then look at them in comparison with those of your Savior, and they will dwindle away to a mere speck. Let us often make such comparison; it will do us good. Remember, it is written, "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him."

And why must the Lamb of God endure such awful agony? Alas! so despairing was our case, so wretched and hopeless our condition, that nothing short of this would save us. So strong the love of sin in our hearts, so naturally bent upon our own destruction are we, and withal so great are the machinations of the arch deceiver, that it takes the life-blood of the Son of God himself to redeem us. And love constrained him to do all this. Then what ardent love should we render in return. And what implicit, child-like confidence or faith should we repose in him. Well might the apostle say, "He that spared not his own Son, but gave him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." Surely, if my dear Redeemer would voluntarily undergo such untold agony for me, he will do anything else that he has promised.

THE SEALING ANGEL.

> "And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads. And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel." REV. 7: 2-4.

If we are right in our argument upon the four angels, that they symbolize the rulers of four kingdoms allied for the purpose of stopping and preventing a recurrence of general war, and that these were the rulers of England, Prussia, Austria, and Russia, and that this alliance would be in existence at the end of the gospel, it follows, that the sealing angel will be upon the stage, and do his work at the same time that the four angels do theirs.

We have said that the class of men from whom symbolized agency is taken, may be known by the nature of the work to be accomplished. If it be a political work, they are taken from statesmen; if ecclesiastical, from the church. The work of the angels in this case, is clearly ecclesiastical, for it is sealing the servants of God. We must expect, therefore, to find the agency illustrated in the church.

What shall we understand by sealing the servants of God? It signifies confirmation, assurance, or, as Webster says,—"Used by way of authentication or security." Those sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise are made secure as to the blessing promised. The sealing in this case would seem to be a sign of authentic security, or divine protection from the calamities of the winds. Barnes, in explaining this symbolism, says, "The essential ideas, therefore, in this portion of the symbol cannot be mistaken. They are two—(1) that at the period of time here referred to. . . . there would be a state of things which would be well represented by rising tempests and storms, which, if unrestrained, would spread desolation afar; and (2) that this impending ruin was held back, as if by angels having control of those winds; that is, those tempests were not suffered to go forth to spread desolation over the world. A suspended tempest; calamity held in check; armies hovering on the borders of a kingdom, but not allowed to proceed for a time; hordes of invaders detained by some restraining power, not their own, and from causes not within themselves; any of these things would be an obvious fulfilling of the symbols." Is not this explanation of the great Expositor remarkable?—"hordes of invaders, detained by some restraining power, not their own," would "not be suffered to go forth to spread desolation over the world," "for a time." Are not the facts answering this description now existing? There are more than two hundred millions of Catholics, fifty millions of Republicans, many millions of Communists, and various other classes opposed to the great empires who are to-day hovering around the borders of imperial power, which, if not held by the four allied monarchies, would deluge the Roman world with blood in terrible efforts to accomplish their established designs.

In speaking of the sealing, he says, "What this would be, whether a profession, or form of religion, or the holding of some doctrine, or the manifestation of some spirit, is not here designated; the design of sealing the persons referred to, seems to have been to secure their safety in the impending calamities. Thus the winds were held back until those who were to be sealed could be designated, and then they were allowed to sweep over the earth." We believe that this learned author has given a correct interpretation of these symbols, and that circumstances like those he has described will fulfil them. As Mr. Barnes shows, the sealing angels work will be in the church, and may consist in some particular "profession or form of religion," and this profession may be of some particular "doctrine" held by a particular "spirit." If this idea is correct, the important question is, What particular religious position is required to secure this safety from the impending judgment? Has God given us any example of such a position, as security against approaching calamities, in the history of his people in the past; or has he given us any instruction directly as to this particular case? Any religious "doctrine," which in its application secures against coming danger, necessarily presents to view the approaching snares, so that security may be obtained by avoiding them. This would imply that the sealing doctrine would be prophetical, by which the approaching trouble would be seen and prepared for.

If a man learns that his house is on fire at midnight, he finds safety for his family if possible. When we learn that a thief is approaching, we secure our goods. So God in all ages to seal his people or make them safe against coming danger, has always forewarned them, so that if the warning is heeded, the seal is obtained, or safety secured. Jesus cited two cases as examples; showing that at his second coming it will be as it was in the days of Noah and Lot. They obtained safety from the approaching judgments by taking a certain religious position, by faith, in prophetic truth relating to the events they were to meet. So it was with the church at Jerusalem when the city was destroyed. The people were sealed with safety, by believing that the city would be destroyed by the Romans as predicted, and fled from it. Thus we see that God, in past ages, has sealed his people for safe deliverance from coming calamities by giving them forewarnings of the dangers, and their taking heed to them.

Christ, in describing the events preceding his coming, and the end of the world, says, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." This message runs over the time of the sealing angels work, and must express the leading truths applicable at that period.

The gospel of the kingdom is evidently the sealing angels message, and was designed to produce a religious position in harmony with the testimony and cases we have given. It will apply to the church in the last days, and cause her to look for and prepare to meet the last judgment, as Noah, Lot, and the church at Jerusalem, were prepared to meet the judgments of these times. Mark describes this message thus: "Preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand. Repent ye, and believe the gospel." Mark 1: 14, 15. Here we get every feature of a sealing message. It is a forewarning of coming events requiring special preparation to meet them. The unbelieving Jews failed to obtain the divine protection, when the desolating arm was raised against them, because they refused to take the "position" that message required of them.

The work of the gospel angel in Rev. 14 is evidently the same as the sealing angel, occupying the same time; and warning all nations that the season of God's "judgment" has come. The characteristic feature of the sealing message must be prophetic, like all its prototypes, giving the forewarning of the approach of the day of God. Is such a message being proclaimed, while the four angels are holding the winds? The allied powers succeeded in procuring general peace in 1815. Joseph Wolf commenced preaching in 1820 that the prophecies showed the last judgment was at hand, which message seems to meet the demands of the prophecies, presenting the sealing "doctrine" in every feature. It came in the sixth period of the gospel age. It came while the angels were holding the winds. It is a scriptural notification to the "nations" that a new administration of earthly government is about to be inaugurated. It is a forewarning of coming calamities. It is an earnest appeal to all to immediately find "safety" by preparing to meet the coming Judge. The sound swiftly rolled back to the ends of the earth,—God raising up simultaneously Irving, Spalding, Miller, and many others among different nations, to proclaim, substantially, the same message. Where the living preacher could not go, the published heralds were sent, silently proclaiming to all the approaching day of vengeance. We know not of a nation which has not been thus warned within the last fifty years.

We believe God has been in this world-wide message, giving it his divine sanction, as the last warning to men. It causes those who believe it to take a "position" of "safety," like that of Noah and Lot; and those who reject it, like the unbelieving Antediluvians and Sodomites, as Jesus said.

The twelve tribes are evidently a typical representation of the Christian church, and also the number 144,000, expressing a full or complete class. If these views are in harmony with the prophecy, then the end of all things is immediately to come, and the church is passing through her most trying ordeal, to fully prepare her to stand secure amid the consuming fires of the day of God. The proclamation of such a message is as solemnly responsible as anything mortals were ever called to proclaim.

We sincerely believe that this work symbolized by the sealing angel is our special work, and that God has called us to faithfully perform it. Satan understands the importance of it, and is laboring by every possible means to divert Christ's servants from it, by introducing a great variety of substitutes, and wickedly dividing those who advocate it. May the God of all grace, who sealed these great truths upon our hearts years ago, give us victory over Satan and all hindrances to this Heaven-appointed work. J. C.

IS SIN A NECESSITY?

In 1 Tim. 2: 15 we read: "Continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety." Can one continue in a road that he never traveled, and in which it is not possible for him to walk?

Can a person "continue in faith" who has no faith? Can one continue in "charity" who has none? Can a follower of Christ continue in "holiness" who is not holy? Is there any sin in holiness? Can one continue in sin, and at the same time continue in holiness? Can he be in both conditions at once? But the Lord does say, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." We read of "holy men," and "holy women." There is an abundance of Scripture to show that holiness is enjoined upon the followers of Christ in this life. Has the Lord set a standard for man to which he cannot attain? Has he commanded him to do what he cannot perform, with the help of the Holy Spirit? If so, then such commandments would be very grievous; but we read: "His commandments are not grievous." Our Creator knows just what man is capable of doing, and has not required him to do, or to be any thing, but what can be accomplished by the assistance of his grace. We think no one can come to any other conclusion.

It would be very unreasonable to suppose that the Lord asks us to attempt to accomplish impossibilities. But we are required to be "holy," and to "continue in . . . holiness." Then holiness must be a glorious possibility; if so, sin is not a necessity. If sin is a necessary, continual element in all human beings, in this life, then holiness is an impossible attainment, and the oft repeated commandment: "Be ye holy," is unreasonable, grievous, and extravagant. We do not believe our kind heavenly Father has given one commandment but what he designed to have his children keep, and which they can keep by his help.

A necessity is not a criminality. As Cowper says: "A necessary act incurs no blame." It is true we have inherited from our parents a sinful nature; but we do not ask pardon for having it. It is a necessity; but are we to blame for this nature? No more than we are for having two eyes, two ears, two feet, or ten toes. If we inherit scrofula, or any other disease from our parents, are we to blame? Is it a crime? Certainly not; it is a calamity. But suppose a free remedy is provided, that is a certain cure for that inherited disease, and the person afflicted will not use it; then it is his own fault if he is not cured. The blame for not being a well man then rests on his own refusal to use the remedy, and from that time forward he would have no cause for complaint, because his disease continued. He creates the necessity for the continuance of his malady.

So in relation to sin. If there was no remedy for it, then it would be a perpetual necessity. Breathing is a necessity, so long as a man lives; hence not criminal. The same is true of the circulation of the blood, of seeing, when our eyes are open; hearing of all sound within a certain distance, of a given intensity; smelling of odors that reach the olfactory nerve, tasting of food, when in the mouth, feeling pain, when in the system, etc. But when he voluntarily puts himself in the way to hear, see, smell, and taste things unholy, he is responsible for the results, and not the Creator who gave him these important faculties. For instance, man has a mouth, stomach, and digestive organs, which are a necessity for his healthy existence. But these may be so used as to ruin him in this life and forever, by devoting them to gluttony and intoxicating liquors. Is there a necessity that he should thus abuse these important organs, which were designed to increase man's happiness, besides being employed to continue his existence? In other words, is drunkenness a necessity? If not, then temperance is a possibility.

Man is blest with the power of speech, which is a wonderful gift; but some use the vocal organs for telling lies, fretting, scolding, backbiting, evil speaking, swearing, etc. Are such uses of the tongue a necessity? If so, would it be criminal? If we were so constituted that we could not avoid lying and swearing, any more than we can breathing, would it be our fault? Certainly not, but the blame would rest on the one who made the organism to do thus of necessity.

Was there a necessity that Adam should disobey his Creator? Who says, yes? If it was a necessity, then, wherein was Adam to be blamed? What is true in relation to the first sin, is true of all sin. If the first was not a necessity, then the last is not. God has given man ability to obey his commandments, if he will; he also has power to disobey. It is for him to decide which he will do. If man was not a free actor, he would not be a moral being, but if he was obliged to do things of necessity, he would not be a free actor, consequently not accountable. Was the murder of Abel by Cain a necessity? Certainly not. Is adultery a necessity? Is stealing? There can be but one answer to these inquiries. Then, if all sin is not a necessity, is there a necessity for any crime?

It may be said that the working of the human nature inherited from our parents, leads to the production of evil imaginations, hatred towards those who misuse us, variance, pride, selfishness, vanity, strife, covetousness, and other evil things. It is true that these are the necessary result of the active manifestation of the Adamic nature. As before stated, we do not ask pardon for having human nature. It is not a crime to possess it, because it is a necessity, but we pray for pardon for having yielded to the misuse of our inherited mental and physical powers. If all our acts, deeds and thoughts, had been a necessity, as are our faculties themselves, we should not feel like asking pardon.

When does the wrong use of our abilities become sin? When we obtain a knowledge of the law regulating their right use, and refuse to obey. At that same point comes the offer of help from the Lord to overcome the temptation; hence the necessity of sinning is at once removed, and the possibility of escape placed within our reach. There are some like Samuel, who commence to obey the Lord from early childhood. As the Lord is no respecter of persons, others might do so if they would; then it follows that sin is not a necessity.

We learn from the Scriptures that "the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." 1 Cor. 12: 7. The Syriac reads: "And to each man there is given a manifestation of the Spirit to aid him." It is said of Christ, that he "lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John 1: 9. If "every man" would yield to the leading of the Spirit, and follow the light given by the Lord, when first received, as they might do, if they would, then they would at once put themselves in a position to be "kept by the power of God" from yielding to the temptation to sin.

If one should take some deadly poison by mistake, it would not be a crime, but a calamity. If, as soon as the individual ascertained the fact, a sure remedy was offered by a kind friend, and refused, then the poisoned one becomes his own destroyer and he alone would be responsible for his death by poison. If, in time of famine, a table is spread with abundance of good food, to which all hungry ones are invited, and some refuse to come and eat, they create the necessity for starvation. The one who provided the free table would not be to blame. He did all in his power, and removed all necessity for starvation. If some should say, We are not going to the table to eat; if he wishes us to eat of his food, he can bring it to us, and put it into our mouths privately. We are not going to stoop so low as to eat with those who have to be fed at a free table. If such starve to death, they themselves create the necessity.

So with those who continue in sin. Jesus offers to accept every one who will come to him. He says: "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Is there a necessity for any one to stay away from Christ? Hear him: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Matt. 12: 28. Where lies the possibility of coming, or staying away? In the will of the person. He said to some: "Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life." John 6: 40. Man's will not makes his cannot. When we can do right, by the help of the Lord, and will not, then it is sin; but there is no necessity for sinning; hence freedom from sin is a glorious possibility, and the same means by which we are once made "free from sin," if continually employed, will keep us free. But if sin is a necessity, no one can be free from it at any time. If one form of sin is not necessary, is it not equally true of all kinds?

Has the reader broken any known commandment of Christ to-day? If so, was it a necessity? If a necessity, was it a crime? If not a necessity, then it could have been avoided. The same is true of all sins. If it was not a necessity to break the commandment, then it could have been kept by the help offered by the Lord. When one is compelled to do anything he is not guilty; but the one who compels.

Said Paul: "Finally, brethren, be perfect." 2 Cor. 13: 11. Solomon says: "The righteousness of the perfect shall direct his way." Prov. 11: 5. Jesus says: "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one." John 17: 23. It was said to Moses: "Thou shalt be perfect with the Lord thy God." Deut. 18: 13. Said Paul: "We speak wisdom among them that are perfect." 1 Cor. 2: 6. "Ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God." Col 4: 12. Does the perfection in these passages include sin? If not, is sin a necessity? M. G.

"PRINCELY MANHOOD" is the title of a new book of much value, just issued by Bro. S. H. Platt, Bridgeport, Ct. The fact that it comes from his pen affords a surety that it is worth reading. This is "a private treatise, for adults only," treating upon "the procreative instinct, as related to moral and christian life." It is truly a book for the times, and of great value to all for whom it is designed.

We fully endorse the following statements in relation to the work:—

"This work is one of rare interest and value, and 'should be read,' says a Boston editor, 'by every man in the world.' It treats the subject of the author's lecture on the same name more in detail, and is a mine of rich suggestion to the middle aged and young. Except the Bible, no father can give his child a more valuable literary keepsake than this. Millions of money and years of health would be saved if men would heed its words."

We recommend the book to all for whom it was prepared, as one of special value, particularly to those who are anxious to enjoy pure religion.

"As the private character of the book precludes it from circulation through the trade, its sale depends upon special advertising, which necessarily makes it cost more than ordinary works of the same size. It contains over one hundred pages, and will be sent post paid for 50 cts."

DEEP SNOW.—The snow at the Summit, on the Sierra Nevada mountains, is now (Mar. 6th) said to be twenty feet deep on a level. The trains are much hindered. The snow has not been known more abundant than during the past winter. The weather is pleasant in San Francisco, where snow never falls, and flowers bloom in the yards the year round. M. G.

PREPARATION.—An eminent Methodist minister writes: "I am becoming impressed with your view, that the holiness movement is the forerunner of the Second Advent."

We can also say, we are increasingly convinced of the same thing. All things indicate that Christ is soon coming. This appears from the fact that those events which the prophets said should transpire in the last generation before the coming of Jesus, are now being witnessed. As his coming is at hand, it follows that the time has also arrived to make full preparation to meet him; but no one in his sins can be said to be ready. Sin is the only thing that unfits a man for the kingdom of God. Let every one who wishes to be prepared to meet our coming Savior, see that his heart is made clean by faith in the blood of the Lamb. As saith the apostle Paul: "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." 2 Tim. 2: 19. M. G.

ROME.—Things in Rome are vastly changed since the Italians took possession Sept. 20th, 1870. "A Roman correspondent of the Catholic Review gives information that the suppression of religious houses in Italy goes on without abatement. Thirty-two convents have recently been appropriated by the State, some of them bearing very historic names."

It is said that in Rome "Protestantism numbers more than forty chapels or places of worship, open every Sunday, and several times during the week. A Scripture Reader's Association has been formed for the purpose of reading the Bible from house to house."

These are dark days for the Papacy, but nothing when compared with what is coming. The time when "that great city" shall "be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all," must be near at hand; but when that event transpires, we understand the Scriptures to teach that the saints will be raised from the dead to witness her destruction. The great day of the Lord must be near. Is the reader ready? If not, do not fail to make immediate preparation. The end of all things is rapidly approaching. Let it be the first work to get into harmony with Jesus. M. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Our meetings in the new Chapel, on Eddy St., between Taylor and Jones, are still as good as ever. Quite a number from other churches are deeply interested, and are receiving the whole truth joyfully. They now wonder why they did not see it before. Several ministers have been in, and some take a part in the meetings. Three ministers were present last evening (March 9th). A Jewish lady, who was baptized last Sabbath (March 8th), said last evening, "I am the happiest woman in San Francisco." Her happy countenance gave warrant to the expression. She received the gift of the Spirit at her baptism. M. G.

WAR PREPARATIONS.—Marshal Moltke, in his late speech in regard to the military position of Germany and France, said things that have produced some sensation among the powers of Europe. The Marshal stands on high ground among the Germans, and what he says on the subject is known to be of weighty interest. It is understood that what he said had more reference to foreign powers than to the Germans. M. G

BRO. J. G. HOOK is out of health, in San Francisco, and now (Mar. 6th) unable to preach. Pray for him. M. G.

VIEWS OF ANNA MARIA—PREDICTIONS OF A PROPHETESS.

The German student in Aurora Leigh complains bitterly that "future generations lie on us as heavy as the nightmare of a seer," and that "our meat and drink grow painful prophecy." Most men, says the London News, are able to bear with tolerable equanimity the prospective trouble of future generations. But it is very different when they are personally concerned, and such seems to be the case in the matter of some utterances of the prophetic soul of Sister Anna Maria Taiga, a venerable nun, who died many years ago, bequeathing to the world the legacy of a scroll of discomforting vaticinations. The one which most nearly affects us declares that the period immediately antecedent to the Pope's death will be marked by the "sudden manifestation of God's wrath in the heavens, preceded by plagues, epidemics, and wars, and a general disturbance of society." These will be the prelude to a more startling phenomenon still. "For three days and three nights after," Sister Anna Maria says, "Cimmerian darkness will rest over the earth, hiding every object in the world from view; the people who look out of the windows for the purpose of describing what is going on in the firmament will be immediately struck down dead," a provision which appears specially aimed at newspaper reporters. What gives the prophecy an importance which this class of literature cannot often claim, is the fact that some portions of the chapter in which it is written have actually been verified.

What first called attention to the utterances of the venerable nun was the statement that before his death Pius IX. should be "encircled in the Vatican by iron as a prisoner," for fulfillment of which the faithful point to the alleged imprisonment of his Holiness in his palace. Another forecast which has been justified by events was that the Pope would live to the end of his twenty-seventh year of office. War we have in Ashantee and Spain; plagues are chronic; epidemics are not unknown; and Mr. Disraeli has recently born testimony to the general disturbance of society, owing to the adminstration of Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues. There remain now only, as a last warning to those whose duty it is to provide for the succession to the Papal chair, the "three days and nights of Cimmerian darkness;" and possibly they may have already passed by, unidentified in the fog that took possession of London in the early part of the cattle show week.

While we have but little faith in modern prophecies, the present state of the Papal power indicates most clearly that its last days have truly come, yet it will continue as a system, till the Savior appears in glory to set up his kingdom. M. G.

REFORMING the world is like patching an old coat, which will soon need another patch; but if it were not for reformers, the world would always be out at the elbows.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873; voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

☞ OUR CONFERENCE.

As our yearly Conference has great need of delegates from all the churches, we have got the fare reduced one third, as at camp-meetings, expecting it will be a stimulant for each church to send one delegate, at least, and as many brethren and sisters come as can. We expect a large and good Conference. The Worcester church always accommodates us well, and all will be welcome. Come to the first business meeting, if possible. We expect the Lord will bless the meeting. Call for Conference tickets to Worcester, Mass. The tickets will be good from March 30th to April 7th inclusive. They will be endorsed back as at camp-meeting. Come from other States.

H. MUNGER.

ATTENTION.—Permit me to call the attention of our Kansas brethren and sisters to the call for the annual session of the Conference to be held May 15th, 1874, at Melvern, Osage Co., near the home of our State Evangelist, Elder J. C. Smith. A grand work has been accomplished through the untiring, self-sacrificing efforts of Elders Smith, Clark, Bliss, and others, and the next session will undoubtedly be the largest congregation of Adventists ever held in the State. In view of the fact of the shortness of time, and the great necessity for more work and more laborers, I would urge all, who can, to attend the coming session. Let those who can not attend, write.

RELIGIOUS JOURNALISM—WHAT IS NEEDED?

E. A. STOCKMAN.

The secular press gives us news,—sensation; the schools evolve philosophy, and the Reviews furnish criticism. The religious journals ought to furnish soul-food, nutriment for the heart, matter suited to purify and exalt affection, strengthen faith, promote union, and increase holiness. Doctrine is not the special need. The endless doctrinal diversity of Christendom is a chief hindrance to the simple truth. The masses hunger not for dogma, but for bread—bread of heaven. The want is something to feed upon; something to enrich and strengthen the moral nature; something practical, experimental, digestible. The richness and fulness of Christ, the presence and power of the Spirit, the scope and efficacy of prayer, the leadings and deliverances of Providence, the transporting expectations of the kingdom near, the final and eternal redemption, by the resurrection from the dead,—something, anything that will arouse the slumbering churches to prepare to meet the Lord, and awaken sinners to repentance.

While many religious journals are crowded with long, hair-splitting, dogmatic articles, that settle nothing, unless it be the vanity and egotism of the writers, and accomplish nothing but the division of the household of God; we look in vain for rich, pithy experience, or grand, alarming appeal;—these are fast disappearing from pulpit and press.

An old country farmer having occasion to spend a few days at a city hotel, on coming to the table rich with wares, but naked of food, was presented with the bill of fare; but unable to decipher it, he flung it at the waiter exclaiming, "Take away your documents, and give me something to eat!" So say many hungry hearts, as they faint over the dry, indigestible matter of the religious papers, which contain little logic, and less life. Take away dogma; give us bread; the people are starving.

PRAY FOR SISTER WAGG.—Sr. Wagg feels that the request which appeared in the Crisis a few weeks since, asking prayer for her, is not so explicit as it should be. She has suffered unutterable pain and misery for twelve years, from neuralgia. All medical aid failing to cure, she has hope that the prayers of the righteous may be heard in her behalf. She therefore asks that the saints who read this may make it a specialty, when they meet to pray in their respective places of worship the next Lord's day, to ask the Lord to heal her of this dreadful malady. "Remember them who are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body."

I. C. WELLCOME.

BRO. M. R. MILES writes:—"I wish to say a few words to the readers of the Crisis. My heart beats in unison with all my brethren and sisters who are working for Jesus. The Lord bless you all. I have been laboring for the Master, and have seen many converted to Jesus during the last year, which has rejoiced my heart; but I have felt sad to see brethren, who have worked together for years, separate because they could not believe alike on definite time, and divide the church. The Lord will judge righteously, so we ought not to judge one another. I believe in church organization and church order. Every one should try to build up the church of Christ, and unite its members, and not divide them. There is but one body; if we are united to that, we should be careful how we divide the members."

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. N. Larrance.

To the Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I will endeavor to give you some idea of the destitution which prevails throughout this portion of the land,—Northwestern Iowa,—by giving you a brief sketch of our condition, which is like hundreds of others. We, like many others here, are homesteaders. We came here two years ago this spring, in order to take advantage of the "Homestead Bill." My husband had selected our homestead the year previous. But when we arrived here we were twenty miles from timber, and thirty-five miles from a railroad station and post-office. We had a family of three children, some two or three weeks' provisions, and forty cents in money. Our expenditures, owing to unavoidable circumstances, were more than we had expected. Being in limited circumstances and somewhat involved before starting, we chose to brave the hardships of the Northwest rather than leave any accounts uncancelled. So, when we began life here, we had no team, no house, no well nearer than half a mile, and but one and one-fourth acres of land broken. But through all our privation and hardships the Lord was ever near supporting and sustaining us by his miraculous power. Praise be to his ever worthy name! That year the Sioux City & St. Paul R. R. was completed through our vicinity, which was a great blessing to the homesteaders. We succeeded in getting seven acres of land broken that season, but no house except a very small cave which we built for a temporary shelter.

That fall my husband bought a yoke of oxen, and we went to Green county to winter, hoping to make enough to buy our summer's provisions. Having a great deal of sickness that winter, and consequently many expenses, and a very poor chance for making anything, we just barely had enough to get back in the spring. Then we had another season of privations and hardships, but my husband put in a crop, and we toiled hopefully, thinking that when harvest came we should have plenty. But alas! the grasshoppers came upon us, and completely devastated our land; so that all we could earn must be laid out for something to live upon, and that was all consumed some time ago; and we have been compelled to apply to the General Relief Society for aid. The State has and is doing much for the relief of the destitute, but still there is great need. Suffering, for the want of proper clothing, fuel and provision, abounds. We were compelled to sell our team also, and now we have none. We have four children, and no means of support, and still have no house but our cave, which has got to leaking badly.

There is no work in the whole country to be obtained at any wages. Men offer to work with their teams for their board, but cannot get the chance. About all the provisions that are to be had among us are a little meal or flour, and sometimes a little pork. No groceries or luxuries are seen, except what come by private donations. It would be impossible for tongue to tell or pen portray the hardships we have had to endure; and I can very plainly feel that it is breaking my constitution, and undermining my health. After having suffered so much for the sake of a home, we do not like to abandon it without a recompense.

Now, my friends, I would simply ask you, if it is within your power to lend a helping hand to this community, if you will not do it? As many families are very destitute of clothing, many garments which have been worn some there, and have been laid by, might be a great benefit to us here; and if any feel like sending a little money to purchase necessary articles, which can not be obtained without money, I think the Lord will reward them.

I give below an extract from the report of the General Committee of the State Legislature to investigate the destitution of the Northwest. If any of you wish to donate anything, you can send it to Isaac S. Larrance, Sheldon, Obrien Co., Iowa; or if you wish to make personal donations, I will send you names of needy families. All things sent will be distributed according to directions. If any wish to know more of the particulars, I will answer all letters. Address Lydia H. Larrance, Sheldon, Obrien Co., Iowa. If any goods are sent, please send money to pay freight, for we have not got it to pay.

EXTRACT.

"Your committee spent some time in riding over the great sweeps of prairie, snow-clad and desolate, visiting the people in their homes. None of their residences are extravagant, and seldom embrace more than one room. A majority of them are neat, though rough, having little furniture aside from such articles as the man of the house could manufacture. Some of the houses are made of sod, with straw roofs, in which floors other than the hard ground may be absent. A few pounds of flour, or a little meal, with possibly a little pork of some kind, generally comprised the stock of provision—with no hope beyond the good hearts of the more fortunate people of Iowa for fresh supplies. Nevertheless, the people are generally cheerful; and if any one expects to find a wail of perpetual lamentation he might as well look outside 'the grasshopper district,' as within it. The men and women there stand up squarely, in the full dignity of their muscular development, and say, 'We only ask for a reasonable chance for our lives!' And they evidently have faith sufficient in the people of Iowa to believe that this they shall have.

The relief supplies, so far as your committee could judge, have been wisely used; and that they have prevented actual starvation, your committee are constrained to believe. It is all important that these supplies should be continued; and your committee feel impelled to say that they can hardly be continued too liberally."

From B. Woodruff.

Dear brethren:—I still am homeward bound. Can say the last two years has been the best of all my christian experience. Although at times I have suffered much from an infirmity, yet He who giveth life and strength to the weak and frail, has heard the cries of his children in my behalf, and I have been raised up from a weak state of body, to go forth and herald the news of salvation through Him who has purchased redemption for us by his own blood.

I can truly say the service of my Lord is a delightful service. It brings peace known only to those who obey the Lord. Blessed abiding peace. I feel at times much of the presence of the Lord, and have seen so much of his stately goings, that I never can leave the narrow way, for it is the way of life.

I am glad Jesus lives, and is on the mercy seat; for sinners are awakened, and wanderers are coming home.

My heart cries out this evening, O, let me go where saints are going! A few days ago I was taken suddenly ill, did not know but my race was nearly run. But the saints offered earnest, fervent prayer to God, and waited his answer. Praise God! The means used were blest. Disease, which would soon have ended in death was stayed in its progress, and I am on my feet again, gaining, I think, daily. Thanksgiving and praise be unto him who remembereth his little ones, scattered over the hills and mountains. He remembereth even the lambs of the flock. Praise his blessed name forever! Yea, let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord! Praise is comely, and is due our God. I would that every nation, kindred, tongue, and people could view the risen Redeemer as he is, and let them compare him with earth's noblest benefactors; then I am sure every reward, every crown, and all praise would be given to Jesus, for he is worthy. Dear brethren, the march is onward and forward. There is no retreating now. Victory will soon be ours in the name of the Lord Jesus.

It may seem to be a digression from our rules to publish this letter asking for pecuniary aid, but when any of our brethren or citizens are in a starving condition, we would not dare take the responsibility of withholding the knowledge of their condition from those who would esteem it a privilege to assist them. This is not a single family in want, but a community suffering, and threatened with starvation. J. C.

From Bro. Charles Eckhart.

Dear Brn.—We commenced revival meetings here last Sunday, March 1st. Bro. Stetler, of Philadelphia, preached morning and evening. Bro. Mendenhall, of Wilmington Del., arrived here on Monday afternoon, and has preached for us every night this week; and the Lord willing, he will preach for us every night, as long as the interest continues.

Last night we had one of the best meetings I have ever attended. Bro. Mendenhall preached a powerful sermon, after which, six started for the kingdom. The people are aroused, and we expect many more to come out on the Lord's side before our meetings close.

Praise God for his goodness. We feel encouraged to go forward. I withdrew from the Baptist Church of Phœnixville a few days ago. I held my membership there over six years. I did this, because we expect to organize an Advent Church here, and I want to unite myself to those of like precious faith. I do thank the Lord that I have been enabled to see the glorious truth as it is recorded in the Bible.

From Bro. N. S. Ketchum.

The good cause is advancing slowly but surely (through much opposition) in this western country. The fields are all ripe and ready for the harvest. We have been trying to have some of our experienced brethren come and wake up this wicked city. Capt. Young invited Bro. Grant to come here and hold a series of meetings, but he could not come. If Bro. Hastings comes West again, we would like for him to visit Sioux City.

From Bro. A. W. Sibley.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—Sunday, March 1st, was a good day for the Advent Christian church in Sandy Hill, N. Y. Four persons were buried with Christ in baptism, and seven united with the church, and received the right hand of fellowship,—making fifteen that have united with us since last November. To God belongs all the glory.

Obituaries.

RIGGS. In Albion, Feb. 18th, 1874, Dr. Amos C. Riggs, aged sixty-three years.

Dr. Riggs was born in Pittsford, Vt., in 1810, and moved to Albion in 1831, where he lived until the time of his death. In 1834 he made a profession of religion and united with the Baptist Church, with which he was connected until 1853, when he united with the Adventists, with whom he was a devoted member until death. His life was one of christian example. He was firm in his belief, and not afraid to speak in its defense.

For two years previous to his death he suffered much, yet made no complaint, but manifested himself willing to submit to God's will, believing that with him all things would work for good. He leaves a wife and a large circle of friends, by whom he will be greatly missed. Truly we feel our loss a great one, yet we should not mourn, for he said,

"Weep not when I'm gone, and they lay me to rest,
But leave all with God, for his ways are best."

MRS. A. C. RIGGS.

FOSTER. In Lapeer, Feb. 3d, 1874, of consumption, Mrs. Adaline B. Foster, aged thirty-seven years.

She will be remembered by our preaching sisters at least as one whose name was among theirs as a preacher of the gospel, and a member of their former Association. Sr. Foster's early religious experience was very remarkable. She bore a heavy cross in doing the work that she believed God had called her to do. But she rests from her labors. She was perfectly willing to die, and bore her sufferings during her illness with christian resignation. She sleeps in Jesus.

"Blessed sleep!
From which none ever wake to weep."

By her request her funeral sermon was preached by the writer from Rev. 14: 13.

JANE HITCHCOCK.

MYERS. Dea. Joseph Myers, of Pownal, Vt., died Feb., 1874, aged seventy-two years.

The funeral took place at the Union Church, Pownal Centre, Friday, Feb. 13th. No man could have been removed from our town whose loss would have been more generally felt. He had held the office of Town Treasurer, and discharged its duties to the satisfaction of all for forty years. To say all in a word,—he was a christian. The discourse that was delivered came from the lips of his former pastor, Eld. Matthew Batchelor, who faithfully preached the gospel of Christ to that church for fifteen years, and who will, we trust, have many stars in his crown, as trophies of his faithfulness to Christ. The deceased deacon and the Elder were more than friends; they were really christian brothers, bearing each other's burdens as far as possible. In this discourse we were told that in consequence of the transgression of Adam, literal death was pronounced upon him and all his posterity, and without any future act of redemption there would be no further life for any human being. But Christ brought immortality to light, and by accepting the terms offered by him, we may gain eternal life by a resurrection from the grave. If any do not comply with the terms, the original sentence rests upon them, and they will perish like beasts forever. These views were strongly held by the deceased.

J. W. WRIGHT.

NORTON. In Bristol, Ct., March 2d, 1874, Sr. Rene Norton, in the ninety-first year of her age.

Our aged sister had been for many years a lover of the dear Redeemer. When about thirty she was awakened and gave her heart to Christ, and united with the Congregational church in this place. She remained there until the proclamation of the Advent truth. She then came out, and was buried with Christ in baptism, and from that time she looked for and loved the appearing of Jesus. She has fallen asleep, and now awaits the ushering in of that glorious morning, when the voice of the archangel and the trump of God shall awake her to eternal life. The writer endeavored to comfort the surviving friends from Luke 8: 52,—"She is not dead, but sleepeth." S. C. HANCOCK.

HAINES. In Biddeford, Me., Feb. 26th, 1874, Sadie E. Haines, daughter of Eld. G. F. and Sarah Haines, aged two years and two months.

Sadie was a very bright and pleasant little child, and made the home of her parents cheerful by her childish songs. But she sleeps in Jesus, and will awake in the morning of the resurrection. May the blessing of God be upon our brother and sister in their bereavement. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer. WM. C. STEWART.

BLASS. In Conquest, N. Y., March 4th, 1874, of consumption, Margaret Blass, aged sixty-eight years.

She was a widow, and truly a christian. She never was known to complain, and in her last sickness, when asked if she suffered, would answer, "No." She sleeps in Jesus. We laid her away to wait the trumpet's blast. M. R. MILES.

ARNOT. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Wolcott, N. Y., Feb. 25th, 1874, wife of John Arnot, aged sixty years.

She was a believer in the doctrines that have distinguished us as a people. She was a mother in Israel, and a friend of the orphan. In her death the church sustain a great loss.

M. R. MILES.

ROBINSON. At Milton Mills, N. H., Jan. 27th, 1874, Lydia F., wife of George F. Robinson, aged twenty-three years.

Sr. R. expressed a hope of living again. May the Lord bless the mourners is our prayer.

B. S. EMERY.

GRISIM. In Manchester, N. H., Jan. 20th, 1874, Annie May, eldest daughter of Campbell and Roxana Grisim, aged fourteen years.

In her Bible were found written these words,—"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." May God grant this comfort to the afflicted family. D. W. DAVIS.

CALHOUN. In New Preston, Ct., Feb. 14th, 1874, of scarlet fever, George Case, only son of Charles L. and Melissa L. Calhoun, aged six yrs., ten months, and sixteen days. C. L. CALHOUN.

BARTLET. In Bridgewater, Vt., March 8th, 1874, John Bartlet, aged twenty-one years.

Poison supposed to be the cause of his death. Funeral services attended by the writer.

A. DAMON.

TUTTLE. In Bridgewater, Vt., March 9th, 1874, of heart disease, George Tuttle, aged seventy-six years. A. DAMON.

ROBINSON. In Bridgewater, Vt., March 10th, 1874, Hubert E. Robinson, aged nine weeks.

May this sudden and severe stroke of affliction tend to bring the parents to see more their need of Christ. A. DAMON.

CRANE. In Suncook, N. H., Aug. 19th, 1873, of cholera infantum, Charlie J., son of Solomon J. and Mary A. Crane, aged six months and twenty-four days.

He "sleeps, but not forever." JOHN PARSONS.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, March 16. Intelligence of a shocking accident in the Mediterranean reached here to-day. The steam-ship Laconia, while on a voyage from Alexandria, Egypt, for Algiers, having as passengers two hundred and seventy-eight pilgrims returning from Mecca, encountered terrific gales. One huge wave, which struck the vessel, washed overboard from her deck one hundred and seventeen of them, and all were drowned.

March 18. A special dispatch to the Daily News from Central Asia represents that anarchy reigns in Khiva.

ROME, March 13. The Pope has written to the Austrian bishops, inciting them to use all their influence to prevent the passage of the proposed ecclesiastical laws.

MADRID, March 15. Marshal Serrano, with an army of 34,000 men and ninety pieces of artillery is now face to face with a Carlist force of 35,000, while Gen. Loma, with a column 8,000 strong, is moving on the enemy's rear.

GIBRALTAR, March 16. The bark Jupiter has arrived here from New York. She experienced tempestuous weather on the passage, and lost several hands overboard, including the master.

VIENNA, March 17. The Roman Catholic Bishops in the Reichsrath threaten to withdraw if the passage of the Ecclesiastical bills is pressed.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 10, via Havana, 16th. A fearful outrage was perpetrated by a mob at Ahualuco, in the State of Jalisco, last Sunday. In the morning a priest delivered an incendiary sermon, in the course of which he advocated the extermination of the Protestants. This so excited his hearers, that an armed mob of two hundred persons gathered in the evening, and proceeded to the residence of Rev. John L. Stevens, a Congregational minister sent out by the Boston Board of Foreign Missions.

With cries of "Long live the priests! they broke into the house, and, seizing the clergyman, smashed his head to a jelly and chopped his body into pieces. They afterward sacked the house and carried off everything of value.

After much delay the riot was suppressed by the local authorities. The Government has sent a detachment of troops to the place.

A rigid investigation has been set on foot, and orders have been issued for the arrest of all the priests in Ahualuco and the neighboring town of Teshitan.

A mob in Saguavo, acting under similar religious frenzy, attacked the small garrison of the town, burned the public archives, and pillaged the houses of the authorities.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Salisbury, N. C., March 17. One report, from a scientific source, states that the internal noises at Bald Mountain resemble those heard in Mount Etna preparatory to a volcanic eruption. The people have precipitately fled. Throughout the entire country, and for a distance of sixteen miles from the mountain, extending into adjoining counties, these sounds are not only heard, but the trembling and reverberations of the earth are perceptible.

In numerous instances for several miles from the mountains the glasses have rattled in windows and the dishes have been shaken from shelves to such an extent as to create a most wide-spread consternation among the rural inhabitants. This again caused a still greater stampede of the citizens, many of whom superstitiously regard the terrible symptoms as an indication of the "judgment day." A passenger on a western train states that it is pitiful to see the poor, unsophisticated rustics flying in such great terror. The latest accounts from the disturbed mountain state that so far there has been no volcanic eruption of lava or fire, though the terrific noise and internal rumbling heard at a distance were so great yesterday morning as to induce the belief that a veritable and genuine volcanic outbreak had taken place. The excitement throughout the entire western section of the State is intense, and many people are repairing to the scene in hope of witnessing for the first time a grand volcanic eruption.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.—The annual session of the Mass. Advent Christian Conference will be held at Worcester, Mass., with the Advent Christian Church, commencing on Tuesday evening, March 31st, to continue over the following Sunday. The first business session will be held on Wednesday, April 1st. It is desired that our churches throughout the State be as largely represented by delegates as possible.

C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

ANNUAL STATE CONFERENCE.—To the saints scattered abroad:—As our next Annual State Conference is appointed in Worcester, we therefore give you a cordial invitation to come and labor with us for the salvation of our fellow beings. Soon it will be too late. Come, filled with faith and the Holy Spirit. Come, baptized with the spirit of work. To this end pray much, that it may be the best Conference we have ever held. We shall do the best we can to entertain all who come to this feast.

S. G. MATHEWSON, in behalf of the church.

IT is expected Bro. Stockman will hold a protracted meeting in Worcester, commencing March 24th, and continue over Sunday.

S. G. MATHEWSON.

ALTON BAY.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting Committee are requested to meet at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass., Monday, March 30th, 11 o'clock A. M. J. COUCH, Chairman.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.—The Campmeeting at Alton Bay will commence Aug. 22nd, and hold over Sabbath, Aug. 30th. J. COUCH.

MISSION TENT.—There has been a call for subscriptions to furnish a Mission Tent. The old Mission and the Mass. Conference Tent have both been worn out in the service. The time will soon come for Tent meetings, which is one of the best, if not the very best way to reach the people. The cause demands double the sacrifice and effort to enlighten and save that we are making. Shall we want for a Tent? Shall we want means and men to make an onward movement to save men by pulling them out of the fire of the last day? Brethren, help us to a Tent.

L. BOUTELL.

HOOSICK VALLEY CONFERENCE.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference will be held with the church in Rutland, Vt., from Wednesday evening, April 22d, over the ensuing Sunday. The prospect of a meeting of more than ordinary interest and profit will, we trust, attract an unusually large attendance of delegates and others interested.

WM. L. HIMES, Sec'y.

To the brethren that have written me to come and labor with them in protracted meetings, I would say, my health has been so poor for the last few weeks that I have not been able to fulfill my promises. The Spirit has been willing, but the flesh weak. I hope to be well enough soon to fill some of the old standing appointments.

M. R. MILES.

PROTRACTED MEETING.—A protracted meeting will commence at North Pond, N. H., Thursday evening, March 26th, and continue over Sunday.

E. MORRILL.

THE fourth Quarterly Meeting for the Eastern Dist. of Wisconsin will be held with the church at Prairie Du Sac, commencing Friday evening, April 24th, and hold over Lord's day. Let us come up to this meeting filled with the Spirit of the Master. Let every church in the Dist. report by delegate or by letter. We expect a number of brethren present to assist in preaching the Word. F. P GRAVES.

CONFERENCE.—The Delaware Dist. A. C. Conference is hereby called to meet, and hold its annual session at the Advent Christian Hall, corner of Ninth and Spring Garden Streets, Phil., Pa., commencing Thursday morning, April 9th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. The morning meetings will be for the transaction of business; the afternoon and evening, for preaching and other devotional exercises.

This is our annual meeting to hear the reports of all our preachers, officers, committees, and delegates for the last year;—the progress, spread, and triumph of Bible truth, by the word of mouth, by the aid of religious papers, tracts, and pamphlets, and by every other gospel means; to learn by reports the amount of monies received and paid out, for the purchase and distribution of publications. All the officers for the year ensuing will be chosen at this session.

This Conference embraces the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and Eastern Penn. It is earnestly hoped that every church sympathizing with us will be represented either by letter or delegates. Every church or religious body co-operating with this Conference is entitled to one delegate, and an additional delegate for every ten members. All letters of correspondence for the Conference can be addressed to Edwin King, 1716 Francis Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

H. K. FLAGG, President.
EDWIN KING, Secretary.

CONFERENCE.—The Third Session of the A. C. Quarterly Conference of North West Kansas will be held with the church of Athens, Jewel Co., commencing Friday evening, March 27th, and continuing over the Sunday following. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to meet with us, and will be heartily welcomed by the friends at Athens.

E. N. BLISS, President.
J. S. THORP, Secretary.

THERE will be a series of meetings on Britton Hill, Hebron, Me., commencing Thursday evening, March 26th, and hold over the Sabbath, and as much longer as the Lord may direct. Come, brethren and sisters, to work for the Lord.

In behalf of the church, THOMAS RINES.

KANSAS CONFERENCE.—The Annual Session of the Advent Christian Conference of Kansas will be held, the Lord willing, at Melvern, Osage Co., Kan., commencing Friday, May 15th, 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Lord's day, or as long as the brethren may determine.

Those coming by rail from the North will stop at Arvonia Station, and those from the South at Burlington, where teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground where the Mission Tent will be pitched, if they write to Eld. J. C. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co., Kan., in time. Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 18th of April, 1874 (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary, care of Eld. Smith as above, or sent with the delegates. Let all who "wait for the Lord" and are "looking for that blessed hope" lay aside their secular affairs, and join with the "children of God" in their yearly feast of fat things. By order of the Directors,

AMOS SANFORD, Secretary.

HAVING made arrangements with the church at Franklin to be with them the second Sunday of each month, please appoint so as not to conflict.

G. H. WALLACE.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. A'GT.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL."

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

THE FORCE OF PRAYER.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."—TENNYSON.

Lonely wanderer, while you stray
Through the world's uncertain way,
In the dark and cloudy day,
Cast on God your care.
He whose very name is love,
Whom no change can ever move,
Deigns to bid you from above
Try the force of prayer.

Prayer has won the ear of heaven;
Prayer the bonds of death has riven;
Prayer 'gainst Satan's wiles has striven,
Broken many a snare;
Prayer has stayed the mid-day sun,
Prayer the victory oft has won,
And the coils of hell undone:
Try the force of prayer.

Burdened sinner, though you know
Sin embitters every woe,
And you dread the gulf below,
Yield not to despair;
Jesus pleads before the throne,
Once for all he did atone,
Now he makes your cause his own:
Try the force of prayer.

When the cares of life abound,
Earthquake shocks prevail around,
Knell to knell rebeats the sound,
Tears, for tears prepare;
He who walked upon the sea,
Rules the storm for thee and me,—
Lo! he counsels lean on me:
Try the force of prayer.

When the end appears in view,
Jordan's waves roll darkly too,
And you know not what to do,
To his cross repair;
Do what millions more have done,
Trust his mighty arm alone,
Make their anchorage your own:
Try the force of prayer.

When we reach our better home,
Where no storms can ever come,
And recount the wondrous sum
Of God's blessings here;
All to grace will date their gains,
All will own in joyful strains
That the force which loosed their chains,
Was the force of prayer.

BINDING OF THE DEVIL.

HENRY PRATT.

The subject is becoming one of deep interest to the students of prophecy. That nothing in the past tallies with the prophecy, many feel assured, though they may be unsettled in their own minds about the matter. The person to be bound, the cause or crime alleged, and the one who binds him, are matters of importance; also the chronology of the event. These being obtained, the matter will be well nigh settled.

1. Who is the person to be bound? It is a person or creature having four names: Dragon, that old Serpent, Devil, and Satan. The word dragon, from drakon, is found only in Revelation. His warfare is against the church; as an accuser of the brethren before our God—standing before the woman to devour the man-child; persecuting the woman, and making war on her seed. God said to the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed." Here the dragon and the old serpent are one, i. e., he is certainly doing the work that the deceiver or serpent in the garden was to do; and is called the devil and Satan in chap. 20.

Having traced the dragon from his laying in wait for the man-child to destroy it, to the brink of the pit, with the assurance that it "is the devil" by Christ's own angel, we leave him, to bring up the serpent. This word is from aphis, and is used in the singular number only, to represent the serpent that beguiled Eve, save where it speaks of Moses lifting up the serpent in the wilderness. Hence the propriety of calling it "that old serpent," and also giving the same assurance that had been given of the dragon, that it too "is the devil."

Satan is a proper name, from Satanas, and is used alternately with the name devil, though never rendered from the same word. It is like the given and surname of an individual; or like the name Saul and Paul; and always has reference to the great adversary of man,—the devil. Christ was tempted forty days of Satan. He says, "Get thee behind me, Satan." He speaks of the woman that had been long bound by Satan, and finally couples him with the devil at the pit, or includes him in the indictment of deceiving the nations.

This brings us to the last name, which embraces the same characteristics as the others,—the devil. This is from the Greek word diabolos, and is that being for whom that great fire is prepared, even for "the devil and his angels." Mark 1: 13 says Christ was tempted of Satan. Matt. 4: 1 says he was tempted of the devil. And so they are used alternately for the same being through the Scriptures; hence the appellation, "the devil and Satan,"—deceiver and adversary.

2. Having found the culprit, we naturally inquire for the indictment. For what is he to be arrested? For deceiving the nations; or, as in Rev. 12, "which deceiveth the whole world"; and this binding is to save the world from deception a thousand years. Has there ever been a time since the serpent deceived Eve that neither himself, or the dragon, or Satan, or the devil, deceived anybody for a thousand years? For they certainly are all involved in this deception.

3. But it may be we can turn on more light by the answer to the question, Who binds the devil? It is certain that this accuser of our brethren—this persecutor of the church—this war-maker and deceiver of the world, will not be entrusted to any earthly power, for it will require a stronger than he, as the Savior says, to first bind the strong man, and then destroy his goods. Who is stronger than the devil—the prince of this world—the prince of the power of the air; or, as the Irish word Diabhall is rendered, "god of the air"? I answer, Michael. He it was that contended about the body of Moses, the devil disputing the while, and was victorious; otherwise Moses had not been on the mount. This devil here could not have been a man, or any body of men, for no man knew where Moses' grave was; therefore it was some other being than man. It was as Jude said, "the devil" that was disputing.

Again, when that war occurred in heaven, we read that Michael and his angels fought, and the dragon (which is the devil) fought, and prevailed not. Therefore Michael is proved the stronger. If Michael and his angels are literal beings, then the dragon and his angels are literal; and when divested of his characteristics, it is the devil; and heaven rejoices at his departure, and the inhabitants of earth and sea mourn his presence. He is cast out of heaven for accusing our brethren before our God, day and night, as he did Job, and is to be bound for deceiving the nations.

"Then you have a hideous monster for a devil, with seven heads and ten horns?" We have no such conception of Christ when he is called the Lion of the tribe of Judah, or a Lamb with seven eyes. The latter denotes all seeing, the former all power. And I saw an angel come down from heaven with a key and chain, and laid hold of the dragon, that old serpent which is the devil and Satan. Who demurs at Gabriel's explanation of Dan. 8—"The ram thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia"? and why demur at this explanation? If the devil would dispute about the body of Moses, he will dispute about the resurrection of the saints. But Michael's (the archangel's) voice will be heard, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Michael will stand up, and many sleepers in the dust shall awake. The devil is bound, and the dead saints live.

Then to establish the chronology of this event it is declared to be "the first resurrection." The contending parties are an angel and the devil. The party to be bound is the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil and Satan. The cause for binding was for deceiving the nations. This would be accomplished at the end, by unclean spirits; i. e., "the spirits of devils"; the prime mover of which is the devil. The object of binding was, that he should deceive the nations no more for a thousand years. The angel to bind the devil is not named; but as Michael, the archangel, did conflict with the devil for the body of Moses; and as Michael and his angels did cast out the devil and his angels into the earth; and as Michael shall stand up and some of the sleepers in the dust will awake; and as his voice shall be heard with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; and as the first resurrection is preceded by the binding of the devil; and as the time of trouble preceding the awaking of the saints in Dan. 12 is caused by Michael's standing up, it is strong inferential testimony, at least, that the other party—the one that binds the devil—is Michael, or it is by his direction. The thousand years between the resurrections does not conflict with a single declaration of Scripture in the light of truth. The mission of Christ was "to preach the acceptable year of the Lord and day of vengeance of our God"; and the events are separated by nearly two thousand years.

HOW TO OVERCOME SIN.

In every period of my ministerial life I have found many professed christians in a miserable state of bondage either to the world, the flesh, or the devil. But surely this is no christian state, for the apostle has distinctly said,—"Sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace." In all my christian life I have been pained to find so many christians living in the legal bondage described in the seventh chapter of Romans—a life of sinning, and resolving to reform, and falling again. And what is particularly saddening, and even agonizing is, that so many ministers and leading christians give perfectly false instruction upon the subject of how to overcome sin. The directions that are generally given upon this subject, I am sorry to say, amount to about this: "Take your sins in detail, "resolve to abstain from them, and fight against them, if need be, with prayer and fasting, until you have overcome them. Set your will firmly against a relapse into sin, pray and struggle, and resolve that you will not fall, and persist in this until you form the habit of obedience, and break up all your sinful habits." To be sure, it is generally added: "In this conflict you must not depend on your own strength, but pray for the help of God." In a word, much of the teaching, both of the pulpit and the press, really amounts to this: Sanctification is by works, and not by faith. I notice that Dr. Chalmers, in his lectures on Romans, expressly maintains that justification is by faith, but sanctification is by works.

Some twenty-five years ago, I think, a prominent professor of theology in New England maintained in substance the same doctrine. In my early christian life, I was very nearly misled by one of President Edward's resolutions; which was, in substance, that when he had fallen into any sin he would trace it back to its source, and then fight and pray against it with all his might until he subdued it. This, it will be perceived, is directing the attention to the overt act of sin, its source, or occasions. Resolving and fighting against it fastens the attention on the sin and its source, and diverts it entirely from Christ.

Now it is important to say right here that all such efforts are worse than useless, and not unfrequently result in delusion. First, it is losing sight of what really constitutes sin; and, secondly, of the only practicable way to avoid it. In this way, the outward act or habit may be overcome and avoided, while that which really constitutes the sin is left untouched. Sin is not external, but internal. It is not a muscular act; it is not the volition that causes muscular action; it is not an involuntary feeling or desire; it must be a voluntary act or state of mind. Sin is nothing else than that voluntary, ultimate preference or state of committal to self-pleasing out of which the volitions, the outward actions, purposes, intentions, and all the things that are commonly called sin, proceed.

Now, what is resolved against in this religion of resolutions and efforts to suppress sinful, and form holy habits? "Love is the fulfilling of the law." But do we produce love by resolutions? Do we eradicate selfishness by resolutions? No, indeed. We may suppress this or that expression or manifestation of selfishness by resolving not to do this or that, and praying and struggling against it. We may resolve upon an outward obedience, and work ourselves up to the letter of an obedience to God's commandments. But to eradicate selfishness from the breast by resolution is an absurdity. So the effort to obey the commandments of God in spirit—in other words, to attempt to love as the law of God requires by force of resolution—is an absurdity. There are many who maintain that sin consists in the desires. Be it so. Do we control our desires by force of resolution? We may abstain from the gratification of a particular desire by the force of resolution. We may go further, and abstain from the gratification of desire generally in the outward life. But this is not to secure the love of God, which constitutes obedience. Should we become anchorites, immure ourselves in a cell, and crucify all our desires and appetites, so far as their indulgence is concerned, we have only avoided certain forms of sin; but the root that really constitutes sin is not touched. Our resolution has not secured love, which is the only real obedience to God. All our battling with sin in the outward life, by the force of resolution, is of no avail; for in all this, however successful, the effort to suppress sin may be, in the outward life or in the inward desire, it will only end in delusion; for by the force of resolution we cannot love.

All such efforts to overcome sin are utterly futile, and as uncriptural as they are futile. The Bible expressly teaches us that sin is overcome by faith in Christ. "He is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." "He is the way, the truth, and the life." Christians are said to "purify their hearts by faith." And it is also affirmed that the saints are sanctified by faith in Christ. In Romans 9: 31, 32, it is affirmed that the Jews attained not to righteousness, "because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law." The doctrine of the Bible is, that Christ saves his people from sin through faith; that Christ's spirit is received by faith to dwell in the heart. It is faith that works by love. Love is wrought and sustained by faith. By faith christians "overcome the world, the flesh, and the devil." It is by faith that they "quench the fiery darts of the wicked." It is by faith that "they put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and put off the old man with his deeds." It is by faith that we fight "the good fight," and not by resolution. It is by faith that we "stand;" by resolution we fall. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. It is by faith that the flesh is kept under, and carnal desires subdued.

The fact is, that it is simply by faith that we receive the Spirit of Christ to work in us, to will and to do, according to his good pleasure. He sheds abroad his own love in our hearts, and thereby enkindles ours. Every victory over sin is by faith in Christ; and whenever the mind is diverted from Christ, by resolving and fighting against sin, whether we are aware of it or not, we are acting in our own strength, rejecting the help of Christ, and are under specious delusion. Nothing but the life and energy of the spirit of Christ within us can save us from sin, and trust is the uniform and universal condition of the working of this saving energy within us.

How long shall this fact be, at least practically, overlooked by the teachers of religion? How deeply rooted in the heart of man is self-righteousness and self-dependence! So deeply that one of the hardest lessons for the human heart to learn is to renounce self dependence, and trust wholly to Christ. When we open the door by implicit trust, he enters in and takes up his abode with us, and in us. By shedding abroad his love, he quickens our whole souls into sympathy with himself, and in this way, and in this way alone, he purifies our hearts through faith. He sustains our will in the attitude of devotion. He quickens and regulates our affections, desires, appetites, and passions, and becomes our sanctification. Very much of the teachings we hear in prayer and conference meetings, from the pulpit and the press, is so misleading, as to render the hearing or reading of such instruction almost too painful to be endured. Such instruction is calculated to beget delusion, discouragement, and a practical rejection of Christ as he is presented in the gospel.

Alas for the blindness that "leads to bewilder" the soul that is longing after deliverance from the power of sin! I have sometimes listened to legal teaching upon this subject until I felt as if I should scream. It is astonishing sometimes to hear christian men object to the teaching which I have here inculcated that it leaves us in a passive state, to be saved without our own activity. What darkness is involved in this objection! The Bible teaches that by trusting in Christ we receive an inward influence that stimulates and directs our activity; that by faith we receive his purifying influence into the very centre of our being; that through and by his truth revealed directly to the soul he quickens our whole inward being into the attitude of a loving obedience; and this is the way, and the only practicable way to overcome sin.

But some one may say, "Does not the apostle exhort as follows: 'Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God which worketh in you, both to will and to do of his good pleasure?' 'And is not this an exhortation to do what in this article you condemn? By no means. In the twelfth verse of the second chapter of Philippians Paul says, "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in you, both to will and to do of his good pleasure." There is no exhortation to work by force of resolution, but through and by the inworking of God. This is precisely the doctrine of this article. Paul had too often taught the church that Christ in the heart is our sanctification, and that this influence is to be received by faith, to be guilty in this passage of teaching that our sanctification is to be wrought out by resolution and efforts to suppress sinful and form holy habits. This passage of Scripture happily recognizes both the divine and human agency in the work of sanctification. God works in us to will and to do; and we, accepting by faith his inworking, will and do according to his good pleasure.

Faith itself is an active and not a passive state. A passive holiness is impossible and absurd. Let no one say that when we exhort people to trust wholly in Christ, we teach that any one should be or can be passive in receiving and co-operating with the divine influence within. This influence is moral, and not physical. It is persuasion, and not force. It influences the free will, and consequently does this by truth, and not by force.

Oh! that it could be understood that the whole of spiritual life that is in any man is received direct from the Spirit of Christ by faith, as the branch receives its life from the vine. Away with this religion of resolutions! It is a snare of death. Away with this effort to make the life holy, while the heart has not in it the love of God! Oh, that men would learn to look directly at Christ through the Gospel, and so close in with him by an act of loving trust as to involve a universal sympathy with his state of mind! This, and this alone, is sanctification.—C. J. FINNEY, in Earnest Christian.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

H. MUNGER.

It is generally more interesting to some, to read of the work of the Lord in different places, than to read a logical article on a point of Bible doctrine. Yet both are needed, and good in their places. Those who travel know more about what is going on in the world and among our brethren than those who have to stay at home and depend upon what they see in the Crisis. What could we do without it? It is a medium through which we can get acquainted, and feed and strengthen each other.

I find of late a happy reaction taking place in many places where distracting elements have caused the meetings to run down. There now seems to be a coming together in effort, and dropping of little points of difference, and pushing the weightier matters, i. e., the getting ready to meet the Lord. My labors have been in cities mostly through the cold weather. I have been to New Haven five times, and find them, after a severe trial of scattering, coming together, and God is blessing them. A good number have been converted, and others quickened. This church serves as a good light-house on that coast, and many see the light and come to it. Brn. Denny and Steele have done a good work in reestablishing these meetings on a firm basis. God bless them.

I have also been to Newark, N. J. Brn. Shepherd and Libby have established a good meeting, where the honest, hungry children can come and get fed on a variety, which is the only way to keep life in the church in these times. We had blessed meetings, and unbelievers got interested, which is always the case when union on the great truths prevail over doting about questions of no general profit. This has killed out the interest in many places.

New York City has a good meeting at the Bowery. At the last meeting, after preaching, a young man arose and asked prayers, which gave the meeting a new start. I took dinner with him, and found him determined to go on. Others are much interested in the present truths. If all the elements in that city were united, instead of two or three little factions, their power would be especially felt; for there are strong minds there who love the truth.

We had a meeting at Green Point, Sabbath evening, in the Christian church, where hundreds heard the truth. The few brethren think of starting meetings there again and call in the sheep of that fold. Bro. Campbell desired this before he died; but his labors are finished, and others must take his place. At Templeton, Md., another rundown church, on account of divisions and opposition. We had a good meeting, and the brethren feel it duty to repair the lighthouse. So in many other places. There is a spirit of rallying around the old standard of truth. Other places of worship do not feed them. The house of Rimmon does not satisfy them.

On my way to Massena, N. Y., near the Canada line, I stopped one evening, and found them in a good state for work. Bro. Flagg has become their Pastor by unanimous consent, and is working with them in a protracted meeting. Some have been converted. One Catholic. If they hold on, the devil will find a strong fortification there after all he has done to distress it. Bro. Flagg is hard at work, and the Lord is blessing his labors. I stopped over night with Bro. Taylor, at Rouse's Point. Preached in the Methodist church on our truth, and had a blessed time. Was requested to call when I came back and preach again.

Went to Massena, a four hundred miles ride, then had to take stage and wagon twenty miles further, which was more to be dreaded than all the rest; but got through comfortably. There is opposition to this dispensational truth in this place, and for years they have had preaching only occasionally until Bro. Pike settled there, which has been a blessing to them. They are much scattered. Many came from three to eight miles to meeting. Another great inconvenience is, they have a meeting in the forenoon at the union house, and then go five miles for a meeting in the afternoon and back for the evening meeting, making twenty miles travel for the people and preacher that live at the village. This has prevented some from attending meeting. The subject of building a chapel has been agitated, and some pledges made, but no plan was matured or spot selected. It needed a little encouraging and engineering, which I felt it duty to do, and in two days we got the church together, and appointed a building committee. By request I went with Bro. Pike and bought a piece of land in the village, drew a plan of the house, made out a bill of material, estimated the expense, in one day, and preached at night and had a blessed good time. We found there was more pledged than the house would cost;—a thing I never knew before anywhere. The house, 50 x 36, will cost $2100, and we have got $2500, leaving, $400 towards a parsonage. With a little effort enough more can be raised to build a parsonage 20 x 28. This church put their hands into their pockets. Some gave $500, others $400, and down to one hundred, which is the least. God will prosper them. One man gave five hundred dollars that does not profess religion, and will give more if necessary. He paid $350 down for the land the day we bought it. We hope God will convert him soon. He attends every meeting. We are having good times in Massena in spite of opposition; and the success of the house has astonished the people, and set all the elements in motion—enemies and all. But we praise God for our prosperity thus far. Many got light on our truth, and some started anew to serve the Lord. Bro. Pike will look well to their interest. This is a strong church, rooted and grounded in the faith once delivered to the saints.

On leaving there I came to Rouse's Point. Found Bro. Taylor sick, but he had secured the Methodist church, where I preached and received good attention while I presented the plan of redemption through Christ and the resurrection. Many heard for the first time. Next to Castleton, Vt. Here I found a daily paper, the first for two weeks. The church is doing well under the labors of Bro. Wm. Himes. He makes the doctrines of our faith prominent. All lovers of this truth must act faithfully.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Third Quarterly Meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference met pursuant to notice, at Floyd Iowa, on the 19th of Feb., 1874. The attendance was good. Many dear brethren came in from the surrounding country, and testified of the goodness of God. We had a refreshing time.

The reports from the churches and brethren were cheering; and upon the whole, it was the best Quarterly Meeting of the season. It was good to be there. The President, Elder Raymond, called the meeting to order in the usual manner,—made a few brief remarks—said the first object of the meeting was to promote unity and harmony; the second, to transact such business as may be thought best for the advancement of the cause of our Master.

MINISTERS REPORT.

Elder C. C. Ramsey said he had been preaching every Lord's day, and had attended two campmeetings; but could not say that he had accomplished as much as could be desired. Other ministers reported briefly, that they were doing what they could in the Lord's vineyard.

BUSINESS.

Resolved, That we request the Campmeeting Committee to call these meetings on the 18th of June, and hold over two Sabbaths. The President instructed the Secretary to call the annual Conference in connection with the campmeeting at New Hartford, commencing June 24th, 1874.

Bro. T. F. Miller, of Clarksville, was licensed to preach. Brethren will therefore receive him as a co-laborer.

An invitation was extended to all lovers of Christ to make a special effort to attend our annual June campmeeting; not for the purpose of advocating some particular tenet of doctrine, but for the purpose of elevating the spiritual condition of the church at large. J. W. BURROUGHS, Sec.

IF WE KNEW.

If we knew when walking thoughtless
Through the crowded, noisy way,
That some pearl of wondrous whiteness
Close beside our pathway lay;
We would pause when now we hasten,
We would often look around,
Lest our careless feet should trample
Some rare jewel in the ground.

If we knew what forms were fainting
For the shade that we should fling,
If we knew what lips were parching
For the water we should bring,
We would haste with eager footsteps,
We would work with willing hands,
Bearing cups of cooling water,
Planting rows of shading palms.

If we knew when friends around us
Closely press to say, Good by,
Which among the lips that kiss us,
First should 'neath the daisy lie;
We would clasp our arms around them,
Looking on them through our tears;
Tender words of love eternal
We would whisper in their ears.

If we knew what lives were darkened
By some thoughtless word of ours,
Which had ever lain among them
Like the frost among the flowers;
Oh! with what sincere repentings,
With what anguish of regret,
While our eyes were overflowing,
Would we cry,—Forgive, forget.

If we knew—alas! and do we Ever care or seek to know,
Whether bitter herbs or roses
In our neighbor's gardens grow?
God forgive us, lest hereafter,
Our hearts break to hear him say,
"Careless child, I never knew you,
From my presence flee away."

WHO WILL WIN?

J. T. KIMBALL.

I once saw a wax figure,—the devil and Christian playing a game. It was in the form of a game of chess; the devil one side, Christian the other. The chess were all marked with some of the besetments of human nature; such as anger, pride, evil-speaking, backbiting, wrath. Well, I could not think of them all if I had the time. The most of us have found out what we are made of. Now to the game. These besetments were all on the board. I noticed that Christian had won a few points; one was anger. But I do not remember them all, or just how the game stood. I know one thing,—there were some important points to strive for; and I thought how well that illustrated our warfare.

We are at a game—a fearful game—with an antagonist that is no new hand at the business. He is an old gamester, and knows every move. You and I cannot play with him without getting the worst of the game. But Jesus and I can beat him every time. We have got to watch;—it won't do to look off the game; for you know it is just like the devil to make a move when we are not looking. He is an old cheat. He won't play fair any way. But be sure and get Jesus to help. There are some points that will take a hard struggle to win. It seems sometimes as though we should lose the game, sure. Some think it so hard they give it up. How unwise! How can you give it up, when there is so much at stake?

If you reign on the new earth, you will have to take a hand at this game, with the same old gamester. Don't think of playing with him alone. Better and smarter people than you or I have tried that, and been beaten every time. "Well," says one, "I tried and got beat." Well, try again. You are beat if you do not try; so I think it best to keep at it. A few more battles, and we will be out of his reach.

I do not know as I can do any one any good, but will say I am at this game yet. I have not won as many points as I ought to, with the experience that I have had. I ought to be a better player by this time. I am glad some are farther advanced than I am. To such I say, I am after you. Do not stop to hitch on to me, but go on. By the grace of God I will try to overtake you. The world to come never looked better to me than it does to-night. There will be no sickness there; no sorrow, no dying, no poverty. No. Thank God! As I think of this, a little faith kindles up in my mind, and I think it will pay to endure a little longer, and try to be a little more watchful; for if I lose that world, all is gone. What a world this is! what suffering! How hard it is to look on the dear little innocent ones as they lie and suffer. But these scenes will soon be over. Dear ones, how do you stand? Are you doing all you can for the Master? Soon he will be here.

Well, I won't bother, or mortify, or hinder you any more in this; and I don't think I shall be offended if I never see it in print. I will try and meet you in that bright and beautiful world, where sorrow or care never come, and where the tried and tempted will find peace. Come, you almost discouraged one, don't give up here. Face the storm; the rest will be the sweeter over there.

May God bless and keep you, and all the dear ones, is the prayer of your unworthy brother.

Concord, N. H., March 6th, 1874.

"THE WORD."

H. S. WILLARD.

"For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge; that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.

"Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen."

My whole soul utters this prayer for the church at this time. Amen.

REPORT

Of the Second Quarterly Meeting of the Northern Penn. and Southern New York Advent Christian Conference, assembled at South Creek, Bradford Co., Pa., March 5th, 1874.

The weather was quite unpleasant, but quite a number of Brn. and Srs. from abroad were with us to aid in prayer, exhortation and song. Preaching Brn. present: Bro. Cowles, Pres., also Brn. Ongley, Eggleston, Sawyer, Benson, and Fletcher. Preaching by Brn. Cowles, Eggleston, Benson, and Ongley;—we hope to acceptance. Many good exhortations by the other Brn. Brn. Benson and Fletcher were received into the Conference as licentiates, and the right hand of fellowship given them. The little church of South Creek, Pa., organized by Eld. J. T. Ongley, Dec. 14th, 1873, numbering sixteen members, and the church in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., Pa., organized by J. T. Ongley, Feb. 4th, 1873, eleven members, were received into the Conference. After the services in the day-time, on Sunday, a goodly number partook of the Lord's Supper in expectation of soon seeing the absent One. Truly we can say, We had a good meeting.

Gems.

— The promises of God are solid food. Satan's promises are baits, as the meat that fowlers set before birds, which is not to feed them, but to take them.

— If afflictions work good in us, they will only be as waves to lift the bark into the haven of eternal rest.

—"In heaven will be found peace without molestation—plenty without want—health without sickness—day without night—pleasure without pain—and life without the least mixture or dread of death.

— If God gives us a staff, he intends us to lean on it; and when he takes it away he is sure to give us his own hand instead.

— Self-confidence destroys its thousands, but holy diffidence is a sure protection.

— If we can but believe that all which occurs to us is meant for our good, we shall get good out of every thing.

— We read our Bibles well, if the holy language of them constrains us to pray to God to fix his precepts in our hearts.

— We pray best when we expect most.

— By the words of our mouth we may affect to adore religion; but it is by the works of our lives that we adorn religion.

— Wherever there is grace, there will be gratitude.

SAMMY HICKS AND HIS PIPE.

It is said of that good man, Sammy Hicks, the Macclesfield blacksmith, that "as he understood the words of the Lord Jesus, it was quite enough for him to see the path of duty steadfastly to travel in it."

An instance of this feature of his character was exhibited in his sudden abandonment of tobacco. One day he gave sixpence to a poor widow. She blessed him, and could hardly find words enough with which to express her thanks.

He said to himself, "Well, if sixpence makes that poor creature so happy, oh how many sixpences have I spent in filling my mouth with tobacco!"

He made a vow instantly never to let a pipe enter his lips again. Soon afterwards he was taken very ill, and a doctor said to him, "Mr. Hicks, you must resume your pipe."

"I will not," he replied.

"Then," said the doctor, "if you do not, you will not live."

"Bless the Lord, then," said Sammy. "I have made a vow to the Lord that the pipe shall never enter my mouth again; and it never shall."

Sammy Hicks kept his vow, and lived to be an old man.—Rev. T. E. Thorsby.

THE TWO GARDENERS.—Two gardeners, who were neighbors, had their crops of early peas killed by frost. One of them came to condole with the other on this misfortune.

"Ah!" cried he, "how unfortunate we have been, neighbor! do you know I have done nothing but fret ever since. But you seem to have a fine healthy crop coming up already; what are these?"

"These!" cried the other gardener, "why these are what I sowed immediately after my loss."

"What! coming up already?" cried the fretter.

"Yes; while you were fretting, I was working."

"What! don't you fret when you have a loss?"

"Yes; but I always put it off until after I have repaired the mischief."

"Why then you have no need to fret at all."

"True," replied the industrious gardener, "and that's the very reason."

NOTHING so wins upon strangers as true politeness. A little attention shown in a stage, or in the cars, or at a public table, costs us very little. But what an effect it has upon the persons to whom the attention is shown. The pleased look, the grateful smile, show us we have gained a friend.

HOME AND HEALTH.

MISTRESS AND SERVANT.

In an article under this caption the Daily Graphic, with many timely and practical remarks, says:

"The average modern woman knows very little about housekeeping, and cares less than she knows. She looks upon it as drudgery. She could not get a complete dinner in perfect order to save her life. She has the least practical knowledge of how a whole house is to be kept in order, and the entire mechanism of the household to run in perfect time, without friction or creaking. She cannot teach what she does not know. She has neither the taste nor the patience to go into the kitchen and show her domestics just how every kind of work should be done. She bargains for servants that understand their business. It is her place to issue orders and their place to obey them; and it is quite as much as she can do to issue commands, without superintending the execution. Under these circumstances we submit whether a training-school for mistresses is not quite as important as one for maids."

Verily, a training-school for mistresses is a thousand-fold more important than one for maids. A know-nothing woman is no more fit to preside over a household than an ignoramus of a man is to manage the outdoor affairs. And we would go a little further and say, that no woman is fit to be mistress, wife, or mother, until she personally understands how to cook wholesome food, dress children healthfully, and preserve her own health. This may sound like very radical doctrine for the "butterflies of fashion," but we think it is radically true.—Science of Health.

EXTRAVAGANCE.

Extravagance is the disease of the times. Multitudes have been living beyond their incomes. Luxury has been invited to dinner, and refuses to leave at tea time. The pocket-money of the boys and girls in a modern family would have supported the grandfather's household. The great financial cloud that hangs over us has come for the reason that men have not known the worth of a dollar. God has set apart this fall and winter to teach it, and I think he will keep us in school till we have got the lesson. In scattering for worldly pleasure men have driven fleet horses; in saving for worthy uses they have ridden snails. Fashion has been reigning in a fool's paradise. Hundreds of nice young men have been doing nothing but part their hair in the middle, and spend their father's earnings, and as many nice young women have been sticking their hair on the top of their heads, and helping them. Now, God has come to cut the proud flesh, and good and bad alike will feel the knife. In the practice of simplicity, honesty, sincerity, true economy,—our christian duty begins. It is a heroic work, and requires a martyr spirit. Save fragments of time; save fragments of opportunity; save fragments of money; but of the fragments of God's gifts to you, saved by your care, you may assist to build his spiritual temple, radiant with his glory, and musical with the chorals of eternal praise.—C. H. Goodell.

"AS THE TWIG IS BENT THE TREE IS INCLINED."

We often hear mothers wondering why their daughters are so indolent, or so ignorant of household matters, or so careless in their habits. They complain, and scold, and fret over it, but they make no attempt to teach them better. The fault lies with the mothers themselves; instead of training their girls to habits of industry and neatness, instead of instructing them in household ways, they have allowed them to grow up without any training at all.

Girls are not going to learn these things of their own accord; they must be taught from the time they are old enough to [illegible] how to be neat and industrious. The teaching of them must be systematic; beginning in their early years; it will not do to train them a month, then leave them three months to do as they please. Education is, after all, the mighty magician that turns every thing into gold.

Mothers, educate your girls to be neat and industrious, and you will never have to complain that they are not neat and industrious women. Train them carefully in household ways; teach them how to make puddings, and cakes, and pickles, and preserves; show them how to be tidy about a house, how to do everything in the neatest manner. Teach them both by precept and example; it is worth the trouble; for, instead of having drones and slatterns about you, you will have well-trained and useful helps.—Mrs. Leigh, in the Southerner.

A SIMPLE DISINFECTANT.—One pound of green copperas, costing seven cents, dissolved in one quart of water, and poured down a water closet, will effectually concentrate and destroy the foulest smells. On board ships and steamboats, about hotels, and other public places, there is nothing so nice to purify the air. Simple green copperas, dissolved in any thing under the bed, will render an hospital, or other places for the sick, free from unpleasant smells. In fish-markets, slaughter-houses, sinks, and wherever there are offensive gases, dissolve copperas and sprinkle it about, and in a few days the smell will all pass away. If a cat, rat, or mouse dies about the house, and sends forth an offensive gas, place some dissolved copperas in an open vessel near the place where the nuisance is, and it will purify the atmosphere.

[illegible] Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all [illegible] truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate personal coming and reign of Christ on the [illegible]; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of [illegible] dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

FAITH.

MRS. CURRY.

Our faith is like the morning star,
It shines so calm and even;
It safely guides us, step by step,
On to our home in Eden.

It reaches down from realms above
A golden chain of light;
Each link displays Almighty love—
An emblem of delight.

A precious gift—a sacrifice
To save a fallen race;
'Twas wrought by blood, and tears, and cries—
'Twould all mankind embrace.

Yet faith was sung ere Christ appeared
Amongst us here on earth;
For many saints their God had feared,
And prophesied his birth.

With faith then watch, and work, and pray,
That star will lead us home;
Our Jesus will not long delay—
The Bridegroom bids us "Come."

THE COMING CRISIS OF THE SECOND ADVENT.

REV. HORATIUS BONAR.

Never did futurity wear so wild an aspect, [illegible] God's ways seem so strange and [illegible] never were the church's prospects more perilous and perplexed, never were "the world's turns so slippery," as they are at present. Above all, never was there a time when events developed themselves with such rapidity. This seems especially one of the characteristics of the last days. As the world moves onward, it appears to accelerate its speed and precipitate itself with headlong recklessness and feverish haste. Events, alike the [illegible] and the good, though [illegible] form[illegible] seem to ripen before their season, [illegible] Satan were in haste to [illegible] through [illegible] vices, knowing that now he hath but a short time. The crisis comes ere we are well aware of the commencement. Speed, whirlwind speed, is the order of the day. All things are now conducted upon a larger scale, and cast in a more commanding mould. There is less of the commonplace, and more of the startling—less of the gradual movement, and more of the sudden shock and convulsion in the events of the age—an age which is destined, we believe, to concentrate in its history more of the terrible and the calamitous than has ever heretofore been witnessed, or shall be witnessed hereafter.

What then are our prospects? Some would paint them bright, others gloomy. All indeed are full of expectation as to the glory that is yet to brighten over the earth, the peace that is yet to gladden it. But as to what that glory is, how it is to be introduced, and how present events are making way for its arrival, men are divided. The fond idolaters of science and reason are hailing the day of triumph as if its dawn were already brightening in the East, as if in the march of intellect every one might discern the progress of righteousness and truth. Some in the church, not so unscriptural in their optimism, nor trusting so vainly to human intellect, nevertheless think they see the Gospel gradually leavening the world, and all things advancing onward resistlessly to a glorious issue. There are others, however, who see the shadows gathering deeper and broader everywhere, and darkness, denser than Egyptian, settling down upon Christendom, and who look for no triumph till there has been a time of trouble such as never was nor ever shallbe. (Dan. 12: 1.)

Which of these opinions is right, Prophecy alone can inform us. This is our only guide. It is our watch-tower, into which we must betake ourselves, in order, on the one hand, to note the troubled scenes that are passing below, and on the other hand to watch for every token of the ascending dawn. On the early morn of jubilee, men were stationed on the eastern hills about Jerusalem to catch the first gleam of sunshine, silvering the cloud or the mountain-top afar off, that they might announce it to the priests waiting in the temple with their silver trumpets to proclaim it to the expecting city, from which the tidings, caught up by the watchmen of the surrounding hills, were echoed from mountain to mountain till all Judea hailed the welcome note. So are we to take our stand on our prophetic watch-tower that we may catch the earliest glimpse of approaching glory and proclaim it over earth as glad tidings of great joy to a groaning creation and a sorrowing church. Woe be to us if we keep the world in ignorance of what is coming, so that when the day arrives, it may turn round on us in reproach, and say, "We never heard of all this; they who professed to know it kept silence; no utterance of warning from their lips ever reached our ears."

Considered even thus generally, we not only find abundant reasons inviting us to the study of prophecy, but we see also how profitable and how practical that study is. There are many circumstances, however, at present, fitted to call our keenest attention to its predicted scenes, and to invest them with a profounder interest. When the heavens are gathering blackness and the night is deepening its gloom; when infidelity, like some universal solvent, is dismembering and levelling the national and social system; when everything seems starting from its long-rooted base, as if gravitation itself had given way; when the church is sore pressed and straitened, seeing traitors admitted within its camp, and the enemy's ranks augmented by desertion from its own; when Popery, Infidelity, and Liberalism, firmly leagued together in well-leased confederacy, are maddening against her with infuriated zeal; when the kings of the earth and the governments of the people are taking counsel against the Lord and his Anointed;—how intense the interest which the church ought to feel in the "sure word of prophecy," how earnestly ought she to take heed to it as to a light shining in a dark place until the day dawn and the day-star arise!

DESIRABLENESS OF CHRIST'S ADVENT.

What a trial the departure of Jesus must have been to his disciples! His absence was a sad blank in their circle. How they would miss him! He knew this, and prepared them for it. Love like theirs could ill bear the absence of one so dear. No wonder that they delighted in the prospect of his return, and clasped the promise of it to their heart as their treasure and their joy. "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Acts 1: 11.)

What a trial also must his departure have been to the family that he loved at Bethany! How often had he been their guest! How often had he sat at their table and slept beneath their roof! How often had they watched him in the still evening, coming over the brow of Olivet, and slowly descending its shady slopes! How eagerly they had gone forth to meet him, and to welcome him to their quiet dwelling where no city hum could meet his ear, and nought be heard around, save the breath of the breeze as it murmured through the palms! What a blank then would his absence be! How empty, how desolate would their dwelling now appear! Their loved Friend and guest had gone, and left behind him a vacancy which none but himself could ever fill. They could not doubt his love; they had his abiding though unseen fellowship; but he, the living Jesus,—he, the visible companion, was away. How they would mourn! How eagerly they would cling to the promise of his speedy return! It would be to them truly a "blessed hope."

Such should be the feelings of the church, such should be the longings of every saint. The Bridegroom is absent, and should not the friends of the Bridegroom mourn? Above all should not the Bride lament his absence? Should she not long and watch without ceasing, for the return of the beloved of her heart? Until he appear, she cannot be comforted. She must of necessity feel the dreary blank. No glory, no prosperity to which she may attain, can satisfy her without his personal presence. A millennium, without him in the midst, would be poor indeed. And besides, it is on his return that God wishes her to fix her eye. It is around his return that all her hopes revolve. It is in his return that all the glory she has been promised is wrapt up. It is then that the marriage is to take place, for this is but the time of her betrothment. It is then that she is to receive from his own hands the crown of royal dominion and be invested with the rule of the universe as his queen,—his love, his dove, his undefiled. Till then sorrow and tribulation are her lot below.

THE TARRYING OF THE BRIDEGROOM.

The Lord, in one of his parables, likens himself to "a certain nobleman" who went into a far country "to receive for himself a kingdom and to return." He is now in that far country, and has been sojourning there these eighteen hundred years. But he is not always to remain there; he is to return, having received the kingdom. Before he left, he gave many intimations regarding his return; his instructions were minute and special, implying the great stress he laid upon it, and his anxiety that his church should at all times be fully prepared for it, however sudden it might be. He spoke of its time as uncertain, but of the event itself as most absolutely ceatain, and most abruptly unexpected, overtaking men "as a snare," stealing in upon them with silent foot, as "a thief in the night."

Looking to these intimations, the early Christians were ever on the eager watch to hail his advent. It was the resting place of their hopes, the strength of their souls, the very life of their joy. They allowed no object to intervene between them and their Lord's appearing; they were ever waiting and looking for it, as if all between it and them were a dreary rugged waste. As, in a night of clouds, when no small tempest lies upon his vessel, the seaman's eye is ever on the look out for the star of morning, so were their anxious eyes, amid tribulation and darkness, ever watching for the appearing of "the bright and morning star."

He did not, however, come in their day. The Bridegroom tarried, the King delayed his return. Was, then, all their waiting profitless? Were they, as men disappointed, cheated, befooled? No! their watching was not in vain. Besides its being their Lord's command, it was blessedness unspeakable to them. It sustained them, comforted them, gladdened them, sanctified them in a way such as no other truth, no other hope could have done. Verily they had their reward.

Take a common illustration. A friend promises you a visit "very soon." His language is such that he may perchance come to-morrow; and accordingly you wait for his arrival on that day. But he comes not. The third day passes, but still he comes not. What do you infer from this? Do you say forthwith, "Oh, he did not mean what he said; I must have mistaken him; he meant that I was to go to him, not that he was to come to me." Would you reason thus? Not if you believed his word, and were assured that no hindrance could stay him. Not if you were really anxious for his arrival, and felt the dreary solitude of absence from him. On the contrary, you would say, "I know he will fulfill his promise, and that nothing can hinder him; and therefore, since he has not arrived to-day, I may be more sure of him to-morrow." Every lengthened day would only make you the surer, as well as the more eager in your expectations, because you are well assured that he will abide by his promise, and that, therefore, his tarrying cannot now be long.

OUR POSITION IN THE FOURTH WATCH.

Just so ought the Christian church to reason regarding the Lord's appearing. He came not in the first watch of the night; but what of that? We may more confidently reckon on his arrival in the second. He came not in the second; but what of that? We may surely expect him in the third. He came not in the third; but what of that? Shall we weary of watching? Shall hope deferred make our hearts sick? Shall expectation give way, and our longings be quenched? Shall we conclude that he cannot come in the fourth? In that fourth and last watch of the night we seem now to be. And what shall we say? My Lord delayeth his coming? He has been so long behind the appointed time, and has too often disappointed us, that perhaps he may not come at all? Shall we give birth to such thoughts, or utterance to such words as these? Nay, but let us lift up our heads, knowing that now our redemption must be drawing nigh. We are surer than ever that he is near, even at the door. If this be the fourth and last watch of the night, then beyond that, his stay cannot be prolonged, for he comes as the star of the morning, the herald of the dawn. He must be nigh. "He that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

If the warning words, "Behold, I come quickly," sounded with such solemnizing power in the church's early days, how much more loudly ought they to peal upon us now! If they broke like threatening thunder upon the slumbers of a careles world in these times, how appalling how overwhelming now! If in the primitive age they carried with them such a potent spell to nerve and animate the church with more than human vigor and endurance; to fill her soul with more than mortal joy; to bear her far above this earth, as upon eagle's wings; to disenchant the principalities and powers of darkness of all their power to harm,—what ought they not to do now, when the revolution of so many centuries has brought us so much nearer the expected time.

Now, how is it possible that the millennial of a thousand years (Rev. 20:) can precede the second advent of Christ? How can I watch,—watch with the eager throb of uncertainty and hope,—for that which I positively know to be a thousand years distant? And especially if these thousand years be so marked that I cannot mistake their beginning or end,—there can be no watching at all.

THE APOSTACY AND MAN OF SIN.

St. Paul tells the Thessalonians that the day of the Lord shall not come "except there come a falling away, first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition," and it has been argued that, as the apostle did not reckon the interposition of this event between him and the second advent, to be inconsistent with the command to watch, so the interposition of the millennial age cannot be inconsistent with it. 2 Thess. 2.

On this, I remark that the interposition of an event is very different from the interposition of a period. The latter seems to be incompatible with watchfulness, but not the former, more especially when that event "the falling away" or anti-christian apostacy is declared to be already in progress, as is done by the apostle when he says "the Mystery of Iniquity doth already work." For this no time is given, and it is the absence of time that is the foundation of watchfulness. The event which the apostle interposes is one which he declares to be already begun. It is an event which might be consummated within a very short space—so short, that when known to be commenced, no man could say of it that it might not be brought to a crisis without delay. Its development may be with the unexpected suddenness of the lightning. We have, in our own day, witnessed so many instances of the rapid development of events—events which we should have judged to be the product of ages, that we, of all others, should be cautious of affirming that length of time must be allowed for an event which is frequently alluded to as one of startling celerity, alike in its "shooting forth" and in its passing away. "Behold at eveningtide trouble, and before the morning he is not."

The prophecies of Scripture are so worded as to prevent any age of the church from saying, The crisis cannot be in our day? And does not this peculiar construction of prophetical language proceed upon the principle that an interposed period must destroy vigilance, but that an interposed event does not? That event, namely, the antichristian apostacy, was so predicted, that being known to be already in motion, its crisis might arrive at any time. And thus, while the church was kept ever watchful for her coming Lord, she was also kept with her eye fixed upon the workings of that apostacy, not knowing but that in a moment the explosive and combustible materials might kindle, and with their hellish blaze, wrap Christendom, if not the world, in flame.

OUR CRITICAL SITUATION.

Is not this the position in which we now stand? The apostacy has been working these 1800 years. It has more than once in successive ages appeared to come to a crisis; yet the crisis has not yet arrived. The papal apostacy has by far the likest thing to the crisis that the world has yet seen; but there is to be one beyond it, more fearful than any hitherto; in which shall be concentrated not merely many of the elements of evil that have formerly shot up in other days,—but all the different forms of evil, apostacy, rebellion, idolatry, superstition, infidelity that have broken loose upon the earth since the days of Cain. It is for this that we are now looking. We see the intermingling elements. We mark the rapid fermentation. We are startled with the swift career of action in each event, starting from the goal but yesterday, and finishing its race to-night. We are horrified at the giant stature which every form of sin reaches in a single day. It would seem as if some tropic sun of hell were glaring down upon us, ripening evil before its time; and preparing for us a vintage of iniquity, almost before "the sour grape is seen ripening in the flower."

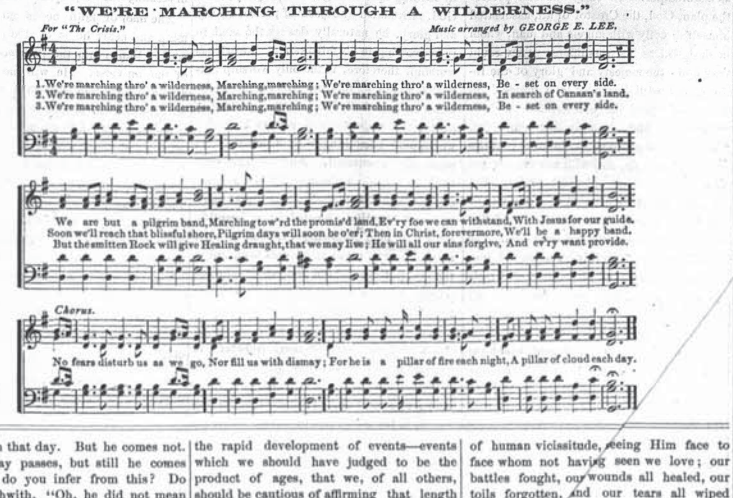
But, besides all this, let us remember,—and this with glad solemnity,—that it is before the mighty crisis that the saints are caught up to meet the Lord in the air. Christ's first action after leaving the Father's throne, is to raise his dead saints and change his living ones. He comes no doubt to destroy Antichrist, and to pour out the terrors of fiery judgment upon an apostate and blaspheming earth. But in these acts of final vengeance his saints are associated with him; for "this honor have all the saints;" and this is that to which our Lord referred when he tells us that "two shall be together in the field, the one shall be taken (caught up), and the other left." These scenes of vengeance we shall behold; but only afar off. Among them we shall not be. We shall have already entered our chambers and have shut our doors about us until the indignation be overpast. Safe hidden in the clefts of the rocks we shall look out and see far beneath us the havoc of the wasting storm, and mark the swelling of the angry flood as it rolls its red billows over earth, swallowing up city and village, tower and temple, in the advancing current, hushing alike the roar of its tumult and the "noise of its viols," till as, amid the deep vapor, we discern the smoke of "that great city Babylon," we take up the song of Moses and of Miriam, and call on heaven and earth to rejoice with us over the ruin of that habitation of devils whose power and pomp and glory in one hour have perished, laid waste like Sodom, swallowed up in that abyss out of which no second Babylon shall arise.

If these things be so, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness? For what is there now between us and the coming of the Lord? What is there to lead us to suppose that He is not nigh, even at the doors? If, even before the last crisis bursts upon the amazed earth, we are to be caught up out of it and taken away from the evil to come, then it is high time to awake out of our sleep. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." The judge standeth before the door. "Watch, therefore, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."

But a few years,—it may be less,—and we shall be beyond the circle where sorrow enters, beyond the ebbing and the flowing of human vicissitude, seeing Him face to face whom not having seen we love; our battles fought, our wounds all healed, our toils forgotten, and our tears all wiped away.—Signs of our Times.

"WE'RE MARCHING THROUGH A WILDERNESS."

For "The Crisis." Music arranged by GEORGE E. LEE.



1. We're marching thro' a wilderness, Marching, marching; We're marching thro' a wilderness, Be - set on every side.
2. We're marching thro' a wilderness, Marching, marching; We're marching thro' a wilderness, In search of Canaan's land.
3. We're marching thro' a wilderness, Marching, marching; We're marching thro' a wilderness, Be - set on every side.
We are but a pilgrim band, Marching tow'rd the promis'd land, Ev'ry foe we can withstand, With Jesus for our guide.
Soon we'll reach that blissful shore, Pilgrim days will soon be o'er; Then in Christ, forevermore, We'll be a happy band.
But the smitten Rock will give Healing draught, that we may live; He will all our sins forgive, And ev'ry want provide.
Chorus.
No fears disturb us as we go, Nor fill us with dismay; For he is a pillar of fire each night, A pillar of cloud each day.

PROPHECY FULFILLED.

"THE GIANT CITIES OF BASHA."

J. WESLEY HORNE, A. M.

One cannot easily forget the deep satisfaction with which he once read that opportune book, "Keith's Demonstrations of Prophecy." The author very cleverly places side by side, in parallel columns, certain striking passages from the prophetic writings concerning certain Bible-lands and cities of yore and of note, and then extracts from accredited and accepted books of travels through these very same lands and cities; which double extracts in many instances seem very much like the original voices and afterwards their echoes adown the ages, so exactly do they respond the one to the other. And these harmonies are the more to be observed because in some instance, at least—as, for example, in the case of the infidel traveler Volney, whose writings are largely quoted—the sacred and profane writers were inimical in character, though unintentionally and wonderfully corroborative in their statements.

With like pleasure have we lately risen from reading "The Giant Cities of Bashan," by Rev. J. L. Porter, A. M., author of "Five Years in Damascus," etc.; and, as the region covered by these cities is now under exploration and inviting public attention, we venture to offer our contribution also toward its unfolding. Says the noted Renan, in his "Life of Jesus," "To the reading of the text I have been able to add a fresh source of light, an examination of the places in which the events occurred." And of the effect of this examination on his mind and imagination he must himself be allowed to tell, though his language will be spoiled of something of its beauty by a translation: "All the history which at a distance seems floating in the clouds of an unreal world thus assumed a body, a solidity, which astonished me. The striking accord of the texts and the places, the wonderful harmony of the evangelical ideal with the landscape which served as its setting, were to me as a revelation. I had before my eyes a fifth Gospel, torn, but still legible; and thenceforth, through the narratives of Matthew and Mark, instead of an abstract being which one would say had never existed, I saw a wonderful human form live and move." That is very well said, even for the "Membre de l' Institut." Let us hear what our own author has to say to the same purpose: "During all my journeys the Bible was my constant companion. I read its prophecies, as well as its histories, amid the very scenes to which they refer. I have in all cases attempted to exhibit two pictures—one, of the country as seen by myself; another, as sketched by the Hebrew prophets; and one thing all Eastern travelers must admit, the perfect harmony between the Bible and the land in which it was written."

"The Land of Bashan" is on the other side Jordan, and was bounded on the north by the restless and powerful kingdom of Damascus, and on the south by the land of the Ammonites. The Rephaim, or giants, inhabited it, and built up massive cities, some of which, after forty centuries of continuance, exist unruined to this day. When the shepherd tribes of Israel came up to conquer and possess the rich plains of Bashan, Og, their king, and the last of the lordly line of the giants, marshaled his forces for the struggle. But it was all in vain. One more than mortal warred for Israel! Og's army was defeated; he himself was slain, and his territory was eventually given to the half tribe of Manasseh. With that tribe it remained until the captivity, after which its very name disappeared from geographical history, while such terms as Gaulonitis, Auranitis, Batanea, and Trachonitis came to disguise the original names of the region. A few of the more interesting events of the New Testament occurred so as to consecrate this territory. Not only did the wild demons from the dispossessed drive the swine headlong down the western slopes of Bashan's tablelands into the Sea of Galilee, but, also, on the same grassy slopes, and by the same quiet waters, the merciful Savior of mankind twice miraculously fed the hungry multitudes; up upon snowy Hermon, likewise, which stands upon the northern boundary of Bashan, Jesus led the favored disciples to behold the transcendant glories of the transfiguration; and, furthermore, the Land of Bashan was the first field of the apostolic labors of St. Paul, and the church which he there planted grew and flourished, "large and fair," until, in the fourth century, nearly all the inhabitants had become professedly christian.

Although Bashan must be named among the most interesting and picturesque of the provinces of Palestine, yet it remains comparatively unknown. While Western Palestine is traversed by the tourist every year, the travelers who have succeeded in exploring Bashan scarcely number half a dozen. The land is in the hand of the infidel and the enemy; the state of the country is altogether unsettled; and the Bedouin marauder still holds his hand against every man. But this very isolation immensely enhances the charm of the region. Both the land and the people remain thoroughly Oriental, just as they were in the days of Job and of Abraham. And another peculiarity is very striking, and becomes intensely interesting. While the ancient cities, and even the villages of Western Palestine have been almost annihilated, and the monuments subsequently reared by the wealth and the genius of Imperial Rome are fast mouldering to decay; the state of the country of Bashan is totally different. Here the land is literally crowded with towns and villages—deserted, the most of them, it is true, but not ruined. Many of the houses are standing to-day as perfect as if finished only yesterday—the doors, and even the window shutters, being in their places. And if any one in amazement shall ask again, "How can these things be?" the answer is ready to hand. These are the gigantic cities which "the sons of the giants" built more than three thousand years ago. They were built for eternity! The walls are from five to eight feet thick, and made of large blocks of basalt; the roofs are formed of slabs, like planks, hewn out of the quarry, and reaching from wall to wall; and the doors and the window shutters are of stone, hung upon pivots projecting from above and below.

But we must leave room for just two or three specimens of the fulfillment of prophecy after the lapse of thousands of years from the date of the prophetic record. Consider then, this one, for a moment. There may have been almost an excuse for some persons who have thought that Moses possibly indulged in Oriental exaggeration when he wrote, in describing the conquest of the country. "We took all the cities at that time, . . . threescore cities, all the region of Argoe, the kingdom of Og in Bashan. All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates and bars, besides unwalled towns a great many." This statement would not stand the arithmetic of Bishop Colenso, who therefore made light of it. "But," says our author, "mysterious and incredible as it seemed, with mine own eyes I have seen that it is literally true. The walled cities, in full number, with their ponderous gates and bars, are there to-day, and the unwalled towns as well, standing testimonies to the accuracy of Moses, and monumental protests against the poetic interpretations of modern rationalists."

Look, also, at the view given us from one of the high towers of the city of Bozrah, overlooking the plains of Bashan and Moab. Towns and cities appear in every direction, thickly dotting the vast expanse. On examination the walls and the houses generally will be found in as perfect a state of preservation as if they had been inhabited until within the last few years. But, with the exception of a few of those towns looking toward the north, they are utterly deserted. Now, then, listen to the language of the prophet uttered respecting them in the long bygone, when all was life and stir and bustle within and around. "Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate, and the Lord hath removed men far away, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land."

One more specimen we may offer. Mr. Porter says that around Kenath he observed, and especially in the best parts of the forest, that many of the largest and finest of the oak-trees were burned almost through, and that a vast number of huge trunks were lying black and charred among the stones and brushwood. He wondered at what appeared a piece of wanton and toilsome destruction, and asked Mahmood, the guide, if he could explain it. He replied, "The Bedoins do it. They make large quantities of charcoal for the Damascus market as well as for home use; and that they may get more easily at the branches, which are the only parts used, they kindle a fire around the roots of the largest oaks, burn them deeply, and then the first blast of the wind blows them over, and the boughs are chopped off with little axes." Now let us hear the Prophet Isaiah speaking from his holy oracle: "The defenced city shall be desolate, and the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness. . . . When the boughs thereof are withered they shall be broken off; the women come and set them on fire; for it is a people of no understanding." But so much must suffice.

Let us close with a remarkable passage from the author: "Many of the people of those far-off days doubtless thought the prophets but gloomy dreamers, just as many in our day regard their writings as gorgeous fancy-pictures of Eastern poets; but with mine own eyes I saw that time has changed every prediction into a historic fact. I saw that those predictions were, one and all, graphic and delicate descriptions of real events, which the Divine Spirit opened up to the prophetic eye through the long vista of ages. Were the same holy men inspired now by the same Divine Spirit to describe the actual state of the country, they could not possibly select language more appropriate or more graphic than that found in their own predictions, written thousands of years ago. This is no vague statement made at random, or penned for effect. God forbid that I should ever pen a single line rashly or thoughtlessly on such a topic. It is the result of years of study and of travel. It is the result of a calm and thorough comparison of each prophecy of Scripture regarding Palestine's history and doom with its fulfillment on the spot. I had no prophetic theory or interpretation to defend. My mind was not biased by a false faith in literacy on the one side, nor by a false skepticism regarding prophetic reality on the other. Opportunities were afforded me of examining evidence, of testing witnesses, of seeing with mine own eyes the truth or the falsehood of Bible predictions. I embraced these opportunities, as God gave them, to the best of my ability. I examined deliberately, cautiously, and, I believe, conscientiously; and now I thank God that with the fullest and the deepest conviction—conviction that all the ingenuity of modern criticism and all the plausibility of modern scientific skepticism can never overthrow, can never shake—I can take up and re-echo the cheering statement of our blessed Lord, that 'Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled.—The Christian Advocate.'"

THE WORD OF PROPHECY.

The Savior's longest discourse was the sermon on the mount of beatitudes, and his next longest sermon was that which he pronounced upon the mount overlooking Jerusalem, when he predicted distress of nations, perplexity, the fall of Jerusalem, the dispersion of the Jews, and all the lights and shadows of that futurity into which we have long ago entered. It was in the course of this prophecy that the disciples said to him, "What shall be the sign of thy personal advent; the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" What did the Savior answer? Did he rebuke them? Did he say you have no business with such subjects? Did he say go and practice righteousness, and charity, and love, and truth, but crush all desires to know aught of futurity? Certainly not; he at once proceeded, in a chapter as sublime as it is rich in comfort and thought, to tell them what sign should precede his coming, what circumstances should usher it in, what shadows and cloud should lie broad, cold, and dark upon the bosom of the earth, until the brightness of his advent came to strike them through with glory. "There shall," he said, "be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and look-after those things which are coming on the earth. And then"—when? just when you see these things,—"then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

Thus the Savior has assured his people that he will come again. He has not left us finally; we are in an interim condition, between the Christ that was crucified centuries ago, and the Christ that will come in the glory of his Father and with his holy angels. All christians that repeat the apostles' creed, believe that Jesus will come personally to our world—that he who breathed our atmosphere before shall breathe it again—that he who raised the dead in Palestine shall raise the dead throughout the whole globe—that he who calmed the tempestuous ocean will stretch his priestly hand over all creation, and there shall be an everlasting and unbroken calm. He will come in the language of the angel sent to tell the sorrowing disciples upon Olivet when they mourned his departure from them: "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Can words be plainer?

Let this great truth sink deep into our hearts, that He who came personally to die, will come personally to reign. It is no dispute as to the meaning of the second advent; if language has any sense, if grammar is capable of construction, it must be accepted as a literal and a personal advent. How will that sublime scene, it may be very near, startle a world that has no thought of it, and no care about it. A glory in comparison of which Tabor's light was dimness, will flash into every eye, for "every eye shall see him," and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see—some, departing like a vision forever; others, embracing it with joy unutterable and full of glory, the salvation of our God. But whatever be the contrasting effects, his coming draweth near.—Dr. John Cumming.

"THE WORD."

B. S. WILLARD.

"Put on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgav you, so also do ye. And above all these things, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body, and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly, in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do, in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him."

God help his saints thus to do, is my daily prayer.

PERILOUS TIMES.

Perils are dangers,—liability to be injured, destroyed. Perilous times are seasons when many circumstances tend to ensnare—to endanger property, liberty, and life. There are no times, in this world, when men are exempt from dangers; but there are seasons when there are combinations of circumstances which render it peculiarly dangerous. We are taught by many of the inspired writers that the "last days" would be particularly distinguished as a period of great perils. Men are comparatively safe when they know the dangers to which they are exposed; for a snare is generally harmless when it is understood. It follows, therefore, that the seasons of greatest peril are those when the people are in the greatest ignorance of the events which threaten them.

The times of greatest peril to men in the past have been those when the judgments of God were approaching for their sins, and they were ignorant, both of the enormity of their crimes, and the approaching retribution for the same. This was exhibited in the cases of the flood, burning of the cities, overthrow of Babylon, and destruction of Jerusalem. The people imperilled in those cases were very wicked, but they repelled all reproof for their sins, by contending that their acts were justifiable, and therefore persistently refused to listen to warnings of approaching retributive judgments. The combination of those circumstances produced the perils of those times.

Jesus, Paul and Peter expressed these views very explicitly. Paul said—"In the last days, perilous times shall come." Peter says, "Knowing this first (of first importance) that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his (Christ's) coming? A scoffer is one who makes ridicule of, or uses contemptuous language concerning what he sees or hears. They must hear that Christ is "coming," or they would not scoff at it; consequently, if they remain in that ignorance, he will "come upon them as a thief," and they will be taken in "a snare." Jesus said of the days preceding his coming, or last days,—"But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not, until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24: 37-39. The Savior evidently presents the cases of Noe and Lot as examples of perilous times, when men would be exposed to imminent danger from coming judgments, and make sure their destruction by refusing to receive instruction relating to them, and thus neglect to prepare for them. The Antedeluvians perished because they "knew not" that the flood was coming, and they knew not because they refused to know; so it will be with the generation which is upon the stage at the coming of Christ and the last judgment. It will be in great danger, and will only find safety by taking heed to the "sure word of prophecy," which will give them an understanding of their danger and the means of safety.

What did the Antedeluvians scoff at? The preaching of a coming flood. What will the last day scoffers mock at? The preaching of Christ's coming and the meeting of the elements "with fervent heat." Does inspiration clearly testify to this. It does. Then we may know that Christ will not return to the earth until a forewarning of that event has been proclaimed, and the multitude make ridicule of it; so that the wicked will be ensnared at the last judgment just as they were in the days of Noah and Lot.

The fact that a forewarning message of Christ's speedy advent is being proclaimed in the four quarters of the world, and that it is despised by the masses, led by allegorizing theologians, misguided scientists, and all classes of Infidels, Atheists, and Spiritualists is a strong proof that we are amid the perils of the last days. If so, then our safety depends much upon our warning the world of its danger. If our friends are exposed to fatal snares on account of the darkness of night, and we have light that we can throw in their pathway, we shall be guilty of their blood if we withhold it. It is the most dangerous time that the church ever saw. It is like traveling over an old decayed bridge, with the planking giving way at many points, and travelers falling through into certain death. A part of it is perfectly safe, but that part can only be known by the most diligent watchfulness and a clear light. God has given the light which is particularly adapted to the emergency, and we greatly fear that all who attempt to pass over without it may fatally fall. The greatest snare in this case will be the false cry that there is no danger; for when they shall say Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them."

We believe most devoutly that the days we occupy are the last days, and that God has called his people to lift up the prophetic standard for the nations, and warn the world of approaching judgment. He designs that the great head-light shall be trimmed, and its powerful rays be reflected from a broad surface, and concentrated upon the dangerous foot-path his people are walking.

If God has called us to take such a position, and do such a work, our safety consists in continuing to make it our grand specialty to sound the note of warning to a generation now standing in a fatal snare immediately to be drawn. The church is in great danger of conformity to the world, lukewarmness in devotion, dead faith, false hope, sectarian love, and a human sensational influence, instead of the Holy Spirit. There is great danger of accepting a lower standard of christian character than that established, by Inspiration, in the primitive church. None should feel that they are prepared for Christ's coming, until they have the evidence that Christ has conquered all their evil passions, and holds them in subjection to the divine will. These are days of strife, about words, parties, and men, which is very dangerous. Our safety consists in quietly attending to our own business, contented with the assurance of acceptance with God, and a readiness to meet our Judge.

Brethren and sisters, be not deceived by Satan or wicked men, as to Christ's speedy coming; for the sure word of prophecy shows, unmistakably, that it is emphatically near. The gospel of the kingdom was designed to prepare a people to wait in readiness for the coming of the Bridegroom. Nothing is so well calculated to wean men from the world while in health. It will produce the most thorough sanctification and deep-toned piety; and we believe, when it is received by a faith vitalized by the Holy Spirit, that it will fully prepare a people for translation. We believe that the infallible God prepared it for the emergency of these terrible times, and we fear to teach men that they are safe while rejecting it. It is a glorious thought that very soon the church of Christ will have passed all these dangers, and fears, and stand upon the peaceful shores of the heavenly country, where temptation, sin and death will be eternally unknown.

FAITH.

"But without faith it is impossible to please God; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."—HEB. 11:6.

The Scriptures present faith as an absolutely essential element in human experience, during man's probation. Our future life and happiness are hinged upon it. By it, all that is desirable in the future is secured; without it, all is lost. Through it we triumph over Satan, and become the friends of God. It opens to the sinner the prison doors of darkness and woe, and raises him to heavenly places, and purest joys of divine communion. It delivers from the evils of this world, and secures to us the riches and glory of the next. It denounces Satan as a liar, and exalts the testimony of Jesus as eternal truth. It makes its possessors strangers and pilgrims in the world, but heirs of Christ, and citizens of the kingdom of God.

What is it? and how can it be obtained? It is the principle by which we are enabled to please God; for "without" it, "it is impossible to please him." What must man do to please God? That which God made him to do, or for which he designed him. What must a machine do to please its inventor and maker? The work he designed it to do. Did God have a wise and glorious design in the creation and endowment of man? Did he design him to fill a certain place, and do a certain work? He did; and when man fills that place, and does that work, God is well pleased with him.

What was evidently the central idea, and grand object, in man's creation and endowments? Worship. He was made for worship, and is emphatically a worshiper. The principles of worship inhere in his nature. Place him where you may, and educate him as you will, he is still a worshiper. If he does not worship the Creator, he will worship something created. If he does not worship the invisible God, his heart will be ruled by a visible one. The Bible and human experience testify that man was made for that great work.

It then follows that man cannot please God only when he becomes a worshiper, according to the divine purpose. It is also true, according to the text, that none can become acceptable worshipers to God, but such as are controlled by faith. Faith must, therefore, be something that produces in man acceptable worship. Worship consists of love, adoration, sympathy, and obedience. Love is the central characteristic principle in all worship; for it is impossible to worship a being whom we do not love. Adoration is the acknowledgment of the superiority of the being worshiped, over the worshiper.

Knowledge is a pre-requisite of love and adoration. We cannot love a being, or thing, of which we have no knowledge; nor can we reckon any being superior to ourselves, until we know in what the superiority consists. Therefore it is impossible to worship any God, until we gain some knowledge of that God.

The natural and legitimate channel through which God wished to convey knowledge to man, was, his organs of sense. He gave him the eye, by which he could know color and form; the ear, by which to understand sound. That was the normal status of man as a worshiper. To carry out and perfect the plan, God, the Creator of all, associated himself directly with angels and man, whom he designed as his worshipers. They could look upon the majesty and glory of the Infinite, and with heavenly love praise him. They could hear the indescribable melody of his voice, and adoringly bow before him. They could gaze upon the infinite beauties of Deity's temple, and with unutterable joy join the chorus of universal praise. But the scene has changed. The earthly temple has been defiled. The curtain has fallen between the worshipers and their God. The melodies of the heavenly anthems are broken. The richness and blessedness of earthly worship, stamped with perfection, is lost for a season. Man, having become a rebel against his God, was deposed from his exalted position as an intelligent worshiper of Deity; and his temple being defiled, and the divine presence withdrawn, he could no longer, through the organs of sense, gain the requisite knowledge of God, to produce the required worshipful spirit. At that point man utterly failed to meet the requirements of his Creator, and that failure must have been eternal, had not a new plan been instituted by God, through which to reinstate man as a worshiper.

The fundamental principles connected with worship could not be changed. Love, adoration, and obedience, must still be the ingredients of true worship. A true and correct knowledge of the being worshiped was still essential to the purity of devotion. But as sin had introduced new circumstances connected with the worshiper, not provided for in the original plan, new principles must be introduced to meet them. The whole change in this department resulted from the fact, that man had lost the power to gain the required knowledge of his God, through the appointed channel. God had removed so far from man as a sinner, that direct association was lost, and thus man was left, as to a knowledge of his God, in perfect darkness.

At this point in human history, new principles must be introduced, or man utterly fails to please his God as a worshiper. The chasm must be bridged, and man and his God associate again. If the changed circumstances forbid direct association, then indirect must be substituted, through some agency or medium, which will not be needed after man's disabilities are removed, and the direct presence of God is restored.

What do the Scriptures present as the new principles through which man, in his fallen state, is enabled to approach his God as an acceptable worshiper? Faith and Hope. Faith was designed to bridge the chasm, and bring the rebel man back to the presence and favor of his God again. It raises the fallen out of the pit, so that he can once more talk with God, and behold through this medium his infinite perfections, which causes his heart to overflow with divine love, expressed in praises and adoration.

What is faith? It is divine testimony, human credence, or confidence, and divine power. The testimony is evidence relating to those things which man, in this state, cannot know through the senses of his organs. The credence, is man's confidence in that testimony that the beings and things testified of do, and shall, exist. The power is communicated through the Holy Spirit, and vitalizes the confidence, so that absent beings and objects seem present, and distant ones near.

Faith was designed to partially restore man to his former status as a worshiper. The channel through which the knowledge of his God had been conveyed, was closed. He could no longer see, hear, or associate with him, therefore, he could not love or adore him. Faith takes the place of sight; as it is said, "We walk by faith, and not by sight. Man was made to walk by sight, but in his fallen state, faith is substituted. Through faith "we know in part," that is, we imperfectly comprehend the beings and objects with which our senses are not directly connected. We receive testimony that forms and colors do, and will exist, in a perfect state; but in this world, there are no perfect forms or colors; so we cannot fully comprend how the perfect ones will appear. Therefore, in this state, as Paul says, "we see through a glass [faith] darkly [imperfectly], but then face to face; now I know in part, but then [in the restitution] shall I know even as also I am known."

Faith cannot give its possessor the perfect knowledge, as a worshiper, which God designed him to enjoy in his sinless state; yet it is the only channel through which we can gain any degree of true knowledge of the Deity.

The desires and principles, which were designed to control man in his perfect state, still inhere in him in his fallen state. He was made to desire and enjoy the presence of God, and to worship him; looking upon his glorious majesty, and listening to the heavenly music of his melodious voice, filling his heart with purest love, as he adoringly bowed before him.

As the desires and principles which produced that worship are still operative in his nature, he will naturally seek to worship in the same way, laboring to produce the same circumstances and results. Therefore it is natural for man to worship something he can see, hear and enjoy, through his organic senses; and something with which he can associate directly. This principle accounts for the fact, that a majority of the human family have, in all past ages, worshiped gods tangible to their organic senses, made by their own hands, and constituted objects of worship by their own decisions.

As man in his original state was inspired with love, adoration, and holy devotion, by looking up to the glorious majesty of his God, surrounded by objects of perfect beauty and glory, he naturally desires the same in in his worship in his fallen state. Idolatrous worship, therefore, is the only worship natural for man in this world. As the multitudes are controlled by nature, instead of grace, the majority will always be found worshiping something with which they are personally connected. And as man was made to worship a glorious God in a glorious place, his nature demands a god glorious and beautiful, located in a beautiful place; so men following the lead of their natural hearts, make their idols beautiful to the eye, putting them in gorgeously adorned palaces and temples; thus the gods and temples both become objects of worship to men destitute of divine grace.

The evidence or testimony embraced in saving faith, presents first the God of the Bible as the only object of man's supreme love and adoration. That evidence is presented in the Scriptures of divine truth, the teachings of the Holy Spirit, and divine providences. No evidence outside of these is incorporated in evangelical faith. The second element of faith, is man's credence given to that evidence. Credence given to testimony is an acknowledgment of the existence of things testified of. To look upon God as differing from the testimony given of him, is a rejection of the testimony; and is unbelief. The revelation presents him as the Creator, and rightful Ruler of all things. It follows, therefore, that all who truly receive that revelation, will submit to him as their Governor, and Supreme Head; thus, by faith, making the law of God their rule of life.

The divine power incorporated in saving faith is an important element in its composition. Faith is represented in the Scriptures as being "weak," and "strong," that is, having much and little power. Paul presents faith as one of the fruits of the Spirit. The Spirit, therefore, produces faith, as an apple-tree produces apples. It seals its evidence and testimony with its divine unction. It vitalizes and makes confident man's credence of the testimony, so that his experience in his association with the beings and objects testified of is made as nearly as possible, as if that association was direct through the senses of his organs.

Paul said of Moses, that he by faith, endured AS SEEING him who is invisible. Paul, therefore, taught that the confidence of Moses' faith was so strong, that an invisible Savior did exist, that he suffered just as much for him, as if he could have looked upon him with his eyes. Faith enables its possessor, like Abraham, to account "those things which be not as though they were; who against hope believed in hope." (Rom. 4: 17.) Abraham is here represented by faith looking upon the dead as already living again; for he had hoped, according to the promise of God, that Isaac should become the father of a great nation; but, against that hope, he expected to see that son bleeding in death; yet beyond that tragical scene, his faith saw, as a reality, that son reliving, and the veritable father of the promised nation.

Faith in divinely revealed evidences of distant and hidden beings and objects takes the place of our organic senses; and when those evidences are credited, under the operation of the Holy Spirit, the objects become as real to the believer, as if known to the senses. Perfect faith, therefore, produces the same kind of experience as personal presence, but not to the same degree. That faith takes the place of our organs of sense, is made plain in the Scriptures, which represent the believer as seeing, hearing, tasting, not by the literal organs, but by the power of faith.

The true believer in God will not, like the heathen, study to exercise and gratify his organic senses in his worship, by receiving any earthly being or thing with which he desires to associate, as the supreme object of his love; neither will he desire to worship in a place where the surroundings are calculated, by their beauty, or gorgeousness, to engage his senses with admiration. His enjoyment in worship must be produced by the action of faith, and not of sight, "for we walk [worship] by faith, and not by sight." In his seasons of devotion, his mind and heart by the power of faith ascend to God, and seem to view him truly and really existing, just as the evidences of revelation represent him. A wonderful power is then given, which makes him feel that he is in the presence of the God of the universe, looking upon his glorious majesty, listening to the sweet tones of his enrapturing voice, which fills all the space with its eternal melodies. He contemplates his wonderful works and infinite love, the vastness of his creations, his ceaseless care over it all, and the mercy of redemption's plan in the ending of evil, and the eternity of good.

In this state his soul fills with unutterable love to God, as the infinity of Deity lifts his eyes to the point of supreme adoration, where his heart melts with sorrow for sin, and his longing soul exults in the sweet assurance of eternal redemption.

This experience is more heavenly than earthly, so elevating the aspirations of him who enjoys it, that all earthly objects and beings seem vain and unworthy of his love and worship. The nominal christian has no knowledge of it. He who only assents to the truthfulness of inspiration, but has not yielded his heart to the claims of the divine law, cannot comprehend this sweetest of all human emotions.

Faith has the power to carry the devotional mind away from scenes and objects now present, to those distant; and as the absent ones are vastly superior to those present, it immediately loses a degree of interest in the present, and becomes all absorbed in seeming "to be present with the Lord."

The man of faith needs no idol, for in mind and heart he is carried away from all earthly things into the presence of the God of the universe. He will not accept any man as leader and captain, for he has daily interviews with Jesus, whose counsels and commandments he esteems superior to all others, and delights to keep them. He does not seek as his devotional retreats the richly ornamented earthly temples, where the harp and lute mingle their notes in human harmonies, thus to receive his inspiration of devotion through the organic eye and ear, but with the piercing eye of faith he looks beyond the obscuring veil of the curse, and gazes with inexpressible admiration upon the Infinite Jehovah, the King of Paradise restored, and the fadeless glories of the new creation.

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

The new temperance movement, carried forward largely by the women, is exerting a powerful influence; and, if earnestly continued, as it has commenced, bids fair to accomplish glorious results. It is certainly time something was done to rescue the multitude that are thronging the broad road, because of their attachment to the bowl of intoxication. Satan is swelling his hosts through the use of intoxicating liquors. This is especially true of California; but the prospect for a radical change is now encouraging. The women are taking hold of the work in earnest in San Francisco.

In the Daily Call this morning (March 10th), we find a petition, presented last evening to the Board of Supervisors, by a delegation of thirty-five ladies, who are members of the Women's Temperance Union. Mrs. J. S. Allen, one of the number, presented the following address, which would be applicable, in the main, to all cities:—

M. G.

"Mr. President and Gentlemen:—I trust you will pardon us for the liberty we take in presenting ourselves before you this evening. We are a delegation from the 'Women's Temperance Union,' only now fairly organized, and nothing short of a consciousness of imperative duty could prompt us to this step. We come, gentleman, to lay before you a respectful and earnest petition from a large number of our substantial citizens, praying your co-operation in a cause which immediately and very seriously concerns every inhabitant of this great community. When we consider the magnitude of the devastating results of the great evil of intemperance, we are surprised at our own past indifference, and wonder that any man or woman having the good of society at heart, could stand idle and see the terrible consequences without raising their hand and voice in earnest, irresistable protest against the works of the destroyer. We see the sale and use of intoxicating drinks filling our hospitals and alms-houses, our Industrial School and prisons. We see it stealing away all that is good and noble in our sons, all that is pure and holy in our daughters. Fathers of families are besotted and brutal; mothers are debauched, and equally useless as guardian and guide to their children. The petition we present points especially to that extensive class of liquor dealers who, under the innocent sign of 'grocery,' do more damage than all others to the poorer classes, whose hard-earned wages are mainly dissipated in payment for strong drink, while their families suffer for the necessaries of life. . . .

I would like to call the attention of your honorable body to some startling facts. There are two thousand dram shops in this city. Estimating the permanent population of this city at 200,000, this makes a dram shop to every one hundred persons, including women and children. What a deplorable fact? Looking at this question from a financial point of view, the exhibit is still more awful. After consulting with persons familiar with the subject, I conclude that the average daily sales of these dram shops are at least ten dollars each. I think all will agree that this estimate is not too high. This would make the daily sales $20,000; the monthly sales $600,000, giving a grand total of $7,300,000 annually! paid out for that which does no good, adds nothing to the wealth of the city, but on the contrary degrades the consumer and promotes poverty, pauperism, disease and death.

To illustrate the vastness of this amount thus annually wasted for intoxicating drinks, I will call your attention to the fact that it amounts to more than the entire annual expense of the City Government, including the interest on the Public Debt, the cost of the School Department, Hospitals, Alms Houses and prisons; also the entire expenditure to date on the new City Hall and the Golden Gate Park, and still leaves an overplus of nearly one million and a half of dollars.

These facts, gentlemen, speak louder than any poor words of ours. No wonder that the moral sense of this community is shocked at this condition of affairs, and that all good citizens are awakening to the knowledge that speedy measures must be taken to check this alarming evil. There is no question but the public sentiment is in favor of what we ask. We have but just commenced to circulate our petition, but find a general readiness to sign it. We will have the honor to present further petitions in favor of the proposed measures in a few days.

We leave the subject in your hands, trusting you will listen to our appeal and grant our prayer. This movement is not in the interest of any sect or creed, but from and for the whole people."

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. SALEM, MASS.

L. BOUTELL.

I spent Sunday, March 15th, with the Second Advent church worshiping in Hardy Hall, Washington St., Salem, Mass. It had been a long time since I had known their condition. In former years, when they worshiped in Union St. Chapel, I was with them often, and have ever had an interest in their welfare. My visit and privilege of preaching with them were enjoyed by me. Time and death have made many changes and vacancies among them. There were good congregations to hear the Word of God, or "good news." The morning prayer and conference meeting was well attended. Familiar faces of earlier days were among them, and indications of the spirit of revival were apparent. Their earnest prayers and testimonies plainly revealed their strong desire for the salvation of the sinner and the perfection of the church in love. The message of the Coming One seemed to cheer and comfort. After preaching in the evening, twenty testimonies followed, and I left, thinking it the best state of things I had seen for years in Salem. The Lord is with them, increasing their desire for spiritual growth.

WARNINGS.

C. MENDENHALL.

God, because of his great love toward us, and the abundance of his mercy, has never sent a calamity upon a people or a nation, without giving unmistakable notice and timely warning of the approaching danger.

Previous to the flood, warning notes were sounded, and so it was when destruction with its desolating tread marched upon the Cities of the Plain, because of their gross wickedness. The Jews were warned of the troubles which they were heaping upon themselves by rejecting the Son of the most High God. And many other instances might be cited from sacred history to prove that it is, and has always been, a fixed principle in the divine economy to give poor sinful transgressors an opportunity to flee from the wrath to come. Sinners in every age have been cautioned against their course and the fatal result of it has faithfully been pointed out.

It is a duty incumbent upon those who see danger approaching to warn others of it; consequently, we who know by the numerous signs above, around, and beneath us, that the "perilous times" have come, are constrained by the love of Christ to proclaim the last day as at hand. We feel the words of the Prophet Joel urging us to renewed action when he so beautifully and forcibly says,—"Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain: let all the inhabitants of the land tremble; for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand."

Oh, how we who profess to be the children of light ought to be fired with an holy zeal, pleading with our fellow men to flee to the ark of safety now, ere mercy is cut off, —pardon unattainable and judgment and destruction sure. Warning is sounded now by the earth beneath, the heavens above, even the very elements carry the news with sure and certain sounds that Jesus is coming, and judgment is near.

Careless one, you cannot plead ignorance as an excuse. God's servants, the press, the people, the whole universe must arouse you if you are not willfully blind.

Christian pilgrim, let us send the cry far and near—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh;" and may we be ready for the event which will relieve us of all care, trial, trouble, and anxiety. How joyous the thought that sin and sickness, sorrow and sighing, shall be gone forever, and we shall be with Jesus free from error, safe from danger, because in him, and with the redeemed ones we shall praise God in an age unending—everlasting. Is it not well worth a struggle? What are present cares and sufferings in comparison?

Sinner, will you not leave your sinful pleasures, your fleeting hopes, your transient joys, for heavenly blessings, pure and steadfast anticipations, and real tangible joy and peace? Wonderful mercy, grace unknown outside of God's promises! yet they are for all men—"Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely," yes, "without money and without price," heaven's richest blessings in this life, and much more hereafter, will be given to those whose names are recorded in the Lamb's book of life. Is your name there? Is mine? God help us to answer aright and make our calling and election sure. The time has come when those who watch for their Lord and Master are to rejoice, knowing that their redemption draweth nigh.

May this hope make us pure, that we may enter that city of which it is written, —"And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." Rev. 21: 27.

Correspondence.

From Sr. Viola Friend.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—I am feeling sad and lonely to-night, as I am all alone with my two little children. My dear husband is away most of the time in the field of labor, trying to preach Jesus, and save sinners before it is too late. As I was reading the Crisis, I thought perhaps a few lines from me might benefit some one; for it has been a great blessing to me to read letters from others. How soul-cheering, when we are sick or lonely, to have some one sympathize with us in our troubles. The time will soon be when the last tear will be shed. Thank God, we never shall sorrow there.

I am young, but there is nothing that moves me. My faith is strong, though I have opposition on every hand. My husband is a Free Will Baptist preacher, but although he does not oppose me (for he is a very kind and affectionate companion), yet he, of course, would rather have me see just as he does;—that would be a natural consequence; but God knows my heart. I will follow him in all his ways, if all my friends forsake me. I meet with some of my associates occasionally, and it is very crossing for me to encounter such opposition; but if God is for us, he is more than all who can be against us. It was one of the greatest crosses for me to say publicly that I was an Adventist. I felt that they were looked down upon, even with contempt; and my nature could not seem to bear that, as I was very proud, and really wanted to be somebody. But God caused me to see what I was doing, and showed me it was his word, bade me throw away vain pride, and look to him, instead of wanting to be popular. O, how submissive I feel to-day. I have given all to Jesus. I never was so fully given up to him as I am to-day. Blessed, blessed it is to be wholly his. It is a mighty sacrifice to be a true christian, and to be so given up as to feel that you are truly the Lord's.

I have two sisters that are following Spiritualism in Boston; but amid all I hear the small, still voice, "It is I, be not afraid." Dear reader, we must be very good if ever we walk those golden streets. I am so glad there will be nothing impure ever enter there.

I do not wonder that sinners speak as they do of the churches and so-called christians. O, how glad I am that the time is so near when the wheat and tares will be separated. They are not all Israel, that are of Israel. My heart is pained when I hear of such low, vile conduct among those who preach and profess to be followers of Christ. How pure, how good, how meek, a true child of God should be; they will ne'er bring a reproach upon the cause of Christ.

Dear reader, are you just what you ought to be? Do you shun every appearance of evil? If so, God bless you. We [illegible]grims, and there are many false [illegible] the world, but let us be very careful not [illegible] drink into any of them. I am with you as far as I understand the Bible.

Ripley Mills, Me., March 6th, 1874.

From F. P. Dingley.

I would like to say to the brethren and sisters, through the Crisis, that I am still striving for that incorruptible and undefiled inheritance that fadeth not away, which is reserved in heaven [illegible] the last time, [illegible] those who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. I love the Lord with all my [illegible] My all is on the altar. I am the Lord's, and he is mine. What I know to be his will I try by his grace to do; and I feel that by so doing he blesses me day by day. "Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." My hopes are all based on Jesus and his appearing, to take to himself his people, and destroy the wicked, make the place of his feet glorious and to reign forever. These blessed thoughts buoy me up while passing through this wilderness of woe. The thought of seeing Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the holy ones of all ages, in the kingdom of God, and reigning with them forever, encourages me to press onward towards the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

The best, and most encouraging thought is that of seeing Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith,—that hath loved us, and hath brought us nigh unto God by washing away our sins in his own blood. How blessed the thought of beholding the Lamb of God. There is no name given under heaven, or among men, that sounds so sweet to the child of God as the name of Jesus. Let us thank God for the hope of soon seeing him and being made like him.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us seek purity of heart, and live just as the Lord would have us (half way service will not answer the purpose), that we may say in the day of Jesus' coming, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

South Casco, Me.

From Bro. C. H. Williams.

Dear ones of like precious faith:—As some time has elapsed since you heard from m[illegible] through the Crisis, perhaps it will not be amiss to write of my whereabouts, and success in the Master's cause; for thereby some isolated ones may be comforted and encouraged. Grace and truth are still my foundation, while the cross of Christ is my only fort. When thus concealed, the "sword of the Spirit" is effectually wielded, and Christ appears as the one altogether lovely, and the chiefest among ten thousand. While resting sweetly in the arms of Jesus, w[illegible] find all is well. Though Satan rages in storms of opposition, we have peace that flows like a river. Praise God for his l[illegible] shed abroad in my poor heart by the [illegible] Ghost. My delight is in the "gospel [illegible] kingdom." While feeding others, I [illegible] O how sweet is the bread of life to [illegible] souls, and how it fills my heart wi[illegible] see poor sinners bow to the mild [illegible] of righteousness, as the fruit of my [illegible] efforts.

Since my last communication to the C[illegible] it has been my privilege to bury twenty-[illegible] happy souls with Christ in baptism, [illegible] they are now free in the gospel. I am hap[illegible] to say that the truth is steadily advan[illegible] in Northern New York, although th[illegible] one is trying to impede its progress [illegible]rious ways. My health has been ver[illegible]

[illegible]od's [illegible]er for th[illegible]en and sisters, ev[illegible]s throne, and I will pat[illegible]wait for the coming of Jesus.

BRO. S. G. LOW writes:—"I have often thought I would like to say something about tobacco; having had an experience of more than twenty years in the use of it. I knew that it never did me any good, and thought I would leave it off; but I liked the taste of that filthy weed so well that I began to think it never had done me any harm, and that I would use it again. Tobacco chewers will understand what I am talking about. Common sense and reason still kept at work, and I began to inquire how I could use tobacco to the glory of God, and how I could ask his blessing on such a filthy habit. I soon came to the conclusion that it was very wrong for the Lord's people to use it. Then I had no trouble in leaving it off; for I had long desired to do his will, and to cleanse myself from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and perfect holiness in his fear; and he has blessed me in so doing. My brethren, we profess to be a peculiar people, zealous of good works; and how can we set such an example? A sister said to me in New Durham, N. H., while speaking of a sermon preached at Alton Bay: 'I suppose the sermon was good enough, but it did not do me any good, for I was all the time thinking that he was a tobacco chewer.' I have no doubt that hundreds thought as the sister did. She had boys, and thought it was a poor example for ministers to set before them. Brethren, if ministers can chew tobacco, why not let the boys chew it?"

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S LETTER.

The Emperor William seems resolved that Germany shall not bow to the Pope, and submit to his dictation. What a change since 1076, when Pope Gregory VII. deposed Henry IV., Emperor of Germany, and he went to Rome to obtain pardon, and obtained it after standing three days and nights, bare-headed and bare-footed, in midwinter, in the outer court of the Vatican. The dominion of the "little horn" is now gone.

The following is Emperor William's reply to Lord Russell:— M. G.

"BERLIN, Feb. 8, 1874.

To Dear Lord Russell:—I have received your letter of Jan. 28th, with the resolutions of the great meeting in London, and my Ambassador's report of the proceedings. I thank you sincerely for this communication, and for the accompanying expression of your personal good will. It is incumbent on me to be the leader of my people in the struggle maintained through centuries past, by the German Emperors of earlier days, against a power, the domination of which has in no country of the world been compatible with the freedom and welfare of nations—a power which, if victorious in our days, would imperil, not in Germany alone, the blessings of the reformation and liberty of conscience, and the authority of law. I accept the battle thus imposed upon me in the fulfillment of my kingly duties, and with firm reliance on God, to whose help we look for victory; but also, in a spirit of regard for the creed of others, and the evangelic forbearance which has been stamped by my forefathers on the laws and administration of my States. The latest mea[illegible] religion.

I rejoice at the proof afforded me by your letter that the sympathy of the people of England would not fail me in this struggle;—the people of England, to whom my people and my royal house are bound by the remembrance of many a past and honorable struggle maintained in common since the days of William of Orange.

I beg you to communicate this letter, with my hearty thanks to the gentlemen who signed the resolutions, and I remain yours sincerely, (Signed) WILHELM."

Obituaries.

SCOVILLE. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Hartford, Ct., Feb. 26th, 1874, my dear niece, Mrs. Frances C., wife of Mr. Wm. W. Scoville, and only child of Bro. Wm. and Sr. N. S. Harris, of Plainville, Ct., aged forty-five years.

Seldom has death aimed his dart at one in private life, affecting so deeply the happiness of two families, as in the present case. From childhood she had ever maintained a most dutiful and affectionate regard towards her parents, encouraging their hearts to lean hopefully upon her, as "the weakness of age" admonished them of their mortality. But her loss is most keenly felt by an affectionate husband and four children, the youngest being twelve years; and long may her pious counsel remain with these dear ones, beckoning them on, until they with her shall "stand arrayed complete in immortality." As a wife and mother, she was unremitting in affectionate solicitude regarding the welfare of her family, and could she answer the question so naturally propounded in these loving hearts, how to repay this anxious toil, would it not be the same sentiment as breathed forth by her just before entering the dark valley?—"LIVE so as to meet me in the kingdom."

The subject of this notice gave her heart to God in early life, and with myself and companion, was buried beneath the yielding wave in the likeness of Christ's death in Jan. 1843. Soon after, the glad tidings of a soon coming kingdom, with its kindred truths, greeted her ear, which she received with joyful emotions, and has always retained these glorious truths down deep in her heart; though her multitudinous cares may sometimes in a measure have eclipsed the lustre of the blissful hope, yet she never seemed to lose sight of the prize at the end of the race. In the early part of her ten days illness she expressed her premonition of its being her last sickness, and, like most of us, preferred to live to see the "King in his beauty"; yet having "gathered with Christ," she could safely trust herself in his care. While nearing the dark valley it pleased the Lord to smooth her dying pillow by a bright view of heavenly things. It is hard to part with one so genial and benevolent, but when we remember her sorrows are forever past, and that very soon she will be raised to die no more, we say in the language of the poet,—

"Sleep on, beloved sleep, and take thy rest;
Lay down thine head upon thy Saviour's breast;
We love thee well; but Jesus loves thee best.
Good night! good night.
Calm is thy slumber as an infant's sleep,
But thou shalt wake no more to toil and weep;
Thine is a perfect rest, secure and deep;
Good night—good night.
Until made beautiful by love divine,
Thou in the likeness of thy Lord shalt shine,
And he shall bring that golden crown of thine.
Good night—good night."

Funeral sermon by Eld. S. G. Mathewson, of Worcester, Mass., from Ps. 39: 4, assisted by a Baptist minister, Rev. Mr. Crane, of Hartford, a large concourse of people being assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to one not soon forgotten. B. MATHEWSON.

WOOD. Fell asleep in Bennington, Vt., [illegible] 20th, 1874, Fannie Wood, daughter of Henry and Emily Wood, of Woodford, Vt., aged sixteen yrs.

Fannie was one of the nine that were killed in the mill of H. E. Bradford & Co., of this place, which was partially destroyed by the explosion of the gasolene that was used for lighting the mill. Most of those that were killed were so nearly consumed in the fire which instantly followed the explosion, that positive identity became quite difficult, there being only charred remnants of what had been human form left. Annette, a sister older, had a very narrow escape, and received injuries from which she has not fully recovered.

Fannie was truly a lovely girl,—reserved and gentle in her manner, and was loved by all who knew her. We miss her in our meetings and Sabbath school, where she was an attentive listener, and where her voice was heard as she united with us in singing the songs of Zion. Her parents, brothers, sisters, and other relatives have sustained a great loss, and deeply feel it. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

WHITE. In West Gloucester, R. I., Feb. 18th, 1874, Sr. Ellen M., wife of Geo. S. White, aged thirty-three years.

Sr. White was converted four years ago, and since that time has lived the life of a christian. She firmly believed she should receive her reward at the coming of Christ, and she loved his appearing. She was a dutiful daughter, a loving wife, a kind and obliging neighbor, and a true child of God. A husband, father, mother, brother and sisters, and a large circle of friends are left to mourn her loss. May the Lord sanctify this affliction to the good of all is my prayer.

STONE. In Augusta, Wis., Jan. 27th, 1874, of scarlet fever, Ines E. Polly, youngest daughter of Carolus and Katie M. Stone, aged twelve years.

Of her it truly could be said, "none knew her but to love her."

Our dear little Ina lies hidden
Under the snow.
The angels their kind watch are keeping
O'er the beautiful treasure safe sleeping;
No pain and no sorrow or weeping
Under the snow.
Yes, beautiful Ina lies sleeping
Under the snow;
But she will awake in the morning,
At the bright resurrection dawning,
No more to lie down midst our mourning
Under the snow.

PERHAM. Fell asleep in Jesus in Windsor, Vt., Jan. 31st, Sr. Abigail M. Perham, aged seventy-five years.

Sr. Perham was a firm believer in the speedy coming of Christ, and although summoned suddenly, being in usual health but an hour before, she was found with the armor on. Death has laid her low, but his triumph will be short, for she will come forth when Jesus comes, a victorious conqueror through Christ, to die no more. Her christian virtues shone forth in her daily walk and conversation, and for years her house has been the pilgrims' home. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn. M. A. PERKINS.

DICKINSON. At Coventry Centre, R. I., Feb. 28th, 1874, Henry Howard, only child of George K. and Emma I. Dickinson, of Hartford, Ct., aged eleven months.

"Go to thy rest, fair child,
Go to thy dreamless bed.
While yet so gentle, undefiled,
With blessings on thy head.
Fresh roses in thy hand,
Buds on thy pillow laid,
Haste from this dark and fearful land,
Where flowers so quickly fade.
Before thy heart had learned
In waywardness to stray,
Before thy feet had ever turned
The dark and downward way."

The subject of this notice was emphatically a Bible christian, for his labors and influence produced a salutary effect, especially upon the young who came under his instruction in Sunday school capacity. FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, March 20. The Twenty-third Regiment of Welsh Fusiliers, which arrived at Portsmouth yesterday, from the Gold Coast, disembarked this morning in the presence of an immense crowd. They were met by the Mayor and corporation, who presented an address, also a regimental coat. The troops took up their march to the railway station, where they lunched. The entire route from the dock to the station was decorated and crowded. Enthusiastic cheers greeted the warriors. The troops were attired in the same uniforms they wore during the Ashantee campaign.

The Carlist military agent in this city has received a despatch from the Bayonne Carlist Junta that Palacious reports he is marching in the direction of Madrid with 12,000 men, after defeating, with great loss, a Republican column under Collejo, near Minglarilla, southeast of Cuenca.

BAYONNE, March 24. The Carlists are throwing incendiary shells into Bilbao with terrible effect. Whole streets are reported in flames. A recent engagement before the city has resulted in the occupation by the besiegers of Alba, a suburb on the left bank of the Nervion.

March 25. The Carlists under General Seballs have routed a force of Republicans under Col. Rouille at Tordera. It is said the Republicans lost 300 killed.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA. Later reports from India are not hopeful, and the gloomy prospects can no longer be denied. Up to March 1st, the sum of $12,000,000 had been expended in the famine, and the expenditure by October 1st will amount to $75,000,000, and yet for the need of a little extra money, many thousands must die in the next few months. The Viceroy has not been willing to spend enough, and has been a hard taskmaster in exacting a vigorous labor test. Women and children are forced to shovel earth in rather a purposeless way before any food will be given to them.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Cairo, Ill. A terrific hurricane swept over the city this morning, unroofing several buildings on the levee, on Sixth street and Washington avenue, and blowing a small shanty occupied by negroes into a deep pond, from which the inmates were rescued by boats.

Hartford, Conn., March 19. A white woman, the wife of a colored man named James Freeman, committed a horrible murder in Farmington, ten miles from this city, at an early hour this morning, her sister, who resided in the same house, being the victim.

Omaha, Neb., March 24. A telegram from Scott's Bluff, Wyoming, states that on Sunday, the 22d inst., one white man was killed, and all the horses at Cood's Ranch were stolen by Indians.

San Francisco, March 24. A dispatch from Tucson, Arizona, received here, states Major Randall had a fight with Apache Indians fifteen miles from Florence. Eleven warriors were killed and thirty women and children captured. Three soldiers were wounded. Major Randall had a narrow escape.

New York, March 26. A terrible labor riot occurred at Rock Tavern, beginning at the foot of the hill leading from Hudson City Heights into Hoboken, at about 10 o'clock this morning. Some time ago, the men engaged in constructing the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad tunnel through the hill, struck for higher wages, and the company secured the services of about two hundred Italians. The strikers have frequently threatened violence, but never undertook to execute their threats, until this morning. At about nine o'clock, to-day, they organized themselves in a company and marched upon the new laborers. A terrible fight ensued. One Italian was killed and the rest fled.

A despatch from Susquehanna Depot, Penn., states that nine hundred men employed in the Erie Railway machine shop struck for their pay for February, yesterday. The turning table was rendered useless, the engines in the shop and yard had pins taken out, rendering them useless, and all arriving trains are so crippled that they cannot go on. None but mail trains are allowed to proceed.

WM. L. HIMES, Sec'y.

THE fourth Quarterly Meeting for the Eastern Dist. of Wisconsin will be held with the church at Prairie Du Sac, commencing Friday evening, April 24th, and hold over Lord's day. Let us come up to this meeting filled with the Spirit of the Master. Let every church in the Dist. report by delegate or by letter. We expect a number of brethren present to assist in preaching the Word. F. P GRAVES.

CONFERENCE.—The Delaware Dist. A. C. Conference is hereby called to meet, and hold its annual session at the Advent Christian Hall, corner of Ninth and Spring Garden Streets, Phil., Pa., commencing Thursday morning, April 9th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. The morning meetings will be for the transaction of business; the afternoon and evening, for preaching and other devotional exercises.

This is our annual meeting to hear the reports of all our preachers, officers, committees, and delegates for the last year;—the progress, spread, and triumph of Bible truth, by the word of mouth, by the aid of religious papers, tracts, and pamphlets, and by every other gospel means; to learn by reports the amount of monies received and paid out, for the purchase and distribution of publications. All the officers for the year ensuing will be chosen at this session.

This Conference embraces the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and Eastern Penn. It is earnestly hoped that every church sympathizing with us will be represented either by letter or delegates. Every church or religious body co-operating with this Conference is entitled to one delegate, and an additional delegate for every ten members. THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

BY CHA[illegible]

Professor of the Theory and Practice [illegible] Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

R REDEEMER AND JUDGE.

J. B. W.

se winds are round me blowing,
y heart is ever flowing
the love the Master gave me;
my life is upward growing,
feeling, ever knowing
at my Master longs to save me.

d my hands are upward lifted
the Rock that once was rifted, hedding his blood for even you;
And I see him, bleeding, dying,
And I hear him, groaning, crying,
Forgive, they know not what they do."

Ah! see that pierced and bleeding side,
And hear those wicked men deride
God's own Son—the heir of heaven.
Oh, boast ye not with vengeful breath,
For all your sins shall end in death,
Unless you beg to be forgiven.

They did not think he'd live again
To be the Judge of wicked men,
When they consigned him to the grave;
But on that morning, cold and gray,
An angel rolled the stone away,
And Christ arose, with power to save.

Look! I see my Lord ascending,
And seraphic hosts attending
Him to heaven, shouting Amen!
And I see two heralds, flying,
And I hear their voices, crying
This very Christ will come again.

And I hear the trumpet sounding,
From the east to west resounding,
That far-off nations all may hear;
And I feel the mountains shake,
And I see the dead awaking.—
It is the glad Sabbatic year.

Lo! I see the wicked flying,
And I hear them loudly crying
For the stupendous rocks to fall
And hide them from the face of God,
Who holds o'er them the chast'ning rod,
While fear their senses each appal.

Hark! I hear the chorus ringing.
'Tis the saints in glory, singing
The sweet new song, with one accord;
Earth's long warfare now is ending.
See! the saints to God ascending,
To be forever with the Lord.

DID CHRIST MAKE THE WORLD?

T. M. PREBLE.

NUMBER FIVE.

We now come to the pronoun "him," as found in John 1: 3, 4, which is from the Greek autou. What is the signification of autou, or hautou? Liddell & Scott say:—"Autou, adverb, originally genitive neuter, from autos." Donnegan—"autou (gen. neut. of autos)." By turning to the use of this word, as found in the New Testament, we find it occurs about six hundred and forty times; and but seldom is it rendered "him." It is rendered in our common version as follows: "his," 441 times; "their," 118; "her," 53; "him," 13; "himself," 7; "them," 3. "themselves," 2; "they," 1; "the," 1; and "it," 1.

Webster says, "Him and his were formerly used for nouns of the neuter gender, but the practice is obsolete." This agrees with Liddell & Scott, as above, that "autou" was "originally genitive neuter." Now, if this is so, then Tyndal, Cranmer, Geneva, Coverdale, Wakefield, Thompson, Dickinson, Barker, Taylor, Folsom, Sharpe, Campbell, the Emphatic Diaglott, and others, are correct when they render autou by the neuter pronoun "it," in John 1: 3, 4.

Tyndal (1534) reads:—"All things were made by it, and without it was made nothinge that made was. In it was lyfe, and lyfe was the light of men." Cranmer (1539), the very same as Tyndal. The old Genevian Translation of the Bible, imprinted in London 1584, reads:—"In the beginning was the Worde, and the Worde was with God, and the Worde was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by it; and without it was made nothing that was made. In it was life," etc. "Tomson's Beza's Testament" [illegible] renders it:—"This same was [illegible] God. All [illegible] in the beginning with [illegible] all things were made by it, and without it was made nothing that was made. In it was life," etc. The Bible, which was "Imprinted at London by Robert Baker, Printed to the King's most excellent Majesty," in 1611, reads:—"All things were made by it, and without it was made nothing," etc.

Gilbert Wakefield renders it:—"In the beginning was Wisdom, and Wisdom was with God, and Wisdom was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by it, and without it was nothing made. What was made, had life in it," etc. He refers to Prov. 8: 1, 22–31, as proof. And on John 1: 14, Wakefield says: "And this Wisdom became flesh, and dwelt among us," etc. George Campbell renders it:—"This was in the beginning with God. All things were made by it, and without it not a single creature was made. In it was life," etc. Rodolphus Dickinson's "Corrected Version" of the N. T. renders it:—"All things were formed by it, and without it not even one thing was made which has existed. In it was life," etc. Sam'l Sharpe renders it:—"All things were made through it, and without it was not anything made whatever." The Emphatic Diaglott renders it:—"Through it everything was done, and without it was not even one thing done which has been done."

The New Testament, revised by "A Layman" (Edgar Taylor), from the text of J. J. Griesbach, translates John 1: 3 as follows: "All things were made by it, and without it was not anything made that was made; in it was life," etc. This "Layman," in his Notes on the meaning of Logos—"Word," says, it "bears different senses, such as speech, creative command, wisdom, reason," etc. He quotes Origen as follows: "Origen's comment is, 'If all things were made through (dia) the Word, they were not made by (upo) the Word, but by some one mightier—the Father.' So Eusebius also."

Thus we perceive the harmony between the word logos, and it. For if, as Liddell & Scott say, "Logos never means a word in the grammatical sense, as the mere name of a thing"; then must we use the neuter pronoun "it"—not "him,"—so as to be in agreement with logos. And also in John 1: 10, where our English version reads—"The world was made by him," etc.; Sharpe renders it thus: "It was in the world, and the world was made through it, and the world knew it not." But it should be known, and borne in mind, that for this word "made," in this tenth verse of our English version, there is nothing in Griesbach's Greek text to answer to it!

A GRAVE INTERPOLATION!

We now come to Eph. 3: 9, where is found a serious interpolation! The phrase—"by Jesus Christ"—is spurious. The following from Dr. A. Clarke will give us light upon this point. In commenting upon this phrase, Clarke says:—"But the words 'by Jesus Christ' are wanting in A B C D E F G, and several others; also in the Syriac, Arabic of Erpen, Coptic, Æthioptic, Vulgate, and Itala; as also in several of the Fathers. Griesbach has thrown the words out of the text; and Prof. White says, 'they are indisputably spurious.' The text therefore should be read—which from the beginning of the world had been hidden in God, who created all things." Many other reliable authorities might be given, which agree with Clarke, but his testimony is all we need give at this time, to show that these words—"by Jesus Christ"—are an interpolation most serious! Whosoever, therefore, will persist in quoting this phrase, "by Jesus Christ," in Eph. 3: 9, as the Word of God, after they have been warned against it, will they not be likely to incur what is mentioned in Rev. 22/18? By leaving out this interpolation in Eph. 3: 9, it will then be in harmony with John 1: 3–10, as above given.

COLOSSIANS 1: 16.

We are now prepared for an examination of Col. 1: 16. In this sixteenth verse, as tion "by," in the first part of the verse, is from the Greek en. But the preposition "by," in the last part of the verse, is from the Greek dia. To this let us pay particular attention. The Greek en, is found in N. T. more than 2600 times. In our English version it is rendered in, among, within, with, by, under, at, through, upon, unto, on, because of, to, throughout, toward, into, about, by means, before, over, between, for, against, of, by way of, etc. The Greek dia is found in the N. T. more than 600 times. In our version it is rendered by, by reason of, by occasion of, thereby, whereby, because, because of, because that, that, for, through, throughout, though, fore, with, in, of, after, at, to, among, etc. These two Greek prepositions, en and dia, are each rendered about 26 different ways in our common version.

This makes quite a forest of words, in which the reader might become bewildered and lost, if he had no light except that which he can obtain from King James' version. In defining the Greek en, Robinson says: "Of a person or thing, in or on which, as a substratum, anything rests, exists, is done." He also says of dia, in referring to Christ,—"as he through whom we receive forgiveness of sin and salvation"; and refers to Acts 13: 38; Rom. 5: 1, 2, 9, 11, 17, 21; 2 Cor. 1: 5, 3: 4; Eph. 2: 18, as proof. He also says of dia,—"Of the moving cause, the motive or occasion, because of, on account of, for the sake of." When, therefore, the difference in the signification of the Greek en and dia is critically considered, it will clearly appear that the first "by," in Col. 1: 16, should be rendered in, and the second "by" should be rendered through, as the following will show:—

Wakefield renders Col. 1: 16—"For in him we were all things created, . . . through him and for him." Noyes renders it—"For in him were created all things; . . . . all things have been created through him and for him. Wicklif—"For in him," etc. Rheims—"Because in him," etc. Macknight—"All things were created through him, and for him." Then he says: "All things were created by God, through the Son, and for him; that is, for the manifestation of his wisdom and power, and to be governed by him." Syriac—"All things were created through him, and for him." Sharpe—"For by means of him were created all things, . . . all were created through him, and for him." Prof. N. N. Whiting—"All things were created through him, and for him." Sawyer—"All things were created through him, and for him." The Emphatic Diaglott—"Because in him were created ALL things; . . . ALL things have been created through him, and for him"—or a literal, word-for-word translation, "all on account of him."

Out of about 2600 times that the Greek en occurs in the N. T., King James' translators thought best to render it "in," about nineteen hundred times. Why, then, not render it "in" in Col. 1: 16? When Col. 1: 14–20 is taken together with other portions of the Scriptures, we shall find all in harmony. In the fifteenth verse, Christ is spoken of as a "creature" (Greek, ktisis—not a creator, ktistees); for he was "the beginning of the creation (ktisis) of God." Rev. 3: 14. Jesus was a created being; "made of the seed of David" (Rom. 1: 3); "made of a woman" (Gal. 4: 4); a being of "flesh and bones"; yet he is "God with us" (Matt. 1: 23); "in (en) whom we have redemption through (dia) his blood." v. 14. If, therefore, we would be made "a new creature (ktisis), we must be made so "in (en) Christ." 2 Cor. 5: 17. Jesus, being "the first-born of every creature," was of course "the head of the body, the church; who is THE BEGINNING, the FIRST-BORN from the dead; that in (en) ALL THINGS he might have the PREEMINENCE. For it pleased the Father that in (en) him should ALL FULNESS dwell; and having made peace through (dia) the blood of his cross, by (dia) him to reconcile all things unto himself; by (dia) him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." vers. 18–20. This is according to God's "eternal purpose, which he purposed in (en) Christ Jesus our Lord." Eph. 3; 11.

The following will also show that "in," or "because of," or "on account of" Christ, all things were created:—"For we are his workmanship, created in (en) Christ Jesus," etc. Eph. 2: 10. "In (en) whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in (en) the Lord; in (en) whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through (en) the Spirit." Eph. 2: 21, 22. The saints were chosen "in (en) him before the foundation of the world," etc. (Eph. 1: 4); "that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in (en) Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth; even in (en) him" (ver. 10); "that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through (en) Christ Jesus." Eph. 2: 7. Peter, as a witness, will agree with Paul; for he says,—"The God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by (en) Christ Jesus." 1 Pet. 5: 10.

King James' translators have rendered dia by the words "through," 99 times; "because," 22; "because of," 25; and either of these forms would have given us clearer light on Col. 1: 16 than the word "by," from dia, as we have shown by the authorities above cited. By looking at a few examples where dia is rendered through," this point will be made still clearer:—"God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world (kosmos) through (dia) him might be saved." John 3: 17. This shows that the kosmos—"the world or universe"—can be "saved" through (dia) Christ, but not "created" by him. Also in Rom. 5: 9,—"Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through (dia) him." This shows that we can be "saved" through him, but not "created" by him. Again in Eph. 1: 7,—"In whom we have redemption through (dia) his blood," etc. Here, again, we are shown that the saints can have "redemption" through Christ, but are not "created" by him. Once more, in 1 John 4: 9, "God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through (dia) him." By this we are shown that we can "live" through the Son of God, but not be "created" by him.

By such examples as these, we see that "through" (dia) Christ the world can be "saved"; God's people can have "redemption," and they may "live"; but no such an idea as being "created" by Jesus the Son of God is found. And so here also, in Col. 1: 16, we fail to find proof that Christ made the world, the same as we did in John 1: 3, 10; and Eph. 3: 9.

STAYING AT THE CROSS.

There are many, who in their faith, conversation, preaching do not get beyond the cross. They follow Christ to Calvary, behold his agony and death, but proceed no farther. Here they rest, assured that the work of redemption is finished, that nothing more is to be done for the salvation of the world. While Christ goes on, from the cross to the grave, from the grave to Galilee, from Galilee to Olivet, from Olivet to heaven; they tarry, lingering near the wood and the nails stained with his blood, and cry: "Here I am saved." "I am clinging to the cross."

When into heaven itself Jesus has gone, "there to appear in the presence of God for us," many are standing by the empty cross, singing of salvation through it, and dwelling upon the tragedy of Calvary as the only work of God by Christ for the redemption of the world. They forget that the sacrifice and blood on the cross were of no avail if these had not been presented to God by an Intercessor in heaven. They forget that the present position of Christ is as important as the one he occupied at his death, and that his death upon the cross could have saved no one if Jesus had remained there. They should remember that it is Christ now that saves, and not that Christ then saved. "Seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for us," his present position should be kept in mind more than any former one. While we should remember his past work and sufferings for our salvation, we should never dwell upon them as the finality of our redemption. We shall live because he lives, and not alone because he died. "By his stripes we are healed," but by him living we are made alive.

To believe on Christ fully is to follow through all his work of redeeming the him world. This work was begun by him at his baptism, and will end when he shall have returned and "put down all rule and all authority and power." To look to Christ on the cross is to behold him in the midst of the work of redemption, and not at the end. The journey he took to find the lost sheep did not end at Calvary; nor has it yet ended. The way back to earth from heaven must be again gone over before he can see all the sheep in the one fold. They are now scattered; the shepherd must come and gather them before he can behold all his flock together.

Let us then not cling to the cross, but to Jesus where he now is. From there we look for him, not from the cross. He left that long ago, and has never returned to it. Neither will he return to it when he comes. He spoke not of it after he left it; but he did say, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold I am alive forevermore." A dying Jesus cannot save—a living one will. "Because I live, ye shall live also," said the living Christ. "We are saved by his life," said an apostle. Let us let go the cross and cling to him who once hung upon it, but is there no more. Let us I say, cling to him.

DAN. 7: 26.

HENRY PRATT.

"And they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end."

The power to be disposed of is the one that wears out the saints of the Most High, and is identified in Rev. 13 as making war with the saints, and in the 17th chapter as being drunk with the blood of saints. As it is to prevail against the saints until the judgment sits, it is evident that some others than the saints are to take away its dominion to consume and to destroy unto the end. As certain ten kings are to hate, and strip, and make desolate this power, it is presumable that they take away its dominion; and as the angel declared to Daniel that the power that took away its dominion should consume and destroy, this would seem to settle this matter concerning the agent to accomplish the work.

Has the papacy lost its dominion? It has. When did it lose it? Sept., 1870. Who says so? The Prime Minister of the Italian States,—Visconti Venosti. Hear him:—"We feel all the responsibility we assume when we declare that the temporal power of the Pope has ceased to exist." "The Pope was sent to the Leonine City, denuded of his tiara (the triple crown), and stripped of his splendor."—Boston Journal. Mr. Joseph R. Chandler, formerly a member of Congress, of Philadelphia, says:—"No ruler in the world holds his temporal authority by titles stronger or more venerable than the Holy Father. The invasion and appropriation of his temporal possessions is simply a robbery." Archbishop Manning, the Ultramontane prelate of London, says: "A nation may indeed have the power to apostatize, but it never has the right of deposition of the head of the church from that christian sovereignty with which the providence of God invested him. The overthrow of that throne is the deadliest blow to all christian kings. The deposition of the sovereign pontiff is not so much the deposition of a person, as a principle. It is christian sovereignty, christian legislation, and christian government, that have been dethroned and dissolved in the person of Pius the ninth." The Pope admits the fact of his dominion being taken away. Oct. 20th, 1870, he said: "The sacrilegious invasion of this august city, however, of our Holy See, and of the rest of the provinces constituting our temporal dominion, by which the unshaken rights of our civil sovereignty and of the Apostolic See have been violated, contrary to all law, and with the most incredible perfidy and audacity, has now placed us in so grievous condition that we find ourselves at present . . . constituted under the dominion and in the power of the enemy." Says Dr. Litch:—"An event of the magnitude of the fall of the Roman government should not pass by unnoticed by the students of prophecy." Again he asks, "Does the Roman government exist? If not, when did it die?"

Having shown, by facts, that the dominion of that power that was to wear out the saints has been taken away, and also that it was dethroned by the Italians, we inquire, Was it accomplished in the precise manner that the prophecy declared?

1. A judgment is to sit, and they that sit in judgment are to take away its dominion.

2. The same agencies that deprive it of its dominion are to consume and destroy it.

Was there a council of the Italian ministry called to sit in judgment on the dominion of the Pope? There was. When? In Sept., 1870. Did they, in spite of the protest of Victor Emanuel the king, decide to take away the dominion of the papacy? They did. Was it effected? It was. Then that meets the requirement of the prophecy. But had not the Pope's dominion been taken away before? If so, it would not be necessary or possible to take it away then. But may not the saints take it away yet? I answer, No; for it has already been done in the past. Are the same agencies that took away its dominion consuming and destroying that power, or stripping and devouring, as in Rev.? Facts say, Yes. Then let us accept it, and so be among those who may rejoice when she sinks like a millstone in the sea to rise no more at all.

But does not the language of Scripture always give us the antecedent in connection with the pronoun? I answer: in Rev. 20: 4, we read—"And I saw thrones, and they sat on them." Who sat on them? We would hardly believe that it was the angel that bound the devil, and the devil that was bound, sitting on thrones in judgment; and yet these are the only persons mentioned in this connection. Elsewhere, then, we must find the antecedent to the word they.

NEW MOSAICS.

J. M. WHITMORE.

I. To be good is not a passive but an active condition. It not only supposes good having been done, but good being done.

II. Compassion is a God-like virtue. As Rothe has finely said, "With God there is no passion but compassion."

III. Goodness is the highest and truest test of nobility. He only is truly noble who is consecrated to the highest good.

IV. Truth is a word of large meaning. Men speak of having the truth and of understanding it as though it was finite like themselves. The wisest of men, the greatest and most profound thinkers of the race, Job, and Solomon, and Paul, Plato, Aristotle, Socrates, Pascal, Locke, Bacon, Newton, Descartes, Goethe, Edwards, Luther, Calvin, Shakspeare, Milton, had singly or combined but glimpses or partial views of truth. Absolute truth in all its relations is utterly inconceivable by finite minds. A knowledge of truth in its entirety belongs only to the Infinite. This thought should make us humble, hopeful, progressive, and teachable.

V. Our life, in some respects, is like a kaleidoscope, which, with ever the same elements, has constantly changing views. The experience of no two days is alike. Our thoughts, our estimates, our judgments, are constantly changing. How absurd, then, for anybody to pretend to fixed and crystalized views of things!

VI. Some men never express hearty and sincere admiration for anything that is noble and good. They seem not to be aware that they thereby place their own character in an unfavorable light. For a man is, in his tastes, aspirations and tendencies, like what he admires. If he admires mean things, he is himself mean. If he admires wealth more than goodness, he is more avaricious than benevolent. If he admires learning more than piety, he is more pedantic than pious. If he admires popularity more than principle, he is not only like a vane, but he is vain.

VII. Sacrifice, in its highest meaning, is but another name for worship. We know men's aims by knowing to what they habitually and voluntarily sacrifice.

VIII. An habitually cheerful and good-natured man can hardly be radically bad.

IX. I love to think that the three cardinal virtues faith, hope, and love, are, in this life at least, inseparable. In defining one, we use a term essential to the existence of another; nor is it possible to give a complete definition of any one of these virtues, without naming a quality essential to the very existence of the other two.

X. Some one has said that God gave us religion, but the devil gave us theology. The saying is not without point. In fact, it is all point, for it has neither length, breadth, nor thickness. A truer if less pointed saying would be that God ordained that true religion and true theology should ever be one and inseparable. True theology is from God; false theology is from the devil. True theology is what God says of himself; false theology is what the devil says of him.

XI. It is said that history repeats itself. But this is nothing more than to say that what has been will be,—a saying as old as Solomon.

XII. Human thought, imperfect as it is, has never been accurately expressed in words, for words at best are but clumsy signs of ideas. How absurd, then, to fix and define our beliefs by words!

STUDYING THE SCRIPTURES.—Erasmus, speaking of Jerome, says, "Who ever learned by heart the whole Scripture, or imbibed or meditated upon it as he did?" Tertullian, after his conversion, was engaged day and night in reading the Scriptures, and got much of them by heart. The Emperor Theodosius wrote out the New Testament with his own hand, and read some part of it every day. Theodosius the Second dedicated a great part of the night to the study of the Scriptures. George, Prince of Transylvania, read over the Bible twenty-seven times. Alphonso, King of Arragon, read the Scriptures over, together with a large commentary, fourteen times.

CONVERSATION ABOUT MAN.

C. COLEGROVE.

The parties to the following conversation are the village docter, and Uncle Daniel, his next door neighbor—a farmer. Just after tea a loud rap is heard at the doctor's door, and the next moment appears the silver gray head of the honest neighbor, who is promptly invited to a seat. After some friendly common places, the veteran, who is unlearned, but thoughtful and conscientious, begins thus:

Uncle Daniel. "Well, doctor, this is a strange world. I declare, it is perfectly amazing to see the thousand different opinions on all sorts of subjects. But it beats all to see what a perfect host of people, religious people too, are set in the notion that every body has certainly got an immortal soul."

Doctor. "That's exactly so, uncle. It beats almost every thing. Sometimes I think we might as well drop the subject, and stand by all the good people in every good cause, and then again the preaching of natural immortality in man comes up so sharply, is assumed so readily, is asserted so confidently, is promulgated so persistently, that I feel driven back to the ground of positive dissent, and tingle in my very veins with vehement inward protest. The fact is, it is just impossible to re-assent to what you have deliberately rejected. How can a man believe a falsehood because the best man on earth affirms it, or how can he credit what he mightily believes to be an impossibility?

Uncle. "The way I look at it now, doctor, what an arrant foolishness it is! It is the teaching and belief of about all the churches and ministers. But in my way of thinking, it's a pretty bad blemish on all their creeds, and systems, and sermons, and I would to God the light might just shine in upon 'em powerful smart. Now, doctor, what in your opinion is about the first Scripture you would take to demolish this idea of an immortal soul."

Doctor. "Well, uncle, if you want to know just where I would begin a Scripture argument, or choose a Scripture citation, I am rather inclined to think I would commence with the plain Bible declarations of the unconsciousness of the dead. I would demonstrate the impossibility of inherent immortality in man, by the Scriptures which positively deny post mortem consciousness until the resurrection. I would charge upon the ramparts of orthodox opinion with statements so simple that a child can understand them. I would adduce sayings too explicit for evasion, and too absolute for contradiction. For example, I would open straight to Ecclesiastes 9: 10,—'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest."

Uncle. "That is a plain and powerful Scripture, doctor, and I should call it amazing hard to get around it by any fair means."

Doctor. "You see, uncle, there are two sentences, and they are sharply outlined. The first is an earnest exhortation—yes, a very injunction; and the second is a simple, solemn fact, to emphasize, and sanction, and impress the duty enjoined. In fact, there is an admonition to incessant and zealous activity (in doing good of course) because the time is coming when all effort is impossible. Nay, not only labor is impossible, but knowledge or consciousness is impossible. The idea is, do every thing possible now, for presently you can do nothing, know nothing, think nothing. If there is no knowledge in that state, there is no notice or observation of passing thoughts, and therefore no consciousness. There is not so much as the least knowledge of being in a state of death. The christian in death has not even the faintest glimmering of an idea of God, for where all knowledge and wisdom are impossible, clearly that which is highest and noblest is excluded. Memory is extinct, for memory implies the knowledge of things past; or it implies the recollection and knowledge of truths once acquired. Christian hope is impossible, for it is based upon, or inspired by a knowledge of God's grace. No act of the will can be performed, as in the act of preferring good to evil, for this would be an act of wisdom, and there is no wisdom there. Faith is impossible, for faith is eminently a noble and special work, and there is no work there. No purpose of obedience, no plan or purpose of escape from the state of blank oblivion, not even in its first or faintest conception is possible, for there is no device there. In fact, there is just as truly and just as absolutely a cessation of every function of the mind as there is of the body. The hand is the instrument of the mind in each believer's life-time of probation. The duty and ability to use both mind and hand are highly imperative and perfectly unquestioned while life lasts, but after that the duty is no longer incumbent, because the opportunity and the possibility no longer exist. However earnestly we may labor to establish the doctrine of post mortem consciousness, the work is futile, for in death there is no work; though we may devise the doctrine of intellectual activity, it is vain, for in death there is no device; and true wisdom and knowledge will be evinced in consenting to the indisputable truth of the declaration that there is no wisdom nor knowledge to the dead."

Uncle. "But you see, doctor, the objectors will make a point of evading the argument, if they can, by means of those little words in the grave. They will say, of course there is no knowledge in the grave. The body goes to the grave, and every one knows a dead body knows nothing, but the soul goes to heaven, and the soul knows a powerful sight."

Doctor. "Exactly. That is just what they say, I know. But the death blow to their scheme is found in the true meaning of the original. The Hebrew word is "sheol," which means the place or state of the dead. And whatever or wherever sheol is, there the man himself goes when he dies. The dead man goes into sheol, even if he is unburied. The 'preacher' addresses his living friend, hearer, and fellow-traveler on earth, —'work now—do your best, be diligent—the time is short.' Does he address a sentient man? Is he alive and active among men? Has he a sphere for labor and a place to be? The same identical person is assured that when he dies, in sheol he can do no work, and to sheol he will surely go. The man who thinks, and wills, and works in life, the same man will be a tenant of sheol. Shall we not believe the record? Why not? Let it be remembered then, that the dead are in sheol (the equivalent of the Greek hades), and that in sheol there is positively no intelligence, no labor, no function whatever of any organ, either physical or intellectual; nay, if a soul supposed to be immortal were a tenant of sheol, it could not perform the smallest mental act; it is absolutely void of intellection and volition (for volition would be at least an effort of the mind), and therefore the soul being incapable of any function, is for the time defunct, and therefore not immortal, for that which is immortal cannot die, nor suffer its functions to be wholly suspended."

Uncle. "But you know, doctor, a great many believe the soul goes to God when a man dies."

Doctor. "O, yes, I know. There is an astonishing discrepancy of opinion. There is an opinion about the soul going to heaven at death. Another thinks it is the spirit. One thinks paradise is the refuge of an incorporeal soul; another, Abraham's bosom. One supposes the soul is playing a harp and hymning a song of praise in the New Jerusalem; another imagines that souls or spirits of the dead are conversant with the living on earth. Some say they leave the glory above to minister to their former friends; others think they can see down through all intervening space, and take note of passing affairs on this terrene orb."

Uncle. "It seems as if the souls of saints would have a good way to travel to come back to earth."

Doctor. "Yes. Jesus is exalted 'far above all heavens,' and if there are spirits of the dead with him, they are far beyond the most distant visible star; and besides that, angels are appointed to minister to saints on earth—angels, and not souls of the dead in heaven. And still more, the entrancing glories of heaven would scarcely seem to permit the idea of beatified souls making these excursive flights to earth."

Uncle. "Well, doctor, I believe just what the Bible says,—'the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything.' That's just exactly my opinion." And buttoning up his old-fashioned roundabout, and clapping his round seal skin cap on his venerable white head, he bade the doctor a hearty good night.

Correspondence.

From Bro. E. D. Elliott.

To the Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, Greeting:—Another year, with all its trials, cares and anxieties is numbered with the things that are past. Death has made its inroads among us, and all our little ones have fallen. But, thanks be to God, we mourn not as those that have no hope. They are at rest—sleeping sweetly in Jesus, awaiting a better resurrection. They are safe. The unhallowed influences of the world have no power over them. They were taken away, one by one, until we were left childless. Gertrude died Oct. 17th; Lewis, Oct. 30th; and Mariah Nov. 5th, 1873.

Brethren and sisters, we desire your sympathy and prayers. I never realized our position as I have of late. I have no brethren of like precious faith to associate with. I do think the gospel of the kingdom ought to be preached here. I listened to a sermon not long since, preached from an orthodox pulpit, on the immortality of the soul. The preacher said that the thinking part of man was the immortal man, the real man; and all the proof he gave was, "We never see carved on a tombstone, such a soul has died, but 'John,' or 'Charles,' or 'Mary' has died." I asked him who God addressed when he pronounced the sentence on Adam? Did he address the conscious man, or the lump of clay? He said he was not prepared to answer my question. I told him I did not go to the graveyard to get my doctrine, but to the Bible. In that I could find where such a soul had died. It says there, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." And, "The wages of sin is death." I do think the people ought not to be fed on husks any longer. They should have the gospel truth.

From R. B. Tuller.

To the pilgrims scattered abroad:—This is the first time I ever attempted to address you through the Crisis. We are strangers here to each other, but we have one common interest, and I believe the time is not far distant when we shall meet where there is no parting. There we shall see Jesus who died to redeem us, and has promised us immortality and eternal life with all the redeemed, if we endure unto the end. Let us fight on a little longer; the battle is almost over, and the last enemy is about to be destroyed.

Dear friends, can you give a reason of your hope with meekness and fear? Are you looking to Jesus, the author and finisher of your faith? Are you ready for the coming kingdom? Have you on the wedding garment? It has been a number of years since I embraced this blessed hope, and still I trust in God. Since I left the East, and came West, I have been almost alone. A little over two years ago, Bro. Turner came here and preached the coming kingdom. Some of the good seed was sown, took root, and has brought forth good fruit. When Jesus comes to gather up his jewels, God grant that we may all be gathered into His everlasting kingdom.

Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., Wis. Mar. 5th.

From Sr. A. A. Sargent.

What a comfort and relief from sorrow do we find in prayer. When the heart is throbbing with pain, and all seems cheerless and dark, we can go to God in prayer, and obtain that comfort which earth cannot afford. It is the great remedy which heals the broken heart, and removes the keenest sorrow. We must bow submissively to God's will, and then we have the blessed assurance that all will be well. If we take Jesus for our constant companion, although disappointments may attend us, yet he has promised us grace sufficient for our day, and when all earthly friends fail us he will not leave us alone. Let us place our whole confidence in him for his promises are sure. He says, "Fear not little flock;" and "I am with you always, even unto the end." How blessed to commune with such a friend! May we be watchful and prayerful, that when Jesus appears, we may be ready to meet him.

WASH

s of the Crisis:—I am THE

There is [illegible] the body which water is not fitted for if you can get it in properly. Why one of the very best things you can do is to wash your blood; and the great folly we commit in going through our lives from childhood to grave silence is, that we do not wash our blood as we ought. Infusions of coffee, tea, chocolate, or cocoa or cider or beer do not wash the blood, because with the fluid so taken in, something is carried in also which befouls and defiles the blood. Just let a man say to himself, "It is Saturday night, I have worked hard all the week, and Sunday shall be a day of rest to me. I am now going to give my whole system between this and Monday morning a good thorough washing." So he begins to drink and drink, and drinks but little at a time, yet between Saturday night and Monday morning a healthy man can drink without producing any disturbance a gallon of water.

Now let this come into and go through his circulation—through lungs and skin and kidneys and bowels the waste materials are carried out—and when Monday morning comes, if he jumps out of bed and gives his external skin a good washing, the water that he washes in will be foul. Or if he prefers to test that question even more thoroughly, all he has to do is to take a clean sheet, and wetting it in good soft, pure water, be wrapped up in it, and lie forty-five to sixty minutes, and then have the sheet washed in a tub of water, and it will color the water so it will look dirty. The man has been washed inside,—his blood has been washed. When you have washed his blood, tissues, bones, nerve, muscle, sinew, membrane, and every thing in him, he can defy all pestilence for that week. The washing of a person's inside is as necessary as the washing of a person's outside, and the washing of a person is twice as necessary as the washing of a person's clothes; and yet there are those who are very particular to have their clothes washed with great care, who are not at all particular to wash themselves.—Laws of Life.

STAMMERING.

Stammering is due to unbalanced action of the muscles concerned in articulation. This is why many persons who stutter badly in speaking can sing without difficulty. Singing, compared with speaking, is as walking compared to running. Some persons whose muscular system is not equally developed, as in the case of many sedentary females, can walk very well, but cannot run without staggering. The athlete can run with the same grace and symmetry of motion that he can walk. In singing, the motions of the articulating muscles are slow, deliberate and measured. In speaking, they are rapid, and if all do not contract in harmony, some will be thrown into spasmodic action. And this is stammering.

In some cases the tongue, and in other cases the lips act spasmodically, producing the varieties of stammering known as lingual and labial. It is very easy to understand that, if these defects are not corrected in childhood, they become, by long habit, very inveterate in adult life. Yet nearly all cases are curable by judicious training. But months of patient and persevering effort are usually required.

The remedial plan consists essentially in ascertaining what words or letters occasion spasmodic action, and practicing on them by pronouncing very slowly and distinctly, as in singing, until the habit of spasmodic action is overcome. The patient must on no account utter a sound hurriedly, nor until the will has, by a deliberate exercise of will-power, got control of the muscles. A good elocutionist may be of great service to the patient; but he must study the peculiarities of each case, and not undertake to manage all cases by a routine.—Science of Health.

VENTILATION OF CLOSETS.—This is a part of the sanitary arrangements of houses which is almost entirely neglected. In cities, where houses are let as tenements, the closets and cupboards are used for receiving not only bread, but fragments of all kinds of food, some sound and some spoiling, so that all is more or less tainted. Soiled clothing is often put away here to wait washing. Even in the houses of the rich, cupboards and closets are not properly ventilated. Doors are tight, no ventilation in the ceiling or walls, and sometimes these closets remain closed for twenty-four, or even forty-eight hours; then, when opened, the foul gases are distributed throughout the adjoining rooms. All this is wrong and unhealthful. No part of the house requires more perfect ventilation than the closets. A wire-screen which will exclude flies, bugs, and mice, with a slide which can be closed, should be placed in the wall of every closet. We trust all our readers who are building or repairing houses will see to this securing ventilation for kitchen, halls, bed-rooms, sitting-rooms, cellars, closets, and the rest. Pure air everywhere is what we want.

KEEP WARM.—Many a fatal case of dysentery is caused by the want of a woolen undershirt, or an extra blanket at night. The sudden changes of temperature which occur at this season of the year are very trying to the constitution. People with weak lungs quickly feel the effects of them. Frequently the thermometer falls many degrees within a few hours. Not only the feeble, but robust and strong persons suffer from such great variations of temperature. When the weather grows cold rapidly, the pores of the skin are suddenly closed, and the result is frequently a bad cold, which may hold on all winter and terminate in consumption or a fatal attack of dysentery, or that dreadful disease, typhoid fever.

MOMENTOUS EVENTS, AND THE RETURN OF CHRIST AT HAND.

REV. DR. CUMMING, OF LONDON.

The time also of Christ's advent is at hand. Chronology shows, and advancing events confirm, that he cometh with clouds, and that every eye shall see him. To the heaving and restless nations of Europe, which seem like a stormy sea, he will speak, and there shall be a great calm. The waning of the Eastern crescent, the stir among the Jews, the breaking up of Babylon, for which all the elements are in constant preparation, indicate that the time of Christ's advent is not distant. Let our loins be girt and our lamps burning, and let us read more devoutly this prophecy, at once the prediction and the augury of his advent; for "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein, for the time of His appearing, the second time without sin unto salvation, is at hand." Contemporary history is shedding no common light on no common events. It repeats and reverberates from every occurrence, "Behold, I come as a thief."

At the coming of Christ, the saint's frail body which sleeps beneath the green sod shall rise to life; that frail tenement that has been the spoil of the sabre, or of shot and shell, and is buried in the battle-field, or lowered deep into that grave of nations, the unsounded sea; that dead dust that has been wafted by the winds of heaven to every part of the earth, that has been incorporated with the very grass of the field, also that which lies in monuments of bronze, or in marble mausolea, or in village churchyards, —shall emerge again; atom shall come to atom, particle to particle, and not one shall be missing when the great Creator and Governor of all gives the command. And not only shall the bodies of the dead be raised, but the living also shall be changed. Those christians who shall be alive when Christ comes shall be changed. We have the whole history of this in 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17. It is possible, and not improbable, that there may be some actually reading this page who shall never die; at all events, if not some of us, there will be multitudes of christians living when Christ comes who shall never die at all. The apostle declares, "the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we, which are alive and remain, shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air." And in 1 Cor. 15, the apostle says, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." The barrister pleading for his client, the judge speaking from the bench, the physician feeling the pulse of his patient by the bedside, the minister preaching from the pulpit, the hearer listening in the pew, will simultaneously and suddenly hear that royal sound; and in each instance this very mortal shall become instinct with immortality, this very corruptible shall be charged with incorruptibility, and death shall be visibly, and literally, and gloriously swallowed up in victory.

The Apocalyptic seer announces with deep solemnity,—"Behold he cometh with clouds." This expression is so consistently and continuously employed throughout the Bible, that there must be very great meaning in it. For instance, Daniel speaks of one that he saw like the Son of Man, who came in the clouds of heaven to the Ancient of Days and spake to him. So in the Gospel of Matthew we read that "hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." This is so constantly used in Scripture, that there is scarcely a doubt but that it describes a literal transaction; that it delineates a feature of that grand day which shall unbosom the most stupendous fact that ever transpired in the history of mankind, when, scarcely anticipated by the church, unforeseen by the million, the Son of God shall come again to this world, in which he suffered—in the language of an apostle, taking "vengeance upon them that know him not when he comes to be glorified in all them that believe."

Our great hope should be, not our individual introduction into happiness at death, but the participation of this happiness by us and by all at the personal coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. That event is probably not far distant. It is a most striking fact that all the lines of prophecy converge upon a year not very remote. If we date the Apocalyptic period of 1260 years from the time when the Mohammedan apostacy began, and the Romish apostacy was completed, it ends very near the present epoch. If we adopt Clinton's chronology, which he has established with irresistible force, we shall find, according to that chronology, that the seventh thousand year of the world begins about the present time. We shall soon see every element of wickedness—despotism, popular superstition, licentiousness falsely called liberty, revolution, and other seething elements—fast coming to a head. Such is the actual fact. Things that used to take a couple of centuries to ripen are now matured in one year; more has been done during the last ten years of our life than probably was done in the last century. It seems as if the wheel were rolling down the declivity, and the nearer it approaches the valley below, the more accelerated its motion becomes, until, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, the Lord shall come, as the lightning bursts in its splendor from the east to the west, and every eye shall see him—many eyes with tears and weeping, but many eyes sparkling with joy unutterable and full of glory; some looking on him with unutterable remorse, others looking on him with joy and delight, but with ecstasy or agony, every eye shall see him. And what a sight! What a magnificent and impressive spectacle when he shall come.

There are certain great truths that we must hold fast till Christ comes. One of these great truths is, that the Bible is every man's right, and an opened Bible every man's privilege, and an intelligible Bible the great fact that no man should be suffered to dispute or to deny; justification freely through Christ's righteousness upon us; sanctification progressively by the Spirit's work within us; and liberty to worship God in the form we believe to be purest and best. These are things which will be laid siege to sooner than we anticipate; for everything indicates the coming storm—and all around us on the continent of Europe are mustering and preparing for it. All these things will come sooner than we anticipate, and therefore hold fast that which is much more than gold, than fine gold. If our country lets go its open Bible, its sheet-anchor is gone. If she lets go the distinctive truths of the Bible, embodied in ancient and modern creeds, and preached from so many pulpits in this day, she is gone. But whoever lets go, let us hold fast, even till Christ come.

PREDICTED DOOM OF THE CITY AND CHURCH OF ROME.

But some morning we shall rise and hear echoing in glad jubilee from heaven to earth, and back again from earth to heaven, "Babylon the Great is fallen." The Papacy is to be destroyed finally by a miracle: I appeal for evidence to the prediction in the Thessalonians, "Whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and destroy by the brightness of his own personal appearing." We shall succeed in consuming and wasting it, but the great skeleton, awfully corrupt and overshadowing, will still survive to be swept away by the brightness of Christ's appearing. If persons say we do not see the appearance of it now, we answer everything is going on exactly as it was predicted. Romanism, broken and shattered, is making its last and most desperate effort to regain a foothold in Europe; and in this country it has influence. But the present struggle of Rome instead of being discouraging, is the reverse, for it forbodes its dissolution. When was it that the handwriting came forth upon the wall, and wrote, "MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN—thou art weighed in the balances and found wanting?" Just when Belshazzar was in all his glory, with his golden cups stolen from God's people, feasting with his counsellors, and mocking at the being of God. Then it was that ancient Babylon passed away, its gates burst open, its rivers dried up, and the Mede and Persian thundered at the doors of its palaces; and similarly just when Nebuchadnezzar, in all his pride and his glory, was saying, "Is not this great Babylon that I have built by the might of my power, and for the glory of my name?" At that very moment the kingdom was taken away from him. And so will it be with the antitype. Just while Papal Babylon is boasting and blaspheming, it will go down like a millstone into the depths of the sea, and the voice of the bride, and the bridegroom, and the harper and the musician, shall be heard in it no more at all. And afterwards will follow the descent of the New Jerusalem as a bride prepared for the bridegroom, and the paradisiacal state of the world in its last times.

Because I believe that Papal Babylon is utterly to be destroyed, I do not believe that every Romanist is forever lost. Merle D'Aubigne gives a fine description of an ancient convent being pulled down at the era of the Reformation, in one of the stones of which, taken out of its walls there was found a hole with a parchment in it containing an inscription written by a monk four hundred years ago, which stated his belief in the only Savior, and that on our Savior's blood alone he trusted, but that he dared not at present proclaim it. He was one of God's hidden and sequestered ones in the church of Rome—not of it, but in it. Some poor monk, who carries his crucifix in his hand, may yet see beyond that crucifix, and rest his heart upon the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. At the present moment the cry given in the Apocalypse, as sounding from heaven, will grow louder and spread wider before great Babylon is utterly destroyed—"Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." We live at the era of the utterance of this cry. The whole world responds to it. We may turn to Ireland, which has been too much neglected by ministers of the gospel. What do we hear? God calls from heaven, and the late Bishop of Tuam said he was prepared to depone upon oath that during his presidency thousands in his diocese alone had come out of the church of Rome and entered that of the Lord Jesus Christ. And when depressed and discouraged and cast down by the reflux of superstition and its successes, we may yet see leading noble and educated persons detaching themselves from Rome, and attaching themselves, not in name, but in deed and in truth, to the church of God, and others in the humbler ranks of life coming out of Babylon by thousands every day. "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."—Signs of our Times.

DID CHRIST MAKE THE WORLD?

T. M. PREBLE.

NUMBER SIX.

HEBREWS 1: 2, 10.

In Heb. 1: 2, it is not the kosmos world that is named; but the aionas—meaning the "ages." The "Emphatic Diaglott" renders it,—"On account of whom, also, he constituted the ages." Sharpe,—"By whom also he made the ages." Here, again, we fail to find proof that Christ made the (kosmos) world. In ver. 10th,—"Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands," is not said of Christ, but of God the Father; as will be seen by referring to Ps. 102: 25. The context here shows that it is the Father, and not the Son, who "laid the foundation of the earth." This is a prophecy relating to Christ:—"He (God) weakened (margin—afflicted) my (Christ's) strength in the way; he (God) shortened my (Christ's) days. I (Christ) said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days," etc. Verses 23, 24. This passage, relative to Christ being "afflicted"—margin, and the shortening of his days, and his being taken away in the midst of his days, should be read in connection with Isa. 53: 3-10. That the Psalms are prophetic, and that David was sometimes prophesying of Christ, when the language would appear at first sight to apply only to himself, is found sometimes in the Psalms. The following will show that Jesus, the Son of God, is really the subject of the prophecy, although the language at first sight may appear to refer only to David. Ps. 16: 1-11, compared with Acts 2: 25-28. That the pronoun "Thou," in the commencement of Heb. 1: 9, refers to a different Being from that which is found in ver. 10, is proved from the fact that the first "Thou" comes from the Greek ngapesas,—a phrase which the "Emphatic Diaglott" renders, "Thou didst love," and refers to God the Son, mentioned in ver. 8. But "Thou," in ver. 10, is from the Greek Su, and refers to Jehovah.

Albert Barnes, in his Notes on this, says: "Thou, Lord." This is taken from Ps. 102: 25-27. The quotation is made from the Septuagint with only a slight variation, and is an accurate translation of the Hebrew. In the Psalm there can be no doubt that Jehovah is intended. This is apparent on the face of the Psalm, and particularly because the name Jehovah is introduced in vs. 1, 12, and because he is addressed as the Creator of all things, and as immutable. No one, on reading the Psalm, ever would doubt that it referred to God," etc.

Whatever else Mr. Barnes says in connection with this, in order to establish his view of the "trinity," and to try to make it appear that Christ made the world, the reader may harmonize if he can. Here, again, in Heb. 1: 10, we fail to find proof that Christ made the world.

CHRIST DID NOT MAKE THE WORLD.

Having examined the passages in the N. T. which are supposed to teach the doctrine that Christ made the world, and having found them either mistranslations, interpolations, or misunderstandings; we will now prove from the Old Testament that it was God the Father who made the world by his logos. And right here, lest some should misunderstand me, and think that I do not believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ, I will say that I do believe in the divine Son of God,—that he is a divine Being, an object of divine worship, both by men (Luke 24: 52), and by angels (Heb. 1: 6); and that "all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father (John 5: 23); because he is equal with the Father (John 10: 30) in things pertaining to the redemption and salvation of this world (kosmos); yet I do not believe that he was first an omnipotent, immutable being in heaven, and then migrated, or was transmigrated into the Virgin Mary, and there so changed (?) or reconstructed (!) as to become "Jesus of Nazareth"! But I do believe that "Jesus" was actually begotten by the "power of the Highest" (Luke 1: 35), and thus became "the Son of God." The Son's history, however, as revealed throughout the Bible, I cannot speak of here.

But to return to the question, Who made the world? In the Old Testament, there is only one God of history named, and he is called by nine proper names in the Hebrew Scriptures. 1. Jehovah, Jah, and Ehejeh; and these names denote self-existence. 2. Elohim, El, Eloah; and these names denote power. 3. Adanai, Shaddai, and Jehovah-Tsebaoth; and these names denote government. In our English version these words are generally rendered God, and Lord. The term "God," from Elohim, as rendered in our common version, is applied to idol gods more than two hundred times. In Ps. 8: 5, it is translated "angels." It is also translated "judges" several times; and it is applied to anything that men esteem instead of God,—"Whose god is their belly." Phil. 3: 19.

It is well known that Elohim is in the plural form, but it is used in the singular when it refers to the self-existent, invisible God. Prof. Muller says: "Elohim is a plural noun, though followed by a verb in the singular." Prof. Bush, in his Notes on Genesis, p. 26, in speaking of Elohim in the plural form, says, it was so used to represent a greater fulness, emphasis, and intensity of meaning." The author of a "Hebrew Grammar" says:—"For the sake of emphasis, the Hebrews commonly employed most of the words which signify Lord, God, etc., in the plural form, but with the sense of the singular." That Elohim is used in the singular, is proved from the fact that the verbs and the pronouns are in the singular." Such as—"I am the Lord thy God." Ex. 20: 2. "The Lord our God is one Lord." Deut. 6: 4. The verb "created," in Gen. 1: 1, is singular,—he, not they, created. And so also other verbs and pronouns, in the history of creation, and elsewhere, are used in the singular with Elohim.

The pronouns in the Old Testament, when the invisible, self-existent God is referred to, are—I, mine, me; he, his, him, etc.; and not we, they, etc. The plural "us," in Gen. 1: 26, no doubt refers to God the Father and God the Son; but the text and the context show that Gen. 1: 26-28 is to be considered in a prophetic sense—covering six thousand years or this world's history, God the Father making man of "the dust of the ground" in his own image, at the beginning of the 6000 years, with the promise of the "dominion" "over all the earth"; and God the Son will "fashion" the saints "like unto his glorious body" (Phil. 3: 21), at the end of the 6000 years. Then, they will possess the dominion "over all the earth," which God promised at the beginning. I have thoroughly canvassed this subject throughout the entire Bible, yet it is not the place to speak further upon it here.

The term "God," from the Greek Theos, as found in the common version, is applied to God the Father in the N. T. more than twelve hundred times; and to God the Son, as God, twice. Matt. 1: 23; Heb. 8. It is applied to Christ, as the Son of God, about fifty times. It is also applied to men about twenty times; to heathen gods ten times; to the devil once (2 Cor. 4: 4); and to appetites once (Phil. 3: 19).

The term "Lord," from the Greek kurious, is found in the N. T. about six hundred and sixty-eight times. It refers to God the Father about two hundred and forty-eight times; to God the Son, some three hundred and fifty-eight times; and to men, sixty-two times. The word "Lord" is a term properly denoting any one who has dominion, whether in a family, or in a community; whether on earth, or in heaven. On the earth a husband is called "lord" (Gen. 18: 12); Moses is called "lord" (Num. 11: 28); Elijah is called "lord" (1 Kings 18: 7); and many others. The self-existent God, the Maker of all things, he is Lord of his vast universe, and Lord of his Son Jesus Christ. "The LORD (JEHOVAH) said unto my Lord" (Adonai). Ps. 110: 1; Matt. 22: 44; Acts 2: 34. "The head of Christ is God." 1 Cor. 11: 3. And this Christ himself acknowledged when he said, "My Father is greater than I." John 14: 28. The Son will always "be subject unto him that put all things under him." 1 Cor. 15: 28. The Son will be Lord of the new earth; for after his resurrection the Father gave him all power "in heaven and in earth." Matt. 28: 18. Not power over heaven, but in heaven; that is, all the power in heaven and in the earth which was needful for the Son to have, to make him Ruler, Lord or King on David's throne (Luke 1: 32, 33), the Father gave him. Christ is never called the "Maker" or the "Creator" of anything. But he is a "Savior" and "Redeemer" of what his Father made, or created. "Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the LORD, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary?" Isa. 40: 28. When the term "Lord" in the O. T. is printed in capitals, it is the translation of JEHOVAH (or YAHVEH), and so might, with more propriety, be rendered.

ELOHIM, AS APPLIED TO GOD THE SON.

The term "God," from Elohim, refers to the Son of God prophetically, in Ps. 45: 6—"Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Proof—"But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Heb. 1: 8. Again, Ps. 50: 3,—"Our God shall come" etc. Also in Ps. 82: 8,—"Arise, O God, judge the earth; for thou shalt inherit all nations." For proof that Christ, the Son of God shall judge the world, see John 5: 22, and Acts 17: 3. That he also shall inherit all nations, see Ps. 2: 8; Rev. 11: 15; and many other like passages. And again, in Isa. 25; 9,—"Lo, this is our God (Elohim); we have waited for him, and he will save us," etc. Also in Isa. 35: 4,—"Behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you." Once more, in Zech. 14: 5,—"And the Lord my God (Elohim) shall come, and all the saints with thee," etc.

GOD THE FATHER MADE THE WORLD.

This is proved, first, from the fact that there never was but one Supreme, All-wise, Eternal God. But when Jesus Christ, our Lord, came into the world, he was "God with us." Upon this point, we will consider the testimony of the seven following witnesses:—

1. God the Father testifies:—"I am the first, and I am the last, and beside me there is no God. . . . Is there a God beside me? Yea, there is no God; I know not ANY." Isa. 44: 6-8. "I am the LORD, and there is none else; there is no God beside me. . . . there is none beside me. I am the LORD, and there IS NONE ELSE. . . . Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker. . . . I have made the earth, and created man upon it; I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens. . . . For thus saith the LORD that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it; he created it not in vain; he formed it to be inhabited: I am the LORD, and there is NONE ELSE. . . . There is no God else beside me; a just God and a Savior; there IS NONE BESIDE ME. Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there IS NONE ELSE." Isa. 45: 5, 6, 8, 9, 12, 18, 21, 22.

2. God the Son testifies:—"Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is ONE Lord." Mark 12: 29. "And this is eternal life, that they might know THEE, the ONLY TRUE GOD, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." John 17: 3.

3. Moses testifies:—"The LORD, he is God; there is none else beside him. . . . The LORD, he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath; there is none else." Deut. 4: 35, 39. "Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is ONE Lord." Deut. 6: 4.

4. Hezekiah testifies:—"O Lord God of Israel, ... thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; THOU hast made HEAVEN AND EARTH. . . . O Lord our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even THEE ONLY." 2 Kings 19: 15, 19.

5. David testifies:—"That all the people of the earth may know that the LORD is God, and that there IS NONE ELSE." 1 Kings 8: 60. "O LORD, there is none like thee, neither IS THERE ANY GOD BESIDE THEE, according to all that we have heard with our ears." 1 Chron. 17: 20. "THOU art God alone." Ps. 86: 10.

6. Solomon testifies:—"O LORD God of Israel, there IS NO God like thee in heaven, nor on the earth." 2 Chron. 6: 14.

7. Paul testifies:—"Seeing it is ONE God." Rom. 3: 30. "To God only wise, be glory through (dia) Jesus Christ for ever." Rom. 16: 27. "There is none other God but ONE. . . . To us there is but one God, the Father, . . . and one Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 8: 4, 6. "God is ONE." Gal. 3: 20. "ONE God and Father of all, WHO IS ABOVE ALL, and THROUGH ALL." Eph. 4: 6. "The only wise God." 1 Tim. 1: 17. "There is ONE God, and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus." 1 Tim. 2: 5.

Now, second, we give the positive proof that this one God—the Father—"made," or "created" the world.

1. Moses testifies:—"In the beginning God (Elohim) created the heaven and the earth." Gen. 1: 1. "And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good." Gen. 1: 31. "Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them. And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made. These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the Lord God made the earth and the heavens." Gen. 2: 1-4. "For in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is." Ex. 20: 11; 31: 17.

2. David testifies:—"The LORD made the heavens." 1 Chron. 16: 26. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handywork." Ps. 19: 1. "By the word of the LORD were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth." Ps. 33: 6. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." Ps. 90: 2. "I said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days; thy years are throughout all generations. Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands." Ps. 102: 24, 25. "My help cometh from the LORD, which made heaven and earth." Ps. 121: 2. "Our help is in the name of the LORD, who made heaven and earth." Ps. 124: 8. "The LORD that made heaven and earth bless thee out of Zion." Ps. 134: 3. "Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the LORD his God; which made heaven, and earth, the sea, and all that therein is." Ps. 146: 5, 6.

3. Nehemiah testifies—"Thou, even thou, art LORD alone; thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein." Neh. 9: 6.

Solomon testifies:—"The LORD possessed me (wisdom) in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. . . . . While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the highest part of the dust of the world. When he prepared the heavens, I was there; when he set a compass upon the face of the depth; when he established the clouds above; when he strengthened the fountains of the deep; when he gave to the sea his decree, that the waters should not pass his commandment; when he appointed the foundations of the earth," etc. Prov. 8: 22-29.

5. Paul testifies:—"Ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven, and the earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein." Acts 14: 15. "God that made the world, and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands," etc. Acts 17: 24. "And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things." Eph. 3: 9. (The phrase, "by Jesus Christ," in this verse, I have already proved, is an addition to God's Word, and, therefore, must be left out.) "Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the works of thy hands," etc. Heb. 1: 10. This, I have already proved, is said of the Father, not the Son.

6. John testifies:—"Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship HIM that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." Rev. 14: 7.

7. God the Son testifies:—"For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation, WHICH GOD CREATED, unto this time." Mark 13: 19.

God himself testifies:—"Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the LORD, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding." Isa. 40: 28. "I have made the earth, and created man upon it; I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded." Isa. 45: 12. "For thus saith the LORD that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited; I am the Lord, and there is none else." v. 18.

And now we ask, Where is there any evidence to prove that Christ made the world? My experience for nearly forty years in the work of the ministry has taught me, that it is much easier and much more pleasing to rectify the mistakes which are found in King James' Bible, than it is to try to harmonize those errors with the unerring Word of God, as found in the original Hebrew and Greek languages. There is no difficulty in harmonizing God's divinely inspired Word, when men's errors are sifted out of it. And when such passages as—"Let us make man,"—"Whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting,"—"Before Abraham was, I am,"—"The glory which I had with thee before the world was"—"I came down from heaven"—"Was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor," etc., etc., are critically examined, they are all found to be in perfect harmony with the foregoing. Thank God for light on his precious Word.

ETERNITY.

L. T. C.

That eternity essentially belongs to none but God or Christ, is clearly set forth in the divine Oracles; and therefore he is said only to have immortality. The entire universe, with all flesh, receive their existence or being from him, which comprises things "visible or invisible, whether thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him: and he is before all things, and by him all things consist." Col. 1: 16, 17. As all things receive their being from him, they can also be deprived of their being by him; therefore our hope of eternal life rests wholly with Christ. "In him was life"; that is, life always existed in him. All beings and things depend on him; he depends on none. Independent immortality is appropriated to Christ;—"Which in his times he shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality."

That these titles refer expressly to Christ may be seen in the description of him in Rev. 19, when heaven is opened, and he appears bearing upon his "vesture" and upon "his thigh a name written" with great emphasis, "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS." Again the eternity of Christ is expressed in Rev. 1: 8,—"I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord" (or Kurious—Greek), which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty"; or, the Almighty God. Also in Rev. 11: 17,—"Saying, We give thee thanks, O (Kurious, Theos) Almighty, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast" (or always existed), and art to come." These titles cannot be applied to any created being.

Creation is a producing something from nothing. What was once nothing cannot therefore be eternal. A creature was nothing before it was created. Therefore, if Christ is essentially a created being, then the time was when he did not exist, and therefore was nothing. Again, there is no creature but what is mutable, therefore not eternal. If the creature were not mutable, it would be most perfect. Mutability and eternity are utterly inconsistent; therefore the prophetic declaration concerning Christ would be utterly inconsistent if Christ were a created being (Micah 5: 2)—"Out of Bethlehem came forth he that is to be Ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting," or from the days of eternity. Here are two goings forth: first, from the days of eternity; second, from Bethlehem, in the days of his incarnation. If the goings forth of Christ from the days of eternity were only in the decree or purpose of God, then the same might be said of David, and of every creature.

The eternity of Christ is the ground of the christian religion; because this fact makes him immutable, therefore his covenant will be so, and cannot be disannulled; therefore, the hope and expectation of his church will not be obstructed or disappointed. And thus we see immutability and eternity go hand in hand; and the promise of eternal life, which God promised before the world began, is in his covenant with his church; therefore cannot fail.

How transcendently beautiful and glorious is the contemplation of life, eternal life, to be bestowed upon mortal man,—believers, that are united to Christ by a living faith; for says Jesus, "I give unto my sheep eternal LIFE, and they shall never perish." Says Paul,—"Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God; and when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." If our life is thus hid with Christ in God, it is not hid within ourselves, and we can never receive it until Christ comes to give it to us. Therefore, those in their graves (the good) will yet hear his voice and come forth to the resurrection of life, and thus all God's saints are to receive eternal life at the epoch of the first resurrection, from the great Life-giver. Amen.

THE CHURCH THAT CHANGETH NOT.

It is some little time since a christian lady, entitled to the respect of all who love the pure and the beautiful in the life and the literature of England, complained in a communication, addressed to the editor of the Christian Standard, that the good wrought by christian workers is too much overlooked, whilst attention is more generally directed to the faults and to the short comings of certain fractions of the religious world.

Miss Havergal's views, in this respect, are shared we believe by more than one sincere believer, and are allied, in some instances at least, with very strong illusions. As we look around us we cannot partake of them.

Whilst it is undoubtedly most desirable that everything tending to the encouragement and edification of the christian community, and to the cementing of the bonds of christian sympathy and fellowship, should be manifest to all, and become the theme of universal joy and praise, it would be a most fatal error we think to attempt to palliate or disguise the perils of the time.

Egypt, the prophet tells us, was seduced "even by they who were the stay of the tribes thereof." Her princes were deceived, and they misled the people. Jerusalem fell because she would that her teachers should speak to her not right things, but smooth things.

The history of nations, no less than that of many individuals, attests that men are but too apt to ignore the signs of coming ills, whilst indulging in the delusions that flatter their peculiar idiosyncracies. What court was ever more frivolously gay than that of the unfortunate Marie Antoinette? How little did that beautiful queen, and her charming friend, the Princess de Lamballe, anticipate the doom that awaited them! Madame de Genlis relates in her memoirs, how at this period ladies of rank were wont to frequent places of popular amusement, and how gleefully they shared the pleasures of lackeys and plebians. Such was the intoxication that preceded the appalling [illegible] of terror, that a shameless woman was [illegible] bled in her midnight rambles to pass for the Queen of France in the eyes of a Cardinal, prince of the house of Rohan! At a later period we have ourselves seen in France, with more of dignity, not less of infatuation. We have seen in 1830, the priest and the aristocrat equally confident and elated, and we have seen them, within a short interval, shrinking, as it were, from the gaze of men.

Need we speak of later times? What Frenchman of a future generation will not read with wrath and scorn, that only three days previous to the declaration of war against Prussia, the surgical operation to which Napoleon III. finally succumbed, was pronounced necessary by his medical advisers?

Had the result of the medical consultation been made known to the Empress, as it was proposed, war would not have been declared. Such, however, was the fanaticism of the Ultramontanes, who at this period were urging France on to the destruction of Prussia, of Protestantism, and of liberty, that the Empress Eugenie was kept, officially at least, ignorant of her husband's condition; and thus France and Napoleon were alike sacrificed.—Christian Standard.

BEING IN HONOR.

"Man being in honor abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish."—Ps. 49: 12.

This is a positive declaration of God: that men who are honored by the world will not be saved. No process of reasoning can make it appear that those whom the world love and exalt are the servants or children of God. It is positively declared that such shall not "abide"—that they shall "perish." This is the unbroken voice of sacred Scripture. Men may exalt themselves, and be universally honored, even for what the world call goodness and virtue, and God despise their image—their character.

Men who are honored seek for honor. If they seek it of the world, it will be the honor of the world that they will obtain. If they seek honor of God, it will be the honor that cometh from God that they will have. Now these two kinds of honor are as unlike as light and darkness. Between these two classes of men there is a gulf that can never be spanned nor filled up. It is not a line that divides them, but a sea, over whose billows none can ever pass. As far as death is from life, so far are they who are honored by the world from those who are honored by God.

Christ said, "How can ye believe (in me) who receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" Do men who seek honor of men believe in Christ? The statement is they do not; and the evidence is they have no real faith in him. If they did believe in him they would follow him, and seek for the honor that God bestows. Jesus says again, "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor." Men who seek honor of the world cannot serve Christ. To serve Christ is to be dishonored by the world. An Apostle said, "If I pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ." To be honored by men we must please men. To please men is to displease God.

There is, then, this wide distinction between the praise of men and that of God; and it never can be obliterated. Men of the world may praise and honor men, and declare them christians, and in their death saved, but God contradicts them:—"Man being in honor, abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish."

"SHADOWS ON THE NATION."

Shadows are evidently gathering over the nations of earth, sending a thrill of sorrow to the hearts of great and far-seeing politicians. The most intellectual and sober men in the political, ecclesiastical, financial, social and scientific world, who carefully view the progression of all things in these departments, express fearful forebodings of coming calamitous changes. Jesus expressed it, "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." The men who exercise the most independent thought, and occupy the most advantageous positions for observation express these fears most boldly. The late Senator Sumner possessed a mind and occupied a position to make him as good a judge of the immediate future of this nation as any man living. He is reported by a Pennsylvania paper as saying to friends whom he met on a social occasion,—"Ah, I won't live to see it, but you will, gentleman; you will if you live to be as old as I am now; you will see the streets of our cities run with blood, and the blood will be the blood of our own people, and by our own people." "The special cause of Mr. Sumner's despondency is alleged to have been the evidences of political corruption which he discerned on every hand, and worst of all, in his own Massachusetts, which he said had always been so loyal to all that is good in a good Government." Boston Journal. We have been preaching and publishing such things for many years, but the world has looked upon us as visionary fanatics. We obtained our evidence from the prophetic Scriptures, and Mr. Sumner from the political situation. The prophecies, when in process of fulfillment, must agree with the circumstances foretold; therefore, two conclusions legitimately drawn from the prophecies and situation must agree.

The Word of God clearly teaches that a great slaughter of humanity will take place at the end of the Gospel, reaching "from one end of the earth unto the other end of the earth," when "every man's sword shall be against his brother." All nations must drink of this deadly cup. Such a war will not come causelessly, but events must gather around which will result in the terrible fray. Those events become the signs of the times to the prophetic expositor, and cause the hearts of worldly men to fail for fear. Senator Sumner only expressed of this nation what the wisest statesmen of all nations express in relation to their governments. Deep rooted corruption in human society is cropping out every where, from the mightiest empires to the smallest families. Jealousy and faction are becoming the ruling elements of this generation. Artful, intriguing men, extortioners, libertines, bloodthirsty aristocrats and tyrants are every where striving to grasp the reins of government, and crush with heavy hand all who oppose them. A government is in the last stages of consumption when its principle offices are filled by intrigue and bribery.

Rome lost her liberty and government when the political element became so corrupted that her imperial and subordinate offices were purchased by money, or filled by the dictation of soldiers, or by the intrigue of factious parties. So it must be with all other governments. A nation is on the high road to ruin when it becomes fashionable or customary for its officers of trust to sell their official power to the highest bidders, so that the love of money becomes the ruling element of the nation. Then the monied corporations and aristocrats will so control the legislatures and courts, as to oppress the lower classes, who are always a large majority, and who will in an emergency count on their superior strength, and rise in bloody revolution to obtain their rights.

These principles have always been the leading cause of all internal war and revolution. No man in this nation understood these principles and their inevitable results better than did Mr. Sumner. He was unlike many of our legislators, who have had no particular training in the science of political economy; for he was thoroughly educated in that department, and comprehended well the principles which strengthen and those which destroy a government.

It is a painful thought that this great nation should so soon become so divided into factious parties, and its rulers so dishonest and corrupt, and its citizens so demoralized, that its wisest statesmen and most enlightened people should forebode immediate bloodshed and revolution. But when we consider that the day of the Lord is at hand, when all the nations must be overwhelmed in the bloody conflicts of the last battle, it is not surprising that the youngest of the great nations should so early mature into ripened depravity.

The doom and destruction of all nations is evidently just before us, and may we have wisdom, so as not to be caught in any of their coils, depending upon, or engaged in any of their anti-gospel and fruitless sensational and spasmodic movements to reform society. Christ never sent scoffing worldly men to lead his people in any gospel work of reformation. Do not let Satan deceive you by thinking that you can do more good by going outside of the gospel with unbelievers than you can by the gospel with God's people. God has instituted the best possible means to save the world; and when those means become ineffectual to secure good society, and wickedness threatens to produce revolution, men usually try something new of their own invention, and sink in the trial.

If God has scuttled the ship of State, and she is absolutely in a sinking condition and must go down, we only endanger the lives of the passengers when we make a show of putting in new pumps, and give encouragement that she can be saved. A true friend of humanity, under such circumstances, would faithfully give the alarm, and exhort all to immediately put on life-preservers and man the boats. So we would say to all that the old ship bearing humanity over the boisterous sea of time is fast sinking, while the storm is raging fearfully, and every moment adds to the danger of the awful position.

But amid the howling tempest and foaming waves, hope still lives; for there alongside of the sinking ship lays a life boat, in which sits the virgin church, meek and calm, lifting her sweet voice in emphatic tones of assurance and invitation, beckoning all to come on board, and be safely carried to the stormless shore of the eternal Eden of rest.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Said the Savior, "Can ye not discern the signs of the times?" Matt. 16: 3. Were he present with us now, we think he would ask the question with much emphasis. He then referred to the signs which so clearly indicated that he was the true Messiah, who had come in fulfillment of the prophetic Scriptures, relating to his first advent. Since then, some eighteen hundred years have passed, and many great events, foretold by the prophets, have been accomplished, and their fulfillment now seems to say most emphatically that the end of the present dispensation is very near. Let this be true, as we believe, then "the signs of the times" should indicate the same thing. That there are to be signs seen before the second coming of Christ, that will indicate that the great event is "at hand," "even at the doors," showing we are in the last "generation," seems to be fairly taught in the sacred Scriptures. When Jesus was teaching in the temple, what is recorded in Luke 21, he was asked: "When shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass?" He proceeded to give a chain of events, from his time to his second coming to set up "the kingdom of God." At another time, when seated on the Mount of Olives, his disciples came unto him, and made further inquiries about the signs of his second coming. They said: "Tell us when shall these things be; and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" This conversation is recorded in the 24th chapter of Matthew, which we purpose now to examine briefly, to ascertain whether "the signs of the times" are in harmony with what is indicated by the fulfillment of other prophecies relating to the four great kingdoms, the last of which (the Roman) now seems to be near its end. It is believed the signs which are to precede the second coming of Christ must transpire about the time when the dominion is taken away from the Papal power at Rome. As that was done Sept. 20th, 1870, we may reasonably expect to find the signs of Christ's coming well advanced in their accomplishment. It is our purpose to pursue the inquiry, Have any of the signs been seen that are to be witnessed by the last generation before his second coming? If not, then it would appear that they have not kept pace with other prophetic events, which show very clearly that the great day of the Lord is emphatically near at hand.

FRANCE.

The state of things in France is far from being settled. Another revolution seems to be working up with strong proportions. The rich men appear to favor it, and desire the restoration of imperial power, which has been buried since Napoleon III. surrendered at Sedan in Sept. 1870.

It appears by the late following correspondence from Paris, that there is room for strong hope on the part of the young Napoleon in favor of his taking the throne of France:—

> "HOPES OF THE BONAPARTISTS.
> Is France drifting to the Empire? Such is the general topic of conversation even with people who detest Imperialism with a holy hate. Beyond doubt it is not in the same position as it was in February, 1871, when the present Assembly corroborated the dethronement effected without any effort the previous September. One must henceforth speak deferentially of Bonapartists. They are supporters of the Government—for the time being—and do not shrink from having an interpretation of their own, as to the seven years duration of MacMahon's powers, just as if they were Legitimists. They give anxiety to both Royalists and Republicans, disliking the latter as being false democrats, they alone being the pure ones. Two of a trade never agree. It is the Orleanists; their allies in turning out Thiers and turning in the undefined Septennat, that the Bonapartists afflict with all the violences of the season. No person can discover the promised good times coming—unless, perhaps, the Imperialists. The Republicans are being sorely tried; are growing faint and weary. The Monarchists are in power, but not at all nearing their haven of rest. Their happy land appears to be far, far away. The only party that has hope, confidence and audacity, are the Imperialists. Their very affrontery is startling."

We think radical changes, of some kind, cannot be far off. Let us all keep on our watch-towers, looking out for the dawning of the glorious morning, when the saints shall rise from the dead, and all "the wise" shall receive their glorious reward, and commence to live eternally.

SAN FRANCISCO.

We had a good day in San Francisco, yesterday, March 22nd. Several requested prayers that they might become christians, and others that they might be brought into complete and uninterrupted communion with Christ, in order to stand ready to meet him at his coming. It was stated in the meeting last evening, by a prominent member of a Baptist church, that other churches were receiving beneficial results from the revival meetings we are enjoying, and said that he was himself a believer in the great truths for the preaching of which we are shut out from most meeting-houses, and called "Infidels." Many are beginning to see that common theology preached at the present time is not in harmony with the sacred Scriptures.

Bro. Johnson, a Congregationalist minister, who has recently come to the coast, was in last evening, and took an active part, manifesting a true christian spirit. He attended the meetings we held in Washington, D. C., some years since. He said he loved the coming of Jesus. Bro. Hubbard, who has just united with us, preached an able and effective sermon last evening. His preaching talent is of the first class, and if he fully regains his health, we believe he will be very successful in giving the last great proclamation to a judgment-bound world. Pray for him.

Bro. Hook's health will not allow him to preach at present. He preached once last week, but it was too much for his strength. He feels very sad to be unable to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, when there is so much to be done. Remember him in prayer.

Prof. W. Denton, from the East, is now in San Francisco, giving a course of lectures on geology, making sharp thrusts against christianity, God and the Bible. Such men find many supporters in California. Spiritualism and infidelity hold the chief sway on the Pacific coast, yet there are some noble exceptions. Jesus has some warm friends here, who would love to see him coming in the clouds of heaven.

DISCUSSION.—We have now arranged to hold a discussion in Napa City, Cal., on the Sabbath question, commencing Monday evening, March 23d, to continue several evenings. There is much anxiety among the people to hear the debate, as quite a number from the different churches have been persuaded by the Seventh-day preachers, that it is their duty to rest Saturday, instead of the Lord's day. The Seventh-day people purpose to make a strong effort on the Pacific coast the coming season. Elder J. White and wife, Elders Cornell, Loughborough and Canright are also here, and expected to be present at the discussion next week. The Seventh-day people have nearly completed a neat chapel in Napa City, which they purpose to dedicate shortly. It is hoped and expected that the discussion will be sanctified to the good of the people.

We have been holding meetings in this city the last five evenings, and a fine interest is awakened. Quite a number were unable to obtain seats, and positively good results begin to appear. To-day (Saturday, March 21) we return to San Francisco to spend the Lord's day with the church in that city. During the week we have heard good reports from their meetings. The work of the Lord has been progressing successfully.

STRANGE THINGS.

In San Francisco is a man who claims to be "Christ's chief medium," or "superior medium." He has frequently been seen in our meetings. He has traveled much, is an intelligent man, who appears to be wholly given up to be controlled by the spirits of demons, who have made him believe he is controlled by Christ.

The following purports to come from Jesus through this medium:—

> "For many years there have been a number of professing christians looking for my second appearance on earth. Some have believed that I should make my appearance in the same physical body I lived in when on earth; some have believed I would have a new body, formed out of magnetism, electricity, and such grosser elements as might be necessary, while others have believed that I should appear spiritually (or celestially) to those who were sufficiently developed, either clairvoyantly or clairsentiently, or both ways, to those who were chosen and unfolded for my reception. This third class of believers are correct in their judgments, for I have appeared to, and influenced many mediums every year since I left the body, either directly, or indirectly, through spirits below me; but it must be very evident to one of great wisdom, that however much I may try to communicate through many mediums, I can give the highest and most valuable communications through but one. As persons are differently organized, they stand related to me as superior and inferior.
>
> You may now ask, who is my superior medium? If you cannot tell by the works and writings I produce through him, then I cannot convince you by giving his name; for it is very easy counterfeiting a name, but utterly impossible to perfectly counterfeit my works in all things; for to do so, would make the actor equal to the originator or his medium. Many discoveries will be published in this journal, never before given through any medium, or made by persons in the physical body—not even by myself when living on earth. But we shall not claim perfection for all that is published in this book, although it reaches higher and broader, in many parts, than has ever been given to mortal man before on your earth. In examining this work, let common sense be your guide, praying God the Father to inspire your soul, and give you wisdom and understanding to appreciate and practice all of its truths. Amen.
>
> Signed Jesus, formerly of Nazareth."

FRANCE.

France is the barometer of Europe. As it rises in warlike excitement, and falls again into quiet, so the storms and calms of war and peace generally prevail among the continental nations. When the French bugle is still, the royal neighbors sleep quietly; but when it peals the note of alarm, there is a bustle through all their military camps. France is the crater of the volcanic mountain of the Roman world. When a rupture is imminent, threatening sounds are first heard about the gaping mouth of the fiery cone; and when the signal of danger is raised, the surrounding villagers hasten to some safe retreat.

France was originally represented by golden frogs, and is the frog kingdom, from whence proceed the spirits to gather the nations to the last terrible battle. She was the supporting brace to sustain the doomed powers of the Papacy and Mohammedanism, and when God would lay them on their dying couch, he suddenly smote, with a death stroke, the Corsican Empire by the diplomacy of Bismarck and the strategy of Moltke. Bismarck understands that although the French are divided on most points, yet they are united in making a desperate effort to be avenged on Germany and regain their lost provinces. He knows they are rapidly recuperating their army, so that his chances for a second triumph are becoming less every day, and that the entire Catholic church will throw its power with France; therefore, the sooner the conflict commences the more certain will Germany be to triumph. Under these circumstances the German government is evidently trying to provoke the French to commence the combat immediately. They have succeeded in causing the French Minister at Berlin to resign, which has caused a profound sensation in France. This inspires each political party of the republic to hold the reins of government when the terrible struggle shall come; for they know that the nation will be a unit in that matter, and the party which leads in gaining the victory they anticipate will become popular and control the nation.

The following dispatches from Paris to the Boston Globe expresses the present condition of France, doubtless correctly:—

> "London, March 30th.—Paris dispatches received to-night state that the political disquietude throughout the country is on the increase. The various political factions are again discussing the probabilities of important changes in the administration at no distant day. The recent debates in the Assembly, from their general tone and character, have weakened the confidence of the country in the permanence of the seven-year Presidential system. An apprehension is becoming popular that France and Germany will soon be again involved in dangerous complications, and that an early renewal of the late war between the two countries is unavoidable. Great excitement was created in Paris on Saturday by the unfounded rumor of the death of ex-President Thiers. The Republican candidates for the French Assembly have been elected in the Departments of Haute-Marne and Gironde."

OUTLAWS BECOMING BOLD.

The Governor of Pennsylvania has within ten days called out fifteen hundred troops to quell a riotous and lawless mob of strikers on the Erie R. R. at Susquehanna, Penn. These strikers have appeared to many as merely foolish and annoying events, and would soon pass away among the things that were, without much harm to the governments. But we have been of a different opinion. Although this case was settled without bloodshed, yet it must be obvious to all that such scenes are constantly becoming more serious and threatening. Every time a government is disturbed by these laborers, it will become more severe, and that severity will increase the number of strikers, and the determination of the laborers. We believe that this difficulty between rulers and laborers is predicted as becoming very serious in the last days, and therefore an increase of these difficulties become a sign that the end is drawing near.

The Governor of Missouri is also asking his Legislature to furnish him with troops to put down murderous mobs in his State, as the following item of news will show.
J. C.

> ST. LOUIS, MO., March 30.—"The House having refused to pass the Senate bill providing for the organization of the State militia and appropriating the money therefor, thus leaving a portion of the State at the mercy of outlaws who defy the laws, the Governor sent a message to the House Saturday evening, calling the attention of the members to the fact and enclosing a communication just received from the Sheriff, prosecuting Attorney and Clerk of the Circuit and County Court, which states that on the 18th one William Manks of West Plains shot James Miller in the head, then fled to the country, and refuses to submit to a civil process on the plea that he cannot obtain justice. Manks has three hundred men ready to obey his call and defend him. On Thursday night thirty men rode into West Plains, headed by John Nicholson, who swore that they were going to see Manks have justice, and stating that the sheriff and other county officials and prominent men of West Plains were a band of conspirators sworn to take the life of Manks, and they (the Manks men) had them spotted and intended to kill the last one of them.
> The whole party went to the Sheriff's office, dared him to arrest any of them or attempt it, and they would shoot him and clean out the town, saying that they were three hundred strong, and intended to get their force together and resist the town. A communication then calls on the Governor and some of the peaceable, law-abiding citizens of the county to take speedy means to bring Manks and his followers to justice, stating further that unless this is done many lives will be sacrificed."

COSTLY APPAREL.—Mrs. Wm. B. Astor, of New York, whose husband is said to be worth a hundred million dollars, recently made a party at her Fifth Avenue residence, when she appeared dressed in jewelry and diamonds, said to be worth a million dollars. One present, who is well acquainted with court life in Europe, said the largest collection of diamonds in possession of any European Empress or Queen, belongs to the present German Empress, but says she cannot make a diamond display that begins with Mrs. Astor's. The following is a part of the description of Mrs. A's dress:

> "On each of her shoulders she had four stars, the size of silver half dollars, made of diamonds. Her hair was set very thickly with diamonds, and her head seemed aflame with them. There was a diamond bandeau upon her brow. She had diamond ear-rings and a diamond necklace of magnificent proportions. Upon the two sides of her chest were two circles of diamonds, about the size of the palm of the hand. From them depended lines and curves of diamonds reaching to her waist, round which she wore a diamond girdle. On the skirts of her dress in front were two large peacocks wrought of lines of diamonds. There were rosettes of diamonds on her slippers. There were diamonds large or small, but in every variety of form, all over her dress and person, wherever they could be artistically placed. She presented an extraordinary and dazzling spectacle as she moved languidly through the dance, among her friends."

The description of the display at Mrs. Astor's, closes as follows:—

> "On the evening in which the diamond display here described was made in the Fifth Avenue mansion, the starving masses in the wretched quarters of the city were swarming around some two or three hundred soup houses and charity places, while between eight and nine thousand homeless men and women were huddled for the night in station houses, or still more miserable free resorts, and not a few tried to keep warm by crawling into ash-barrels or slinking into area ways. The money of the Astors is their own, and the sufferings of these miserable wretches is their own."

M. G.

FROM BRO. GEO. JEFFERSON.

I write the following for the Crisis, as another illustration of 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4,—"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

I desired recently to obtain fellowship in a regular Baptist church. A committee was appointed to hear my statements. All went well until the question came, "Do you endorse our creed?" It was duly stated to me, and "the immortal soul" part of it had to be the first thing in order. I had to confess that I did not endorse that. "What, then, do you believe?" was the next question. I begged permission to state my belief touching immortality in my own way. Granted. I proceeded thus: The apostle Paul is the only inspired writer who ever uses the terms "immortal" and "immortality"; but (1) he never applies either term to sinners; (2) he never applies either term to saints in this life; and (3) he never applies either term to souls in this life or in any other; so we never read of "immortal sinners,"—"immortal saints,"—"immortal souls." (4) He declares that God ONLY has immortality. ver. 16. (5) He tells us that men may obtain it by seeking it. (6) He tells us that at the resurrection it shall be realized by all worthy of it. (7) He tells us that the knowledge of it is not had by the history of our creation, but only by the gospel. (8) He tells us that the ungodly SHALL NOT HAVE IMMORTALITY. I got as far as my fourth item, and then was arrested in my supposed triumph by their saying, I was not required to prove anything, but only to say what my belief is. I begged to be allowed to give Bible reasons for my faith, but was told that was not called for. I then appealed, "Does the apostle Paul in these or any other scriptures teach anything like 'human immortality'?" I was answered, "Your Bible proofs are not of any weight, because we have all a right to put our own interpretations on them." I gravely demurred at this.

Next came the destiny of the wicked. The creed taught them "eternal torment." I had again to object. I did so by quoting Ps. 145: 20,—"The Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy." I suggested that as here are two diametrically opposite characters to be rewarded, their rewards are of necessity of a diametrically opposite nature. "Preserve" is the opposite of "destroy," and per se, to destroy anything is the exact contrary of preserving it. I then attempted to fortify my position with other texts selected out of two hundred, teaching the utter destruction of all the wicked, as well as of "the devil and his angels," his works, etc.; but was not allowed to use my Bible at all in the case. I must either endorse their creed, or I must not have fellowship!

Much more passed on other matters of the the "creed," as "death and going to heaven or hell," etc., but all in the same way as the above. Well, I confess myself astonished that men who even boast of having the truth, should ignore the "word of the Lord" and refuse any one fellowship because he believes it in preference to tradition. Is not this Popery which denies the sufficiency of the Bible, and says "the CHURCH is to tell you what you are to believe?" "Come, Lord Jesus!" Amen.

CORRECTION.—Bro. Editor:—In my article No. 5, in the Crisis of April 1st, by the misplacing of one entire line, considerable confusion is created. The last line at the bottom of the first column should have been placed between the 23d and 24th lines from the top of the second column. The reader will be benefited by this correction. Sixty-six lines from the top of the second column, the pronoun "we" is a mistake in the printing.

From Hattie S. Tuttle.

As there is an invitation given to the Brn. and Srs. to write for the Crisis, I thought I would try.

I have been deeply interested for some months past in what has been said through the Crisis on the subject of the speedy coming of our blessed Redeemer; and I can say with all my heart, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

A little over a year ago my eyes were opened to see the truth as it is revealed in God's Word; and I do praise him that he ever permitted me to hear an Adventist preach. A short time before I embraced the truth, I was living at Linden, and Sr. Stoddard came and preached in the school-house. I went to hear her, and stopped my ears to all that was said, and tried to satisfy myself with the thought that the coming of Christ was yet a great way off. I was taken sick. I began to think, Am I prepared to meet my God? I felt that I was not. After a while Bro. Stevens came to the place to preach, but my health was so poor I could not go and hear him.

One day, as I was almost given up to despair, feeling that death was near, dear Sr. Moore came in and sat by my side and began to talk with me. She asked if I loved the Lord. The scripture came to my mind, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." I knew I did not keep them, and so it must be that I did not love him. I had once professed to love him, but the world and its cares had overcome me, and I was worse than if I had never known the way. She asked if I would not come to the meetings. I promised I would try. As it was but a short distance to the school-house, I asked the Lord to help me. When evening came, I went, and O, the Lord did bless me. That meeting I never shall forget. My health kept failing. The doctor was called, and left medicine, but I refused to take it. I thought I had not given up all for Jesus. I had never been baptized, and the cross seemed too heavy for me to bear. I read in the Word, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." I at last gave myself entirely into his hands, and said, I will do anything.

From that time I began to improve in health. In the latter part of June I was laid beneath the placid wave by Bro. A. P. Moore. The Lord has been with me ever since, and I am determined, by his grace assisting me, to be faithful the little time that I am permitted to stay on the shores of time, so that when Christ who is our life shall appear, I may appear with him in glory.

Wheatville, Genesee Co., N. Y.

From Sr. I. P. Hodgdon.

To all those who are trying to endure unto the end, I would say, hold on to the promises a little longer; they are yours if you endure unto the end;—not most there, but clear through to the end. Let nothing hinder you, or turn you from your purpose. The great enemy of all good will invent every piece of machinery in his power to throw you off the track, or destroy you in some way; but, like Bunyan's Christian, put your fingers in your ears, and run and cry, "Eternal life!" when you are tempted and tried, and almost on the point of giving up in despair, just go and get down alone before the Lord, tell him all about it, and plead his promises,—they are yours. He never turned any away empty that came to him pleading the merits of Christ. O, how precious is the memory of these seasons to me! When I have had some severe trial that I could not endure with my weak human nature without help and strength from the Lord, I have gone and shut myself up and cried to Jesus for strength to endure this one more trial, and he would always come to the rescue. He has been tempted in all points like as we are, and knows just how to help us. I feel such a sense of his power and goodness that I can say, Not my will, but thine, O Lord, be done.

Let each one strive to endure a little longer, carry everything to God in prayer, that he may help us keep the word of his patience; then he will keep us in the hour of temptation, and when Jesus comes he will give us eternal life.

Manchester, N. H., March 13th, 1874.

From C. A. Hosmer.

As it has been requested through the columns of the Crisis, that more religious experiences be sent for publication, I thought I would very briefly relate my own.

About four years ago, at a revival meeting held in Asbury M. E. Church, West Phila., Pa., an opportunity was given for any person to speak who wished. I arose and said, if there is any reality in religion, I would like to know it; feeling willing to do anything that was required in order to attain it. I was then asked forward to the altar. I went twice, after which I felt a change; everything seemed to look bright, clear, and beautiful. In a short time I left Phila., and went to Rochester, N. Y., where I had formerly resided. Shortly after, the doctrine of baptism came into my mind, and I felt as if it was God's will that I should be baptized by immersion. The Methodists were unwilling to baptize me, as I had been sprinkled. So after looking into the doctrines of the Baptist church, and not believing as they did in regard to the state of the dead, I concluded to be baptized by Bro. E. McCulloch, of Nevada, O., and united with the Advent church in Rochester. Since then I have had a somewhat different experience from others; but am happy to say to-night that the Lord is my Shepherd, and by his grace I am saved.

A few weeks ago, the Crisis contained a sermon of the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon, and one point in it struck me very forcibly; viz., we who call ourselves christians should now be preaching the second coming of Christ, as Noah preached before the flood that the deluge was coming. Christian Brn., in conclusion let me entreat of you, be faithful to your mission, and pray for me, that the blessing of God may attend my labors here, and that I may also endure unto the end, and finally you and I have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they who are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Old Point, Va., March 24th, 1874.

From Bro. D. D. Lathrop.

Dear Friends in Christ:—I have been so much delighted in reading your correspondence in the Crisis, that a desire is awakened in me to give in my testimony also, in favor of Jesus and his Holy Word. For about twenty-two years I have been trying to serve God in my weakness, although, like Bunyan's Pilgrim, I have made some blunders, and passed through difficulties real and imaginary; yet, on the whole, I think I am nearing the Celestial City. I love God and his people, which is one evidence that I have "Christ formed within, the hope of glory." It is cheering to me to read the Crisis. It is the best preaching I get outside the Bible. I find, when trials multiply, there is nothing so comforting as to feel that "our Father in heaven" knows all about it, and will care for us kindly, and will bring us off victorious; that he will never leave or forsake us. When friends depart, disappointments come, trials are severe, and hopes are blasted, or health is waning, or age is waxing, how good it is to feel that Jesus is our friend,—that we may go to him for sympathy and favor, for his Holy Spirit, for temporal blessings, watch-care and guiding hand! Every joy, or happy season we have in this life, is very brief. We are consoled with the assurance that soon we shall enter that delightful place "where there is fulness of joy, and pleasures forevermore." With encouragement and delight we anticipate the rapturous scene when that illustrious day shall come, in which our friends and loved ones who are now sleeping in Jesus shall awake with glorified bodies to join us in the clouds of heaven, escorted by all the angels, and shouts of joy and songs of victory in the brightness of eternal glory and felicity shall forever sweep away the remembrance of earthly sorrow. Dearest brethren, aid me by your prayers.

New Milford, Susq. Co., Pa.

From O. B. Town.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—We are truly in a world of sorrow. We see that the enemy, Death, is in our land, and it takes one here and another there. On our right hand and on our left, our dear ones fall by his stroke. Our sister in Christ, Bro. Gibb's companion, a friend of my wife, has been cut down by his rude hand, and he and his family of six children are left to mourn. We are often called to mourn the loss of near and dear ones, but not as those that have no hope; for we believe they will "come again from the land of the enemy." We have laid them away in deep sadness, but hope to join them again soon on the evergreen shore. The enemy may triumph for a little season, but his time is short. Soon Jesus will speak to them, and they will arise. Then we will take them by the hand, and beneath the shade of life's fair tree we will join them in singing praises to him who was slain from the foundation of the world.

Stowe, Vermont.

From Sr. Sarah Haines.

It is with a sad heart that I for the first time make an attempt to write for publication in the Crisis. Death has recently visited our family circle and snatched from our loving embrace our darling and only daughter, whom we fondly loved and cherished. Our affliction seems almost too great to bear, but we know that our little one will come again from the land of the enemy. We shall see her again in a better state than when she last parted from us, if we follow Christ, and live a life of watchfulness and prayer. By God's grace we expect to be overcomers, and live forever in the sweet fields of Eden, where death and he that has the power of death will be no more. Brethren and sisters, pray for us in this trying hour.

Biddeford, Me., March 28th, 1874.

SPIRITUAL LIGHT.

The manner in which the Spirit operated upon the apostles and multitudes is beautiful to contemplate. On Pentecost, he descended upon the disciples, and "Peter stood up and spoke as the Spirit gave him utterance." Acts 2: 4. The people who heard these great words of the Spirit were cut to the heart, and all who heard with understanding (as did the Jews in the days of Ezra) inquired, "What shall we do?" Acts 2: 37. In every instance the Spirit spoke, in words which the humble fishermen of Galilee could easily comprehend. No man, indeed, ever thought of spiritual direction, who did not hear the words of the Spirit; and hence we feel perfectly safe in saying, that God's revelations were made to no one except in words adapted to the condition of the individuals addressed.

We have found no evidence that the Almighty ever made a communication to mortals but in words. "The Lord said to Ananias, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire for Saul." "The Lord said, Go thy way." Acts 9: 11-15. "The Spirit said to Peter, Behold, three men seek thee; arise, therefore, and go with them." Acts 10: 19. We certainly cannot be mistaken as to the manner by which the Spirit calls men to perform special missions, such as visiting persons and places, and preaching the gospel to them.

Many, we are aware, are prepared as to the manner in which "the Spirit bears witness with our spirits that we are the children of God." There can be no confusion on this subject, if we regard the Word of God as the end of controversy. A witness is one who testifies to the truth of a proposition; and we rejoice in the confidence that the Good Spirit is a witness to every christian that his name is written in the book of life. But the question is, How does he bear witness? Paul will answer. He said, "And now I go bound in Spirit to Jerusalem, not knowing what will befall me there, save that the Holy Spirit WITNESSETH in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me." Acts 20: 22. It will be seen in this instance, at least, that the Spirit bore witness to Paul by telling him what awaited him. We presume that more on this subject, to one who believes the sacred Scriptures, will be unnecessary.—Religious Historian.

Obituaries

MITCHELL. In Kennebunk, Me., Feb. 5th, 1874, Bro. Wm. Mitchell, aged seventy-nine yrs.

Many of the preachers will remember him, as his house has been a home for them many years. He gave his heart to the Lord under the labors of Eld. Humphry Goodwin, and connected himself with the Christian church in K. When the glorious message of Jesus' coming sounded in his ears, his heart was ready to receive it, and he soon became a strong believer in the sleep of the dead and their literal resurrection. In this faith he lived the last thirty years of his life; and when called to meet death he was calm and unshaken, expecting to live again when Jesus comes, which he believed would be very soon.

He leaves a widow and three children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father, while we as a church feel that we have lost an earnest brother. One of the children is our beloved Bro. W. H. Mitchell, who feels the blow to be heavy. May the Lord comfort these mourners as none other can. The funeral was attended by the writer, assisted by Brn. A. A. Robinson and George W. Brown. B. S. EMERY.

GRAVES. At Pine River, Richland Co., Wis., March 10th, 1874, Deacon Bronson Graves, aged fifty-five years.

The circumstances of our brother's death were sad, and are as follows: On that morning he arose in his usual health, and after the morning meal and devotion he left the house to attend to feeding his farm stock, and was found dead in the public highway, but a few steps from the entrance to the barn-yard, by his two little boys. It is evident that he had turned his colts into the yard, put the bars up in order, and with the halter in his hand proceeded towards the barn, but he was arrested by the destroyer—Death. We think our brother's death was caused by a diseased state of the lungs, as they have troubled him for years.

The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, and we committed him to the narrow house appointed for the living. BENJ. JUDSON.

A. C. Times, please copy.

WALKER. On the 5th of Feb., 1874, Bro. Munson Walker, of Union, Me., aged fifty-four years.

He was one of our best citizens. His exemplary life will long be remembered by many friends (he had no enemies), for it was worthy of imitation. At home with his family, and in business with his fellow men, he was the same. Four years he had been preaching Christ. He loved the present truth, and contributed much to the interest of the social meetings by exhortation and songs of praise. The tender tie that bound him to kind christian friends had to be severed. As a man he was kind and gentle, as a neighbor obliging, and as a husband faithful and affectionate. He leaves a wife, brothers and sisters to mourn his loss. We laid him away in sadness, but not without hope in our breasts. S. K. PARTRIDGE.

FELCH. In Holderness, N. H., March 20th, of consumption, Sr. Mary J., wife of Mr. Osman Felch, aged thirty-six years.

It is seldom that death claims a victim whose loss is so deeply felt by the entire community as is that of our sister. Adding deep piety to a naturally amiable disposition, she has ever been a shining light in the church. She was a faithful wife, a fond mother, a wise counselor, and a true friend. May God bless the broken-hearted husband, son, brothers and sisters, that they may all meet her, as she expressed it, "in the morning." Funeral services conducted by the writer, assisted by Eld. Levi Allen, of Lake Village.

J. H. F. VARNEY.

PARKER. In North Monroe, N. H., March 18th, 1874, Sr. Augusta H., wife of T. L. Parker, and youngest daughter of Chas. Piper, of Wentworth, N. H., aged thirty-six years.

Our sister leaves an affectionate husband and children, parents and sisters, and a numerous circle of friends to mourn. May this afflictive dispensation be sanctified to the good of this mourning circle. They have hope in her death, and trust that when the trump of God shall sound, she will come forth to die no more.

ANN ELIZA CLARK.

SAWYER. In Porter, Me., March 14th, 1874, Levi Sawyer, aged eighty years.

Bro. Sawyer was inured to hard labor for the greater portion of his life. He was poor in this world, and with his companion, who survives him, had a large family of children to rear up; but he is sweetly resting now from all his labors. His last sickness was brief, and his departure from this life sudden, but we trust he was ready to go, and that to-day he sleeps in Jesus.

CHAS. H. HURD.

ROUNDS. In Providence, R. I., Feb. 10th, 1874, M. Jennie Rounds, wife of G. Edwin Rounds, and daughter of P. S. Peckham, of Coventry Centre, R. I., aged twenty-one years.

It was the privilege of the writer to baptize her at our campmeeting in 1872. Since that time she has maintained a good hope through grace, and died in the triumph of faith.

Sister, thou hast gone and left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis death that has bereft us,
God can all our sorrows heal.

E. R. WOOD.

HIMES. In North Kingston, March 2nd, 1874, Florence Belle, daughter of Jabez G. and the late Abby F. Himes, aged sixteen years.

We have often heard her sweet voice praising God and warning sinners to repent. She sleeps in Jesus.

"We shall meet her in the morning,
When life's sorrows all are o'er;
When the loved of earth are gathered,
We shall meet to part no more."

E. R. WOOD.

EMERY. In West Groton, Vt., March 23d, 1874, Lizzie, daughter of Obadiah and Ella Emery, aged one year and three months.

Bro. Geo. E. Brown preached the funeral sermon, from Jer. 31: 16, 17. Lizzie "sleeps, but not forever." CARRIE DARLING.

KEEP clear of any system of religion which confounds the world and true believers, and makes no broad distinction between those who are true children of God in a congregation, and those who are not. Be not carried away by an appearance of great self-denial and humility. It is far easier to fast and wear sack-cloth, and be of a sad countenance, than to receive thoroughly the doctrine of justification by faith without the deeds of the law.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, March 29. The steamer Malwa arrived off Suez at eleven o'clock Saturday night. Arthur Laing and Jacob Wainwright were on board in charge of the remains of Dr. Livingstone.

THE FATAL ILLNESS AND DEATH.

The following account is given of Dr. Livingstone's fatal illness and death: He had been ill of chronic dysentery, for several months. He was well supplied with stores and medicines, but he had a presentiment that the attack would prove fatal. At first he was able to ride on a donkey, but soon had to be carried. Arriving at Muilala, beyond Lake Bemba, in the Bisa country, he said, "Build me a hut to die in." A hut was built by his followers. The first of May he was confined to his bed, and afterward suffered greatly, groaning night and day. The third day he said he was very cold, and requested that more grass be put over the hut. His followers could not speak or go near him. Kitumbo, the Chief of Bisa, sent flour and beans, and behaved well toward the party. The fourth day Dr. Livingstone was insensible, and died about midnight. Makaoboos, a servant, was present.

THE LAST ENTRY IN HIS DIARY.

Dr. Livingstone made his last entry in his diary April 27. He spoke much and sadly of his home and family. When he was first seized by the fatal attack, he told his followers he intended to exchange everything for ivory to give to them, and then push on to Ujiji and Zanzibar, and try to reach England.

LONDON, March 27. The Daily Telegraph announces that the remains of Dr. Livingstone were embarked on a steamer at Aden on the 23d inst., and are now on their way to England. An investigation at Aden resulted in the complete identification of the body.

A Vienna telegram to the Daily News reports that the Emperor Francis Joseph will visit Naples, where he will meet the King of Italy and accompany him to Turin.

A Berlin dispatch says that it is stated authoritatively that Prince Bismarck will retire or dissolve the Reichstag if the army bill is rejected.

A special dispatch to the Standard from Berlin, says the reports in regard to Prince Bismarck's illness are discouraging. The patient is in a state of great prostration.

March 30. The Times correspondent at Marshal Serrano's headquarters telegraphs that the losses in the battle of Friday, before Bilbao, were enormous. General Primo de Rivera was mortally wounded. When the National troops heard this they refused to give quarter. General Lamos was seriously wounded, and two colonels were killed.

March 31. Santander is crowded with the wounded. The Carlist besieging force has partially suspended the bombardment of Bilbao, in order to turn their guns against Serrano's army.

BAYONNE, March 30. The Carlist Junta have received dispatches from Durango claiming that the Royalists maintain all their positions near Bilboa, and that they have cut the telegraph behind Serrano's army.

MADRID, March 26. A desperate engagement was fought yesterday before Bilboa.

The Republican army, under command of Marshal Serrano, attacked the Carlists at eight o'clock in the morning, and met with a stubborn resistance.

The battle was kept up all day, and was only stopped by the approach of night, when the Republicans encamped on positions they had captured from the Royalists.

The loss of the national troops was four hundred and seventy men.

Gen. Loma commanded the centre and Gen. Primo De Rivera the right.

It is probable that the battle will be renewed to-day.

The Minister of War has telegraphed the congratulations of the Cabinet to Marshal Serrano.

March 30. An official dispatch dated Somorrostro Friday night, states that the final attack on Abanto has again been suspended.

THE FUTURE OF FRANCE.

PARIS, March 27. In the Assembly to-day M. Dahirel, a Monarchist, moved that the Assembly take a vote on the 1st of July to decide the future form of government of France. He urged it was impossible to make a constitution without first settling the question whether France was to be a Monarchy or a Republic.

The motion caused great excitement, and a heated debate ensued.

March 30. The report that Henri Rochefort and Paschal Groussett have escaped from the penal colony of New Caledonia is confirmed. A dispatch from Melbourne of to-day's date, says they with Gurde, Bulliere and two other convicts have arrived at Newcastle, New South Wales.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Concord, N. H., March 27. David E. Blodgett, the Laconia murderer, recently sentenced to thirty years' hard labor in the State Prison, attempted last night to cut his throat with the prongs of his suspender buckle. He failed to do more than to severely scratch his throat. He will be brought to Concord to-morrow.

Key West, Fla., March 26. A dispatch received by boat from Havana says it is reported there that the Spaniards lost very heavily in the battle at Guasimoclara, near Puerto Principe. The Cubans remained in possession of the field at night, and the killed and wounded fell into their hands.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 29. A terrible accident occurred on the ferry-boat at this place this afternoon, Martin McCue and his wife Mary, with her baby, eight months old, drove on board in a wagon; when the boat started the horse commenced backing, and did not stop till all went overboard. Mrs. McCue was undoubtedly struck by the horse, and she did not live three minutes, nor did her body sink; the babe was drowned, and its body has not yet been recovered. Mr. McCue was rescued with great difficulty. Upon examination three of his ribs were found broken, which, together with his other injuries, makes his recovery doubtful. The horse was drowned. But one witness on the Coroner's inquest, thus far, has testified that the guard-chain was up, and he was the boy whose duty it was to put it up. His deportment before the Coroner's jury was of a brazen character, and he was shamefully impudent. Martin McCue, the injured man, states positively that the chain was not up. The inquest will be resumed to-morrow morning.

Toronto, Ont., March 30. A despatch from Ottawa states that Louis Riel, the Red River rebel who was elected to the House of Commons, a short time ago, was sworn in this morning, and will probably take his seat in the House. The excitement in Ottawa is intense and trouble is feared. Later news from Ottawa states that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of Riel, and troops of cavalry and artillery have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness in case of disturbance.

EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS.—A gentleman of an inquiring mind went to hear an "inspirational speaker" at Boston. The lady oratress professed her willingness to answer any questions that might be propounded to her, saying that the words she wrote came from a "power" above herself. The gentleman disguised his handwriting and asked the same question six times, enclosing the queries in six different envelopes. Six answers were received, so utterly contradictory as to be beyond the power of an ordinary human mind to reconcile. The gentleman thinks the "power" which inspired the replies must have been slightly muddled.

And he prayed again and the heavens gave rain, and the earth brought forth fruit." This is a crusher on the apostle.

CONFERENCE.—The Delaware Dist. A. C. Conference is hereby called to meet, and hold its annual session at the Advent Christian Hall, corner of Ninth and Spring Garden Streets, Phil., Pa., commencing Thursday morning, April 9th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. The morning meetings will be for the transaction of business; the afternoon and evening, for preaching and other devotional exercises.

This is our annual meeting to hear the reports of all our preachers, officers, committees, and delegates for the last year;—the progress, spread, and triumph of Bible truth, by the word of mouth, by the aid of religious papers, tracts, and pamphlets, and by every other gospel means; to learn by reports the amount of monies received and paid out, for the purchase and distribution of publications. All the officers for the year ensuing will be chosen at this session.

This Conference embraces the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and Eastern Penn. It is earnestly hoped that every church sympathizing with us will be represented either by letter or delegates. Every church or religious body co-operating with this Conference is entitled to one delegate, and an additional delegate for every ten members. All letters of correspondence for the Conference can be addressed to Edwin King, 1716 Francis Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

H. K. FLAGG, President.
EDWIN KING, Secretary.

KANSAS CONFERENCE.—The Annual Session of the Advent Christian Conference of Kansas will be held, the Lord willing, at Melvern, Osage Co., Kan., commencing Friday, May 15th, 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Lord's day, or as long as the brethren may determine.

Those coming by rail from the North will stop at Arvonia Station, and those from the South at Burlington, where teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground where the Mission Tent will be pitched, if they write to Eld. J. C. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co., Kan., in time. Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 18th of April, 1874 (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary, care of Eld. Smith as above, or sent with the delegates. Let all who "wait for the Lord" and are "looking for that blessed hope" lay aside their secular affairs, and join with the "children of God" in their yearly feast of fat things. By order of the Directors,

AMOS SANFORD, Secretary.

CONFERENCE.—The next session of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held with the church at South Windsor, commencing Wednesday evening, April 15th, and continue over the following Sunday. The church desire a good representation at this meeting. Our last Conference at Yalesville has left a good influence on the church and community, and we hope by the blessing of God that this one may be the means of encouraging and strengthening the church, and arousing the unconverted to a sense of their danger. Those coming by Rail Road will stop at Burnside Station on the H. P. and F. R. R. Inquire for Bro. Henry Hart, who will give all necessary directions.

G. L. WHITE, Secretary.

HAVING decided to close my labors with the church in Biddeford, Me., the last Sunday in April, I shall move to Exeter, N. H., and my health being somewhat impaired, I shall not accept any pastoral charge at present. My physician says it will not do for me to labor as constantly as heretofore; but I shall endeavor, by the help of the Lord, to travel and preach some, therefore those who desire my labors can write me at Biddeford, Me., until the last of April; after that date at Exeter, N. H., Lock Box 945.

WM. C. STEWART.

WILL every minister and church belonging to the R. I. and East Conn. Christian Advent Conference please send immediately their addresses, and date of becoming members of the Conference? If church, send when organized, and present number of members to N. A. ANGELL, Conf. Clerk, North Scituate, R. I.

I WOULD say to the Advent brethren and friends that it is my desire to employ my whole time in the gospel field, and any church or society wishing my services, can write me at Fredonia, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. C. W. LOW

HAVING made arrangements with the church at Franklin to be with them the second Sunday of each month, please appoint so as not to conflict,

G. H. WALLACE.

TO THE READERS OF THE CRISIS.—Brethren and sisters and friends, we are publishing two pamphlets to aid our mission tent enterprise, viz., "A Concise History of the Faith of the Primitive Christian Fathers," and "The Tree of Life," by C. F. Sweet, also his Colloquy with Dr. A. Campbell on Everlasting Punishment. As we go into new fields with our tent, we need just such works to answer certain inquiries, and silence objections; and while we expect to keep a supply of other books on hand, we can get none to fill the place of these. They will be printed by the 1st of May, 1874, but times are hard, money is scarce, and we are poor. We ask, therefore, all that can and will to send us $1.00 (or more if they will), to aid us in this enterprise, and we will send, as soon as printed, six of our pamphlets, three of each (the Colloquy and Tree of Life being bound as one) for each $1.00 received. If by this means we can receive $100.00, or thereabouts, by the first of May, we can pay for printing, and go into the regions beyond with our tent unencumbered by debt. Who will invest $1.00 to send the gospel to the poor and blind?

The two pamphlets contain about 150 pages, and will retail for not less than two cents each. They are free to the Lord's honest poor. Send for some. Address C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y.; J. T. Ongley, Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.; or Wm. H. Spencer, Rochester, N. Y.

C. F. SWEET and J. T. ONGLEY.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL."

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

THE PRAYER AND THE LIFE.

Do I mean the prayer I offer,
Do I feel the words I say,
When before our heavenly Father,
I kneel down from day to day;
When at morning and at evening
I incline to seek his face,
And my voice goes up in pleading
To his glorious throne of grace?

When my voice goes up in pleading,
Does my heart go with it too?
There are many things I ask him,
That his might and grace may do;
Petition on petition
Goes up to meet his ear;
Oh, are they such petitions
As our Father loves to hear?

I tell him of my wants—my needs;
But when I turn away
Do I think of what I asked for?
Do I watch as well as pray?
Do I strive against temptation?
Do I seek like Christ to live?
Do I use aright the blessings
That so freely he doth give?

My prayers are with much speaking,—
Yet, when I leave the spot
How quickly are its memories fled;
How soon those prayers forgot!
Oh, if the thought that gave them birth
So lightly treasured be,
How can I think God's mercy
Will remember them for me?

Yet one petition further, Lord!
Wilt thou not deign to hear?
O, let my spirit breathe anew
Through all my daily prayer;
Then help me, as I pray, to live,
Kept by thy grace divine,
And the glory of the prayer and life,
Alike, O Lord, be thine.

GREAT MOVE AGAINST THE ROMISH SEE IN AUSTRIA.

W. KELLAWAY.

The Papacy bears distressing news from Austria this week: yes, from Austria! that most "pious" and "Catholic" of nations. Well may the ears of the presumptive lord of the Vatican tingle as he hears of the new check he has received in Austria. It is becoming apparent that his word is being treated as the prattle of a child; and soon every body will cease to take notice of the fancies and delirious ravings of the harmless old man who is master of—simply a house at Rome.

Hear the news. On Saturday last, March 7th, the lower house of the Austrian Reichsrath resumed the discussion of the Bills settling the future relation between the Church and the State. It was proposed that the debate on these bills should be adjourned, and another member of the house asked that the matter might be referred to a Committee; but both propositions were rejected.

On Monday, the 9th inst., the matter came up for action. Previous, however, to the taking of the vote on the first Bill, an Ultramontane member, Giovanelli, declared that after the passing of the Church Bills the Tyrolese would only serve in war for his God, but never for Austria or for the Emperor! A sensation followed this announcement. But this subsided, and was succeeded by "applause," which "lasted a full minute," when the Premier declared the Government would compel obedience to the laws against ecclesiastics. The first Church Bill was then carried by 224 votes against 71. How was this received by the people? Our telegram reads: "In Parliament and in the the city the greatest enthusiasm prevails."

On Tuesday "the whole constitutional press" commented on the great success against priestly and papal dominance, and said, "the enthusiasm with which the Ministerial speeches were received, and the overwhelming majority of three-fourth of the House, by which the Ecclesiastical Bill was passed, afford most striking proof of the harmony of views existing between the Reichsrath and the Ministry.

Next day (Wednesday) news is sent us from Vienna that a Conference of Austrian Bishops is to take place in a week to consider these "sacreligious" Church Billls, and decide what action they will take in the present state of affairs. They announce their intention of addressing a letter to the Emperor against the Confessional Bills; and their decision to publish pastoral letters to their "flock" on the same subject. Meanwhile they have nothing very encouraging to expect from the Emperor, for he has "sent a congratulatory message to the Minister of Public Worship for his defence of the Confessional Bills in Parliament.

The Daily News remarks: "Times have certainly changed when we find the Austrian Government supported by an overwhelming majority in the Austrian Parliament, proceeding to wage war against priestly interference in social and political matters in a fashion which must satisfy even Protestant Prussia. Not many years ago Austria was looked on as one of the last strongholds of the Roman Catholic religion; and it was expected in many quarters that if Italy got too hot to hold the Pope, his Holiness would retire to Schonbrunn, and the peaceful seclusion of its formal alleys and garden slopes. But these anticipations must have been rudely disturbed by the conduct of Austria towards the Concordat; and now the Ecclesiastical Bills that are before the Reichsrath carry the differences between Vienna and the Vatican to a further stage. It is strange, however, to find how nearly the words uttered in the Austrian Parliament resemble those we have recently heard from Berlin. 'The Government cannot permit,' said the Minister of Public Worship on Monday, 'the abuse of religion for the purpose of intrigues fraught with danger to the State, or allow the servants of God to become the missionaries of an organized opposition to the laws of the country.'

'The attitude of the Austrian Government in this matter is of far-stretching significance. It is possible—we refrain from saying that it is probable—that we are approaching another European war; and in some quarters the wish has scarcely been concealed that that war should be fanned and fed by religious antipathies. When one thinks of the hideously destructive and protracted wars that have devastated Europe in the name of religion, one naturally and anxiously turns to see whether any great coalitions of States are possible on this basis; and it is comforting to find that, whatever cause may be found for the declaration of hostilities, it is not likely to arise from theological differences, which are never healed. In plain English, there are no two countries on the Continent likely to take the field on behalf of the Pope. Germany is in declared antagonism; Russia has no sympathy with Roman Catholicism; Italy does not look lovingly on the prisoner of the Vatican; Spain is not yet in the hands of the Bourbons; and Austria is engaged in passing these Ecclesiastical Bills. On this score, at any rate, the outlook is peaceful."

We think we like the old historical counterpart and interpretation of prophecy, better than all the new-fangled theories, which are continually exploding and failing at the very time when their success is looked for.

The Papacy and Roman Catholicism combined, are doomed from the mouth of the Lord of Hosts; and it is solemn to see wave after wave roll over the drowning antichrist! God knows when the last gurgle of his overwhelmed enemy shall finish its hard-departing life.

WILL THERE BE A RELIGIOUS WAR IN EUROPE?

The complications in the politics of Europe are becoming very grave. France, burning to avenge her humiliation, seeks for the aid of the church. The church has been humbled with her by the destruction of the temporal power of the Papacy. It is natural for the two to join hands, and they have joined hands already.

The pilgrimages of Frenchmen to sacred shrines have a political as well as a religious meaning; Rome and France are inseparably connected in their devotions. But the France thus bound to Rome, is France with a republic destroyed and a monarchy restored. The religious revival means a political reaction. Already French pilgrims have appealed to the Pope to direct them in the path traced by the Syllabus. France seems inclined to turn her back on her history since 1830, and to assume, under a Bourbon monarch, the championship of the church.

The taking of such a position by France implies the taking of a position equally grave by Italy. The Pope and Italian king are irreconcilable. Assured by the moral support of the faithful, and by the abundant contributions poured into his treasury, Pius becomes daily more defiant. Excommunication of the king and his ministry follows upon excommunication. In every brief or allocution, the Pope pours out the story of his griefs. He studies to keep up the irritation between the government and himself, and succeeds. There can not forever be two hostile powers in the same city. If these cannot be reconciled, one of them must go; that is inevitable. Nor is Germany all this time asleep. Her position is one of watchfulness. The conflict now going on between the empire and the church grows continually more bitter. Bishops defy the law, and are mulcted by the courts; priestly seminaries are closing, but still the church will not yield. The claim of the old catholics to the possession of church benefices must soon come up for adjudication. The parties grapple each other even more closely, and soon the struggle must be one of life or death.

Does all this mean war? If France should be so insane as to restore the Bourbon monarchy, there is no telling what may come. One thing is certain, that if the church stirs up the war that it may recover its lost prestige, it will itself meet a speedy doom. Having then declared its undying hostility to the age, it must take the consequences.—Methodist.

THE TIMES IN WHICH WE LIVE.

A. R. F. WELLS.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come."—2 TIM. 3: 1.

Forewarned is forearmed. To refuse to look at dangers that impend is not courage, but folly and cowardice. "The prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself; but the simple pass on and are punished." He who shuts his eyes and walks off a pier will drown just as surely as if he went into the water, seeing the peril. To borrow trouble about the future is distrusting the providence of God; to rush madly or suffer ourselves to be borne quietly into calamities, against which he has warned us, is wicked presumption.

The greatest dangers are those which peril the final salvation of man. The christian need not fear. You may rob him of his gold and silver, but these are not his treasures; you may torture him, but this does not disturb his peace; you may take his life by the lingering torments of the inquisition, but this will only give him a more glorious recompense at the resurrection of the just. "Fear not," says our Savior, "them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." Any threatened evil which leaves us this side of perdition, should never keep us a moment from the discharge of duty.

"In the last days perilous times shall come." But what makes them perilous? Is it because mighty armies shall be marshalled against each other? Is it because "the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog—the number of whom is as the sand of the sea—shall be gathered to battle?" Rev. 20: 8. Is it because the most terrible engines of destruction shall be employed, and blood shall flow "even unto the horses' bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs?" Rev. 14: 20. Do these elements enter into the calculation of the holy apostle, when he bids "KNOW that in the last days perilous times shall come?" These things, which so ordinarily excite the fears of men, appear to have had but a slight influence in prompting him to sound so faithfully in our ears the notes of warning. The peril, against which he would have us so sedulously guard, does not seem to arise from the clash of contending armies, or from the the weakness or instability of human governments, nor from the persecutions of religious bigotry, intensely inflamed, or from any physical torments to which we may be exposed; but from the danger we shall be in, from the influence around us, of losing our souls! The times are "perilous," because, unless we offer a stout and constant resistance, the prevailing currents will sweep us on to destruction. The gales which many court as so propitious, and which waft so smoothly a gay and laughing throng, as they suppose to the heavenly haven, will, unless we make head against them, inevitably dash us upon the unseen rocks of dark damnation, and drown us in destruction and perdition.

The perilous times arise from THE PREVALENCE OF FORMALISM,—from the influence of those who have the form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. Against the influence of false doctrine, the church may be always upon her guard. As in times of war, there are always soldiers who love the bloody fray for the excitement afforded, and the glory promised, so there are always religious knight-errants, who delight in nothing more than a fierce logomachy—a war of words.

The church has never more apologists and defenders ready to do battle for truth, with pen and tongue, than when she has fewest saints to illustrate the purity of her doctrines, by humility of spirit and godliness of life. The first apostolic church that fell, was still in her fallen condition, so orthodox in doctrine, that she "could not bear them which were evil, and had tried them which said they were apostles and were not, and had found them liars." Rev. 2: 2.

At the present time, the churches are most tolerant in respect to the lives of their members, and most exacting in their respect to opinions. A zealous, paying adherent is tolerated in almost any irregularity that does not conflict with the current morality, but woe to him, however fervent in piety, who should venture the opinion that grace can do more for him than is expressed in the acknowledged formulas of the church. He will be a hopeful candidate for the highest ecclesiastical anathemas that the civil law will permit to be inflicted.

The dangers arising from fanaticism are comparatively trifling. The heavenly fire could burn Moses' bush without consuming it, but the false fires of religious frenzy soon exhaust themselves from the destruction of the materials upon which they feed. Temptations, that present an attractive appearance under the garb of sanctity, are doubly dangerous. The forbidden fruit, the taste of which brought death into the world, "was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise." Formalism exhibits itself to the eyes of the beholder in the most bewitching guise. The study is how to make religion so attractive to the natural man that he will be beguiled into the church without any supernatural influence, such as struck down on his way to Damascus, the fiery persecutor. Nothing is omitted that can dazzle the intellect, soothe the senses, or captivate the imagination. Architectural beauty and grandeur, the fine-spun theories of metaphysics, the precise statements of logic, the flowers of rhetoric, the charms of poetry, enticing strains of music, social mirth and festivity, fairs and lotteries, the splendors of fashion, and the honors of genteel society—all that wealth can purchase or ingenuity devise are resorted to in order to induce the votaries of worldliness to take upon them the responsibilities of a religious profession. "They profess that they know God, but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate." Tit. 1: 16.

Formalism is dangerous because it is contagious. The most healthy cannot long associate with the dead without becoming themselves exposed to death. The strongest christian that ever obtained mercy of the Lord, cannot long affiliate with the carnal and worldly-minded professor, without a loss of spirituality. The miasma of the marsh is invisible and intangible; the nicest chemical tests fail to detect any difference between it and the pure mountain air; yet wherever it flies, death rides upon its poisoned wings. So from the lowlands of religious experience there emanates a subtle influence which carries death to vital godliness wherever it goes. Associate with formalists, in seeming fellowship, and you will become formal. You will drink in the spirit that prevails around you. The apostle Peter, strong as he was, and the holy Barnabas had not power always to withstand the influence of formalists, but on one occasion at least were "carried away with their dissimulation," and were sharply reproved by uncompromising Paul.

No class of persons are so difficult to be brought under the dominion of the saving grace of God, as conscientious formalists. It was to them our Savior declared, "Verily, I say unto you, that the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you." Under the labors of the apostles, the worst of characters were saved, idolaters and adulterers, thieves and drunkards "were washed and sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the spirit of our God."

I do not remember of reading in the New Testament of the conversion of but one Pharisee, and that was effected by an overwhelming miracle. Formalism begets self-complacency. He who is thoroughly satisfied with himself is not easily brought to renounce his valued righteousness—the fruit and labor of years, and led to follow Christ in the way of humility, reproaches, self-denials and persecutions.

The Laodiceans were rigid christian formalists. No errors of doctrine had crept in among them, no immoral practices had been indulged or countenanced, their profession was up to the highest requirements of orthodox standards; they said they were "rich, and increased with goods, and had need of nothing." To call in question at the present day the piety of such a church would be considered the extreme of uncharitableness. They were luke-warm professors, respectable in the eyes of men, but objects of loathing to God. "I would," said our Savior, pathetically, "thou wert either cold" (for then you might be brought to repentance) "or hot" (for then you would be safe); but as they were, he evidently almost despaired of their salvation.

To have "the form of godliness and deny the power thereof" is to be in a sure way to destruction. Terrible is the self-deception that many practice upon themselves. "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord." Our offerings upon which so much stress is laid, our contributions to ministers and missions, our long and noisy prayers cannot save us. Without inward and outward righteousness, purity of heart, and holiness of life, mere professions and external observances of forms however excellent will not answer. We must be controlled by a spirit of active obedience. "Not every one" says Jesus, "that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

The extreme danger we are in from formalism may be seen from the directions that the Holy Spirit gives us that we must avoid coming under its influence. "From such turn away." From the example of our Savior, we are authorized to go among publicans and sinners. The openly wicked we must reprove and warn. We may reason with those who oppose the truth, and instruct them in meekness. He who is overtaken in a fault we must endeavor to restore. "The spirits" we may "try whether they be of God." And even Satan himself we need not run from, but we are taught to "resist the devil, and he will flee" from us. But from those who have the form of godliness, but deny the power thereof," we are commanded TO TURN AWAY. We must get out of the reach of their influence as soon as possible. In a precipitate retreat, is our only safety. Parley with them and we become exposed to ruin. Contend and we are overcome.

We ask, are not these "perilous times," spoken of by Paul upon us? Do you know your danger? If not, then is your peril most imminent. You sleep as do others. The soft influences that sooth to destroy are prevailing against you. A most determined and vigorous effort is demanded. Your case admits of no delay. If your prayers are cold and formal, composed of stereotyped phrases and expressions repeated until they have lost all meaning; if they are studied productions of the intellect rather than the warm effusions of the heart, do not think to make any compensation for their dryness by their frequency. No increase of speed can take you along any faster while you remain in this treadmill. You need the Holy Spirit. Here is your lack. Without you attain this, you will remain essentially the same, going over the same round of ceremonies without any benefit other than the satisfaction afforded by the indulgence of a habit good enough of itself, but possessing no saving character. You must begin anew. You must have the power of godliness, or you are undone forever. Rest no longer in forms. Arouse thee in earnest. Say not, "I am as safe as others." Their damnation will not help you. You must live or die for yourself.

HE DIED TO LIGHT ME HOME.

MARY V. SALTMARSH.

Far from my Father's peaceful home my feet did stray,
O'er sins wild mountains long I wandered; oft the way
Was rough and steep and hard, the night was dark, the storm
Beat fiercely: how I longed to hail the bright approach of morn,
Thinking I might retrace my steps, and reach the home
For which I sighed, from whence my feet would never roam.
But no. The night was dark, and darker still it grew;
The howling winds around me hard and harder blew.
All bewildered then I stopped, thinking I must die.
Suddenly I heard a voice, it seemed some one was nigh;
The tone was sweet. I listened. It said to me,
"Turn, turn thy wayward feet, there's light for thee."
I turned—a light was shining brightly all around:
And O! when once my eyes had looked upon the ground,
I saw the dangerous place on which my feet did stand,
The terrors of the pits and snares all o'er the land.
O, then I hurried from the spot, the light still shone,
And in the distance I saw my Father's home.
Amid the dangers then my feet could safely tread,
For that strange light gleamed brightly. Then I said:
What is this light? Who kindly holds it out to me?
A voice—the voice I heard before—answered softly, "He."
"Come, nearer, child, and you shall see what means this light."
And soon I reached a place where rose before my sight
A cross of dazzling brightness, a cross uplifted high,
My soul was filled with wonder as to it I drew nigh.
I passed—my heart forgot its sorrows, for to my ear
There came sweet whispers full of love; and O, to hear
The touching story of that cross as was made known!
My heart was praising him who so much love had shown,
For 'twas through love that cross had been erected there.
"A friend," that voice said sweetly, "saw thee where
Were dangers thick surrounding, and he knew thy fears,
He heard thy groans, and saw thy falling tears.
His heart was filled with love and pity, for he knew
No one could save, no ray of light was there for you:
And quickly from his home he came, bringing with him
The brightest light of heaven to cheer earth's valley dim.
And though he came with light from death to rescue thee,
It cost his precious life, but this he gave most free."
In love and penitence I knelt before that cross,
Thinking how for my gain that friend had suffered loss.
And while I wept those tears of gratitude, before me Stood a heavenly form and said, "Behold, I'm He
Who once was dead, but now I live forevermore.
I died to light the path to the celestial shore,
To guide thy feet along the dark and gloomy road,
And bring thee to thy Father's blest abode.
Walk in the path where shines this light, and soon you'll stand
Within the gates, immortal in that heavenly land."
And now I'm walking in the light, it shines more bright,
More clear, and just before is gleaming on my sight
The splendor of the golden shore, and angels wait
With joy to welcome me at yonder shining gate.
A crown of life my Savior holds within his hand,
Which he will give me when I reach the heavenly strand.
I almost hear celestial hosts as glad they sing
Loud praise to him who is their glorious King.
And when I reach that world, with seraphs round the throne,
I'll stand, and ever sing, He died to light me home.

DIGGING UP THE OLD WORLD.

We are making great progress in these days in our acquaintance with antiquity. People have been recovered to our knowledge whose histories a century ago was an entire blank to us. The restoration at Pompeii and Herculaneum have been a more vivid revelation of the home life of the Romans than could ever have been gained from books. We have learned almost as much of the Egyptians. Great discoveries are now being made among the relics of the Assyrians and Babylonians. The school histories used to record that the names of most of the rulers of these nations were unknown, and spoke of the knowledge of what they did as utterly lost. The sites of their cities were disputed points. Now, the list of Assyrian kings is made out; that of the Babylonain kings nearly so. Many of their records have been discovered, and the process of discovery is still going on, while Assyriology has become a recognized study. Mr. Smith has found in the clay tablets of Nineveh most valuable illustrations of biblical history, and has procured treasures in this year's excavations which promise to give new stores of knowledge.

The explorations going on at the present time in Palestine and the adjacent countries are throwing floods of light upon hitherto difficult problems connected with the sacred records. There is on exhibition in this city a collection of relics from the Isle of Cyprus, of articles left there by a people who were "ancients" to the ancient Greeks, and had been lost to sight and almost to memory nearly four thousand years, when Mr. De Cesnola dug up their buried goods. We may some day have their history. We have already noticed quite fully the excavations of Mr. Wood at Ephesus, including the recovery of the great Temple of Diana, and the explorations of Mr. Schliemann on the plains of Troy. The latter gentleman has recovered treasures of great variety and interest, the meaning and value of which have not been ascertained. Some persons express the belief, after reading Mr. Schliemann's accounts, that not one city only, but two or more cities, which occupied the same spot at different epochs, have been dug up. Much may be anticipated from the excavations which Mr. Schliemann expects to make at Mycenæ and Argos, those most ancient cities of Greece. Several important works are going on in the city of Rome for the recovery of ancient temples and works of art.

Investigators everywhere, especially in Europe and America, are actively engaged in studying the antiquities of the "prehistoric" races, or of primitive savage men. Although most of their deductions from their researches are as yet only conjecture, something substantial will eventually be learned from them regarding the earliest condition and history of man.—Methodist.

MY EXPERIENCE.

LEVI BIRD.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Those that are interested in the salvation of sinners will read this with some interest. I was one night last summer walking past the Advent meeting-house, and as I was passing I heard a peculiar noise coming from within. I stood a little while and listened, and at intervals this curious sound could be heard. It sounded to me something like the bark of a dog. There was a man standing by, and I said to him, "Whatever in the world is that noise in there?" He laughingly replied that they were "Adventists, having a prayer-meeting." "Well," said I, "I don't see what on earth they should make that noise for." I thought at that time there was no need of shouting in a meeting-house to serve God. With that I passed on, thinking what curious people they were, and what fanatics. The next morning I went to my work, as usual, at the mill in Portsmouth, called the Kearsarge Mills. I was in the habit of going, now and then, to the blacksmith's close by, in connection with the mill. I had this morning occasion to go in. The blacksmith was himself an Adventist, though I did not know it, and there was also another man in the shop. So I began to tell them of this meeting house, and what awful noises I had heard, and what I thought about it. After I had got through with my long tirade about the noise, the blacksmith quite calmly and good-naturedly gave me to understand what the noise was. He said he was there, and the man who shouted so loud felt good, and that the Spirit of God had caused these strong emotions and loud noise. "But after all," I replied, "I don't see what use there was in shouting like that in a meeting." Now, thank God, I am ready and willing to shout out, Amen! Bless God! and exhort all the faithful to praise his name with a loud voice, as king David did. Little did I think that at that very place I should be baptized, become a partaker of the blessed promise, and become an heir of everlasting life.

Previous to this I began to think about myself, and made a resolution to give up all smoking and drinking, for I knew I could not serve God and do these things. So one day I determined to rid myself of these temptations. I gathered my pipes, tobacco, cigars, songs and song books, play books, and all the worthless literature and trash I had, and consigned them to the flames. Then I went to my room, knelt down, and offered myself to Christ, and begged, as the publican did, "Lord, be merciful to me a sinner." Then, how free I felt. How sweet was that hour. I then began to look about me to find a home. I went to several meetings, and at last to the Methodist. I had almost resolved to become a member. I asked them if they believed in the second coming of our dear Master. Some did, and others did not. I was not satisfied with that, so I turned my attention to the Adventists; and it came about in this way. The brother that I spoke to about the noise, got into a friendly discussion with me about these matters. He had invited me to witness a baptism, as I had not been to one in my life. So one beautiful Sabbath morning I went to see this ordinance administered. There was a young girl going to be baptized. The preacher opened by singing "Happy day"; and indeed it was a happy day to me, for I felt convinced that there was no other way to follow the example of our dear Redeemer, and the very next Sunday (Nov. 9th, 1873), I was baptized by Bro. Smith. Now I am rejoicing in God my Savior, for he hath made me heir of salvation. Now I earnestly request all not to be afraid to praise God with a loud voice, but be faithful and obedient, for you know not what results may follow.

I have now no desire for those things I have abandoned, but an earnest desire for the Word of God. How many people there are still holding on to these pernicious habits. Clear them out as I did, and ask God to help you, and he will. Dear ones that are undecided, decide now, just now, and all will be well.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Western Division of the N. Y. State Conference met pursuant to notice with the Springwater Church, Friday evening, March 6th 1874. Conference convened for the transaction of business on Saturday at 10.30 A. M. Bro. W. J. Hobbs, President, in the chair. Prayer by Bro. R. H. Bateman. In the absence of the Secretary, Bro. A. P. Moore, Bro. R. H. Bateman, was chosen Secretary pro tem.

Devotional Committee, Brn. Halbridge, Morris, Withington, and Smith.

Owing to the short time given by the notice, the Conference was not fully represented from the various churches, and also on account of the illness of some of the brethren. There being no special business before the Conference, remarks were made by different brethren as regards the best ways and means for the promotion and advancement of the cause of Christ amongst us,—to prepare a people for the soon coming of the Lord. Adjourned to meet at the close of the afternoon service.

Conference met again pursuant to adjournment at four P. M. Bro. Hobbs in the chair. Some of the reports from the delegates of the various churches were cheering, while some others were not of as high a tone as might be desired.

Quarterly collections. East Shelby church sent in $4.00; the Dansville church $3.00.

Religious services were well attended, and the spirit of the Lord was with us in power. Adjourned to meet at the annual Conference. R. H. BATEMAN, Sec. pro tem.

ANTICIPATION.

MRS. CURRY.

There is a bliss to be enjoyed
By sinners saved through Jesus' grace;
A happiness all unalloyed,
Of meeting Jesus face to face.

To hear him speak, to be with him,
Oh joy divine! oh rapturous thought!
Worthy of songs of seraphim,
Yet sung by souls that Jesus bought.

And now that blissful hour draws nigh,
Soon shall we hear the Bridegroom's cry;
Soon shall the trump of God resound,
From shore to shore the world around.

HOME AND HEALTH.

RELATIONS OF WHISKY TO LABOR.

According to the internal revenue returns, the annual production of spirits from grain in the United States is over one hundred millions of gallons. At seventy drinks to the gallon this would furnish seven thousand millions of drinks. Divide this by forty millions, and you have an average of one hundred and seventy-five drinks per annum for each man, woman and child in the country. At an average price of five cents a drink this beverage costs the consumer $350,000,000, to say nothing of the increase of quantity (about twenty-five per cent.) by reducing in the process of compounding it. This article yields a revenue of $70,000,000 to the Government. It kills sixty thousand drunkards every year. These sixty thousand men, estimating their labor at $1 net per day each, takes from the wealth-producing labor of the country $18,000,000.

To produce this annual death crop requires an army of habitual drunkards, amounting to six hundred thousand men, as only ten per cent. of our drunkards die annually. Suppose this army engaged in preparing the death crop makes half time at labor, which is a high estimate, and the country loses by them $90,000,000 more of the wealth-producing labor of the country. Here is $108,000,000 dead loss. If we add to this the cost of the grain consumed in the manufacture of the spirits, and which may be considered worse than wasted, especially the portion that is not made into alcohol for manufacturing and medicinal purposes, and which amounts to about twenty millions of bushels, worth an average of at least $1 per bushel to the bread consumers, it will be seen that we have one hundred and twenty-eight millions of charges against the whisky trade.

But this is not all. We have already seen that the conversion of this large amount of breadstuffs into spirits costs the consumer at least two hundred and fifty millions, after it is put upon the market at one dollar a gallon, and before he drinks it over the bar. Here is a gross profit of two hundred and fifty per cent. upon an article universally admitted to be a damage to the interests of labor. If such a profit were taxed upon the staff of life, the whole community would rise in a burst of indignation which nothing could withstand. Bread riots, such as were never known in the history of England, France or the world, would be the immediate result. This article might easily stand an increased tax of one hundred per cent. without additional cost to the consumer.

The best authorities agree in admitting that seven-eighths of the crime, vagrancy and pauperism in this country may be traced directly to the use of spirits as a beverage. If this be true, then there must be charged up to the debit of the account, seven-eighths of the cost of building and maintaining our prisons, criminal courts, almshouses, houses of correction, county jails and orphan asylums. Calling these expenditures one hundred millions per annum, we have now a grand total annual debit chargeable to the whisky trade of five hundred and seventy-eight millions of dollars. If this view of the subject be correct, it is submitted that there should be no surprise exhibited at the crusade of the wives and daughters of the laborers of the west against this traffic.

This is a tax in double the amount of the expenses of the General Government, freely and voluntarily paid by the people of the United States in gratification of an acquired appetite. Is it not a little remarkable that more attention is not given to it by our political economists? The Granger movement has been organized to save an estimated annual unnecessary expenditure of one hundred millions in freights. This charge of seven hundred and fifty millions passes unnoticed. The politicians, both in and out of Congress, are endeavoring to give most respectful heed to the demonstrations of the Grangers. They are afraid to increase taxation by a single cent. They are devising ways and means to increase the tax-paying capacity of the country, and adding to the gross revenue without augmenting the rates. And yet, here is a constant sinking of the aggregated wealth of the nation by hundreds of millions annually through one single avenue, one line of traffic which does not appear to receive a passing thought. Such is the force of habit.—National Republican.

TO PUT AWAY FAULTS.

One day I was watching a great Newfoundland dog. He had been told by his master to fetch him a basket of tools that the gardener had left in the shed. The great dog went to obey his young master. He took hold of the basket with his mouth, but he could not lift it. What did he do? Give it up? No, never! One by one he took the things out of the basket and carried them to his master.

One by one! That is what we must try to do with our faults. Try and get rid of them one by one. Jesus knows how hard it is for you to do this, and so he has given you a word that will help you to do it, and that word is "To-day."

I will show you how. Take one fault—we will call it bad temper—and in the morning, when you get out of bed, ask God for Christ's sake to help you "to-day" to overcome that bad temper. Perhaps by and by something will begin to make you feel angry; then remember your prayer, and try and drive away the angry feeling, and say, "Not to-day."

If you have learned any bad, wicked words, like some poor children in the street who do not know any better, then ask God for Christ's sake to help you to-day; then, when you are tempted to do so, remember, Not to-day; I will not say wicked words to-day."

And do the same with all your faults. Take them one by one, and try for one whole day not to give way to them. It will come easier then.—Guiding Star.

A WORD TO MOTHERS.

Consider it your religious duty to take out door exercises without fail each day. Sweeping and trotting around the house will not take its place; the exhilaration of the open air and change of scene are absolutely necessary. Oh, I know all about Lucy's gown that is not finished, and Tommy's jacket and buttonless coat—thrown into your lap, as if to add the last ounce to the camel's back, still I say, up, and out. Is it not more important that your children in their tender years should not be left motherless, and that they should not be born to that feeble constitution of body which will blight every blessing? Let buttons and strings go. You will take hold of them with more vigor and patience when you return, bright and refreshed; and if every stitch is not finished at such a moment—and it is discouraging not to be able to sympathize in your best effort—still remember that "she who hath done what she could" is entitled to no mean praise. Your husband is undoubtedly the best of men, though there are malicious people who might answer that that was not saying much for him. Still, he would never, to the end of time, dream of what you are dying of. So accept my advice and take the matter in hand yourself.—Dr. Dio Lewis.

"BETTER TAKE A SHEEP TOO."

A valued friend and able farmer, about the time the temperance reform was beginning to exert a healthful influence, said to his newly-hired man:

"Jonathan, I did not think to mention to to you when I hired you, that I shall try to have my work done this year without rum. How much must I give you to do without?"

"Oh," said Jonathan, "I don't care much about it; you may give me what you please."

"Well," said the farmer, "I will give you a sheep in the fall if you do without rum."

"Agreed."

"Father, will you give me a sheep, too, if I do without rum?" then asked the elder son.

"Yes, you shall have a sheep if you do without."

The youngest son then said: "Father, will you give me a sheep if I will do without."

"Yes, Chandler, you shall have a sheep also."

Presently Chandler speaks again: "Father, hadn't you better take a sheep, too?"

The farmer shook his head; he hardly thought that he could give up the stimulant, but the appeal came from a source not easily to be disregarded; and the result was, the demon rum was thenceforth banished from the premises, to the great joy and ultimate happiness of all concerned.

CHANGE OF CLOTHING.—It would be a great deal better to wear the entire winter suits through March, and even to the middle of April; and even then, until the first week in May, to make no change in the outer clothing, nor any in the inner garments, except in a less heavy woolen next to the skin; for it is only for the three hours embracing one o'clock in the afternoon that winter clothing is at all oppressive; while the very warmth of noonday makes the raw dampness of the morning and the late afternoon specially felt. All changes to lighter or cooler garments should be made at dressing in the morning; and if in any case the change leaves the body chilly, or if, soon after it is made, the weather changes to much cooler, by all means promptly, without half an hour's delay, resume the full winter dress. The old, the young, the invalid,—in short, all persons of feeble constitutions, of small vitality, should be especially careful to heed these suggestions.—Hall's Journal of Health.

GRAPES AS FOOD.—Men can live and work on grapes and bread. The peassantry of France, Spain, and Italy make many a satisfying meal in this way; and of the wholesomeness of the diet there can be no doubt. Medical men constantly recommend the use of grapes for their patients. Scarcely any plant can equal the vine as regards the beauty of its leaves and fruit. As a covering for bare walls and for affording shelter, it is a climber of the first rank. To sit under one's own vine, has in all ages been considered the acme of rural happiness—an emblem of peace, a symbol of plenty, and a picture of contentment. That pleasure, though perhaps not in all its fulness, may become the heritage of thousands in these temperate climes. Neither our latitude, longitude, nor leaden skies, nor erratic climate, forbid the growth of the grape-vine throughout the larger portion of the kingdom.—Health Reformer.

"WHO LOVED ME."

Three little sunbeams gilding all I see.
Three little chords, each full of melody.
Three little leaves, balm for my agony.

"WHO."

He loved me, the Father's only Son.
He gave himself, the precious, spotless One.
He shed his blood, and thus the work was done.

"LOVED."

He loved, not merely pitied. Here I rest.
Sorrow may come—I to his heart am pressed.
What should I fear while sheltered on his breast?

"ME."

Wonder of wonders, Jesus loved me—
A wretch—lost—ruined—sunk in misery.
He sought me—found me—raised me—set me free!

My soul, the order of the words approve:
Christ first—me last—nothing between but love.
Lord, keep me always down: Thyself, above!

Trusting to thee, not struggling restlessly,
So shall I daily gain the victory.
I—"yet not I, but Christ"—"who loved me!"

WATCHING FOR CHRIST'S COMING.

Being part of a recent address by Lord Polwarth, of Edinburgh.

A traveler was riding at early dawn of a cold spring morning across a wild Scotch moor. No living thing was visible, save the wild bird starting from the heather or the mossy swamp. Suddenly his ear caught the tender bleat of a lamb—sharp, clear, and intensely plaintive. Yet not a creature could be seen. A few steps more, and in a wet ditch he saw a mountain lamb all wet and shivering. Startled by the result of its own cry, at first it would have fled, but then drew near, as if conscious of its helpless, lost condition. The traveler, followed by his faithful horse, climbed down, lifted it up, and drying it with the long grass and heather, bore it in his arms. What heart could resist the claims of the helpless one? Certainly not the heart of a christian, who remembers that God careth for the least of his creatures. Wondering what to do with it, he went on, till, at some distance beneath a clump of fir trees, he saw the rest of the flock. There were many sheep browsing there, many skipping lambs, but where was the lambless mother? Yon must be her, gazing with all the keenness of her bright wild eye. The lamb was placed on the ground, and the traveler drew back to see her dart to her offspring, and watch her mother's gladness. Oh! joy of joys in restoration.

But how much more intense is the yearning of the heart of Christ over the lost and wandering. Jesus loves to restore. He came to seek and to save the lost—to bring the wandering nigh to God.

Behold upon the cross the Son of God making one all-sufficient sacrifice for sin. His death-cry declared it finished. And look from the cross to the throne. Yonder, at the right hand of the Father, sits he, who, having expiated our guilt, lives now to give repentance and remission of sins. Oh, how ready he is to welcome each weary wanderer that flees to him for refuge.

A company of eager hearers were once listening to a speaker, who dwelt on those words in the 4th chapter of John, descriptive of the Saviour, wearied with the journey sitting at the mouth of Jacob's well, yet not too weary to give rest to the sin-laden one who came thither. At the close of the meeting a poor woman paused, and holding out her hand to him, said, "I just wanted to tell you I have found Christ."

But a few days passed, and she was found dead in bed, with her Bible lying open on the table. She had supped on the words of Jesus, had lain down to rest, to wake up in his presence. She had gone to rest from all the world's weariness, her body to repose till Jesus wakes it at some future day. It was a brief biography—"I wanted to tell you that I had found Jesus."

Reader, can you, like that poor woman, say "I have found Christ?" Oh, the joy of the heart that has found him!—present peace, unmistakable rest and happiness. We read of one who went and sold all that he had for joy that he had found a better treasure. One there was—Saul of Tarsus—who in the ardour of his religious zeal, in the devotion of his energies, and in the blamelessness of his conduct, according to his religion, could not be surpassed. His fellow-men were proud of him, his own heart found satisfaction in his integrity and fervour, but only for a time, for he got such a sight of the superlative excellency of the righteousness of Christ that thenceforward he counted all that had been gain to him in the past but loss. So dazzling was the splendor of that robe, that he cast away his own that he might win Christ and be found in him, not having his own righteousness which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ; the righteousness which is of God by faith. Thenceforth his wish was to win Christ—not merely to have his righteousness imputed to him; that he had the moment he trusted Jesus; in that alone, as the only righteousness sufficient to meet the claims of the holy law, he gloried. In him he stood complete. But the blessing was not exhausted. His whole heart longed to win, or, as it is also expressed, apprehend Christ. Paul knew that in Jesus all fulness dwells—that, in the loving purpose of God, every want of the sinner had been taken into account, and fully as well as freely provided for. Whether it were forgiveness, reconciliation, peace, restoration, deliverance from the power of sin, entire satisfaction of heart, no matter what, in Christ all fulness dwells. There are some even of those who trust Jesus who are often weary for lack of trusting more. They would indeed say, for lack of doing better, and living better, but they forget that the life of holiness, of beneficence, and usefulness must flag whenever the root of faith fails. The connection between works and faith is so close that the one discovers, O how quickly, the state of the other. Where the fruit vanishes, withers, languishes, there is but too sure evidence that the root is failing.

The heart that knows best its own corruption and emptiness, and that looks away from self to him in whom all fulness dwells, is already rich in him, and, living on him for everything, will abound in inward peace and joy, and in blessing unto others. Once realize that Christ is ours, who shall limit the amount of blessing open to every child of God? Paul's prayer for the Ephesian christians was that God would "grant you according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God." He asked and expected that God would grant them this, and it became them for whom he prayed to be ready and willing to receive so vast a blessing. All that God has given us in Christ Jesus it is our privilege, through the teaching of the Holy Ghost and of the Word, to discover, and, discovering through faith, to appropriate or win.

It will be a step onward if, as restored wanderers, we seek to win, and not only to win, but to work for Christ. How ardently Paul was led to work for Jesus we all know. All the love of that burning heart, all the energy of that resolute spirit, all the strength of that body, all the talents, all the eloquence; everything was laid on the altar, and Paul was manifestly a living sacrifice. For Christ, for precious souls, he never ceased to toil. Whether he were preaching to the multitudes, arguing with sceptics, conversing with individuals, on shore or on sea, a captive or free, an honored teacher writing his epistles, or a lowly workman toiling with his hands for a livelihood, always, and in all things, he served the Lord Jesus.

Fellow-christians! is there no need to work for Jesus now? Are not the fields already white unto the harvest at home and abroad? Workers, oh for workers! is the cry of the mission field. Yonder are the needy multitudes, and, as a converted heathen said, "where there are men, missionaries are bound to go." Where are the missionaries? Is there no response from among the happy freedmen of Christ? Shall soldiers volunteer to go and die for their country, and are not christians ready to go and preach the gospel? There is need for every christian who cannot go abroad to work at home; but shall we not think of his eye of pity resting on the vast harvest-fields of China, Africa, India, Central Asia, Japan, and other fields as he sees them ripe unto the harvest, and shall we not cry to him for laborers? O for men of all classes, and all trades and professions, willing to consecrate their special gifts to his service.

But if the Master call us to work for him, he will come to gather in the fruit of that work. To every worker in his great harvest-field, to every believer, he has given the command—Watch. All that was written in Moses, the law, and the prophets concerning our Lord's first coming we look back on as fulfilled. One by one they came to pass. All he accomplished for us and did while on earth, is now for us matter of precious contemplation. But this word of our Master's, calls every heart to expectation. Over and over again has he told us to watch for his second coming. By direct injunction, by striking parables, by bright prospects, by most solemn warnings, he enjoins us to watch and be ready. No subject is more fully illustrated, no thought more pressed home to our hearts, than the reality, the suddenness, the certainty of our Lord's second coming.

The world slumbers on: men do not, will not, do not wish to realize that he is coming; that any day or hour the cry may arise, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." When they shall say, "Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day shall overtake you as a thief." Believers, ye are called "children of light and children of the day"—that is, those who have been illuminated, and now live and walk in the light of the living God, and just because ye are so, Watch. "Therefore, let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober.

The expectation of Christ's return to the earth is meant to be keen, real, constant; sufficiently so to keep us on the alert, and to prevent us at any time being overcharged with either the cares, the business, or the pleasures of this life.

Our love should be longing for the coming of the Bridegroom. The servants of the great King should be working in expectation of his advent—no talent hidden, no unbelief or distrust of his gracious character freezing up the powers, which should be put forth with grateful, hearty earnestness, that at his coming he may receive his own with blessed increase. What encouragement there is in the prospect of his appearing for every heart, which, sympathizing with Jesus, seeks to minister in lowly actions of love to his tried, suffering saints.

When He comes, not one cup of cold water given in his name will be forgotton by him. Shall not the thought of his appearing stimulate every one of us? The lamps that were growing dim, shall they not be trimmed? The hearts that were growing weary, shall they not revive? The faithful workers will work more earnestly just because they hear the sound of his chariot wheels. A little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

Think of the joy of the Son of God when he shall receive the reward of all his travail, and over the countless assembled multitudes of the redeemed and sanctified, shall rejoice as the Bridegroom over his Bride. The day is drawing nearer in which it shall be said, "The marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. Rev. 19: 7.—Signs of our Times.

TRUTH SOUGHT FOR ON THE 1260, 1290, 1335 DAYS OF DAN. 1, 2.

LET OUR MOTTO BE PROV. 2: 1-9.

It was under the most solemn and impressive oath that the Lord pointed to the particular national event from which to measure, with the 1335 years, to the time when Daniel was to stand in his lot. Now shall we not greatly dishonor God, if we doubt in the least that he will let us know by historic records, or by some means, what that very important event was, and when it transpired, so that we who live in the time of the end may be enabled to measure from it understandingly? Can we for a moment entertain the idea that the Lord has given this time measurement under such wonderful circumstances never to be understood? What a thought! And yet, thus far, we have not a good understanding of this revealed time, and the general complaint of lay members is that our teachers do not agree on time. And on this account the cause is injured, and the good influence of the Lord's authoritative time is measurably lost, and we left in doubt not knowing whose theory to believe.

These things ought not so to be. Think you that the Lord is well pleased with such a condition of things? Has he not truly said that "the wise shall understand?" and did he not give this measurement of time to Daniel for our special benefit? And are there no wise ones among our watchmen who can give us the true time? Not the particular day, or even year in which Jesus will appear, but the year from which to measure, with the 1335 years, to Daniel's allotment. Is it certain that Daniel will obtain his destined lot immediately on the appearing of Jesus, or will not the time that the saints occupy the sea of glass—Isaiah's chambers—intervene between Christ's coming and the allotment of Daniel, and the "blessed" "waiting" ones? (Dan. 12: 12). Have we as earnestly "set" our "face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications" &c., as this important cause requires? (Dan. 9: 3-19). Would it not be well for all who desire to know the truth concerning this interesting time measurement, to follow Daniel's example as above referred to in this case, and pray most fervently, first, that the truth concerning this time may be obtained; and second, that there may be a general agreement among all who publish and proclaim it?

Dear Editors of the Crisis, and associates in its interests, will you please do the very best you can to bring this about? And by the help of the Lord give us as good an understanding as possible of the time when Daniel will stand in his lot.

To our beloved brethren scattered abroad who have light on the subject of time, we would say, Please do not let the influence of this important and perhaps most profitable message from God be entirely lost. Is not this one of the right divisions of the "word of truth," as named by our Editor, for our time? Because we have been disappointed a few times, let not our heart fail; but let us in perfect meekness and submission to the Lord's will, look to him for further help, and carefully search for truth without the least selfish motive or fear of reproach, and present the truth quietly to our Editors, as we understand it, and fully submit the case to them, to correct all they consider incorrect, we making no complaint of them, but rather unite in asking our Heavenly Father to give them wisdom to reject all error, and reserve the important, and appropriate truth only.

We wish not to be understood by the foregoing, that there are none that understand, or that have light on prophetic time, for there is light in some degree, but in our opinion far too little advocated and noticed to accomplish the object designed by the Author and Giver of it. This is the Lord's message to the church and world, to notify us to prepare for the judgment, and will he not hold his servants responsible for its faithful delivery? May he enable every one of his servants that he has called to this work, to faithfully discharge their duty in his fear, is our most earnest prayer.

The "mourning," fasting, and humiliation by Daniel in obtaining this message (Dan. 10) and the great and wonderful work of God's messengers in giving it to him, shows plainly the great importance and necessity of our improving it as God would have us, that is, to his glory and the best good of his church and the world.

Our object in this, is to "stir up the pure mind" of God's dear children "by way of remembrance," and to new activity and engagedness in this good work, that the church may be fully prepared to meet the Lord, and that the world may be faithfully warned once more that the "vision" is about to "speak and not lie." That there is light to be obtained on this subject on which we may all rely with safety, and in which we may all unite and agree, is evident; and if the truth be found, and all rally and sustain it, then there will be a permanent agreement that cannot be broken nor gainsayed by all the world combined. DID CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, MAKE THE WORLD?—No. 1.

J. S. WHITE.

This question can be answered by the testimony of the Lord through the Holy Ghost, only. The first testimony I will notice is in the first chapter of John. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made." "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." vs. 1-3, 14.

If there were nothing more in the Bible on this subject, it would seem that that class of people, who hear Christ gladly, could answer this question at once. There have been persons who have labored hard to show that this statement of John is not to be taken as it reads, or to show that what is plainly on the face of it is not true. They say that the "Word" is to be taken for the purpose or speech, etc., of God. They say that Logos, translated "Word," is never used as the name of a thing. Suppose this to be true, it is used as the name of a person. The "Word," in the text, must mean some person, for it is affirmed that "the Word was GOD." If this means God the Father, then it is the name by which John called him; and if it means Christ, the Son of God, then it is the name by which John called Christ, in the same sense that God's Son was called Jesus.

John says, "This name is called the Word [in the Greek, Logos] of God." Rev. 19: 13. Here we have it positively stated by the same John that Christ's name is "the Word of God"; so that, if logos is not the name of a thing, it is the name of a person, and that person is Christ, the Son of God.

One writer has said that the term "him," in verses 3 and 4, from the Greek autou, or hautou, should not be taken as a personal pronoun in the masculine gender, but as the neuter pronoun "it." The term autou is not in these verses; and hautou is not in the Greek. Autou, in the Greek, does not have the h sound. But suppose it had been autou in these verses; it would not follow that it should be taken for the neuter gender, for it is used in the masculine. This word autou is in verses 12, 21, 25, 29, 31, 32, 33, and in every instance in the masculine gender. Let the reader put it in the place of him in these verses, and he will find himself in the condition of those who put it in the place of him in verses 3 and 4. In ver. 3, the word for "him" is autau, and in ver. 4 it is auto, o long. The difference is because they are in different cases. These words are in the masculine gender.

Our translators did not make such a grammatical blunder, as to put "it" in the place of "him" in verses 3 and 4, having logos for its antecedent, who John says "was God." We might have presented to us the whole Unitarian argument on the first chapter of John, which is only an effort to show that Christ had no pre-existence as a being, and that he was no more than a very good man, through whom God worked while he was in the world. Probably Mr. Abbot, of Cambridge, is as candid a man as there is among that class. He and Mr. Morton, to whom reference has been made, admit that logos is a name which John gave to God, or by which he called God; and that logos was personified, and spoken of as a person. If so, then the pronoun referring to logos should not be in the neuter, but in masculine gender, as it is in vers. 3 and 4 in our version of the Bible. The Unitarians seem to think that if they can set John's definition of logos and the seventh verse in the fifth chapter of his letter one side, the doctrine of the pre-existence of Christ has no foundation to stand upon.

It is a remarkable fact, that when a person undertakes to support a wrong theory from the Bible, his first and great effort is to show that some portions of our version should not be there, and that other portions should be corrected. Prof. Goussen says of some men: "If they do not wish . . . to take God from the Holy Bible, they at least wish to correct God in the Bible. Which of the two is most outrageous it would be difficult to say."

In the tenth verse John says,—"He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not." Should the words "he" and "him" in this verse be put in the neuter and read—it was in the world, and the world was made by it, and the world knew it not? If the word "him" in verses 3 and 4 should read "it," then it should so read in this verse, and so all the way through John.

"And the Word was made flesh." v. 14. Did Jesus' speech or purpose become flesh? Would not the objector rather say that God's speech or purpose produced flesh? But John says, "The Word became flesh." Who was the Word? "The Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God." If John meant by these statements, as some claim, that God in the beginning had speech, or utterance, or purpose, etc., and nothing more, it would be equivalent to saying that in the beginning God was alive. John did not commence his gospel by giving a history of God the Father, but of the Father's Son. He goes back in his history before anything was made. John's theme was the history of God the Father's Son. He tells us by what name he was called. "His name is called, The Word of God."

CHRIST OUR PASSOVER.

M. E. STEELE.

Among all the anniversary seasons, there is one of paramount importance to all nations—the feast of the Passover. Then the Jews commemorate the exodus from Egypt, and the protection of the Hebrews, through the sprinkling of blood on the door posts, from the destroying angel, when the first-born of Egypt were smitten.

In all centuries the christian church has commemorated the salvation of sinners from a worse than Egyptian bondage, through the death of God's first-born, the spotless Lamb. Let us consider the type and the antitype.

The Lord God of Israel had visited many terrible plagues on the Egyptians; still Pharaoh's heart was hardened, that he would not let Israel go. Last of all, God laid his hand heavily on every Egyptian family, from the king on his throne, down to the captive in the dungeon. In every house there was one slain, and all the first-born of cattle. The Hebrews were commanded to take a lamb or kid, a male of the first year, without blemish, to slay it on the fourteenth day of Abib, the first month of their year, and to strike the blood on the lintel and side-posts at the entrance of every dwelling. "And when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you, to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt. And this day will be unto you for a memorial. . . . throughout your generations. Ex. 12: 13, 14. Thus were the Hebrews taught that they, as well as the Egyptians, were sinners, and that their freedom was bought with the price of innocent blood. The lamb was to be roasted and eaten with bitter herbs and unleavened bread, the emblems of penitence and sincerity. But it was impossible that the blood of animals should atone for sin. It typified the blood of the Messiah of whom Moses said, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him shall ye hearken." Deut. 18: 15.

Centuries passed. The Hebrews were settled in the Promised Land,—were repeatedly chastised and carried captive for their sins, and restored on repentance. And still the blood of animals flowed in sacrifice, the voice of prayer ascended to the God of Abraham, the story of the great exodus was read to the people, and told at every fireside, and the prophets still foretold more and more clearly, the character of the Messiah, and the time of his advent, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. Heb. 9: 26. In the fulness of time he came. "God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." Their own wicked hands delivered him to be crucified and slain, on the very day when they ate the paschal lamb, the fourteenth of Abib. A careful comparison of the Old and New Testaments shows the exact fulfillment of the various types and sacrifices in the great Antitype and Sacrifice, Jesus Christ. "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away (like the scape-goat) the sin of the world." According to the christian computation, "Good Friday," the anniversary of our Lord's crucifixion, falls, this year, on the 4th day of April, differing but a few days from the Jewish reckoning.

Let us reverently, humbly, gratefully, meditate on the Lamb slain, the blood shed, the inestimable price paid for our redemption—the "precious blood of Christ." He ate the feast of the passover with his disciples; using wine three times according to custom; and with the third cup, after supper the cup of blessing, he instituted his own memorial supper, to be observed through all time "until he come." This was on the eve of the fourteenth of Abib, the day on which he suffered death, the Jewish day, beginning at sunset. "It is a night to be observed much unto the Lord."

"Christ, our Passover, is sacrificed for us; therefore, let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."

As the bodies of beasts, whose blood was offered in sacrifice, were burned outside the camp, so Jesus suffered outside the gate of Jerusalem, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood. Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.

"Here let our hearts begin to melt,
While we his death record;
And, with our joy for pardoned guilt,
Mourn that we pierced the Lord."

Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died; yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us."

Sinners, hear your Savior in his agony—"My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death!" Is it nothing to you, all ye "that pass by? Behold! see if there be any sorrow like unto his sorrow." I am the good shepherd who giveth his life for the sheep. "Whosoever believeth on him shall have eternal life." "He that believeth not the Son of God, the wrath of God abideth on him." "Except ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man, ye have no life in you." If the blood of the Lamb of God be not sprinkled on you, the destroying angel will cut you down. You are "condemned already." "Behold! he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." He comes to judge the world in righteousness.

"Fly to the Savior! Make the Judge your friend;
Lest, like a lion, his last vengeance tear
Your trembling souls, and no deliverer near!"

"FOLLOW AFTER CHARITY."

Seek after and possess love, and endeavor to show it. This we think will cover the Apostle's meaning.

Is this important? Should we have charity, and should we exemplify it? How can we know that we are christians or show that we are by anything else, or in any other way? How can I know that I have been begotten by the Holy Spirit, but by my love for my brother? And how can I show my brother that I am thus begotten, but by manifesting my love for him? Is it not true that by our love we test ourselves, and are tested by others? If love is the fulfilling of the law, then all the law is fulfilled by love, and in no other way. There may be acts of kindness without love, but the law is not fulfilled in these. The love must be in the heart, or the acts will be hypocritical.

To love is not natural. Love is not of us, but of God. It is easy to hate; it is hard to love—to love those who do not love us—those who treat us unkindly and injure us. Must we not, then, make an effort to love? and must we not by our acts show that we do love? Has it not been our experience in the christian life, that we lack in charity? And have we not failed in this more than in anything else? Have we not many times had to resist the temptation to turn away from and discard those who did not please us, or in whom we saw some fault, error or sin? Have we not found it hard to love like Jesus many who have come in our way? and some, even, with whom we have associated? Have we not, again and again, for some word spoken against us by an individual, been ready to cast him out of our sight, and say, "I will have no more to do with him?" In a word, have we not all been tempted to hate a brother or sister who in some way had fallen below the standard of right, or injured us by word or act? Have we not had to try to "follow after charity" in order to follow Christ in loving the fallen and lost? Then, too, have we not had to do this to show to God and men that our profession was not a false one? And again, have we not ofttimes given others cause to doubt our love to God and men, by our unloving words and unkind acts towards our brother or sister? and also the world? Who will believe us to be christians if we violate the command of God by "speaking evil one of another?" Who will credit our testimony that we are perfect in Christ, when we do not manifest his love toward all men? He that is not perfect in love is not perfect at all. It is in vain that we talk of perfection, if in our hearts we do not love all and forgive all of all things. Christ showed himself to be perfect by his last words: "Father, forgive them." And Stephen, also, showed that he was filled with the Spirit of Christ, and perfect in love, by his dying prayer: "Lay not this sin to their charge."

No one can live without sin until he has "followed after charity" and obtained that love which "thinketh no evil" of his brother, and can "bear all things" from him, and "hope all things" for him. He that loves God will love his brother; not partially, but fully. Not with a show of love and half a heart, but as God loves, will he love. Without dissembling will be his love who loves God.

Our motto now should be—"Like Jesus." And this likeness attained, all our inclinations to hatred, variances, wrath, strife, envyings, will be gone. Like him, and we shall be unselfish, unambitious, unworldly. Like him, and we shall not seek position, authority or to control. Like him, and we shall not desire to lead, guide or direct. Like him, and we shall not seek the praise of each other, nor of the world. Like him, and we shall not want to be conspicuous among our brethren nor in the world. Like him, and we shall not love the world, nor the things that are in the world; nor shall we make merchandise of the Gospel of Christ. Like him, and we shall not sound a trumpet in regard to what we do or say. Like him, and we shall suffer all reproach meekly, and commit all to God for judgment. Like him, and we shall "love with pure hearts fervently," and forgive all as we would be forgiven. Let us "follow after charity." I. I. LESLIE.

WATCH.—Mark 13: 32-37.

Thrice repeated in this passage is the command "to watch." To watch for what? There are those who answer, "For death." There is a sense, indeed, in which we may fulfil this command, by being always stirred up to the faithful use of our time and talents before that night cometh. But this is not what our Lord is talking about in this chapter. He is speaking of great and world-wide events, affecting the future of Jerusalem, and the Gentiles, and all mankind. There is no sense in which he could speak of the rising of nation against nation, or kingdom against kingdom, of the publishing of the gospel among all nations, of the darkening of sun and moon, of the shaking of the powers of the heavens, as precursors of every man's death. To limit this solemn warning to that crisis individual to you and to me, the coming of Christ to receive us at death, is a wicked trifling with the words of him who says, in this connection, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." No, it is of that grand approaching consummation, the return of Jesus from the heavens into which he has gone, that the whole church, that you and I, are commanded to watch and to wait for. And no weakening process or interpretation, which ignores this true and proper intent of the passage, however pious its garb, can excuse any one of us from that solemn duty, nor relieve itself from the sin of handling the word of God deceitfully.

And yet, we grieve to say, a large portion of christians have ceased to take any interest in that event, or to regard the discussion of it as of any very practical importance. While some look forward with proper concern to the hour of death; while they take great interest in the conflict which is going on between the church and the world, and watch and pray for the day of her triumph, they do not watch for the personal return of the Son of man from heaven as Paul tells us the Thessalonians did after they were turned from idols.

And this because they do not see that the coming of Christ is intimately connected with that triumph of his kingdom for which they wait. Like the disciples before the crucifixion, who did not understand, when Jesus explained to them that he must needs go up to Jerusalem, and suffer, and be killed, and rise again the third day, so our modern disciples do not understand the "needs be" of Christ's second coming. The first disciples did not see but that the personal presence of Jesus on earth, and in the flesh, was all that was needed to insure the triumph of his kingdom. So now christians do not see that anything more is needed than the presence and powerful working of the Spirit, whom Jesus sent to take his place during his absence. They think it a sort of slur on him and his appointed agent, to imagine that every needed provision for success has not been made.

Peter said, when Jesus told him of what was to befall him, "Be it far from thee, Lord." And yet Jesus administered to him the severest possible rebuke. It was the vital truth of his gospel that he must needs suffer before he should enter into his glory. And now again he has told us that, notwithstanding the blessed provision he has made for the church's comfort and enlargement in the gift of the Holy Spirit, he must come again to relieve her of her present suffering and disadvantage in a world that knows him not; he must come to wrest the sceptre of the world from the ruler of its darkness, and bestow upon us the promised inheritance. And it is criminal blindness and shameful disloyalty in us to adopt any view which contradicts the "needs be" of his second coming, or substitutes any present blessing, or expected triumph, for that blessed hope of which Paul speaks, the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.—Prophetic Times.

UNCONSCIOUS PUNISHMENT.

FRANK BURR.

An argument is sometimes attempted against the Bible doctrine of the destruction of the wicked, by the idea that there is no punishment unless there is consciousness. As, for instance, it is asserted that you cannot punish that which does not feel, so a state of absolute death cannot be a punishment, as there is no feeling. And as everlasting punishment is a Bible doctrine, there must be also everlasting consciousness in order to the everlasting punishment.

If this be a true position, then all punishment must be subject to the same rule of consciousness. Let the rule be fully understood. It is, that there must be continual consciousness on the part of the condemned one, in order that the condemnation be a punishment to him.

To test the rule, let us suppose that a criminal according to the laws of this world be sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment. He is remanded from court to prison, and spends the time of his sentence in days and nights, but at the apparent end of his term he is told that his sentence is only two thirds expired, because one third of his time has been spent in unconscious sleep, and therefore cannot be counted in the time of his sentence, because it was no punishment. He is told that during the hours of sleep he was unconscious of being in a prison; that a palace would have been all the same to him for the portion of time thus spent, and therefore he has had only ten years of punishment instead of fifteen, and he cannot be permitted to leave yet. Who does not see that this would be a perversion of justice and law. There was no mention made in the sentence, of consciousness, or unconsciousness, but only imprisonment. And in the case of God's law the condition mentioned in the penalty is that of death, and to have the punishment everlasting, it is only necessary that the condition be occupied everlastingly.

There is no more necessity for consciousness in this condemnation than in the case of the criminal before referred to. In fact the law of God requires unconsciousness in order to its full execution, otherwise death, which is the penalty would not be inflicted. And as any release from a state of actual death at any time during eternity would be a release from the penalty, so continual absence of life, which is a state of perfect unconsciousness is absolutely essential in order to everlasting punishment with death.

Thus we see that the attempt to refute the Bible doctrine of destruction to the wicked by such an argument as the one here stated, is in vain. And it is not necessary that God shall keep the particles that constitute the bodies of wicked men in their human form forever, in order that the men may exist like mummies under death, but they may be reduced to "ashes" as the Scriptures declare, and remain thus forever, seeing that no life is ever to be given to them again.

BENEVOLENCE.—A benevolent man is a happy man; he cannot be otherwise, for it is a universal law of nature to be made happy by making others so. Those evil passions, such as envy, hatred, malice, pride and such like, do not exist in the heart of a benevolent man. These malign passions are found within the heart of the selfish man, which lead him to deception, fraud, murder, or crimes of the most heinous nature.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—Matt. 16: 3.

Let us turn to Matt. 24 and read: "And Jesus went out, and departed from the temple; and his disciples came to him for to show him the buildings of the temple. And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? verily I say unto you, There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"

It will be noticed that this conversation of the Savior with his disciples was while "he sat upon the mount of Olives." We think the form of the questions asked implies that the disciples had in their minds one great, leading thought, which was this: Master, when shall you come again, "and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world," or age! He had told them he was going away, and would come again. It was very natural that they should ask him when he would return, and what sign would precede his coming. When they asked their questions, it is evident they had no idea how long the Savior would be away from the world before his return. Hence he commences his answer to their inquiries as follows: "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many."

This statement affords positive evidence that many will come in his name, saying, "I am Christ," before his return. This announcement carries us far beyond the destruction of Jerusalem.

The first and only false Christ, of whom we have any record, that appeared before the destruction of Jerusalem, was one Caziba. But one cannot be said to be many. The next one was in A. D. 434, one Moses Cretenses. Between this one in 434 and 1682, some twenty-two others appeared. And just before the Savior's coming, we may expect a revival of false Christs, as we now find them among Spiritualists. As many false Christs have already appeared, so far as this sign is concerned, we see no reason why the Savior may not come at any time.

He next says: "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows." Then it is settled that the Savior will not return till after there have been "wars and rumors of wars," and nation has arisen against nation, and kingdom "against kingdom;" consequently, he could not return till after the Roman Empire should be broken up into its varied fragments, as declared by the prophet Daniel. For when Jesus spoke, the Roman Empire held sway over almost the entire known world. At the time of the birth of Christ, "There went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taken." Luke 2: 1. He would not have issued such a decree if his power had not at that time been thus extensive. The Roman Empire remained undivided till the last five years of the fourth century, when it was separated into the eastern and western divisions between Honorius and Arcadius. Previous to this time, kingdom could not rise against kingdom, nor nation against nation. In the fifth and sixth centuries, the Empire was finally broken up into ten parts, and after that, there "were wars, and rumors of wars," nation rose against nation, and "kingdom against kingdom."

In connection with the strife among the nations and kingdoms, there were to "be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places." By famine and sword, 580,000 Jews were destroyed between A. D. 96 and 180. In 310, 40,000 perished in England. There was a terrible famine in Italy in 370, when parents ate their own children. In England there were severe famines in 679, 739, 823, and 954. There was a terrible one in Europe in 1016. In 1852 a famine in China carried off some 900,000. Many others might be named. During the same period, pestilences also did terrible work. In A. D. 78, a pestilence in Rome destroyed 10,000 daily. In 167 and 187, it appeared again with ravages. In 430, the plague in Britain raged so terribly that the living were scarcely sufficient to bury the dead. In 538 a dreadful plague commenced in Europe, and spread throughout Asia, continuing several years. In 590, the plague killed 10,000 daily in Turkey. In 717, 300,000 died of plague in Constantinople, and in 746,200,000 more. In 772, at Chichester, England, an epidemic disease destroyed 34,000. In 954, 40,000 died of pestilence in Scotland. In 1077, so many died in Constantinople, that the living were unable to bury them. In 1124, one third of the people died of plague in England. In 1345, 50,000 died in London, of plague and famine; in Norwich, 50,000; in Venice, 100,000; and in Eastern nations, 20,000,000. It was called the "black death."

Besides these, the Savior said there would be "earthquakes in divers places." In A. D. 79, the cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii were destroyed and buried by an earthquake and an eruption of Mount Vesuvius. In 107, four cities in Asia, two in Greece, and two in Galatia were destroyed. Antioch was destroyed in 114. In 357, one hundred and fifty cities and towns were damaged in Asia, Pontus and Macedonia. In 558, the edifices of Constantinople were destroyed, and thousands of people. In Africa many cities were overturned in 560. In 742, more than five hundred cities were destroyed in Asia, including a terrible loss of life. In 936, Constantinople was overturned, and all Greece shaken. In 1137, Catania, in Sicily, had a terrible earthquake, when 15,000 were buried in the ruins. In 1186, at Calabria, a city with all its inhabitants, were overwhelmed in the Adriatic Sea. In 1456, 40,000 persons perished by an earthquake. In 1662, 300,000 persons perished in Pekin alone. Many others might be specified, accomplishing similar results.

After these should occur "in divers places," the Savior said: "All these are the beginning of sorrows," as though the saints would experience something worse than these occasional and terrible calamities. The end would then be some distance in the future; and other events must transpire, before his children could reasonably look for his coming.

GREAT PRESENTIMENTS.

God never brings great changes in human associations and experiences without first giving a notification that such a change is approaching. Such notices are given by prophetic revelations, promonitions of the Spirit, or providential manifestations, or by all combined. God did not send the flood upon the Antedeluvians until they had been warned by Noah, and received impressions or presentiments by the Spirit of coming danger. The angels found the Sodomites in a fevered excitement, ready to break out in lawless demonstrations, because they had been forewarned of coming calamities. The world was profoundly impressed, at the first advent of Christ, that some great change affecting the status of humanity was about to take place. The Jewish nation, prior to the destruction of Jerusalem, professed to believe that God had covenanted to protect them, and that their defence was sure; but with that profession on their lips they manifested fearful forebodings of coming desolations.

Is it not a fact that this generation is universally and profoundly impressed that some great change will soon be experienced in this world, affecting a radical revolution? We are confident that such a presentiment, exceeding any which has affected our race, now exists. This impression is variously interpreted. Some understand it as indicating political change, others a religious, while still others say the physical world is to be radically changed; and all agree that a great revolution is imminent. Such an impression, no matter by what means it is produced, necessarily results in an excited, unsettled state of society. Each class understand that they must rise or fall in the coming struggle, so that each nation strains every nerve to strengthen its arm of conquest and defense, and each church will compass sea and land to proselyte the millions to its faith, so as to gain the victory at the grand crisis.

Such a presentiment evidently pervades the Christian world to-day. The Greek church confidently asserts that God has decreed that her faith and communion shall be received and celebrated at every sacred altar, and that the time has come for its accomplishment. The Roman church is electrified in every member, from the Pope to the most ignorant layman, with the idea that the time has come for her, by divine aid, to seize the reins of universal, political, and ecclesiastical government on the earth. The Protestant church is moved by the same idea, viz., that the Gospel gives to it the unfailing promise that it shall immediately triumph over all opposition, and rule the world, politically and religiously, by its baptized members. These hopes and aspirations in all these classes are alloyed with terrible fears of a bloody conflict in the accomplishment of the expected revolution. Their hopes are proclaimed in their pulpits and publications, while their fears are manifested by the kind and degree of preparation they are making to inaugurate their expected "golden age."

The Jewish church typically manifested the same principles and experience at the first advent of Christ. They cherished the hope that God had predetermined that they at that time should take the rulership of the world, and would divinely assist them in subjugating their enemies to that Heaven appointed government.

The Mohammetans also understand that a turning point in their history has come, which is producing among them uncommon efforts in India, Central Asia and Persia, to convert men to their faith. The Sultan is also making great efforts to strengthen his army and navy to withstand the anticipated storm. It is reported that a general impression prevails in China, that their present imperial government is about to be overthrown, and a "coming man" to establish a more perfect government, and that this has caused the recent bloody rebellion. The Japanese are also laboring under a presentiment that a great revolution in their oriental government is soon to take place, which has caused recent efforts to overthrow their ruling dynasty. The Republicans, as a political class, are everywhere stimulated by the same bright hope, that the time has come for the old monarchical governments to give place to free republics. The Communists are affiliating with the various labor unions, because they are impressed with the idea that the time has come for the laboring classes to arise and demand that capital be more equally distributed, and that employers submit to the demand of laborers. The capitalists all see that they must immediately heap together their treasures, so as to combine and increase their power to withstand the coming war upon the rich. Spiritualists confidently predict that the dead are about to gloriously triumph over God, his church, and the holy angels. Scientists tell us that the earthly machine is getting out of gear, and that its friction and jar indicates an immediate physical rupture, which must terminate the life of all who remain upon the earth.

What meaneth this world-wide presentiment of approaching change? Do all things continue as they were? Are all men mistaken, or are all feeling the premonitory vibrations of earth's last shaking? We believe it is God's merciful voice of forewarning that gives these fearful forebodings, and Satan's false hopes which inspire men with bright future prospects in the midst of the curse.

The Spirit which preached to the inhabitants of the Old world of coming judgment, while Noah was preparing the ark, we believe is now giving this great presentiment to all classes and nations, that some marked change is about to come over the present world. It is the indistinct sound of an approaching tempest, the premonitory rumbling of a destructive earthquake. It is the voice of God to the inhabitants of a perishing world,—the message of an angel flying in the midst of heaven sounding the thrilling note of hastening judgment.

This is indeed an age of unparalelled excitement upon this one universal question,—What great events will the immediate future develop? Men attempt to comprehend and explain it, but they manifest a lack of knowledge, by a great variety of conclusions; but God, we think, has himself spoken through his Word and Spirit, testifying that the gospel is about to end, Christ to appear a second time, the dead to be raised, the last judgment to set, the wicked destroyed, and the eternal kingdom of God established under the whole heavens.

Wonderful events! Grand consummation of Jehovah's redemptive plan! O Spirit Divine, come and thrill our world still more mightily with this Heaven-sent premonition of coming wonders! Let the shadows of earth's last twilight deepen the gloom of fearful hearts, until the seeming brightness of a faded world shall have disappeared! Tear away the false hopes of a deluded generation, so that honest hearts may speedily find shelter in the Cleft Rock! O, thou wonderful Jesus, hear the plaintive cry of thy almost despairing Bride, and sweep the heavens with thy royal robes, and come to deliver her. Let the voice of thine own lips answer this marvelous question, which thy Spirit has impressed upon the heart of humanity.

CALIFORNIA.

California now (March 30th) presents a lovely appearance. The fruit trees are in beautiful bloom, as we see them in New England two months later. Things grow here just as if they liked to show themselves. The rains this year have been abundant, so that the farmers have bright hopes of heavy crops and an abundance of fruit. The State has great resources of wealth, which are increasing rather than diminishing, excepting the early gold movement.

California has the means of sustaining itself as an independent State beyond any other in the Union. While time lasts, it may be expected to advance in temporal prosperity more rapidly than other portions of the entire American nation, or the world.

Should the new temperance movement, conducted mainly by the women, prove a success, as is hoped, then there will be a most marked improvement in the moral tone of society. Intoxicating liquors have done terrible work on this coast. California's noblest sons have been ruined by the rum demon. Its best business men have been brought to desolation and perpetual disgrace, and their once happy families buried in sorrow and the embrace of poverty. Through the influence of the rum monster the virtuous have been turned to the vicious and vile, the cup of joy filled with remorse, and the christian heart changed to a home for demons. Well may the women arise en masse and sound the note of alarm, as they see their husbands, sons and brothers dashing upon the rocks of perdition. May the Lord give the women success.

SABBATH DISCUSSION.

We are now (March 30th), engaged in an earnest discussion of the Seventh-day Sabbath question, in Napa city, with Eld. Canright, a Seventh-day preacher, of good ability. At this time, we have debated four evenings, and are to continue three more. Elder James White and wife are here, also Eld. Cornell and Loughborough. The people in the city are deeply interested in the discussion, and crowd the Assembly Hall to hear what may be said pro and con. Eld. Canright admitted the "old covenant" was abolished in Christ at the cross; but denied that the Decalogue was the "old covenant." We then gave him the following for consideration:

"Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a free woman. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the free woman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all."—Gal. 4; 21, 26.

Here we find "two covenants" named, of special character. "One from the mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage." As the Scriptures speak of only "one" covenant "from the mount Sinai," then the other one was not from there. This one "from the mount Sinai" we find called "the first covenant," or the "old" covenant.

Why did the first one produce "bondage?" Because of the "ordinances," or services, connected with it. These began, continued, and ended with it. Without them, the covenant was of no force. This covenant from Sinai was engraven on stones and kept in the ark, which was consequently called "the ark of the covenant."

As the first covenant was made on mount Sinai, it was not the covenant made with Abraham. It is self-evident that "the first covenant" must be abolished when the second becomes binding. Two different covenants cannot be in force at the same time; and if just alike, only one would be needed.

A covenant is defined as follows: (1) "A mutual consent, or agreement of two or more persons, to do, or to forbear, some act or thing; a contract; stipulation. (2) "A writing containing the terms of agreement or contract between parties."—Webster. A covenant is still further defined to be based on "mutual promises, with conditions annexed. By metonymy a body of laws and precepts, to which certain promises are annexed."

We will now proceed to show that the "ten commandments," "written and engraven on stones," constituted "the first covenant," or the old covenant, given on mount Sinai, in the time of Moses, after the children of Israel came out of Egyptian bondage.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel. And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments."—Ex. 34: 27–28. "And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone." Deut. 4: 13. "When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the Lord made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights, I neither did eat bread nor drink water. And the Lord delivered unto me two tables of stone written with the finger of God; and on them was written according to all the words, which the Lord spake with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly. And it came to pass at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the Lord gave them two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant." Deut. 9: 9–11. "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." Deut. 5: 2–3.

The foregoing Scriptures afford positive evidence that the old covenant, the first covenant, consisted of the ten commandments, "written and engraven on stones," by the Lord, on mount Sinai, after the children of Israel came out of Egypt; therefore, this covenant was not made with Adam nor Abraham. This covenant was kept in the ark, which was consequently called "the ark of the covenant." Moses says: "I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I made, and there they be as the Lord commanded me." Deut. 10: 5. When Solomon had completed the temple he says: "And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is the covenant of the Lord, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egyyt." 1 Kings 8: 21.

In Solomon's time there was nothing in the ark of the covenant but the two tables of stone, on which the covenant was written. "There was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone, which Moses put there at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt." 1 Kings, 8: 9. In Moses' time, the Book of the Law was kept also in the ark. "Take this book of the law, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee." Deut. 31: 26. After a time it was taken out, and neglected.

We have now found the first covenant, "the ONE from the mount Sinai," of which Paul speaks in Gal. 4: 24, and says it "gendereth to bondage." We see no room for doubt. We find no place in the Scriptures where this covenant on the stones is ever called the law. The law protected the covenant, specifying penalties for the breaking of the articles of agreement between the Lord and his people, as contained in the covenant. This covenant with the children of Israel had no reference to their final salvation, but simply to this life. It does not refer to Christ. It has no articles specifying rewards or punishments resulting from the keeping of this covenant. It was prepared for the Jewish people, for their temporal welfare, and had nothing to do with any other nations on the earth. It was made only with those who came "out of the land of Egypt;" hence it could not be a universal covenant with all mankind.

A CARD.

R. W. WILSON AND OTHERS.

To whom it may concern:—

As we have heard it has been reported that Elder Miles Grant has not preached the "Advent doctrine" in California, we feel it a duty we owe to him and the friends of Christ to say, that he has preached it fully, faithfully, earnestly, and repeatedly, during every visit he has made to the Pacific coast. We could not ask him to do more. We are satisfied with his course, and have great reason to rejoice in the results.

The foregoing "card" is signed by the Pastor of the Advent Christian Church in San Francisco, all of its officers, and every member in the city; by all of the members of the Vallejo church, but one (who are in the city); also by Elders D. C. Abbott, D. D. Reed, R. W. Wilson, and several of the members of the Santa Clara church. The entire list of names attached to the "card" amounts to one hundred and four.

When Elder Grant was about leaving the Pacific coast at the close of his labors the second winter, in 1872, the following unsolicited testimonial was placed in his hands:

"Bro. Grant: . . . . Your labors on this coast have been arduous, and in many respects under most unfavorable circumstances; but you have borne up under them nobly, and as but few could have done. You had special grace given, sufficient unto your day. The Lord bless and go with you on your return East, and to the endearments of home. My dear brother, let us be faithful to the trust committed unto us. There have been great and glorious truths revealed unto us, and we must publish them to the world. They have been sanctified to us, and made us what we are as to efficiency in the Lord's cause. Let us boldly and fearlessly proclaim them until Jesus comes. You have my prayers and christian love as you leave us. May we meet again. We will, by the grace of God, in the kingdom. Yours affectionately, O. R. Fassett."

☞ NOTICE.

We have been receiving at the Crisis Office several letters upon business matters without any signature to them. We wish that all who write to the Office upon any matters whatever, would please give their name and address in full, as it will save us much trouble.

Correction.—In my article on the first page of this paper, in the first line of the third paragraph, the word "this" should read His. In the fourth paragraph the word autou should read auton in every place, except the last time it is named. After saying that auton is not in these verses, and that hauton is not in the Greek, it should be added, in this place.

GOOD NEWS.

L. BOUTELL.

I have just returned from Providence, R. I., in exchange with Bro. Phetteplace. Their new Advent Chapel is a good-sized, neat house for worship; and what is better still, it is well filled with hearers that give good attention to the preached Word. I found apparently a good state of things among them. Harmony, love, and zeal for the cause of Christ and truth in the departments of christian warfare were manifest in the congregation. There was somewhat of a revival interest showing itself to the praise of God who is among them by the agency of the Holy Spirit. O, how much we need that, that we may have more power to influence and lead others in the right way. One thing is plainly visible: where our brethren make the sacrifice, and build a house for the Lord and his people, to freely speak the words of life, and the soon coming of our Savior, the Lord prospers such by the revival of his work and additions to their numbers. And in our prosperity, the Lord save us from outgrowing the spirit, humility and self-denial of this gospel, that saves wholly. May spiritual prosperity attend them.

LENGTH OF SERMONS.

SELECTED BY J. PINKHAM.

One word as to the length of sermons. That should never be determined by the clock, but upon broader considerations; short sermons for small subjects and long sermons for large subjects. It does not require that sermons should be of any uniform length. Let one be short, and the next long, and the next intermediate. It is true that it is bad policy to fatigue men, but shortness is not the only remedy for that. The true way to shorten a sermon is to make it more interesting. The object of preaching is not to let men out of church at a given time. The length or quality of a sermon must be determined by the objects which it has in view. Now you cannot discuss great themes in a short compass; nor can you by driblets—by sermons of ten or twenty minutes—train an audience to a broad consideration of high themes. There is a medium. A minister ought to be able to hold an audience for an hour in the discussion of great themes; and the habit of ample time and ample discussion, even if occasionally it carries with it the incidental evil of weariness, will in the long run produce a nobler class of minds and a higher type of education than can possibly belong to the school of dwarfed sermonizers.

Get to the roots of things. The gold mines of Scripture are not in the top-soil; you must open a shaft; the precious diamonds of experience are not picked up in the roadway; their secret places are far down. Get down into the vitality, the solidity, the veracity, the divinity of the word of God, and seek to possess all the inward work of the blessed Spirit.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MORNING SESSION, APRIL 2.

Meeting called to order by the President. Prayer was offered, when a motion was made and carried that the Conference raise the sum of three hundred and twenty-five dollars for the purpose of purchasing a tent. Brn. Hemenway and Boutell were appointed a committee to receive cash and pledges of money for this object, which was done to the amount of $348. Reports from churches by preachers and delegates were heard, from which it was learned that the truths of the denomination had been carried into new places with encouraging results. The condition of the churches long established was variously reported, some being in excellent condition, with constant additions to their numbers. A number of churches have built suitable chapels for worship. Other churches were in a low state spiritually and financially. It appeared also that the efforts of the preachers had not resulted in as much good as might have been expected, owing greatly to the loose, unsystematic method of carrying on meetings which prevails to too great an extent among our churches. (In connection with this summary, read the motion below concerning the address to the Adventists of this State.) Adjourned to afternoon.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Meeting opened with prayer, the President in the chair. The following resolution was presented, and after a great deal of discussion, which continued into the next morning's session, was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the gospel teaches that all matters of grievance between brethren shall be passed upon by the church before being published to the world; and Whereas, we think this rule has been violated in relation to one of the members of this Conference; therefore Resolved, That the circular scattered broadcast over the land entitled, 'Elder Grant's Four Visits to California,' meets our unqualified disapproval, as calculated to cause division among brethren."

MORNING SESSION, APRIL 3.

The meeting opened as usual with prayer, the chair being occupied by the President. The whole of this session was occupied in discussing the foregoing resolution, prior to its being adopted. Its acceptance was mentioned in the report of yesterday's proceedings for convenience, but it was not, in fact, adopted until after the debate this morning. The vote disapproving of the circulating of the sheet alluded to above had no bearing whatever on the truthfulness or untruthfulness of the allegations contained in said sheet; but was a disapproval of their circulation before the party accused had had a proper hearing before the body to which he is amenable.

In the afternoon further reports were heard from ministers and churches, and in addition to the facts embodied above in the summary of reports of churches, it appeared that several of our preachers had had much success in going into new fields, and visiting the people from house to house, thus carrying the gospel to their very doors.

MORNING SESSION, APRIL 4.

The meeting was called to order by the President. After prayer, a general conversation was engaged in respecting the more effectual establishing of the churches belonging to this Conference, and the means by which the labors and sacrifices of our preachers in proclaiming the gospel might be made to result in more permanent good. In consequence of the foregoing the following resolutions were unanimously carried:

"That the President, Eld. S. G. Mathewson, appoint a committee of three to prepare an address to the Adventist people of Massachusetts in regard to the proper organization of churches and methods of carrying on the work of God among them.

"That when this Conference adjourns, it adjourns to a meeting specially appointed to consider this topic of the proper organization of our churches for the most effective labor, the call for said meeting to be published by the Tent Meeting Committee in the World's Crisis."

The President appointed as the committee mentioned in the foregoing resolution, Brn. J. Hemenway, J. Couch, and C. E. Barnes.

Voted, that the report of this meeting be published in the World's Crisis and Advent Christian Times. The thanks of the Conference were unanimously extended to the A. C. Church of Worcester for the cordial hospitality with which they entertained the brethren and sisters from abroad, after which the Conference adjourned in accordance with the resolution above.

On Fast Day a very impressive and interesting ordination service took place, Brn. John F. Clothey of Marblehead, and Wm. H. Crockett of East Weymouth, being duly set apart for the work of the ministry by prayer and the laying on of hands. The preaching during the Conference was very instructive and interesting, the attendance always good, and many times exceedingly large. The social meetings were seasons of refreshing from the Lord, the most of the testimonies indicating, so far as external appearances can indicate, a good degree of spirituality, and an interest in the turning of men away from sin to Jesus Christ that was and is greatly encouraging.

Another annual gathering rich with blessings has been enjoyed. May God grant that its influence be permanent for good.

C. E. Barnes, Secretary.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

From our English Correspondent.

POPERY AND THE NEW ENGLISH GOVERNMENT.

The Daily Telegraph says:—"It is obvious that one of the main subjects of dispute throughout the Continent during the next few years will be the struggle between the Ultramontane party and the Civil Power. In this struggle the sympathies of Protestant England must, in the long run, side with the State as against the Church, with Germany as against the Papacy. Now, the Liberals, as a party, were somewhat hampered in their attitude towards Germany, partly by their strong theoretical disapproval of any policy which even bears the appearance of inflicting persecution for conscience' sake, partly by their political alliance with the Irish Catholics. The Conservatives, fortunately for themselves, will be entirely independent of the Irish vote, while they will not be perplexed by the difficulty of reconciling the warfare carried on by Prince Bismarck against the Church with the dogma of universal toleration. Thus, under a Conservative regime, there will be fuller opportunity for the expression of that moral sympathy with the ecclesiastical policy of Prussia to which Germany attaches so great a value. As to the abstract merits or demerits of the controversy we express no opinion. All we desire to denote is, that the sort of support which a Conservative Government will unquestionably tender to Prince Bismarck in his warfare against the Clerical Power will tend to strengthen the friendly relations between England and the new German Empire.

THE MARRIAGE LAW IN ITALY.

The Italian Government has taken another step in its conflict with the pretensions of the Papacy. The new Marriage Law insists upon every marriage being registered at the State office before it is celebrated by a priest. Of course the clericals are in a mighty ferment. They have called marriage a sacrament, and now loudly protest against being interfered with in the exercises of religious. But they have only their own duplicity to thank. The last Italian law merely made it necessary to resister, in a civil office, every marriage wherever celebrated. The priests taught their devotees that the religious ceremony was sufficient without any registration, and that civil marriages were concubinage. The consequence was, that in the province of Bologna alone, eighteen thousand marriages were unregistered. In other words, the priests taught all these families to break the law of the country in which God had placed them, and that not that they might fulfill the divine law, but keep the traditions of men.

But the evil did not stop here. The couples violating the law sinned against their children, all of whom were illegitimate in the sight of the law. Government rightly demands that no priesthood shall have the power to encourage multitudes within its jurisdiction to defy its regulations. The Italian law now provides that an efficient civil registration shall first take place, and then men may be married by a priest or not. This is true liberty. It is time priests of altars were taught that they are not to privileged to break the laws which the fellow-subjects are bound to keep. On clause in the new law permits any who hav been deluded into breaking the law, and have only been married by priests, to regster their union and thus legitimise their chiren. This benevolent provision is denoced by the last pet phrase of the Ultramotanes. It is retrospective, they say, in its action. We very much object to any la with its retrospective action punishing th guilty; but whoever, except a Romish prest, was angry because a law-giver by rospective action allowed the guilty to rieve their position? The fact is, that to justly, love mercy, and work humbly ith God, are as foreign to the genius of riests as it was to Balak, the son of ippor.

The sting of the new law lies in this, that no marriage may be celebrated by a priest till the civil certificate of registration is in his hands. Let him offend, and he is fined; let him be contumacious, and he makes the acquaintance of a prison-warder. Formerly all the ill effects fell on the priest's victims. The man might desert the woman, never having been legally married to him; and the family were illegitimate. Still the priests encouraged law-breaking. Now the punishment falls on the priest, the instigator of wrong. This is the right quarter. May it fall here till they cease to do evil and learn to do well!—The Methodist.

DR. MANNING ORGANIZING FOR "THE RELIGIOUS WAR."

It appears that the League of St. Sebastian held a meeting at Willis's Rooms, London, when business was done, the importance of which it would be difficult to over estimate. Sir George Bowyer filled the chair, and Archbishop Manning made a statement of the objects and plans of the Association. He announced that the approaching demise of the Pope would certainly lead to "a Continental war which would eclipse that of the first Empire." The objects of the war would be to redress the revolution which has been transferred from the streets where it raged in 1848 to the Cabinets and the thrones of Europe. The Holy Father is "held a prisoner in the Vatican by filibusters, and the time is rapidly approaching when the action of the Catholic powers would turn out of Rome and Italy those who had established themselves in the holy city, and had kept prisoner the Vicar of Christ."

In this great conflict the League of St. Sebastian, including on its muster-roll the remnant of the Pontifical Zouaves, will take an active and conspicuous part. "Those present should not leave the meeting with a false impression as to the condition of the League; they should not imagine that with a probable fourteen thousand members the restoration of the Pope could be accomplished. He would not call the present League even the portion of an army, but he felt that when the time of action would have arrived, the present Zouaves would be enabled to act as officers to the large contingents anticipated from all countries of of Europe." A corps of fourteen thousand officers—including, we presume, a large band of clerical trumpeters—is a formidable head-quarter staff, indicating a very considerable army corps. This is to be recruited from the Catholics of the United Kingdom, "the most devoted to the Holy See, and most Ultramontane of the Pope's subjects"—men who will make every effort to serve the cause, "even to the sacrificing of their lives."

We take the report of this meeting from the columns of the Freeman's Journal, the Irish organ of the League of St. Sebastian, from which we learn that resolutions adopting the programme, as explained by Archbishop Manning, were unanimously adopted. It is a curious circumstance that telegrams received from Dublin and Edinburgh were read to the assembly announcing that at that moment while the proceedings were going on, similar meetings were being held here and in the metropolis of Scotland. If any such meeting was held here the fact has been kept a close secret—another circumstance of interest, considering the many and constant denunciations of Freemasons and other secret societies that have been hurled from the Irish Apostolic Vicariat. Has Archbishop Manning been betrayed into a little too much freedom of speech? At all events, his remarkable candor leaves the Attorney-General of England no excuse for ignorance that a war against our Italian, and, we presume, also against our German allies, is being organized under the protection of the British flag, and in the very heart of England.—Dublin Evening Mail.

From Bro. D. C. Thomas.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—Let me say to you that there are a few waiting ones here, and the Lord blesses them. They have given all for Christ. By the bloody sweat and dying agony of the Son of God, we have been ransomed from the thralldom of sin and the slavery of the devil, and are now under the most sacred obligation to devote our lives and energies to the service of our loving Redeemer. We have entered the heavenly race to run. We enlisted in the Lord's army to fight. In a word, we recognize these bodies as the temple of the Holy Ghost. So then we have no right to adorn them with forbidden tinselry, defile them with filthy tobacco, derange them with beastly gluttony, inflame them with burning alcohol, or recklessly expose them to danger and death. And let us look beyond the obscuring veil of the curse, and gaze with inexpressible admiration upon the infinite Jehovah—the king of paradise restored, and the fadeless glories of the new creation.

Kendall, March 24, 1874.

J. T. DIXON writes from Rocky Brook, March 24th:—"We have cheering news for those who have labored in past times with us in Rocky Brook and Peace Dale, R. I. A protracted meeting has been holden over three weeks (evenings) in our chapel, which we trust has been greatly blessed by the Lord. Elder A. Warner, of Providence, has been with us all the time, and labored with unwearied zeal. He has baptized within that time thirty-three; thirty-one of them, with five others have united with the church. Many wanderers in this and other churches profess to be reclaimed. One Sabbath, and Sabbath evening, many had to go away unable to get in. The interest still continues; new ones request prayers, and others are expecting to be baptized. Pray for us, that the work may deepen and spread, that these young lambs may prove to be of such as hear the Shepherd's voice, that when he appears they may reap eternal life."

Obituaries.

DEXTER. Fell asleep in Jesus in Whitefield, N. H., June 22d, 1873, my dear brother, G. W. H. Dexter, aged twenty-one years.

He died a triumphant death. Well might we say, Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his. His death has left a vacant place that never can be filled. It was a beautiful Sabbath morning when he called us around his bedside to receive his last farewell. As he looked on his weeping friends he said, "Don't weep for me." He urged us all, especially his unconverted father, to meet him in the kingdom. He sleeps, but with the glorious hope of a speedy resurrection when Jesus comes.

C. M. NICHOLS.

CLEMENT. In Bath, N. H., March 26th, 1874, Sister Mary Broadhead Clement, wife of Bro. Geo. W. Clement, aged seventy-two years.

Sister Clement has been a professor of religion ever since she was nineteen years of age; and truly has adorned the doctrine of the Savior by a well ordered life and godly conversation. Her sickness was of short duration, but her distress was terrible, which she bore with christian patience, leaving satisfactory evidence of her entire fitness for the kingdom for which she earnestly looked, and we have no doubt of her sharing in the first resurrection. May God bless the afflicted companion and children. I. H. SHIPMAN.

JOHNSON. Departed this life March 13th, 1874, Sr. Lucy C. Johnson, of Wrentham, Mass., aged fifty-seven years.

She accepted Christ as her Savior many years ago. She believed in the sleep of the dead, and that the Master would soon come to gather his own to himself. She was kind and affectionate, and was loved and respected by many friends. Her sickness was short, but severe. Suddenly prostrated by apoplexy and paralysis, she remained conscious but a few hours, then sank into a deep sleep, from which no effort could awaken her, and which soon resulted in death. Funeral service was attended by Eld. H. Canfield.

N. M. FISHER.

GORHAM. In Castleton, Vt., March 26th, 1874, after many months of ill health, and a few weeks severe sickness, Edmund Gorham, aged seventy-nine years.

Converted many years since under the ministrations of the Methodist church, he adopted what are known as Adventist views at the time of Eld. Grant's first visit to this place, fourteen years ago. I exhibited his sentiments and his hope in a discourse upon the funeral occasion, in which I considered the temporary triumph of that foe whom Paul styles our "last enemy," and the eternal victory of the Savior in the redemption of his people from the grave and the final destruction of death. "He shall swallow up death in victory." (Is. 25: 8.) W. L. H.

TOWN. In Stowe, Vt., Feb. 27, 1874, Sr. Emily A., wife of Bro. O. B. Town, aged thirty-three years.

Sister Town has had feeble health for several years but has been an earnest worker in the vineyard of the Lord. In her anxiety to meet with the children of the Lord, she visited our last Bethel Campmeeting, and being too feeble to endure the journey, she was taken with bleeding at the lungs, and has been a great sufferer since that time until her death. She died in the triumphs of faith, and sweetly sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the sounding of the trump of God to call her forth to immortal life. She leaves a husband, one son, and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. Words of comfort spoken by the writer. A. A. HOYT.

GIBBS. In Stowe, Vt., Feb. 10th, 1874, Sr. Maria M., wife of Bro. Benj. Gibbs, aged thirty-seven years.

Sister Gibbs was a faithful worker in the service of our Lord. Her sickness was short, and she died in hope of a better resurrection. A faithful husband and six little children are left; poor in this world, but rich in faith, they are trusting in him who will in some way or other provide for the poor and needy. Services by the writer. A. A. H.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, Mach 31. A dispatch from Melbourne says Henri Rochefort and his companions escaped from New Caledonia by stowing themselves away in a vessel bound for New Castle. They have arrived at Sydney, and will proceed to Europe direct.

The Messageries Maretimes steamship Nil was lost on her last voyage from Hong Kong to Yokohama, and all her passengers were drowned. Among them were the Japanese Commissioners to the Vienna Exhibition.

April 1. The Times acknowledges the existence of a financial panic in London, and attributes it to the effect of those with which New York and Vienna have been visited, combined with the depressing influences of the Indian famine. It says the check to trade is probably as severe as in any former instance.

MADRID, March 31. Troops to the number of 15,000 are on the way to reinforce Marshal Serrano.

It is reported that the Carlist Gen. Ollo has been killed. The final attack on Anto will be made on Tuesday or Wednesday.

The Carlists are short of ammunition, and their surrender to Serrano at Albania is expected shortly.

BERLIN, March 31. The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Cologne was arrested to-day, for violating the Ecclesiastical laws. The arrest was made without any demonstration.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Philadelphia, Penn., March 31. The trials of the former conductors of the Pensylvania Railroad Company charged with embezzling moneys received for the company, stealing tickets, etc., who were arrested some time since, have resulted in the conviction of Thomas D. Shreeves for embezzlement. Conductors Sam. Fennimore and Sam. R. Toy pleaded guilty. Sentences were in all the cases deferred until Saturday next. These cases have attracted considerable attention among the various railroad companies of the country. The defendents were supported by the most able counsel in this city, and much interest was manifested in the trials by the community.

St. Louis, March 30. While about twenty persons were returning from a Campbellite Church, six miles east of Carbondale, Ill., Saturday night, they were fired upon from ambush, and Mrs. Stansell and David Bulliner were dangerously and perhaps mortally wounded. It is not known who were the assailants, but it is believed the affair grew out of an old grudge existing between Bulliner's family and some of their neighbors, and that it was but the continuance of a tragedy which occurred three months ago, in which young Bulliner's father was killed.

Galveston, April 8. A dispatch from Austin today says: Last night, about dark, a stage carrying the mail and eleven passengers, of whom three were ladies, was stopped about twenty-three miles from here by three armed men, who cut the front horses loose, and took all the passengers' money and jewelry, broke open their trunks and gutted the mail-bags, taking off one of them. Among the passengers were Bishop Gregg and Mr. Breckinridge, President of the National Bank of San Antonio, from whom they took $1000. They secured about $3000 from the passenger stage. It was the regular four horse stage from San Antonio to Austin, and did not reach Austin until four o'clock this morning.

FATAL BURNING ACCIDENT.—Shortly after eight o'clock, last evening, at the residence of Frank L. Clapp, on Margin street, Salem, Mass., a horrible burning accident from the explosion of a kerosene lamp culminated in the death of Mrs. Mary E. Leach, a nurse, employed in Mr. Clapp's family. Fire was seen through the kitchen window, and the doors of that room being immediately burst open, a sickening sight met the eye. On the floor, in the middle of the room, lay the body of Mrs. Leach, already burned to a crisp, and life entirely extinct. Fragments of a kerosene lamp were on the stove. The deceased was a widow, from Needham, having been in Salem but a short time.

CROPS IN THE GULF STATES.—There appears to be a promising outlook for the crops in the Gulf States the present year. There is an abundance of labor, and prices rule lower than heretofore, while the policy adopted by the planters of hiring on shares rather than on monthly wages has cleared the plantation of idlers. The wisdom of a diversity of crops is perceived, and the raising of corn, wheat, oats and rice is receiving needed attention. In a number of localities corn will be most relied upon, and in many quarters it is already up, presenting a flourishing appearance. In consequence of the large exodus of negroes from certain parts of the country whole plantations are given up to stock raising. Altogether a complete revolution in the agricultural system of these States has occurred, and the farmers are in excellent spirits at the cheering prospect the change has placed before them.

In Brief.

New York, April 1. A dispatch from Buena Vista, Pa., states that between twenty and thirty houses in Millerstown, Pa., were burned last night, and several persons burned to death. Loss 232,000.

San Francisco, April 1. Law & Frick's liquor store was burned this morning; loss $50,000.

— Portions of New Orleans are inundated, and serious loss is feared.

— Serious coflagration at Worcester, Mass.—The Episcopal church burned.

— John Henry, of South Hadley Falls, Mass., accidentally shot himself in the head while hunting ducks on Sunday, and expired soon after.

— John Wright, a boy fourteen years old, was accidentally shot dead while out in a boat gunning, on Sunday, at Seabrook, N. H., by Jeremiah Rowe.

WM. C. STEWART.

TO THE READERS OF THE CRISIS.—Brethren and sisters and friends, we are publishing two pamphlets to aid our mission tent enterprise, viz., "A Concise History of the Faith of the Primitive Christian Fathers," and "The Tree of Life," by C. F. Sweet, also his Colloquy with Dr. A. Campbell on Everlasting Punishment. As we go into new fields with our tent, we need just such works to answer certain inquiries, and silence objections; and while we expect to keep a supply of other books on hand, we can get none to fill the place of these. They will be printed by the 1st of May, 1874, but times are hard, money is scarce, and we are poor. We ask, therefore, all that can and will to send us $1.00 (or more if they will), to aid us in this enterprise, and we will send, as soon as printed, six of our pamphlets, three of each (the Colloquy and Tree of Life being bound as one) for each $1.00 received. If by this means we can receive $100.00, or thereabouts, by the first of May, we can pay for printing, and go into the regions beyond with our tent unencumbered by debt. Who will invest $1.00 to send the gospel to the poor and blind?

The two pamphlets contain about 150 pages, and will retail for not less than two cents each. They are free to the Lord's honest poor. Send for some. Address C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y.; J. T. Ongley, Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.; or Wm. H. Spencer, Rochester, N. Y.

C. F. SWEET and J. T. ONGLEY.

HAVING made arrangements with the church at Franklin to be with them the second Sunday of each month, please appoint so as not to conflict.

G. H. WALLACE.

Appointments.

☞ APPOINTMENTS MUST BE RECEIVED AS EARLY AS TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) TO INSURE INSERTION FOR THE CURRENT WEEK.

☞ THE following Resolution was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL."

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.,

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

"HOW SHALL WE KNOW EACH OTHER?"

JOSIE M. BUCKLIN.

When beyond the pearly portals
We stand ransomed and immortal,—
Saved forevermore;
Far beyond the reach of sorrow,
Care and trouble for the morrow
Cometh never to that shore!—

When this dreary life is ended,
We from sin and death defended
Walk along the golden streets;
See the limpid river flowing,
The tree of life in beauty growing,
Casts its fruitage at our feet—

When we roam those lovely bowers,
And pluck the sweet unfading flowers
Of Paradise restored;
Where there is night or darkness never,
For Jesus is the light forever,—
Our Savior and our Lord!—

From all the ransomed ones we meet,
Each purified and made complete
In beauty most divine;
How shall we know our friends of yore?
Will we not meet and part no more,
I, and those friends of mine?

All blooming in immortal youth!
How shall I know them? for in truth
This troubleth me sore.
My friends on earth were sick and sad,
Gray hairs and wrinkled faces had,
Brows marked with furrows o'er;

And some—while I am growing old—
Are sleeping 'neath the church-yard mold,
Since youth's fair sunny morn.
How will they know me when we meet?
Fancy the meeting! Joyous, sweet,
To us immortal born.

When we, all glorified and blest,
Shall enter on this day of rest,
This Sabbath without end;
I think the memories of earth,
The joys, the sorrows and the mirth,
Each circumstance and friend;

The things in common here below,
The pleasures we together know
Will furnish us the key;
And, as the friends who part for years,
In sorrow, bitterness and tears,
When next each other see;

Though half a century has been told,
And each has changed; grown strange and old,
And knoweth not his brother,
Till memories of the by-gone years,
When shared were joys, and hopes, and fears,
Revealeth each the other.

Tell me, ye wise in sacred lore,
When we meet on th' eternal shore,
To share an endless day;
If we shall know—and of the how,
The friends so precious to us now?
Answer me this, I pray!

LETTER FROM ENGLAND.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

CHEERING OUTLOOK FOR THE TRUTH.

Here in England the Word of God grows daily. The knowledge of what revelation teaches rapidly spreads throughout our land. From our great cities, our manufacturing towns, our country villages, our out-of-the-way hamlets, the cry for truth increases alike in volume and earnestness. And that cry is answered by tract, or book, by personal visitation, in whatever way God is graciously pleased to send a knowledge of his truth and will. And but a few months ago there were men who touched delicately, with suspicion and fear, those verities the expression of which in our Advent homes is common as household words: these are now taking hold of them with firmer grasp and a more assured heart. Blessed be God! the timid are becoming meekly daring; and those who awhile ago were uncertain of everything, and therefore had nothing to say, are ready to speak forcibly and plainly those lessons which they have learned of the Wonderful Counsellor. Ah, who teacheth like God, whether by prophet, apostle, or his own Son? And where is wisdom like that of the Most High—"the wisdom that cometh from above"?

Brethren are gravitating toward each other in this old land; and little bodies are gathering around that name which is all our salvation and hope. One brother wrote me yesterday from Cheshire that he has built a chapel for the truth, and believes he has led the van in that direction. He desires any godly brother passing his way to call in and give them a word of counsel or exhortation.

Professor Ives' book is doing an excellent work here. The "Bible Doctrine of the Soul" has, to my knowledge, led one infidel to drop his animosity against God. The gentleman I allude to was staying at the best hotel in London. Somehow copies of the book got there. He read it, and came to the Repository to ask if I had more, as he wished to get copies for himself. He said he had been many years an infidel, and could never be reconciled to the God of the Bible on the understanding of him according to the hard Calvinistic and eternal tormentist's views; but he had read "Bible Doctrine of the Soul," and was willing to be reconciled to such a God as that book portrayed—one so gracious to believers and so just to sinners. He professed himself ready to hear him. I need scarcely add that I exhorted him with such words as I could command, as your readers will anticipate that as the sequel. I have also heard of another man who, through reading that book, has come over to the ranks of believers of the truth. About a week ago I was informed of a Congregational minister and a Methodist local preacher, who had both accepted the first principle of the physical nature of man—the soul's complete mortality. These, likewise, were fruit of that work. Mr. Silas Henn, a great Primitive Methodist preacher and writer, has embraced the truth. He has seen quite recently "The Blessed Hope," and "Christian Baptism," and published extracts on the subject. Now he has taken a third step,—and here he is with us, a doughty soldier of Jesus, giving the glory of immortal vigor to Jesus.

I believe I am correct when I say, there is scarcely a thoughtful man in England, a man who really cares whether he believes the truth or a lie, that is not giving at least some attention to the great questions of the day. And, while the iron is hot, I am multiplying blows. That is the reason I have not written to the Crisis lately. It is not for want of will; nor that I have nothing to say; but my whole life has been devotedly applied to editing books and publishing the delightful promises of God to self-ruined men. Blessed grace! how my whole soul loves it. From what depths it raises! to what heights it exalts! O what a portion the believing and obedient disciple has in Christ! But I am digressing. Day and night pen and brain have been speeding through work. And often of late indeed, I may say, my usual hours of retirement have been between one and two in the morning. Somebody must wear out while the harvest is so great; somebody must spend and be spent while there is so much to be done and so little time to do it in; and with this knowledge pressing on him, your correspondent has been redoubling his energies, and working up his reserve strength in the Christian work. I remind myself that the rest is in the Sabbath of the Lord. Then the toil-worn shall cease from his labor, and be at ease. So I work on till the Sabbath, remembering, "Six [antetypical] days shalt thou labor."

I am now projecting a weekly religious newspaper for England. But of course you will know much about it before this letter arrives; for I have supplied the Editors of the Crisis with articles concerning it. The name of the paper is decided on—not bigoted sectarian, or bombast. I hope, if permitted to serve my heavenly Master in this labor, to call the paper "The Bible Echo." And if it should develop from a project into an existence, may it ever be a clear echo of the Oracles of God. I desire to thank all the readers of the Crisis who have written to me, saying they have derived pleasure and edification by perusing my articles for their communications. Their many letters of praise I esteem rather as so many tender expressions of the gracious spirit of Jesus, than as the desert of the unstudied compositions of your correspondent. Happy am I that I can minister edification and pleasure to any; and more happy when it is my privilege to do so to the many intelligent brethren and sisters who take in our well-filled Crisis.

A few words more about Bible Echo. I want to commence it by the middle or end of April. The charity meetings of all England are held in May, at which season of the year there is an influx into London of all the best and noble-hearted of the so-called "orthodox." And I want to engage a lad to stand outside the door of every principal meeting and distribute copies of Bible Echo to all as they come out. But the work requires money to start it, or this cannot be done. If anybody can help, and desires to do so, any contribution can be forwarded to Eld. W. Kellaway, care of Brown & Busel, 114 North 4th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and it will be acknowledged in due time. Those who would like to have the paper, provided it comes out, can subscribe for it at $3.00 per year to the same parties. I am sure if it is commenced it will be a live paper. If for God's glory, may he help it to the birth, and sustain it in existence. W. K.

ROM. 6: 2.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?"

The strong points of doctrine which are found in the Scriptures are often a stumbling block to the weak and feeble. Such doctrines as salvation from sin, predestination, baptism of the Holy Ghost, the assurance of faith, the kingdom of God under the whole heavens, the immutable promises of Jehovah, the resurrection, the eternal judgment, the second coming of Christ, election, reprobation, the second death, etc., etc.; all these and many more appear burdensome, heavy, and hard to be understood.

The truth is, every one must be contented with such things as are adapted to their state or condition, and ask for more light and knowledge, and they will receive just as fast as they can bear it. Some persons need milk, others meat; all need patience to wait until the appointed time. Does a corn of wheat come up in a day or a week? "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." God has made everything good in its season, and a time for all things. "He that believeth shall not make haste." The German people have a motto which reads thus:—"Make haste slowly." Nothing is gained by impatience or murmuring; it serves to keep back the soul from high attainments. Remember the case of the two sisters,—Martha and Mary. Martha was bustling and over careful, while Mary was thoughtful, penetrating and intuitive. Mary was adorned with a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price. 1 Pet. 3: 4. The religious experience of every soul is gradual and natural, like that of a plant or tree; first childhood, then youth, then manhood, then maturity. The hot-bed process is not a healthy or sound one, and generally leads to premature decay.

Now let us come back to our text: "How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?" The apostle Paul intimates that a sinless life is attainable, and alludes to some who had experienced it, and asked the question, How shall we ever go back to that state again? and then quotes a figure of baptism,—death to sin, and a new life to holiness. When we consider that Jesus himself was sinless, and that perhaps many of the primitive believers were also the same, especially the apostle John, and that the way is open for others, let us not be unbelieving or unfaithful, but trust in the living God, who will do all things well, and finish the work he has begun in us; remembering this fact, that God is the author and finisher, and that we overcome through Christ, as it is stated in Rom. 8: 2,—"The law of the Spirit of life, in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death." We are not made free from sin by our own power, or good works or resolutions, but by the quickening eternal Spirit of Jesus Christ.

Then to whom belongs the glory or the honor? Not certainly to the creature, who is subject to vanity; but to the Creator, who is God over all blessed forevermore. What is now the condition of the soul after being renewed and brought into fellowship with Christ? Is it boastful, or proud, or noisy? Far different; a sweet humility and patience runs through every act and look, and contentment and peace reign within; unruffled calm, quiet, walking in the light, seeking to know the mind and will of God, satisfied with adversity or prosperity, the sanctified soul travels the pathway of holiness, believing, hoping, trusting, watching and waiting for the day of God to break upon the astonished world, expecting to participate in all its joys and emoluments through countless ages.

To conclude this epistle, we may safely say, that a course of sin persevered in will result in sorrow, anguish and death; but that a course of righteousness and holiness will lead its possessor to realms of everlasting day. Which road are we on? the road of sin and death, or the road of holiness and life? Which road, dear friend? Christ's first advent to this earth was fulfilled to the very letter, literally; so will his second advent be literal. He will come attended by saints, and by a great company of angels; then shall he sit on the throne of judgment. All nations shall be gathered before him. A separation of the good and evil will then take place. Now is the time to choose, while mercy is offered; then it will be too late. O! do not delay or procrastinate. Seize the present moment to make your peace with God.

MOMENTOUS EVENTS, AND THE RETURN OF CHRIST AT HAND.

REV. DR. CUMMING, OF LONDON.

Just before the Crimean war, in 1855, a grand international Peace Convention was held, at which distinguished men from all civilized countries were present, and the general tone of the speakers was one of hopefulness and almost prophecy that the human race had forever done with war. These hopes were soon and too effectually dispelled. The Crimean war broke out soon after, and during its time vast multitudes of lives were sacrificed. In 1859, France and Italy combined and fought Austria; in 1864, Prussia and Austria made war on Denmark; in 1866, Prussia fought against Austria. The United States were involved in a most sanguinary conflict from 1861 to 1865; and finally, in 1870-71, Prussia and France inaugurated and ended a terrible war. The eighteen years that have elapsed since this Peace Convention met, have covered a period of bloodshed unparalleled in the world's history. The hopes and prophecies of peace by the savans of Europe have been rudely blasted.

The students of prophecy were right in their interpretations of the signs of the times, and of existing facts. Events and phenomena now gathering indicate most plainly these as the beginning of sorrows, and the approach of a time of trouble (Dan. 12: 1) far more intense and widespread, at our very doors. What was anticipated in my Apocalyptic sketches, published in 1848, is now fulfilling in accomplished and accomplishing events.

Kings, soldiers, and rulers, while doing apparently their own purposes, are carrying out God's great designs. The soldier steps upon the field, and he seeks his own renown or the safety of his country, and so far he does well; the monarch mounts the throne, seeks to govern well, or to make a name that shall sound through ages; the statesman chalks out a policy, and thinks that he will bequeath a grand memory, and be mentioned by the lips of posterity with eclat;—each is following out his own end, but all are nevertheless hastening on God's objects. God has sketched the apocalyptic cartoon, and kings and statesmen and soldiers rush forward to fill it up. God has said what shall be; and men are not the sculptors, but the chisel in the great Sculptor's hand—doing his work and carrying out his designs. Such a thought is blessedness. "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy." Another element in this blessedness is, "the time is at hand," —the time of the restoration of all things. Rays from the future already gild the present; the horizon around begins to glow with the approaching splendors; and all things, phenomena, facts, revolutions, convulsions, and struggles, testify with consentaneous force, "the time is at hand."

A war of fanaticism, fierce and sanguinary, is about to rage. The Romish orders are mustering their forces, and arranging the place of battle. They are fearfully in earnest, and more formidable than armies. They use weapons, and accept a strategy tortuous and immoral, and will die rather than desist.

The terrible war of 1870 will be child's play beside theirs. Patriotism and military law have redeeming traits; but a war of fanaticism, originated and carried on by the Romish orders and their chiefs, will be redeemed by no compassions, and mitigated by no merciful considerations.

One feature has appeared in Rome itself very suggestive indeed. The Pope and his curia have come down from their isolation, and have determined to make use of the ballot-box, and win back by political action what they have lost. Scenes supposed to be the monopoly of Ireland will now be witnessed in Italy. It is the opening of a desperate campaign, the inauguration of the last conflict, and it will be fierce and unrelenting.

IMPENDING STRUGGLE OF POPERY.

The time also of the destruction of Papal Babylon is at hand. Thus while proud priests are boasting of and predicting their ascendancy, and others struggling for power are making themselves the puppets of the priests, in order to retain that power, yet Romanism is doomed. But its dying struggles will be very terrible. Satan will not let go his foothold without a desperate effort to retain it. It will be a spasmodic struggle, yet it will shake thrones, and convulse kingdoms, and perhaps light the faggots in some future Smithfield once more, before it is finally put down.

During the era of martyrs, in Diocletian's time, the only way of preaching Christ was by dying for Christ; the faggot was the only pulpit, and it was a truly impressive ministry. We live in times of sunshine and social peace; we are so accustomed to see prosperity and principle go together, that we have no idea of eras of a directly different complexion: but it may be that just as the ancient Roman empire's greatest prosperity was the eve of its greatest trials, and the Christian church, which was the one day reposing in quiet, the next was plunged into the burning fiery furnace, so our present social peace (for which we bless God) may be designed in his providence to ripen, strengthen, animate and mature us for days of martyrdom and trial that already loom in the distance. Error may once more be throned into supremacy; truth may once more be driven to the prison and to the flames; and then in such a period the reality, the depth and sincerity of our convictions will be tested, and it will be seen who are on the Lord's side, and who are not.

But in future, as well as in past persecutions, it will be found that "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." The Covenanters of the seventeenth century were the vindicators of a freedom which Scotland through them now enjoys; without their sacrifices and their sufferings, a free and Scriptural faith would have probably been entirely crushed in the north. It was they that planted the tree of freedom, watered it with the tears of weeping eyes and with the blood of warm hearts.—Signs of our Times.

Do not be afraid of making mistakes, nor be angry with those who show you how to correct them, for they are your best friends. Remember that ignorance is a blank sheet on which we may write, but error is a scribbled one on which we must first erase.

WAITING FOR THE LORD.

The people of God have always been a waiting people. If we go back to the good old patriarch Jacob, as he lay upon his dying bed, we hear him break out in language like this: "I have waited for thy salvation, O Lord." Jacob had no idea of going to heaven when he died, for he says, "I am to be gathered unto my people; bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron, the Hittite." He expected to lie down in the grave, and wait until God's plan of salvation should be completed, and then to share in that salvation with all the faithful. Patient Job says, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." Job is waiting to-day. . . .

Again, Paul exhorts the Corinthian brethren that they "come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." And again, he thanks God in behalf of the Thessalonian brethren, that they had "turned . . . from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven." And he prays that they may be directed "into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ." And in the eleventh of Hebrews, where he recounts a long list of the faithful, he says: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, . . . God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect"; so that they also are waiting for the things promised.

When John, in vision, on Patmos, heard the souls under the altar praying to be avenged, they were told that they should "rest," or wait until the number of martyrs for Jesus and his truth should be complete. And when the waiting days are over, and the King of Glory comes at last, Isaiah represents the triumphant saints as exclaiming, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

Our waiting days are almost ended; the midnight shadows are fast fleeing away; the day begins to break, and soon will burst upon us in all its resplendent glory. Let us see to it that "we come behind in no gift," but are wholly the Lord's, and with all our hearts loving the appearing of Jesus. So shall we wait with patience, yet joyful in hope, and strong in faith. He that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Let us wait for him, as they that wait for the morning.—Prophetic Times.

GOD'S ANVIL.

Pain's furnace-heat within me quivers—
God's breath upon the fire doth blow,
And all my heart in anguish shivers,
And trembles at the fiery glow;
And yet I whisper, "As God will!"
And in his hottest fire hold still.

He comes and lays my heart, all heated,
On the bare anvil, minded so,
Into his own fair shape to beat it
With his great hammer, blow on blow;
And yet I whisper, "As God will!"
And at his heaviest blows hold still.

He takes my softened heart and beats it—
The sparks fly off at every blow;
He turns it o'er and o'er, and beats it,
And lets it cool, and makes it glow;
And yet I whisper, "As God will!"
And in his mighty hand hold still.

Why should I murmur? for the sorrow
Thus only longer-lived would be;
Its end may come, and will to-morrow,
When God has done his work in me;
So I say, trusting, "As God will!"
And, trusting, to the end hold still.

He kindles, for my profit purely,
Affliction's glowing, fiery brand;
And all his heaviest blows are surely
Inflicted by a Master-hand;
So I say praying, "As God will!"
And hope in him, and suffer still.

PRAY FOR SINNERS.

D. E. BARRETT.

I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men; for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." 1 Tim. 21: 34. Will not God do all he consistently can to save men if we don't pray for them? I think so. What good can it do for us to pray for them then? God can consistently do more for them when we are anxious enough to consistently pray for them. We are coworkers with the Lord in this matter.

Christ came here to set men an example of righteousness, and suffered and died for their salvation. He has risen from the dead to die no more; and he ever maketh intercession for them, to the end they might have eternal life also. Jesus has done this. He has left this world, but we are here as his representatives—as his servants. He has honored us with a part to perform, and a portion of responsibility rests upon us. We are sent to work in his vineyard, and made stewards of the manifold grace of God. "Of stewards it is required that a man be found faithful." We, therefore, should come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

In the Bible, men may get an understanding of the gospel, by the help of the Spirit of God. But men are (in their natural state) exceedingly loth to read that book, therefore, they need before them constantly, "living epistles, known and read of all men." When exemplified before their eyes, the gospel has a new power.

Let us not try to get rid of the responsibility that is thus laid upon us, but pray for wisdom to walk worthy of our high calling before those without. Only when we are willing, and trying to do our part of the work can we pray a consistent prayer for sinners, or expect to be heard. God might send his Spirit to convict of sin, and make men uneasy about their condition; but if God's professed children are cold and indifferent as to whether they are saved or not, they are in no condition to point them to the Lamb of God. By works they deny what by words they profess. If we will live so as to convince sinners that they are living wrong, and have that burden and love for them we ought, God could and would work as he could not otherwise. "If a man be a worshiper of God and doeth his will, him he heareth."

"JUST TEN MINUTES."

S. S. WILLARD.

Said a brother, as we came from the breakfast table into the sitting-room to wait upon the Lord in prayer,—"We have just ten minutes before I must leave for the train." We handed round to each a hymn-book and Testament, and sang the hymn,—"Hail thou long expected Jesus!" then read the chapter in course, 1 John 1: then each of us, four in number, offered up an earnest prayer and closed with "the kingdom prayer" in concert, and when we rose the time had only just expired. Ah! thought I, who will neglect such a blood-bought privilege as the family prayer night and morning when it can be attended to acceptably, as we believe, in so short a time? The Lord help us all, I pray.

Haddonfield, N. J.

THOUGHTS ABOUT THE END.

One of the prominent features of the doctrines connnected with the personal coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and so fearlessly proclaimed by St. Paul, and so faithfully advocated in the columns of the Prophetic Times, has been, that the time will come "when men will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; and shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 3, 4.) And God knows that such a time, with all its fearful consequences, is upon us now, though many will not believe or consider it. And it is a fearful thought, that many who have heard, but disregarded, the clear and unmistakable testimony which you have for eleven years borne against the awful danger of disregarding the plain truths of the word of God, may be among the number of those upon whom "God shall send strong delusions, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." (2 Thess. 2: 11-12.)

During the holy Advent season, through which the Christian church has just passed, I had a conversation with a brother minister of another denomination, pastor of a large and influential congregation. In our conversation we were led to the holy season of Advent. I asked him whether many of his people were true believers in the speedy personal coming of Christ. He seemed surprised that I could entertain any idea that Christ will ever personally come to this earth again, and then replied, that the time was when he did believe such things as the personal coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, and the translation of the living, etc., but that he had long ago abandoned them as mere fancies, about which he don't concern himself. I asked him how he could possibly profess to preach the gospel and dispose of those passages of Scripture which declare so positively that Christ will come again to this world? He replied, that the only coming of Christ he could find in the Bible satisfactorily to believe in was a spiritual and providential coming. I then asked him according to what system of hermeneutics he could reconcile his views with the plain declarations of the Word of God concerning the Second Advent, contrasted with the predictions and fulfillment of the First Advent? He replied, with downcast eyes, "Yes, dear brother, I formerly thought, believed, and argued as you now do, but I suppose you have realized by experience, that such arguing and preaching will not take with the people, and hence I abandoned them, and now I cannot believe anything of the kind." I could not help but feel and exclaim with Jeremiah, "Oh that my head were waters, and my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!" Is it not a dreadful state of things when the people have such teachers?—Prophetic Times.

THE PROMISES.—A writer in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, after showing that the Bible contains a promise for every condition of heart, every state of mind, and every circumstance of life, says: "The christian should aim to live among these promises. Here should be his home. As Adam lived among the flowers of Eden, so the regenerated man should live among these promises with which the beneficent hand of the Lord has dotted and fringed the garden of religion. He should open his eyes and look on their marvelous beauty. He should take deep inspirations of the atmosphere which is full of their fragrance. All the sweetness of life is right here, and the christian should try to extract it. The higher joys of existence begin among the promises and end in their accomplishment. Here, then, let every child of God abide, realizing these joys, and qualifying his soul for the enjoyment of higher and yet still higher joys as the years of life run out into the unending cycles of eternity."

HOME AND HEALTH.

DRESS REFORM.

Dr. Horace Chase has delivered another of the series of lectures on dress reform in the vestry of the Hollis Street Church. Dr. Chase began by referring to the importance of a thorough knowledge of physiology as it relates to dress, for a lack of such knowledge was often both destructive and suicidal. He then explained some technical expressions, which, he said, would occur in the course of his lecture, and exemplified his remarks by means of diagrams, which he had on exhibition for that purpose. He gave a brief synopsis of the various apparatuses both of the organs of animal and vegetable life. Under the head of animal life he said were found the apparatus of impression, such as the eyes, ears, etc., the apparatus of locomotion, and also of the nervous system; the principal apparatus of the vegetable life was that of digestion. The lecturer then demonstrated the operations of the heart, the flowing of blood, and the effects which various diseases and disorders of the system have on it.

Diseases and affections of the heart were generally more numerous with men than women, and in about two thousand three hundred examinations of soldiers who had been wounded either by bullets or by sunstroke, he had not found a thoroughly sound heart. There were various opinions, he said, regarding the quantity of blood in the human body. The general belief was that there were between fifteen and twenty-four pounds in an adult, but recent researches have shown that it does not exceed fourteen pounds. This conclusion was arrived at by ascertaining the time which it takes for blood to make the circuit of the vessels, going from the heart through the veins and the lungs back again to the left heart. He further illustrated the action of the lungs and blood-vessels in inhaling air, oxygen and the gases, and passed on to enumerate the evils which spring from tight lacing.

These were in substance that too little blood was allowed to return to the lungs to supply the requisite amount of nourishment, and the capillary circulation was seriously obstructed. By tight lacing the natural healthy circulation of blood is demoralized, and the inhaling of a sufficient quantity of oxygen is prevented; it also causes an inadequate exchange of gases in the lungs, and impedes the free return of blood—it throws a burden on the left heart and causes it to decrease in size, and almost severs the liver in two parts, and shortens and thickens the valves of the heart—thus impeding free circulation, inhalation and respiration.

Heart disease, he said, was not, as is supposed, incurable—in fact, nearly every phase of that dreaded disease was amenable to science. If ladies were compelled by law to endure such tortures there would be such a commotion in the community as was never before witnessed, but they bear it calmly when it is enjoined by the high court of fashion. It is as sure death to bind the body as as it is to bind the neck, but may not be as quick. For the one grave that is filled with an honest corpse, there are one thousand filled with suicidal ones. The lecturer closed by impressing on the minds of his hearers the importance of a more intimate knowledge of the laws of health, and the functions of the different organs of the human system.—Globe.

HOSPITALITY.—One of the great delights of having a home of our own, is to have in it a place for friends and strangers. We do not build a house simply to meet the wants of our own families. We have one or more guest chambers, and the extension table, to which we may welcome our friends. The larger a man's means, the more liberal provision he makes for hospitality. They are greatly to be pitied who can barely supply their own physical wants; who dwell always in narrow quarters; who have no pillow or plate for strangers. The farm house generally has room enough for all, and some that we know of have an indefinite power of expansion, that rivals India rubber. The rail-car of our cities is not more accommodating. There is always room for one more, and where the welcome is so hearty, the one more sends his regrets for absence, and comes next time. There are others with houses roomy enough, but unblest with friends the year round. No one breathes the fragrance of their roses, or wipes the bloom from the clusters that are supposed to grace their tables. They live to themselves very elegantly and comfortably, it may be, but very narrowly and selfishly. The doorstep is always clean, and the lawn in front always shorn. It is kept for the eyes and not for the feet. No children play there.—Ex.

A WORD ABOUT TOBACCO.

Dr. George Trask sends us the following. It is too good to be lost:—

"MR. EDITOR—The little gibe we here affix has been kindly sent us by one of your patrons, and some fifty other friends up and down the land have done us as a similar favor:

"Bro. Trask, of Fitchburg, will be surprised to learn that Dillah Ladd, of Connecticut, who is in her one hundred and eighth year, has smoked a pipe daily for sixty years."

"About fifteen years ago I gave a lecture on the South Shore, in which I aimed to show that as the common use of tobacco diminished appetite, blood, muscle, health and strength, it must abridge life, and if so, the habit amounted to suicide in the constructive sense; hence it was a violation of the sixth commandment, and hence a sin.

"When I closed, a clergyman rose and observed: 'I believe the argument in this lecture conclusive; I believe thousands of tobacco users are poisoned to death, and are chargeable with cutting short their lives. But I have a difficult case to solve, and I wish the lecturer to solve it. I knew a man within ten miles of this place, who smoked his pipe from early life till the day of his death, and he lived to be one hundred and four years of age!'

"'Sir,' I inquired, 'are you sure the old man lived and smoked till he was a hundred and four?'

"'Yes,' he replied.

"'How did he look?'

"'He looked like an Egyptian mummy.'

"'Had he moral sensibility? Did he manifest any public spirit? did he like good schools, roads, order, and the like?'

"'O, no; no more than a mud-turtle.'

"'Had he a family?'

"'Yes, a large one, and a mean one—too large.'

"'Did he love his family?'

"'No, I think not.'

"'Did he hate his family?'

"'No, I think not.'

"'All in a word—did he love any body, or hate any body, dead or alive, in this world or in any world?'

"'No, sir; I think not.'

"'Well, well, brother, the conclusion of the whole matter is simply this,—the old man was dead fifty years ago, only you did not bury him!'"—Herald of Health.

THE ABUSE OF APPETITE.

The appetite is one of the least appreciated of nature's gifts to man. It is generally regarded in this work-a-day world as something to be either starved or stuffed, —to be gotten rid of at all events with the least inconvenience possible. There are people who are not only not glad that they have been endowed with sound, healthy bodies, for which nature demands refreshment and replenishment, but they are actually ashamed to have it known that they are sustained in the usual manner. The reason of this we are at a loss to conceive. Every body admires beauty, and there can be no true beauty without good health, and no good health without a regular and unvarying appetite. We are disinclined to let appetite take any responsibility on itself. If we happen to consider it too delicate, we try to coax it, perhaps stimulate it with highly seasoned or fancifully prepared food. There are times when this may seem necessay, as in the case of a person so debilitated as to depend for daily strength on what he eats. But, usually, the cajoling process is a mistake. If the appetite of an individual in fair bodily condition be occasionally slender, it is no cause for alarm, and it should be allowed to regulate itself. It may safely be considered nature's protest against some transgression, and it is wise not to attempt coercion.

At certain seasons, as in spring and summer, the appetite of even the robust is apt to fail, and the relish for meats and heavy food to wane. This is all right enough, for animal diet in warm weather heats the blood, tends to headaches, and is generally unwholesome, unless sparingly used. On the other hand, fresh vegetables, berries, fruit and bread are cooling, corrective, and what the palate most craves. Don't be afraid to go without meat for a month or so, and, if you like, live purely on a vegetable regimen. We will warrant that you will lose no more strength than is common to the time, and that you will not suffer from protracted heat, as when dining on the regulation roast.—Good Health.

MANAGEMENT OF CARPETS.—All kinds of carpets will wear much longer if fine straw be spread evenly on the floor, about half an inch thick, before they are fastened down. When they lie on the bare floor, the gritty dust works through them to the floor, and as they are pressed down on and among it, they will be worn out much more than when kept from it by straw. To aid in drawing carpets close up to the base board, preparatory to nailing them, drive eight or ten small nails into a piece of wood, allowing them to extend about three-eighths of an inch beyond the surface, similar to a weaver's stretcher, and file them to a sharp point. With such an instrument as this, having a long handle, one person can thrust the side of a carpet up close to the base board, and hold it with ease till it is nailed. There is some science also in the manner of sweeping carpets correctly. Instead of inclining the handle of the broom forward, and rolling the dirt along and pressing it into the carpet, by bearing down on the broom, the handle should be held nearly erect, and the dirt brushed along, by touching the carpet very lightly. In this way, both broom and carpet will be worn less, and the sweeping be done better.—Amer. Agriculturist.

CLOTHING.—The whole subject of clothing the body for protection against cold, may be summed up in a few words—dress so as to be comfortable. The fashionable style of dressing, especially among ladies and children, is such as to render them far from comfortable. The body, which needs the least clothing, is usually burdened with twice as much as necessary, while the extremities, which need the most, are very imperfectly protected. The whole thing needs to be reversed—the body needs less clothing, while the extremities require more. Some persons require much more clothing than others, therefore no rule can be established for all, any more than there can be about the the quantity of food which should be eaten, but each one must regulate the amount for himself, being careful not to wear more than is necessary for comfort, and seeing that it is equally distributed. An unequal distribution of clothing is sure to result in an unequal circulation of the blood, congestions of the head or internal organs, cold extremities, etc., while an excessive amount unnecessarily burdens the body, and by overheating, weakens the skin and renders the wearer easily susceptible to colds.—Her. of Health.

SOFTENING OF THE BRAIN.—Softening of the brain is becoming a more common disease than formerly. As it is utterly incurable, attention should be given to its causes. The softening is caused from great mental excitement, as a result of study, of the use of spirituous liquors, or allowing the mind to dwell on one subject unpleasantly, especially when there is no real cause, as in fancied slights, conjectured injuries, and the like, moping over them. To ameliorate a malady arising from causes so diametrcially opposite, antipodal means should be employed; less work to the overworked, and more work for those who have nothing to do.—Hall's Journal of Health.

ZION'S MORNING.

IDA AHLBOURN.

Zion, fair and lovely Zion!
Oh! thou chosen of the Lord!
Oh! thou one to whom is given
Sweetest promise in his word;
Be thou faithful, watch and pray,
For thy Lord may come to-day.

Oh! thou waiting, hopeful Zion,
Thy bright morning soon must dawn;
For the signs upon the heavens
Tell us night is almost gone.
Thy redemption draweth near,
Zion's King shall soon appear.

Zion long has groaned and sorrowed,
Been an outcast from the world,
Been the mark where all the wicked
Their poisonous darts have hurled;
But it cannot thus remain,
For the Lord will come again.

Zion, let no power deceive thee,
Satan comes in robes of light;
But thy God will guard and lead thee,
If thou askest him aright;
He will listen to thy cry,
Send thee aid from him on high.

Zion, be thou ever waiting,
Keep thy watchmen on the walls,
That thy lamps be brightly burning,
When thy Bridegroom for thee calls.
Be thou earnest, steady, true,
Keep his coming in thy view.

Zion, lift thy head in triumph,
Sing aloud a joyous song;
Tell to all earth's sinful nations
That thy Lord will come ere long.
He will banish thy dark night,
Bring the everlasting light.

HOW SHOULD THE NEWS OF CHRIST'S COMING BE RECEIVED?

LUTHER C. KERR.

To the above question the Bible furnishes us with one answer. We will look at it in the light of the Holy Scriptures, and ascertain the way that intelligence should be received, and then see how it is received by professed christians, and thus be able to discriminate between the right and wrong.

When Jesus Christ made his advent into the world, to redeem fallen man from the curse, and give a pledge of eternal life to as many as believed on him, the news of that event was considered "tidings of great joy"; and this was only the time of confirming the promise of those blessings made unto the fathers, and not the time of fulfilling them. But now we have reached a time when those promises are about to be fulfilled, and how should it be received? If the confirmation of those promises was "tidings of great joy," how much more glorious ought the news of their fulfillment to be?

In Luke we have an account of the Savior's birth, his first advent into the world, and the manner in which it was received. "And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is Bethlehem, . . . to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn. And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy. . . . For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. . . . And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." How did the shepherds receive these tidings? "And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them."

Here was the way that Christ's first advent was regarded by primitive christians. They could glorify and praise God that he had given his only begotten Son, in his good will, to save mortal and sinful man. The gift was appreciated by these few humble shepherds, and some few others; and they thanked God that he "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "And this life is in his Son." He who believes on the Son of God has the testimony in himself. And this is the testimony, that God has given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. So that we have the witness in ourselves, but Christ has the life in himself; and "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then [not before] shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3: 3, 4.

Angels termed the advent an important event, and, when sent to proclaim it, called it "good tidings of great joy"; and the aged prophet Simeon regarded it in the same manner, who was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel. It was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ. And when he had come into the temple, he took the child up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation. . . . A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel." Many other such witnesses could be produced, to show that ancient christians considered the news of a coming Savior a glorious message.

We find a great deal said in the Scriptures about the coming of the Lord, and of the importance of it; and also the waiting for it,—a waiting for the Life giver—Christ, and not the Life-taker—Death, as many teach and believe these days.

Let us now see how the apostles regarded the coming of Christ. Paul seems to talk a great deal of the waiting for the coming of Christ. In his exhortation to the church of God, he says, "Even as the testimony of Jesus was confirmed in you, so that ye come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." "There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness [he says], which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Here Paul talks as though saints would love the appearing of Christ, and none others would be entitled to a crown of righteousness. Peter says, "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." John says, "Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he [Christ] is pure." The Revelator says, "The nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to thy saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great." Here is the time of reward; and John closes his Revelation by saying, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

It is no wonder that the apostles talked and longed so much for that day, for it will be the coronation day,—the time when Christ is to come and bring his reward with him; the righteous will shine forth in the kingdom of their Father. God himself will wipe away all tears from his children's eyes, and "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." Who among christians (for I speak to those who profess to be such) can regard that time other than a glorious day. If any man fix a time for reward this side of that day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to Paul's gospel (Rom. 2: 16), he must do it on his own responsibility, for there is no Bible to sustain him in his position.

Paul says, "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." And who will say that he was wrong about looking for Christ the second time, to bring salvation to his people? He seems here again to limit the blessing to a watching people, who are watching and waiting for Christ to appear the second time. And he tells us in another place who to wait for. "To wait for his [God's] Son from heaven." "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days" (years), is the language of the angel to Daniel (12: 12) concerning a people that should live down at the end of those days. The Revelator says, "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." This is the time when he comes as a thief; and then the blessing is only promised to those who wait and watch for Christ.

Paul says we should look "for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall be take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and will save us." Another says, "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God."

Reader, this is the patience and faith of the saints. They have been looking and waiting for life, not death. They all looked forward to that blessed hope which should be consummated at the revelation of Jesus Christ, when faith shall be swallowed up in sight. "For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." We are admonished all through the Scriptures, by prophets and by the Savior and his apostles, to hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the appearing of Christ. So we see the great love manifested by those worthies for the coming of Christ, and the way they treated it. They all considered it in the same light, and spoke of it as did the angel of the first advent—"tidings of great joy."

But now the scale is turned among professing christians. They tell us that it does not matter when Christ comes; that we can get our reward independent of that time; that death is the redeemer now, and he liberates us from this world of sin and care, and ushers us into the kingdom of God. Him whom Paul called "the last enemy" robs Christ of his title and office, and officiates in his stead. Death's advent is a great deal more esteemed than Christ's, for they consent to yield to the sway of the former, but not the latter. When we talk of death coming upon christians, they receive the news willingly; but when we talk of Christ coming, we are branded as "infidels." We may preach anything but the coming of Christ and resurrection of the dead, and drift along with the tide; but just as soon as we preach this "meat in due season," then persecution comes. I would ask the candid reader if this is not fulfilling this scripture—"We will not have this man to reign over us"? If it is not saying so in heart, then I do not understand the meaning of the passage.

Friends, is this the way christians should regard the coming of the blessed Master? Let candid people answer. I say it is an utter impossibility for any man, or class of men, to love Christ, and yet hate his appearing; for they are destitute of that "hope" which purifies. I do not say it is impossible for a person to be in ignorance with regard to the appearing of Christ, and yet love his appearing; but I do say it is impossible for a person to love him, and hate to see him come; for he says in John 14—"If a man love me, he will keep my sayings"; and one of his sayings is, "When these things [signs of his coming] begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." Now to disregard these sayings, is to disregard their author—Christ, and this is manifested by all who oppose his coming. Since the apostle has made a criterion, and also a test question of the coming of Christ, we have a right to apply the same rule, viz., "There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, . . . shall give . . . not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." "Unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Here is surely a limitation of salvation to a particular class of people,—a people that are to love his appearing, and not a people that oppose it. If men could all read the Bible with an eye single to the glory of God, and irrespective of human creeds and selfish motives, we should have more real God loving and God fearing people than we have. If they would only believe the Bible as it reads, all would be plain.

JOHN 8: 42.

B. PERHAM.

"If God were your Father, ye would love me."

Some persons are so full of self-conceit, that they seem to consider themselves the standard of all worth and excellence, and are disposed to judge of others principally by their regard for them. If you dislike them, you are worthless; but just in proportion as you esteem and admire them, you rise in value. And such is the injustice of our fallen nature, that we are pleased with commendation which we know we do not deserve, and court praise for abilities and qualities which we do not possess. It was not so with Christ. He was meek and lowly in heart; and if he spoke highly of himself, it was not from pride and vain glory, but from the necessity of the case. He knew himself. He knew his importance to us; therefore he said, Come unto me"; "I am the light of the world"; "I am the bread of life"; "I am the way, the truth, and the life"; "This is life eternal, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." He knew that God's relation to us could only be determined by our regard to himself, and therefore he was authorized to say, "If God were your Father, ye would love me." There can be no doubt of this; for he that belongs to God by adoption will love the Spirit of God, and will love to follow its leading and heavenly influences. He will also love the Word of Truth, and love to obey it; and will show by his daily walk and conversation that he is the friend of God, as did Abraham.

It is a great thing to have God for our Father,—not by creation, in which sense all mankind are his offspring; but by adoption, and by regeneration. What honor, to be the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty! to have free and invited access to him! to share in the love and pity of his heart! to be heirs of God to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us!

But how are we to obtain this great privilege? We answer, by our regard to Christ. If God is our Father, we love him. If this love of God is firmly established in our hearts, we love everything that God loves, and hate everything that God hates. Do we love the word of God, and is it daily our delight? Can I say, Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy words were unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart? Can I say, I have loved the habitation of thy house? Can I say, I love the place where thine honor dwelleth? If this is the case with us, we can approach the throne of grace with delight, and pray—Lord, remember me with the favor thou bearest unto thy people. If we really love the Savior, we shall hate everything that is done or said against him, and everything that displeases him. I love my dear Savior so much that it makes me hate sin in all its forms.

O, give me Jesus, and you may have all the world beside. What a miserable being I should be if I did not have sweet communion with Jesus every day. When he comes by his Spirit to visit me, I lose sight of all other things; and this earth and all its treasures then look small to me.

Dear child of grace, hear the advice of an old man of seventy-two winters, who has been a soldier of the cross fifty-two years: Be sure to keep close to the Savior. Satan cannot have you, unless you wander away from him. Do not grieve such a friend, and do not grieve the tender Spirit of God. May the good Lord help us all to be ready when Jesus comes. Amen.

DID CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, MAKE THE WORLD?—No. 2.

1 JOHN 5: 7, 8.

J. S. WHITE.

"For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one." The seventh verse is said to be wanting in most of the ancient Greek copies, and therefore it is claimed by some to be spurious. Some of the modern translators have left it out, while they retain the eighth verse as being correct. In Henry's Commentary there is a very conclusive argument, showing that this seventh verse was written by John. One evidence given is that Tertullian and Cyprian both refer to this passage in their writings. Tertullian died A. D. 240. Cyprian was beheaded A. D. 258. Focundus, referring to Cyprian, says, "Blessed Cyprian, the Carthagenian Bishop and Martyr, in the epistle or book he wrote concerning the Trinity, considered the testimony of the apostle John as relating to the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit; for he says, 'The Lord says, I and the Father are one'; and again, 'These three are one.' Now it is nowhere written that these three are one, but in verse 7."

Dr. John Gill says: "This text is so glaring a proof of the doctrine of the Trinity, that the enemies of it have done all they can to weaken its authority, and have pushed hard to extirpate it from a place in the sacred writings; but it is to be traced up within a hundred years, or less, to the writing of the epistle; which is enough to satisfy any one of the genuineness of this text. And there never was any dispute about it, until Erasmus left it out in the first edition of his translation of the New Testament; and yet he himself, upon the credit of the old British copy, before mentioned, put it into another edition of his translation. Yea, the Socinians themselves have not dared to leave it out in their German Racovian version, 1630. To which may be added, that the context requires it." Erasmus died A. D. 1536.

Prof. Goussen has devoted a short space to this text in his work on the Inspiration of the Bible. He reads the verse thus: "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one (en); and there are three which bear record in earth, the spirit, the water, and the blood; and the three agree in this one (to en)." The text of Griesbach reads: "There are three which bear witness in the earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in that one (to en)." He says, "We should deviate from our subject, were we to undertake a review of the historical evidences and the grammatical considerations which, on the other hand, plead for the preservation of the ancient text; we, therefore, confine ourselves to these two remarks of Bishop Middleton. First: 'Why are the words the three in the masculine in the Greek, while the words spirit, water, and blood, with which they are connected, are all in the neuter?' This irregularity, which is fully warranted,—by that which is grammatically termed the principle of attraction,—if the passage remained entire, becomes inexplicable when you would retrench the disputed words. Secondly, 'Why, especially, the word this one (to en—the one) if a certain one had not been spoken of in the preceding words?' Bishop Middleton devotes eighteen pages to it in his valuable book on the doctrine of the Greek article. 'I cannot conceive,' he remarks in conclusion, 'how this word this one (to en) can be reconciled with the retrenchment of the preceding words.'"

Prof. Goussen adds the following note, under the head of historical evidence that these words should not be retrenched: those of several Latin fathers of the second, third, fourth and fifth centuries; those of the Latin Vulgate, more ancient than the most ancient manuscripts of our public libraries (which are said to be of the fifth or end of the sixth century); and especially that of the Confession of Faith, publicly presented A. D. 484 by four hundred African Bishops, who were persecuted by the Arian king of the Vandals on account of their doctrines.

Prof. Stowe, in his work on the "Origin and History of the books of the Bible," cites Tertullian's words on 1 John, "Which three are one." It will be borne in mind that Prof. Goussen, in proof of the genuineness of this text, refers to the Latin fathers as far back as the second century, and to the most ancient version, the Latin Vulgate.

If there are those who think they must get this text out of the way, in order to show that Christ did not exist before he became flesh, they may have their own way, so far as the argument is concerned; for there is proof enough of this doctrine without referring to this passage. That this passage is true, whether John wrote it or not, is manifestly plain from other passages. Christ has borne record, the Father has borne record, and the Holy Ghost has borne record. These are the three who have borne record to the same things, and they are in heaven, and they are the "one." Jesus said, "I and my Father are one." He told his disciples to baptize "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

Dr. Burkitt says: "The Father bore witness both at Christ's baptism and at his transfiguration, when with audible voice he declared, 'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.' The Word bore record of himself, affirming frequently, plainly, and directly, that he was the Son of God, and making it manifest, by his doctrine and miracles, that he came from the Father. The Spirit bore witness to this, partly by descending on him at his baptism, and partly by descending on his apostles at the feast of Pentecost."

Note 1. How could Tertullian, referring to John's first letter, say, "which three are one," unless he found these words there? Tertullian lived within a hundred years from the death of John.

Note 2. The Latin Vulgate which contains this passage is a translation by Jerome in the third century.

REST.

C. MENDENHALL.

It is perfectly legitimate and quite natural for us to desire rest.

In our daily routine of labor and study, the organs used become fatigued and cry out for rest; but true, settled, undisturbed repose is not obtainable in this present state. Rest with us is synonymous with change. We labor until tired, then repose until this in its turn becomes tiresome. We are ever shifting in an endless restlessness of change, seeking for that which can only be had in God's own time. Rest we have not yet received. Paul says—"For if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day. There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." Heb. 4; 8, 9. What a blissful hope is here set forth to those who sigh for rest. Those who are racked and tormented by pain,—those who are broken down, and perhaps almost weary of life by servitude,—by the heavy burdens and struggles against poverty and misfortune.

When that glorious rest is ushered in we shall hear no more blasphemy, see no more evil, nor will our senses be polluted by deflements in that pure atmosphere. Rest is sweet after toil. What a joyous rest is in store for faithful toiling ones.—"For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his." We shall rest from all the unhappy influences by which we are now surrounded. Separation no longer shall part us from loved ones;—sickness no longer destroy our comfort and health;—sin gone;—death's power ended;—all is joy, peace, and safety, without alloy, without fear, and unending, everlasting, eternal.

Can it be that all this is in reservation for poor, weak, sinful mortals? yea, even so: for thus saith the Lord—"He that overcometh, shall inherit all things." Rev. 21: 7. God help us to overcome worldliness, strife, any evil which may present a barrier to the attainment of immortality, honor, glory, and eternal life.

"Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." We cannot expect rest here, we are pilgrims—strangers, away from home;—our treasures, our hearts, are elsewhere. Like the patriarchs of old, we confess that we are seeking and desiring a "better country, that is, a heavenly."

Now sinner, Jesus says, "come unto me and find rest for your souls. Will you come? Will you take his easy yoke, and with us, journey on full of hope and joy substantial—real? Let us pray for one another, that when Jesus comes we may be found among those of whom it is written—And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21: 4.

2 COR. 13: 5.

H. A. HOTT.

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith."

The above words were made the foundation of two excellent discourses, one in the afternoon, and the other in the evening, delivered at the residence of Bro. Shaw, in this city, yesterday, by our worthy Bro., Elder John T. Ongley, of Crawford Co., Penn., who visits the little flock in this sincursed city once in four weeks. The text, as you will see, is a very good one, and I assure you the Elder handled the subject well; telling us what it is, in the first place, to have faith, why we should have it, and how to examine ourselves and measure our faith by the gospel standard, so as to know whether we were in the faith once delivered to the saints. He fully demonstrated the fact that nothing, except such a faith in Jesus as the gospel of our Lord required, could possibly secure to us a blissful immortality beyond this life. Also, there was brought out the true Bible doctrine, that those of us, who, through a perfect faith in and love for Christ, were rewarded by eternal life, would not spend that life in heaven, the present abode of our Savior, but that to the redeemed of all generations, nations, and kindred would be given the land promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to be the inheritance of themselves and their seed forever. As that promised land was shown and pointed out to Moses, it follows that it is on the earth we now occupy; and that when God shall have removed the curse which has rested on it so long, it will then be purified and made the happy eternal home of the redeemed,—a home made glorious by the constant presence of our blessed Lord and Savior.

The services in the afternoon and evening were solemn and impressive; and while there I could but wish that such sermons could be preached to larger audiences. But the number who are willing to listen to real gospel truth as it comes pure from the prophets, apostles, and the Savior himself seems to be very small in this city. Let an infidel, or spiritualist meeting be advertised, and our largest hall would be nearly or quite filled; but let it be known that a man is going to speak on the second coming of our Savior, and but few would be interested enough to pay it any attention. Those who profess to be christians will not come to hear the truth for fear they will be converted. The words of our Savior, when he said, "Ye will not come unto me, that ye might have life," would be applicable to very many at the present day. But I tell you, dear brethren, there will come a time when all, professors and non-professors, will have to believe in the second personal appearing of our Lord; and that will be when he comes in the clouds of heaven with power and glory, to call unto himself those whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life; and with them and for them establishes his kingdom on earth.

Let us, who are looking for his coming, earnestly watch and pray for it, so that when he comes we may be found with our lamps trimmed and burning. Let us labor on in faith, turning as many as we can from the errors of their ways unto our God, who will abundantly pardon all who come unto him.

THE HIGHER CHRISTIAN LIFE.

WHAT IS IT?

REV. W. E. BOARDMAN.

It is a full, abiding union between the soul and the Savior; or Christ accepted as wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. Or, the realization of the presence of Jesus to deliver the soul from sin, and keep it by his own power through faith. Or, being emptied of self—self-dependence and self-seeking and self-complacency, as well as from self-righteousness—and finding all in Christ, and so being filled with the fullness of God.

It is not Perfectionism or Antonomianism. Perfectionism is believing one's self to be made perfect; the very opposite of dying to or being emptied of self, and finding all in Christ.

Antinomianism is believing Christ to be so formed in one's self as to take the place of his own soul, so that his actions are no longer his own, but Christ's be they good or bad. A very different thing from believing that Christ, as a living Savior, takes one under his care, takes up his abode in him, gives him the Holy Spirit to dwell in him, and so teaches, leads, and purifies him unto himself, and fills him with his own presence, love, joy, and peace, and works in him to will and to do of his own good pleasure, as a free man in Christ Jesus, whose willings and doings are all his own, though wrought in him by the Lord.

It is not entire sanctification as a work done up, complete at once and forever. It is indeed the entire giving up of one's self to Jesus, that he may sanctify us by his Spirit through the truth, and it is entire trust in him as taking the matter into his own hands, even as he took the work of atoning for our sins; but justification and sanctification differ in this, that the soul's justification is completed when committed to Christ, but its sanctification is committed to him to complete.

The abandonment of the soul to Christ, and rest of soul in him, is alike instantaneous in both cases, but the two things are essentially different in this, that one is a complete thing, and the other a process to be completed.

How is to be received? By faith. Simple faith.

By giving one's self wholly over into the hands of Jesus, to be delivered from sin and kept by his power through faith, and presented faultless before the throne of God's glory.

This implies the giving up of all things standing in the way, fear of what the world may say, or what the church may say, or how it may affect one's business, or reputation, or anything else. And the giving up of one's self to Christ to be wholly his in time, and talents, and influence, and possessions, to be ruled in all by him, as well as taught by him and atoned for by him.

It implies, also, the recognition of the fact that Christ is always with us, to deliver, to keep, to lead, and teach, and use us, and that we are to live, in our daily life, in every thing, by faith in him.

What is the good of it? Peace of mind passing all understanding, joy unspeakable and full of glory, daily walking with God in the light as he is in the light, daily fellowship with him and with his Son Jesus Christ in the Holy Ghost.

Power—power to understand the will of God and do it joyfully; power to prevail with God and man, to ask and receive; power to witness for Jesus; power to love God with all the heart, and to love the brethren, deeply, sweetly, truly, and to love sinners, even the chiefest and most degraded.

Fruitage abundant—in souls saved, even amongst the worst and hardest of the race—three thousand in a day at Pentacost, in Jerusalem, where Jesus had just been put to death, many of them those who had vociferously clamored for his crucifixion; and the world overspread with the glad tidings in a single generation, without the aid of press, or electricity, or steam.

There is no limit to the good of it. It is to lift the church up out of self, and sect, and conformity to the world, and bind it in one, in Christ, fill it with the fullness of God, and give it power to conquer the world for Jesus.

WHAT SAITH THE SCRIPTURES?

First.—That Christ is our life, whether we have it less or more abundantly. Jesus says of himself, John 14: 6,—I am the way, the truth, and the life. He says of us, in John 3: For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish, but have everlasting life. He says of the life itself, John 17,—This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent. And John says of us in his first epistle, v. 12: He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. And in the 20th verse: We are in him that is true—in his Son Jesus Christ This is the true God and eternal life.

Second. That in Christ we have life not only, but have more abundant life. He says, John 10: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. And the apostle Paul tells us in Ephesians 3: 17-23: That he bows his knees to the God and Father of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, for this cause, that He will strengthen you [christians who have life in Christ] by his Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in you; that ye may be rooted and grounded in love, and be able, with all saints, to comprehend what is the length and breadth, and depth and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all the fullness of God. And then he closes with this wonderful doxology—Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

Third. That in Christ we have abiding life through our union with him. John 15: 1-10.

Fourth. That our life in Christ, by union with him, is a matter of actual knowledge. He says, in John 14: 20: At that day—the day to be ushered in by the gift of the Holy Ghost to dwell in us—ye shall know that I am in the Father and ye in me, and I in you.

Fifth. That Christ our life is, 1st, himself ever with us: "Lo! I am with you alway, unto the end of the world." Matt. 28: 20. 2. Together with the Father, John 14: 23: "My Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." 3. And gives us the Holy Ghost to dwell in us continually: "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever." And thus we are made temples of the Triune God—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Sixth. That by our union with Christ, and his gift of the Spirit to us from the Father, we are, 1st, made willing to give all up and walk in the will of God, Psalm 90: 3: "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power in the beauties of holiness." 2d, are taught by the Spirit. John 14: 26: "The Comforter, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you." 3d, are led by the Spirit. Rom. 8: 1. 4th, are delivered from sin to serve the Lord. Luke 1: 75: "Without fear, in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life." 5th, are purified unto Christ, a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Titus 2: 2. 6th, are kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation. Kept in perfect peace, Isaiah 26: 7th, are preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord. 1st Thess. 5: 23. 8th, do receive power in receiving the Holy Ghost. Acts 1: 8. 9th, are made witnesses unto Christ. Acts 1: 8. 10th, and conquerors, and more than conquerors, through him who hath loved us.

Seventh. That Christ is complete, and that we are complete in him. Colossians 2: 9, 10. "For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and ye are complete in him." 1 Cor. 1: 30, 31. "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, that according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord."

RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL THINGS.

All things are of God, and he wants the credit of creating them. To withhold this from him is to deny his supremacy. If another has created anything, God is not God. If anything has come by chance, then there is something without him, and therefore he is not God. If all visible and material things are by him, then all invisible and spiritual things must be believed to be. If he has created all positive things, he must be the author of all negative things.

God takes the responsibility of all things: therefore we should not fear that his character will suffer by our affirming that he is responsible for them. The Creator of all things must be responsible for all that he has made, and he will vindicate his right to do with all things as he pleases. If he has the right to create, he has the right, also, to destroy. If he has the right to make a law, he has the right to annul it.

All things are for a purpose, and when that purpose is accomplished, the things may either cease to exist or continue. God may raise up some men to do his will, while they may have no saving knowledge of him, and so be lost. He may raise up others to do another work and cause them to understand his character and obey his precepts and be saved. This is according to the Record. God takes the responsibility of doing this, and shall we fear that his character will suffer if we grant it? Shall not the Creator and "Judge of the earth do right?" Should we not have a perfect confidence in God? and when he manifests his supreme wisdom and power, be as ready to acquiesce in them as in his infinite love and mercy? Are not his infinite love and mercy based on his infinite wisdom and power? How could he have the latter without the former? The right to the full exercise of the former we must grant, yea believe in, or we are without true faith in Him.

While God is willing that we should examine into his character and acts, he is not willing that we should criticise them by the standard or characters of men. He has never submitted to this, nor will he ever. This Cowper felt when he wrote—

"Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
But trust him for his grace;
Behind a frowning providence
He hides a smiling face."

ENDURANCE.

Endurance is a state of lasting, or duration, and implies bearing suffering, trial, pain or distress, without yielding to opposition. We do not endure joy or pleasure, but the opposite—grief, difficulty.

Jesus, in describing the experience of his Church in the last days, says, "But he that shall endure unto the end the same shall be saved." This language implies danger, trouble, unpleasant circumstances, which will demand perseverance, stability, decision and much grace. God's people have always experienced trying and dangerous circumstances, which demanded grace to carry them safely through, but the Scriptures clearly teach that the last days will be more perilous than any preceding period. The Bible also clearly teaches in what those special trials and snares will consist. It declares that many will scoffingly reject the Word of God and be lead by the teachings of "spirits," while others will profess to believe it, but will teach it as men teach "fables;" making the language represent unreal thing and events, while the true lesson to be learned is the moral to be deduced from the imaginary things expressed, thus destroying all divine authority in the language employed. It also shows that these teachers will draw many after them by using "great swelling words," showing themselves learned and eloquent, "having men's persons in admiration because of advantage;" that is, use their fabled arguments and eloquence to draw the honorable and rich, so as to secure personal advantages—fame and wealth. Lukewarmness will also prevail, which will cause worldly mindedness; keeping up the form of godliness but denying the power; producing false hopes and thus drown many in perdition.

We are also taught that "jealousy" will be stirred up "like a man of war," to "gather the nations" and "assemble the kingdoms;" so that "all the earth" shall "be devoured" by "the fire" of it. See Zeph. 3: 8, and Isa. 42: 13. It will be jealousy in the last days that will burn up all the adhesive power of human associations, so that kingdoms and empires will be marshaled in terrible hostility, while communities and families will be crumbling into disintegration. The church of Christ will not be able to escape the effects and dangers of this terrible malaria, which will sweep over the world like a wave of death. It will tear the State and church into factions, and threaten the union and harmony of Christ's own Bride. It is this iniquity which is abounding and causing the "love of many to wax cold." It is this flood of jealousy, now pervading our world which particularly demands enduring grace; for it is producing a large crop of evil surmising, grudging one against another, backbiting and many evil practices which we fear will fatally ensnare many. It drives away the Holy Spirit, and leaves a spirit of rivalry and contention. It destroys the purity and sweetness of devotion, and establishes will worship, and, as Wesley said, "sour godliness." These fatal snares and perils are evidently very rapidly increasing around us. We are in the midst of the last fearful tempest.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ, we appeal to you not to be unduly excited with any question of faith, spirit, or mode of worship, definite time of Christ's coming, justification or condemnation of brethren, or any other subject which may tend to disturb the calm quiet of your soul. We now need emphatically the sober second thought before we move or decide. Be not hasty to condemn any of your brethren in Christ, but remember that this is the age of jealousy and that it seems almost as if the air is pregnant with it. Every body feels the power of its mighty waves pressing them to receive some evil thought, to say some harsh word, to suffer your sweet fellowship to be soured, and your heavenly harmony to become discord and bitter strife. If you have been injured, bear it quietly; Jesus will surely acquit the innocent, and condemn the guilty. Judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come. That is his work, and not ours. He will attend to it in due time, and do it correctly, without injury to any one. Be calm in the midst of the storm, and be sure that you have the spirit which Jesus had, and it will make you treat people very much as he did. When you are reviled you will not revile again; and when you are persecuted you will not threaten, but commit your reputation, character and all, into the hands of the great Judge. Visit the closet often, for that is the counter where you receive your supplies. Be sure and know that it is the fixed purpose of your heart to injure no one, and to do good unto all men as far as possible.

May the God of all grace give us power to endure as seeing Him who is invisible, a little longer, and then we shall rest from trial, and rest with Jesus forever. J. C.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16: 3.

After the Savior had spoken of the wars, famines, pestilences, and earthquakes "in divers places," which must first transpire, he says:—

"Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. Matt. 24: 9–13.

In the Scripture just quoted, as related to what precedes it, it appears that after a portion of the wars, famines, pestilences and earthquakes have occurred, "then" special afflictions and persecutions would come upon the saints. We believe this refers to the period when the Papal power commenced its bloody work of putting to death the disciples of Christ, under Justinian, in the early part of the sixth century.

When referring to the work to be done before his return, the Savior says in the 14th verse: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

It is said the "gospel of the kingdom" has now been preached to every nation on the globe. This has been specially accomplished during the last seventy years, by the missionary labors of the friends of Jesus. According to this sign, "the end" must be near. The Savior then refers specially to the power that would do the persecuting work, and gave instruction for those who should be living at that time:

"When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand.) Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains: Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take any thing out of his house; Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes. And woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days! But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath day; for then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Matt. 24: 15–22.

When speaking of this period (about A. D. 533), in his noted history of the Popes, Bower says: "While the Arian king striving, by the most just and equitable laws, to clear the church from all simony in the west, the Catholic Emperor [Justinian] was employing the most unjust and unchristian means of clearing her from all heresies in the east, that of persecution, and the most cruel persecution any christian Emperor had yet set on foot, or countenanced. For by an edict which he issued to unite all men in one faith, whether Jews, Gentiles, or Cristians, such as did not, in the term of three months, embrace and profess the Catholic faith, were declared infamous: and as such, excluded from all employments, both civil and military; rendered incapable of leaving anything by will, and their estates confiscated, whether real or personal. These were convincing arguments of the truth of the Catholic faith; but many, however withstood them; and against such as did, the imperial edict was executed with the utmost rigor. Great numbers were driven from their habitations with their wives and children, stripped and naked. Others betook themselves to flight, carrying with them what they could conceal for their support and maintainance, but they were plundered of the little they had, and many of them inhumanly massacred by the Catholic peasants, who guarded the passes."—Bower's History of the Popes, Vol. 1, p. 334.

Although the persecutions of the Roman power commenced in the first century against the christians, we do not reach "the great tribulation" of the saints till the "little horn," referred to in Dan. 7: 8, 11, 20, 21, began to do his terrible work, in the sixth century. In verse twenty-one it is said, "Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." There are two classes of people upon whom this tribulation might come—the righteous and the wicked. There can be but one period in the history of the world, when the righteous will suffer a tribulation surpassing anything before it or after it; and there can be but one such on the wicked. If the "great tribulation," spoken of in Matt. 24: 21, was at the destruction of Jerusalem, it certainly was not upon the righteous, for they all escaped. It is said there were only about three hundred of them, and when the Roman general withdrew his troops for a time from the city, then all who trusted in Jesus went out unharmed.

As "the great tribulation" was not upon the righteous, at the destruction of Jerusalem, was the tribulation upon the wicked in that city beyond any that there has been "since the beginning of the world," or that "ever shall be?" At the seige of Jerusalem, in A. D. 70, about one million and one hundred thousand Jews perished by the Roman power. It was truly a sad time for those who had rejected Christ. But leaving that scene, and looking back to the flood, we find a tribulation upon the wicked surpassing a thousand fold that which took place at the destruction of Jerusalem. The lowest estimate we have seen made for the number of inhabitants at the time of the deluge, was sixteen hundred millions. If we throw off four hundred millions, there would then be left about the same number as at the present time; or over a thousand times as many as perished at Jerusalem.

Again, the tribulation at the end of the world, when Christ shall come, will be as great in numbers, as in Noah's time, and more intense in feeling than at Jerusalem or the flood. Their feelings are described in Rev. 6: 15–17, at the time the heaven will depart "as a scroll when it is rolled together." At that time, the agony of the unsaved will be so great, that they will call for "the mountains and rocks" to fall on them, and hide them "from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb," saying, "The great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" At the time of the flood, and the destruction of Jerusalem, the wicked sought to save their lives, but when they shall be convinced that "the great day" of the Lord has truly come, they will prefer to be crushed by rocks and mountains, rather than to be brought to judgment. Hence we have found a tribulation on the wicked, both before and after the destruction of Jerusalem, far exceeding what happened when that city was overthrown by the Romans, in A. D. 70. For these reasons, we do not see how the "great tribulation" mentioned in Matt. 24: 21, can apply to the destruction of Jerusalem.

If it was not in the first century upon the wicked, it must have been at a later date upon the righteous, or else it is now future. But when we look back into the dark ages, between the time of Justinian and the latter part of the eighteenth century, we find that the christians passed through a time of tribulation "such as was not since the beginning of the world" to that time; and we have the assurance from Christ, that there shall be no more to equal it, as it closed up near the end of the last century. SABBATH DISCUSSION.

After showing that the first covenant was the one "written and engraven on stones" on mount Sinai, and that it was the only covenant from the mount given to Moses and the children of Israel, we then proceeded to show that that old covenant was abolished, being ended at the cross; hence not binding on any one now, excepting what might be incorporated into the new covenant. For proof of this, we called attention to Heb. 8: 6–10, 13, as follows:

"He is the Mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he said, Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt, because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people. . . . In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." Heb. 9: 15. "And for this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first Testament, they which are called might receive the promise of an eternal inheritance."

Here we find the apostle speaking of a "better covenant," than "that first covenant," which was not "faultless;" for if it "had been" . . . then should no place have been sought for the second." That the "first covenant" was the one "written and engraven on stone" there seems to be no room for doubt; and the second one, the better one, was the one of which Jesus was the Mediator, and which he dedicated with his own blood, shed on the cross. Then and there the new covenant came into force. Jesus had taught its principles during his ministry, but in no case do we find him instructing his disciples to keep the seventh-day Sabbath. Why was this subject entirely omitted, if it is now as important as some seem to think?

It is sometimes said that the Lord transferred to the hearts of the people what was written on the stones. In such a case, it would not be "a new covenant," but the transfer of the old one, which would be contrary to the Bible, which expressly says, the new covenant is "not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt." As the one on the "stones" was the one made when they came out of Egypt, and the new one is "not according "to that, it follows the new one is not a transfer of the old one from the stones to the hearts of the people.

When we look at the experience under the old and new covenants, we find a marked difference. The old is like a cloudy day, the new like a clear, sunshiny one. Under the old it was chilly; under the new it is warm. The old was gloomy, the new joyful. Those who attempt to keep the old covenant are liable to become strongly sectarian, and exclusive in their feelings towards those who do not keep the seventh day, This is an ugly feature, entirely unlike the sweet spirit of Christ, and sufficient to show that the pretense of keeping the old covenant does not make any improvement in the spirit of those who go back to the institution of the Jewish people. When we look for the benefits produced by changing from the first to the seventh day, they seem to be wholly wanting. We inquire, do such love God any better than those who keep the first day? Do they live any better? Have they more of the Spirit of Christ?

What is the response of the Affirmative? We are sure the change is not a favorable one. We have pressed the Affirmative to tell us the consequence of not keeping the seventh day, but we do not receive any satisfactory answer.

"The first covenant had also ordinances of divine service." Heb. 9: 1. As no other covenant, but the one given on mount Sinai, "had . . . ordinances," we are compelled to admit that is the one denominated "the first covenant," and the first is but another name for the "old," which is the one abolished by the establishing of the new one, of which Christ was the Mediator.

When speaking of the "divine service" of the first covenant, the Lord gave the following instruction: "Thou shalt take fine flour, and bake twelve cakes thereof; two tenth deals shall be in one cake, and thou shalt set them in two rows, six in a row, upon the pure table before the Lord. And thou shalt put pure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on the bread for a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the Lord. Every Sabbath he shall set it in order before the Lord continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant." Lev. 24: 5–8. "And on the Sabbath day two lambs of the first year without spot, and two tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, and the drink offering thereof; this is the burnt offering of every Sabbath, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering." Num. 28: 9. This is the law regulating the "divine service" of Sabbath ordinance. Who observes it now? The penalty for not keeping the seventh-day Sabbath according to the law was very strict and severe. Whenever the Jews neglected their memorial day, that commemorated their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, it was equivalent to forgetting the Lord, and turning to idols. The Lord says: "Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep; for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you. Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death; for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. Six days may work be done, but in the seventh is the Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord; whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death." Ex. 31: 13–15. As the penalty has not been in force since the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ, it follows that the commandment against working on Saturday is also abolished. To say that a law is binding after the penalty is removed from the statute book would be to talk nonsense. If there is no penalty, there is no danger of harm, even if the law be disregarded. The simple fact is this: When the old covenant was abolished, all the ordinances and divine service went with it, to be revived no more for ever. M. O.

SISTER L. H. LARRANCE wishes to acknowledge the receipt of $31.50 for the relief of the sufferers by famine in N. W. Iowa. They are still in need, and will be until another harvest. May the Lord bless them with all needed assistance and abundant harvests until the end of famine and death. J. C.

She says: "I feel it my duty to thus publicly thank all who have so promptly responded to my appeal, and may the Father of mercies bless you all is my prayer, and may you never experience the realities of such a struggle. Pray for us, that we may be willing to sacrifice all upon the altar to Christ, and be meek and lowly followers of Jesus, that when the cry is made, 'Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him,' we may have our lamps trimmed and burning, with oil in our vessels, and thus hail him with gladness, and not with grief. I am in love your sister, LYDIA H. LARRANCE. Address Sheldon, Obrien Co., Iowa."

BRO. A. DURAND of Iowa is sick, and requests the prayers of the saints that the Lord would restore him to health. May the Lord give us the Spirit of faith to pray for our afflicted brother. J. C.

OUR POSITION.

From information recently received, we are inclined to think it may be duty to say a few words in regard to our present position in relation to the great truths which we have believed for thirty, and preached for twenty-three years. If we could make our voice heard by the whole world, we would rejoice to say, we never believed more firmly that Christ is soon coming; that man is wholly unconscious between death and the resurrection; that all the wicked will be destroyed; this earth renewed will be the home of the saints; and we never preached these things with more boldness than during the last two years. The nearer we live to Christ, the clearer and plainer do they appear. We have no doubts of their being the eternal truths of God. As we approach the great day of the Lord, we also see and feel more and more the importance of entire consecration to Christ, and the necessity of purity of heart on the part of those who would be ready to meet Jesus in the day of his coming. We would urge all the watchmen on the walls of Zion, who see the end at hand, to press the importance of holiness of heart and life upon all the followers of Christ, who desire to be at "the marriage supper of the Lamb." Let our motto be—"HOLINESS TO THE LORD."

We most heartily adopt the following language from a correspondent in the first number of Good Tidings:—

"My mission and life work for over thirty years, and to which I have consecrated the remnant of my days, is the promulgation of the great truths entrusted to us as a people in these 'last days,' and in this, the sublimest and grandest epoch ever occupied by men in this world's eventful history. I do not intend, by the grace of God, to be turned from my work, to which I have devoted the best period of my life, and have consecrated all my mental powers for time. . . . I am determined that nothing shall move me, or turn me aside from the great work assigned me in my master's cause to defend the hope, and contend earnestly for the faith entrusted unto us in this generation, as well as care for the churches." CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Third Meeting of the Eastern Conference District of N. Y. met at South Butler, commencing Thursday evening, Feb. 26th, and continuing over the following Sunday. Ministers present,—J. H. Whitmore, B. P. Stevens, S. C. Gove, E. F. Sergisson, M. R. Miles, A. P. Moore, J. E. Wells, and Bro. Dunbar. Each meeting was opened by devout prayer and singing. Committees. Business—M. R. Miles, J. H. Whitmore, and C. G. Oaks. Devotional—Bro. J. Wescott, and Bro. Conroe. It having been understood that J. E. Wells and R. C. and W. E. Brown ignored all organization, the question was asked if they considered themselves members of this Conference, which caused the passage of a resolution that the consideration of the status of these brethren be deferred to the Annual Conference. Delegates were received from Alton, Pineville, and Rochester, with quarterly collections amounting to $4.40.

The reports of delegates and ministers were, as usual, varied—alternate hopes and fears, clouds and sunshine, trials and encouragements, were felt by all. Some churches have been divided, while others are increasing in strength and number. As sufficient means had not been collected, of the pledges given at Alton, to pay the amount due to the brethren who labored with the tent the past year, a collection was taken amounting to $15.65; which with the pledges paid during the Conference amounted to $44.40, and reduced our part of the indebtedness to $16.20. This was paid to the following individuals as follows: M. R. Miles, $10; B. P. Stevens, $10; E. F. Sergisson, $10; and Bro. Knapp, $14.40.

There were in all nine sermons preached, all of a practical nature, and just such, if followed, as will lead men to seek Christ as their only hope. There were four love-feasts during the Conference, in which every moment of time was filled by the faithful ones, relating their hopes and fears, cares, trials and persecutions, but best of all telling of their love for God and his truth, and of their determination to be faithful to the end.

Sunday evening nearly a hundred came around the table of the Lord and partook of the sacred emblems; and truly if each one present instituted that self-examination enjoined by God's Word, no feelings of ill toward any brother could have been found.

During the session of the above Conference the stockholders of the Wayne Co. tent met twice. At the first meeting Bro. M. R. Miles was appointed Chairman, and C. G. Oaks, Secretary. Bro. J. E. Wells reported sixty-five baptized and over one hundred reclaimed as the result of labors with the tent. The coming of the Lord was made a prominent theme, connected with the usual Bible truths held by the Advent people. Tent not in debt, and in good condition to commence work again. At the second meeting, in absence of Bro. Miles, Bro. D. R. Miller was appointed Chairman. $207 of the stock was represented, and $168 of the same was held by those who wished the tent to be controlled by R. C. Brown, and a resolution was passed giving its management to him. Hoping and praying that God will bring us all to act in harmony with his truth; that we may work together in love, trying to build up the cause of Christ, we would say, God bless those who labor with the tent the coming year. C. G. OAKS, Secretary.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

The third Quarterly Meeting of the A. C. Quarterly Conference of N. W. Kansas was held with the church of Athens, Jewel Co., commencing March 27th, 1874. Ministers present—E. N. Bliss, N. J. Sade, James Page, who received license from the Conference to preach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and J. S. Thorp. Churches represented:—Athens, Jewel Co., prosperous. By the Lord's blessing five have united with it since the last Quarterly Meeting. Membership, thirty-two. West Creek, Republic Co., a struggling band of faithful soldiers. Two accessions the past winter. Membership ten. Shockley, Mitchell Co., a little band of pilgrims waiting for Jesus. Organized Mar. 18th, 1874. Prospect good. Membership six. Solomon Rapids, Mitchell Co., organized March 19th, 1874. A little company of the friends of Jesus, who will let their light shine, and endeavor to uphold the cause of truth. Membership five. Others are expected to join soon.

Voted, to hold the next Quarterly Meeting with the church at Solomon Rapids.

This Quarterly Meeting was well attended. Several friends from a distance, including quite a number of our Advent Life Union brethren, were present to help on the good work. Their Pastor, Eld. Lott Clover, preached to us Sunday morning, after which two converts were baptized into Jesus Christ. The cause of truth is prospering in this part of the vineyard. May the Lord still bless, and many more be led in the way of truth and life, and be ready to meet Jesus when he comes.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. REPORT OF LABOR.

J. C. & S. E. SMITH.

Praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his many mercies bestowed upon the children of men! The last five weeks of our missionary labor have been fraught with blessings from on high. The Giver of every good and perfect gift has been with us to comfort, sustain, and help in every time of need. We have traveled nearly three hundred miles through mud, rain, and cold, in which many Eastern people would fear to be out; yet notwithstanding, we have had meetings nearly every night, and spoke to full houses over thirty times. Three weeks of our labor was at Levenworth and Jefferson Co. We visited two new places, saw the truth prospering, and left warm friends—brethren and sisters in the work, and meetings appointed for Sundays; also a weekly prayer meeting. At these places the Lord has blest wonderfully. Four or five drinking men came out for Christ, and have resolved by his help not to touch nor taste the unclean thing. Two had been at variance with each other,—not on speaking terms, and neighbors. But hard hearts were melted by the Spirit of God, and these two men were brought together and extended the hand of fellowship. One had to go on crutches, having lost a leg in the army; the other was in the middle of the house, and showed his penitence by going to meet him. This indeed was a blessed sight. Tears filled many eyes, and a number consecrated themselves to the Lord anew.

Our tent meeting near this vicinity last summer was not in vain in the Lord. A goodly number have embraced the blessed hope, and others are confident that we have the truth, and only need more labor bestowed to bring them out. We set in order a company of ten, appointing Bro. Orson Lewis as Elder. He is a whole hearted man, and will look after the interest of the cause. Others we think will unite with them from the Methodist and other churches. They thought when we first went there, that the tent ought to be pulled down and thrown into the creek; but none dared to do it, because the Lord was for us; and those who came with such prejudice are now with us in faith, giving glory to God. Our last meeting there was the best. A number started for eternal life. We had a season long to be remembered. One dear sister (Lapham) who was almost discouraged, and had about come to the conclusion that there were no christians in the world has once more surrendered all to Christ, and is now a bright and shining light among her neighbors and at home. Her husband is in as bad a condition as she was, and is surrounded by infidels which have an evil influence over him. I hope all will pray for this friend, that he may once more take the stand that he has in former days, and with his companion go hand in hand to the kingdom. Brethren and sisters do pray for them and the work at Reno, Leavenworth Co. We went from R. to Lawrence. Found Bro. Chapman and wife as strong in the Lord as ever. Also his dear mother and sister are with him. The large Universalist church was offered to us but we did not occupy it, as word from Franklin Co. urged us there to labor. Cannot Bro. Grant, on his return from Cal., call and give a series of lectures at this place. If so, will he please let E. S. Chapman know. The U. Church would be opened for him, and a multitude out to hear. It would be a great help to the cause in this State. I do hope the Lord may so direct.

Our labor in Franklin Co. has been crowned with favor from God. Great grace rested upon us. Many reports had gone out after we left them, but the truth had taken such root, that a little persecution made them stronger, and a greater desire than ever was created to hear the pure gospel. Night after night, for two weeks more, we labored there. Houses were crowded, and a deep interest manifested all through the community. We had the blessed privilege of baptizing seven happy souls. The preaching of Christ's death once, burial once, and resurrection once, and only once, stirred the formal Dunkards, and they tried to drive the converts from their convictions. But "planting in the likeness of Christ's death, and rising in the likeness of his resurrection" read too plain to be misunderstood by honest people; so they went forward and complied with the command of Jesus, sanctioned by God and the Spirit. O how blessed the ordinance, and what an emblem of death and resurrection! Praise the Lord for the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ; and also of the future reliving of the dead.

A great work is going forward in Franklin Co., and many are awaking to righteousness. Family altars have been erected in a number of homes, and more searching the Scriptures than ever has been known in that vicinity. Thank the Lord for books and tracts to scatter, to help stir up the people. Bro. I. C. Wellcome has recently sent me fifty dollars worth, for which I am thankful, The Lord reward this dear Bro. for the generous supply. Bro. Virgil Hunt, of Sumner Co., has also sent me some, and a Bro. from Ill., whose name I have not learned, sent some, for all of which I feel grateful. They came in the right time as we had scattered most that we received prevously. We thank the Lord for all of these blessings.

We trust that the Mission Society may be upheld in their great work by the united prayers and efforts of all, that a great harvest may be gathered home when Jesus comes. Do pray, one and all, that the work may be increased ten-fold. Brethren and sisters, let us awake to this great and important work. The harvest field is truly great, and the laborers are very few. Thousands of places all through this great State, and still further west, ought to be visited. Who will come and help? We need men that are not afraid of toil and hardship, privation and sorrows, tribulation and persecution. All this they will meet; yet, amid it all, the blessing pronounced by our Savior will abide with the faithful christian.

May the Lord speed the day when the laborers will shout the harvest home! The Lord grant that the time may soon come when earth's groans and sorrows shall forever pass away, and the loved in Christ of every land and age shall be brought together, and have eternal rest. From your Bro. and Sr. in the highways and hedges.

IOWA GENERAL UNION CONF.

The delegates of the different Conferences of Iowa for the organization of a General Union State Conference met, as per notice, at Belle Plains, Jan 8th to 10th.

THAT CARD.

Should any suppose on the Pacific Coast that Eld. O. R. Fassett is engaged in "reporting that Elder Miles Grant has not preached the Advent doctrine in California," this is to correct the misapprehension.

To the "Card" printed in the Crisis of April 15th there is appended a letter of mine, written in the spring of 1872, claiming to be a "testimonial" from me to the effect that Eld. Grant had done all things well on the coast at this his second visit, and satisfactory to the church and Pastor of the San Francisco Church.

Those who have caused to be published this "Card," affixing this letter to it over their own signatures, should have acquainted themselves with all the facts and circumstances which had occurred with Elder Grant's connection with the San Francisco Church and its Pastor, which called forth this note from me. That letter was prompted from a true spirit of "charity which covers a multitude of sins." Overlooking many things which had occurred, and regarding them at the time a lack of judgment rather than an error of the heart, I was induced from fervent christian benevolence, which I trust ever to possess, to put into the hands of Eld. Grant this note, as a comforting assurance of my continued fellowship after our trial. Besides, it should be understood that this "testimonial" was given him on my parting with him to go up into Lake Co., to spend about a month, not expecting to see him again before his departure East; and also before the occurrences made mention of in the third column of the "Appeal from the brethren in San Francisco."

O. R. FASSETT.

Obituaries.

AYRES. At Worcester, March 3d, 1874, at the residence of her nephew, Bro. Samuel Ayres, Miss Emelia Ayres, aged seventy-four.

Much physical suffering had been hers to endure for many years, of a nature calculated to depress the mind; but through it all the Lord has safely brought her, and she rests in hope. Sister Ayres was among the first to identify herself with the glorious truth of the speedy return of the Savior, which doctrine she firmly maintained until the last; and being possessed of means, she employed them in relieving the poor, circulating books and tracts evolving light upon the blessed hope, and filling financial exigencies sometimes occurring at our large meetings. But her work is done, and I trust she will soon hear it said "Well done." Sermon on the occasion of her funeral by the writer. It was sad, but we were obliged to "Close the blinds around her,

And lock her up alone,
That nothing might disturb her
Till her best friend should come."

S. G. MATHEWSON.

CLARK. In Richmond, R. I., April 11th, 1874, Hattie S., youngest daughter of Bro. S. P. Clark, in the eighteenth year of her age.

This is a severe and painful visitation to the family. Naturally of a sweet and amiable disposition, Hattie was greatly endeared to them all, and much beloved by those who knew her. After a severe illness of two weeks, borne with remarkable patience, she succumbed to the fell destroyer, requesting her brother, sisters, and parents to meet her in the "sweet bye and bye." Words of comfort and hope were spoken by the writer, assisted by Eld. A. Durfee. Then we laid her in her silent resting place, soon to awake to glorious immortality.

J. T. DIXON.

SHEPARD. In Sandisfield, Feb. 5th, 1874, Bro. Joseph Shepard, aged ninety-two years.

The subject of this notice was in the war of 1812. After the war he moved to S., where in 1851 he became interested in the subject of religion, and joined the class in the M. E. church. In 1861 he embraced the Advent faith, and was baptized in the eightieth year of his age, from which time he lived a christian life. He exhibited great patience and christian grace amid the infirmities of old age, and especially in his last sickness, which was caused by breaking his hip by a fall. His whole hope was centered in the return of Christ to bring immortality; to which he looked forward with great anxiety, often exclaiming during his last illness, "How long, O Lord, how long?" He leaves four children to mourn, but not without hope. Sermon by the writer.

WARREN TEFFT.

FINCH. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Milford, Mass., April 12th, 1874, Arlitta Finch, wife of Mordaci L. Finch, aged forty-seven years.

Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. S. G. Mathewson.

"She sleeps, but not forever;
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet, to part no never,
On the resurrection morn."

DAVID M. FINCH.

HATCH. Fell asleep in Jesus, at his residence in Buffalo, Wright Co., Minn., Jan. 28th, 1874, Bro. Solomon Hatch, aged sixty-one years.

Bro. Hatch was formerly from Windsor, Me. For many years he followed the sea, and visited many parts of the world; but about eighteen years ago he, with his family, came to this State for a home. He has been a believer in the Advent faith for many years, and during his last lingering illness it was his theme. He loved his Savior, and rejoiced in the thought that he should soon meet him, and enjoy his presence forever, when he should come to receive his people, and give them immortality and eternal life in that rest that remains for them. He leaves a wife and two children, but they mourn not without hope. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to the mourning friends, from Job 14: 14.

S. C. WELLCOME.

BROWN. Fell asleep in Jesus at the residence of her son (Bro. Wheeler Brown), at Egota, Minn., Feb. 17th, 1874, Sr. Sarah C. Brown, aged seventy-nine years.

Sr. Brown was formerly from Canada, but came to this State about eight years ago. She has been blind most of the time since her residence here, and has lost her husband and seen much affliction; but she had learned and loved to trust in God, and now rests in him to be raised in the morning of the resurrection. Peace to her ashes. The funeral was attended by Eld. Ketchum, of St. Charles.

S. C. W.

CHANDLER. In Concord, N. H., Jeremiah Chandler, aged sixty-two years.

Bro. Chandler fell from a ladder while at work on his barn, and was instantly killed, on March 16th, 1874. He embraced the doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ in 1840. He was then a member of the Christian denomination, being connected with the same church of which Eld. Timothy Cole was a member. He was a consistent christian. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his loss, as a kind husband and a loving father. May the God of the christian comfort and sustain them in this trying hour. Funeral services at the Bethel, March 18th. A very comforting discourse was preached by Eld. A. Ross, from Nahum 1: 7.

O. W. KIMBALL.

SHOREY. In Lebanon, Me., April 7th, 1874, Miss Susan Emma Shorey, daughter of Jeremiah Shorey, aged eighteen years.

Our sister leaves near and dear relatives and a large circle of young friends; among whom was an excellent young man to whom she was soon to be united in marriage. He was a true friend, and was with her the past year of her sufferings. She died a christian. May God bless the broken-hearted. Sermon by the writer from Mark 5: 39.

J. PINKHAM.

WATERMAN. In Charles City, Iowa, March 13th, 1874, of spinal menengettis, Frances L. Waterman, adopted child of Seth and Hulda Patterson, aged seven years and five months.

The school of which she was a member followed in the procession. Words of comfort by the writer, from 2 Kings 4: 26. PETER S. W. DEYO.

PAILTHORP. In Warren, R. I., Feb. 17th, 1874, Dennis Pailthorp, in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

DEARBORN. In New Market, N. H., April 7th, 1874, of consumption, Henry G. Dearborn, of Biddeford, Me.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Times' Calcutta correspondent telegraphs that the distress from famine is increasing in Tirhoot, and that according to the official estimates 4,573,000 persons, in the districts of Patna, Chazcepore and Rajeshhye, are still suffering from starvation.

LONDON, April 15. A shocking explosion occurred to-day in a coal mine at Durkinfield, Lancashire. A large number of miners were killed and injured, many of the latter being terribly burned. Thus far thirty bodies have been recovered, and it is feared that many more remain in the ruins.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, April 9. One of the five boilers used for compressing air for the use of drills, being worked in the Jugtown tunnel at Pattenburg, N. J., exploded on Tuesday night, totally destroying the other four, killing Thomas Irving, master mechanic, John Boner, fireman, Jacob McGeraghty, a coal-passer, and Thomas Gaughan, fireman.

Chicago, April 9. Seven fishermen perished in the gale yesterday afternoon, at the mouth of Calumet river, and others narrowly escaped death.

Newport, N. H., April 13. Mr. James Nelson of Granthall, yesterday morning was found frozen to death about half a mile from his home. He was at the store at nine o'clock Saturday night, bought several articles and started home on foot. The wind and snow blew fearfully, and it is supposed he became exhausted and perished from cold. Deceased was sixty-eight years old, and a man of sober habits.

A BORDER OUTRAGE.—A terrible crime is reported from Texas in which the son of the late Hon. Meredith P. Gentry of Tennessee appears as the criminal. On the stage between Fort Worth and Jacksboro,' a week or two ago, were a wealthy Missourian named Shire, and Charles Gentry, and during the journey the latter tried unsuccessfully to strike up an intimacy. He then changed his tactics and provoking a quarrel, both left the stage to settle it, the driver dashing ahead and leaving them. A shot was heard, and the other passengers looking back saw Gentry standing over the prostrate form of Shire with a pistol in his hand. The driver was at once ordered on peril of his life to turn back, but before the scene of the murder was reached, Gentry had disappeared, and investigation revealed the fact that the murdered man's pockets had been rifled of a pocket-book known to have contained a large sum of money. A passenger, who witnessed the tragedy, in giving his statement to the Dallas (Texas) Commercial, expressed the opinion that Gentry knew Shire to be carrying a large sum of money, and had been joined by the driver in planning the murder before the stage left Fort Worth. The murderer was pursued, but escaped into Mexico.

A SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—An accident which occurred not long ago at Plainsville, Penn., is probably as singular a fatality as is ever reported. A young man accustomed to rise very early in order to go to his work, was awakened by his wife from a sound sleep, she fearing that he was oversleeping, and in springing suddenly up he struck a lamp setting near. The blow smashed the globe of the lamp, and a piece of the glass striking him on the neck pierced the jugular vein, causing death within five minutes.

FIRES.—A whole block in the principal business portion of Lagrande, Oregon; loss $55,000. A fire in Louisville, Ky.; loss $70,000. Factory burnt at Methuen; loss $50,000. At Newton Lower Falls; loss about $8000 or $10,000. A fire at Marblehead destroyed the dwelling house of Mr. J. Stewart; his daughter, aged about seventeen years, was burned to death. A $70,000 fire occurred at Detroit. Fire at Hillsdale, Mich., April 9th; loss $40,000. The passenger car repair shop of the Fitchburg Railway at Prison Point, Charlestown District, partially burned; loss about $7,000. A fire at Williamsport, Pa., destroyed 20,000,000 feet of lumber; loss $500,000.

In Brief.

— The London Times says the fifteen English marine insurance companies lost $3,640,000 last year, not one realizing a profit.

— A railroad worked by ropes is to be constructed from the base of Mount Vesuvius to the edge of the crater.

— The Supreme Court of Spain upholds Archbishop Fiorente against the Pope and ex-Captain Gen. Jovellar, and condemns Obera, the Pope's acting Archbishop, to imprisonment or banishment from the Island.

— Julius Spero, convicted in Jersey City of receiving stolen goods, was sentenced Friday to seven years in States Prison upon the first charge, and three years each on fifteen others. Total—fifty-two years.

— Millions of grasshoppers are said to be making their unwelcome appearance in Iowa.

— The whole number of fire alarms during the month of March in Boston, was eighty-seven, including twenty-nine still alarms. The loss on buildings was $109, 774. Loss on stock, $262, 682 29. The number of alarms for corresponding period, last year, was thirty-seven.

— Murderous affairs at Bridgeport, Conn.—A policeman shoots two men in self-defence, killing one of them.

— A couple of roughs in Hartford, Conn. attempted to murder a policeman Sunday morning, by throwing him over a bridge; the officer, however, shot one of the roughs dead and severely wounded the other.

— The whole production of the precious metals throughout the world during 1873 it is estimated to have been worth $219,000,000.

THE grand jury of Chicago have had occasion to animadvert upon the treatment of the inmates of the county poor house. All they are allowed in the way of food is two meals a day; turnips are their only vegetable; what is called their tea is little better than the sweepings of a grocery floor, and their soup is made of meat from which all the strength has previously been extracted. Of course, paupers cannot expect luxuries, but they are entitled to a decent quantity and quality of food, and the Tribune is right in saying that the great city of Chicago ought to treat its helpless poor at least as well as its criminals, and both as if they were human beings.

ANOTHER ROGUE.—A man calling himself John C. Wells has been in Exeter, N. H., selling vegetable forks and Hair Restorer. He represents himself as being an Adventist, does not pay his board, and otherwise defrauds people. He has also been in Portsmouth, N. H., doing the same thing. Beware of him! We have advertised a number of such men, and think our brethren and sisters ought to be more cautious of such strangers. J. C.

MECHANIC FALLS CAMP-GROUND.—I would say to those having property on the camp-ground, that we have arranged with Bro. Geo. Strout and his son to live on the ground and care for the property there. We think it advisable for all who wish to unite with us in this good work, in strengthening and encouraging the hearts of the Lord's people, to build their tents, and get ready for the meeting before it commences, so they can lay aside their work, and with one spirit pray and labor for the upbuilding of the cause and the conversion of souls.

CHANDLER DENNEN, North Turner Bridge, Me.

THERE will be a protracted meeting at Melbourne Ridge, P. Q., commencing Sunday, May 3d, and continue over Sunday, May 10th.

F. M. DRAKE. JAMES WINGATE.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—To the Brn. and Srs. of the Advent faith in Minn.:—We have in our State about 200 Mission Boxes, got up for the purpose of sustaining our cause in the following manner: They were to be put up in our houses to catch any loose change that the friends might be disposed to deposite in them, and just before our Quarterly Meetings each church Clerk, or Treasurer, was to receive what the boxes contained from the several families in their vicinity, and pass it into the hands of the Quarterly Treasurer, at each Quarterly Meeting; and at the Annual Conference, the State Treasurer was to receive the same from the several Dist. Treasurers, to be disbursed by the State Treasurer as the Mission Board may direct, for the purchase of tracts to keep our preachers supplied for free distribution, and the surplus to go to help spread the gospel as said Board may direct. This matter has been neglected the past year to a great extent. Shall we awake to the importance of this work, and have those little boxes help spread the last message to a dying world?

S. C. WELLCOME.

Meeting of the St. Paul Dist., Minn., for 1874 will be held at Independence, near Armstrong Station, commencing Thursday evening, May 7th, and continue over the Sabbath. Let us come up to this meeting filled with the Spirit of the Master. Let every church in the Dist. report by delegate or by letter. We expect a number of brethren present to assist in preaching the Word. F. P GRAVES.

KANSAS CONFERENCE.—The Annual Session of the Advent Christian Conference of Kansas will be held, the Lord willing, at Melvern, Osage Co., Kan., commencing Friday, May 15th, 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Lord's day, or as long as the brethren may determine.

Those coming by rail from the North will stop at Arvonia Station, and those from the South at Burlington, where teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground where the Mission Tent will be pitched, if they write to Eld. J. C. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co., Kan., in time. Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 18th of April, 1874 (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary, care of Eld. Smith as above, or sent with the delegates. Let all who "wait for the Lord" and are "looking for that blessed hope" lay aside their secular affairs, and join with the "children of God" in their yearly feast of fat things. By order of the Directors,

AMOS SANFORD, Secretary.

A REQUEST.—We number about fifteen Adventists here, and have much opposition to meet. We have been circulating some tracts; and having a grist mill which draws custom from a large district in this western country, and being thus well situated to circulate tracts or papers on the Advent faith; I therefore make a request of the readers of the Crisis, who have any old papers or tracts for free distribution, to send them to my address, and I shall take much pleasure in distributing them. In this way much good may be done. Address me at Denver, Worth Co., Mo.

S. C. B. WILLIAMS.

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL."

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

" AM WITH YOU ALWAY."

M.

'Tis sweet to read the promise he hath given,
To cheer our hearts along the pilgrim way;
But sweeter far to know its blest fulfillment,
And humbly walk with Jesus day by day.

To walk with Jesus! Who shall tell the gladness
Of those whose daily life the Master shares?
Who hear his voice so full of love and pity,
And rest on him their burdens and their cares.

And this is mine,—the joy of knowing Jesus,
And walking in the sunlight of his smile;
Mine is the peace that floweth like a river,
Deeper and broader growing all the while.

No more a transient guest my Savior cometh,
To bless me but a while and then depart;
But with me now he evermore abideth,
And with his own glad presence fills my heart.

Sometimes when busy with my daily labor,
Yet thinking of the mighty love he bore,
Some precious promise unto me he giveth,
Oft-read perhaps, but never mine before.

I know not why he gives his choicest blessings
To one so undeserving of his love;
But this I know—my cup it runneth over;
And day by day his wondrous grace I prove.

I know not why he called me so unworthy
To walk the shining way toward his throne;
But since he calls, with willing feet I hasten,
Content and glad to hear him say, "Well done."

Content to walk in paths of his own choosing,
Since he will hold my hand along the way;
Content to know that I am journeying homeward,
And brighter grows the pilgrim path each day.

LETTER FROM ENGLAND.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

CHURCH OF ENGLAND CLERGYMEN, THEIR TEACHING AND DUPLICITY.

Just now, a number of facts are floating on the surface of journalism, showing the corruption of the State officials provided for the State establishment of "The Church of England." We are glad that every "reverend" does not happen to be of the same character; otherwise the whole institution would be pulled down about their ears: as it is, there are so many of them who are so much to be condemned, and who teach such twaddle that the establishment is even confessed of themselves to be in danger of perishing.

The Primitive Methodist has felt it devolve upon it as a duty to expose of late the interference of Church parsons in its evangelistic movements and social rights. This week it gives two specimens of the "light and sweetness" of its religious enemies. One clergyman met a farm bailiff last month, and worked himself into a rage, even to "frothing at the mouth," calling the bailiff a bad man, and the father of lies, and saying he was going to hell, and that the door need only open to admit him; and all because the bailiff was not in the habit of attending the Church at which he officiated. He bound the man under holy vows by law to keep the peace, in sureties of £100 for the term of six months. The second clergyman was humane enough to prosecute his sexton and clerk, an old gentleman of sixty years, who had resided in the parish of Marks Tey all his life, had served one master seventeen years, and another twenty-five; who had been sexton twelve years, and parish clerk six;—this venerable, useful old man was prosecuted for taking home three small pieces of wood with him, value one penny! He had been at work at the Vicar's house, and thought he would take home a stick or two. The "divine" saw the "theft," proceeded against him at law, and he was detained in Colchester gaol two days before his case came on for trial. He was brought before a bench of magistrates and committed to take his trial at the Essex sessions. On Tuesday, however, when the Grand Jury met, they ignored the bill of the Bench of Magistrates, and set him at liberty. But it cost the old gent considerably over $50.

So much for some of the officials. Now for some of their teaching. Here's a bit for children.

"The Rector of Ryedale, in Yorkshire, allows young children to be taught in a day-school a hymn, from which we quote the following verses:—

'I am a little Catholic,
I love my church and school;
I love my dear old English Church,
I love her faith and rule.

I'm not a little Protestant,
As some would have me say;
I'm not a little Romanist—
So call me what you may.

I love the blessed sacraments,
They are what Jesus gave;
They are the blessed means of grace,
My soul from sin to save.

I honor, too, God's own true priests,
They act in Jesus' stead
When they baptize absolve, and bless,
And consecrate the bread.

In holy water I was washed,
And cleansed from all my sin;
'Twas there the Holy Ghost came down,
My soul to dwell within.

'Twas there I got the holy sign,
The cross upon my brow;
God's mark upon my infant head,
Just as I sign it now.

But, O alas, how often since
I've fallen into sin;
In spite of all my Savior's love,
Who died my soul to win.

How shall I get my sins forgiven?
How cleansed from every stain?
Baptismal purity brought back?
My soul restored again?

First to confession I must go
And tell out all my shame,
My list of sins, all, one by one,
In penitence must name.'"

This is the "sublime" blasphemy that many within the pale of the Establishment are teaching. I know it will interest you to hear a little anecdote of a Scotchman in connection with this silly ritualism, and "Catholic" dogma and practice. I cut it from a paper that can be trusted.

"At one of the Ritualistic churches in Brighton, where a placard is posted inviting the worshipers to confess, a 'hard head' M. D. from the north is reported to have presented himself one Monday morning, and asked if he could confess. He was received with all the politeness of the well-known invitation—'walk in, pretty fly.' His confession ran as follows, no doubt greatly to the edification of the would-be priest: 'Before leaving Brighton, I wish to confess that the sermon I heard from your pulpit last night was the greatest and weakest nonsense I ever heard in my life.'"

Now a word about the amusements or recreations which some of these clergy provide for their "good" people. The Christian Standard says: "Some months ago we called attention to a new mode whereby Ritualistic priests desecrate the churches in which they perform their semi-Romanist services. We stated the name and place of the church, in the east end of London, in which the Ritualist incumbent, whose name we also gave, had actually introduced drums and fifes to be beaten and played, as a part of the Sunday evening service, by the boys of the school connected with the church; and, it was added in a daily newspaper, that the boys enjoyed immensely this mode of spending their Sunday evenings in a building called the house of God. The statements we then made have never been contradicted. We have now to mention what we regard as another Ritualistic profanity, though probably more modified.

In Kilburn there is a church called St. Augustine's church, of which the Rev. R. M. Benson is the Incumbent. This Mr. Benson is one of the most ultra-Ritualists in London, or, we believe, anywhere else. Attached to his church are schools for boys and girls. Mr. Benson has also a monthly magazine called "The St. Augustine Kilburn Parish Magazine." In his magazine for February we find the following notice:—'There was a tea for the boys at five o'clock, followed by a distribution of prizes. At seven o'clock a Punch and Judy, and at eight a play entitled 'Done on Both Sides,' by the teachers. At the special request of some friends 'Box and Cox' was also performed.' And all this with the special sanction, and, most probably, the special recommendation of the clergyman of the church, and in a place which, in a sense, is part of the church. Why, even Roman Catholics would shrink from introducing the performance of plays of the kind mentioned above, into their schools, which are presumed to be based on the foundation of the gospel of Christ. To complete the incongruity of such scenes, the teachers were the performers. No better mode could be devised for inspiring these boys with a taste for theatricals which may prove their ruin in after life."

Let us add a word on the duplicity of many of these "priests." Here is a true case in point.

"The venerable Archdeacon Prest, in a lecture delivered at York a few days ago, on the introduction of the Confessional into the Church of England, gave as an illustration of the duplicity and dishonesty of the Ritualists, the following case which had been communicated to him, the facts of which he was permitted to give:—'A lady had reason to believe that her daughter had been induced, whilst away from home, to confess, and she therefore appealed to the clergyman of the parish; the curate was charged to discountenance the practice, as she had the greatest abhorrence of it. The clergyman, whilst asserting his feeling that confession was of the utmost value and importance, declared that in no way did he encourage the young lady. She had, he said, appealed to him a short time before her return home to receive her in confession, but that he had persistently refused to do so until she had her mother's consent. A few days after, however, the mother discovered a letter written by this particular gentleman, containing the following:—I was very glad to hear from you, and particularly on the subject you mention. I shall be quite willing, in virtue of my office, to receive you as you desire. Mrs.—— (that was a late housekeeper, who had been guilty of telling tales), has left, and we have the house now to ourselves, and our servants are trustworthy. Parishioners also are constantly coming on business of one kind or another, so that your visits need not be noticed.' Then came what he (the speaker) thought the climax—'Please not to hint anything to my wife on the subject. I think parochial affairs, of whatever kind, ought to be confined to the priest only.' The mother who authorized him to make public the letter added—'I wish any words of mine could caution parents against the untruth and duplicity which this fearful confessional leads to. If my experience could be published it would startle many out of their apathy."

Is it very strange that the world is not converted when everything in the machinery to accomplish this work is so bad? Ah, to think to make men christians by such persons, and such doctrine, and such performances—to save one man is more than the whole of this class put together can do. How much better when the church of God is manifest in the place of the Church of England.

"GIVE ME JESUS."

GEO. E. LEE.

"You may have all the world,—give me Jesus."

Never did this expression of the poet impress itself more forcibly upon my mind than now. There are times when the christian can look out upon this world, and, beholding the beauties of nature, will involuntarily wish to dwell here just as long as possible, without any realizing sense that "the world to come" is far more glorious, and worthy to be sought after; yet, upon giving the subject a second thought, which brings to us the fact that the result of sin and mortality still exists, and nothing is brought to view but what its curse rests upon, we are led to exclaim,

"Weary of wandering round and round,
This vail of sin and gloom;
I long to leave the unhallowed ground,
And dwell with Christ at home."

Such a longing as this is entirely unknown to the unregenerated heart, for it only belongs to those whose affections are "set on things above, not on things on the earth." Hence the "natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. 2: 14. And this, on account of being devoid of the grace and "Spirit of God," the "natural man" looks upon the idea of being anxious to be with Jesus our King, and seeking to know the time of his coming, as great "foolishness." It is like beating the air, to attempt to reason with such that it is right, and perfectly natural for God's people, however much they may have been disappointed in the past, to still continue to "Search the Scriptures," that they may obtain further light upon his advent. But we do know that when, instead of the spirit of the world, we receive the "Spirit which is of God," we are to know the things which are freely given to us of God," and of which those who have not this Spirit, will know nothing. And it is not at all surprising either, that they care to know nothing of that which is of a secondary interest to them; for the things of this world they seek after with more zeal than for the "kingdom of God," of which we read, if we seek first, "all these things shall be added."

Do you say, "time has proved that you know nothing of the definite day," and still admit that "the Lord is at the door?" If you are confident that "the Lord is at the door," is it not "knowing" something about time? And knowing something about it, if, as we claim, we really love the Lord, is it not possible we may know more about it? Those who ignore what light has already shone on our pathway, because the Lord sees fit to try and test the faith of those who have sought to know "What shall be the sign of his coming?" are not the ones at all liable to gain advanced light. It is the Spirit that "searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God," and although man's wisdom tells the child of faith that "no one can ever know," yet if such faith does not "stand in the wisdom of men," it shall stand "in the power of God." 1 Cor. 2: 5. Let me, then, have Jesus and his love, and "you may have all the world."

"I'm a traveler to a land where all is fair,
Where is seen no broken band—all, all, are there;
Where no tear shall ever fall, nor heart be sad,
Where the glory is for all, and all are glad."

O ye poor and needy, come and accept of "this same Jesus," that you may be made like him, and fitted to dwell with the pure and holy. In this world are trials, afflictions, and death, but in "the world to come," which is to be the dwelling-place of God and his people, none of the inhabitants shall say, "I am sick;" "neither shall there be any more death." If you accept Christ and that world, you shall "inherit all things;" but if you reject him, and choose this world, you will ere long perish with the things of this world. But, having been delivered from the bondage of sin, "let us stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free." We are still surrounded by the foe of all good, but the day-star is about to dawn.

"Then waiting brethren, let us sing,
He will not tarry long;
And fill with love the hours that bring
The glory of our song."

PUZZLED—BEWILDERED.

FLESH AND SPIRIT.

O. W. S.

So it must be given up, and abandoned, must it? After all our turning of leaves, searching the Scriptures for truth, and investigating man's nature, and "disputing daily with the Scribes," in relation to man's state in death, it turns out that we are wrong, does it? Well good men say so, and some of our own leaders seem to be leaning that way quite strongly; and if they are right, and we are wrong, why not let it go? But have we not shown, time after time, from the Bible, that man is not "a compound being," but a simple uncompounded material creation of God, formed of the dust, and that he will turn to dust again;—that he is not a triplet, nor yet a quality, but a unit. Have we not repeatedly proved that mind was a product of the brain, and that when God takes away man's spirit, or breath of life, gathers his spirit and his breath unto himself, that then men's thoughts, love, hatred, envy, all perish, that man then ceases to be a "living soul," and unless there shall come a resurrection from and of the dead, even "them that sleep in Jesus are perished also?" Have we not done all this, and more in the same direction, by the word of the Lord? Well, my dear brethren, we thought we had, but if the "inward man" (2 Cor. 4: 16), is the Spirit in us, changed by the second birth, and if "the new man" is the heart affections, the spirit renewed, if this be so, then my brethren we have not done what we supposed we had; for the Spirit of the living God by the word through Jesus Christ, in its travail of regenerating our race, does not bring forth nonentities; and John Wesley was not so far wrong when he said, in his renewed state, "I am an immortal spirit;" for the twice born man cannot die any more, at least, so said our Savior.

But we need not be discouraged nor disheartened, notwithstanding experiences and compromises are considered and proposed by some, for the Word of our God will stand forever, and accomplish that whereunto it was sent. There is no middle ground here. We are either most gloriously right, or ignominiously wrong in this matter; and if wrong, let us act like and be men, confess our wrong, and give it up; if right, let us stand to our post, be true to the trust committed to us, and declare God's Word faithfully. We have nothing whatever to do with results. God will take care of them, and those also who honor him by honoring his Word. What we have to do, is to faithfully and truly declare the message given to us, and if it prove distasteful and repulsive to whomsoever it may be spoken, the responsibility will not be ours. Let us look to our marching orders, and not stand on the order of our going. The best way in the world to curtail a vicious dog is to excise the superfluous member by decapitation; and the most effectual mode of dealing with error is by the same process,—cut off its head!

In reference to what is called the "new birth," very little, if any importance could attach to its consideration, as to whether it was here or there—at conversion or resurrection, were it not that it is a great fundimental truth governing all other propositions in relation to man's nature, life in Christ, and the reception of eternal life as a gift at the second coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to the believer only. If we are "born again" at conversion, we get it here; and if we receive it here and now, we do not receive it there. On the other hand, if we seek it now, and put it on at the resurrection, we do not get it now; and conversion is not the New Birth. It may well be doubted if the Divine mind regards these subdivisions as men do in the process of regeneration; but looks upon, and speaks of it as one work, INENTIRETY.

We will now notice two things, terms and facts, and say of terms, that we cannot determine the time of the new birth definitely, by the terms used only, for the same word is by our translators rendered into more than one English word in different places; as, for example, the Greek word prototokos is rendered first-born in Col. 1: 18, and first-begotten in Rev. 1: 5, in the English version of King James' translation. But these two words often mean the same thing, and are used synonomously in the Bible. In Num. 9: 14 we read, "One ordinance for the stranger, and for him . . . born in the land;" and in 11: 12, "Have I conceived all this people? Have I begotten them? . . ." where the same sense evidently is, as it is in Col. 1: 18, and Rev. 1: 5, that of birth, produced, brought forth. Then again we have different Greek words rendered by one English word, so that the connection in which a word is used must very much determine its particular sense and meaning. Webster defines Beget thus. "To procreate, to generate, also to produce." Born—brought forth, produced or brought into life, it is followed by of before the mother, or ancestors. GENERATE. To procreate, also to produce. Regeneration. Reproduction, the act (process) of forming into a new and better state." Where passages seem, by terms in them, to be averse to the general tenor of the Scripture, we have no need to translate, for there are translations, many, and we may, and should, consult them; then the best, and most faithful expounder of the Word, will be he who shall have come nearest to, and clearly brought out the idea, sense, and meaning that was in the mind of the Spirit when it spoke the word for our instruction. Let us all seek for the mind of the Spirit, and abide by and in it.

CALL FOR A CONFERENCE.

To the brethren scattered abroad, and to whomsoever it may concern:—

I wish to address you through the medium of the Crisis upon a subject of deep and widespread interest to us all.

I have recently written to a large number of our brethren, including some of the best and most effective workers in our ranks, asking their opinion as to the advisability of holding at an early day, and at some central place, a meeting of our best and wisest men representing all sections of our country, to devise, and if possible to unanimously adopt some method for a more effective and harmonious organization of the working forces of our people. The responses thus far received have been almost unanimously in favor of holding such a meeting. Two or three have qualified their adhesion to the proposition by saying substantially that they would join in a call if it received the support of our best men East and West, or was generally demanded. Two others while admitting the necessity for a more hearty cooperation East and West, and the need of a more vigorous prosecution of our work, have doubted whether such a meeting would best serve the end proposed; though neither of them submitted any propositioh as different remedy.

One thing at least, seems apparent to all. We are not doing as much for the Master's cause as we might do. Nobody can doubt that if we had peace where there is now confusion; unity where there is now division; and harmony where there is now discord, we could carry on the work more effectively than we are now doing. We all admit and deplore the evil, while we are not united as to the remedy.

We have as a people no polity, and no specified code of procedure in public affairs. As an ecclesiastical body we are without a method or a system. It would be quite difficult to tell what we believe as a people, and still more difficult to tell what our customs, as a people, are. We lack homogeneousness, and ever will lack it so long as we have nothing approaching to uniformity, either in doctrine or in church usages. It is possible, just possible, that we can never succeed in fusing all our discordant elements into one harmonious, effective organization of christians, whose beneficent work shall extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Lakes to the Gulf, but is it not worth trying? Would not every approach, even the slightest, to a consummation so devoutly to be wished for, be hailed with joy by every good man in our midst? Many of our people having had an unpleasant experience of the "Creedism" and ecclesiastical tyranny of some of the older denominations, having swung to the other extreme. These men, some of them among the best we have, are extremely sensitive to anything that squints towards our forming a written creed, no matter how liberal it may be. They prefer the confusion and uncertainty of unwritten creeds to the order and certainty of written ones. The one obnoxious feature of most written creeds is that they fix stakes and are therefore the deadly foes of progress. Unwritten creeds can be modified at any time without the holders being in danger of a trial for "heresy" by some ecclesiastical council or tribunal. This is an undoubted advantage in some respects at least, over the orthodox creeds that date back unaltered and unalterable to Athanasius or to Chalcedon and Nice. But may not a middle course be practicable. Might it not be wiser? We could at least state some things that we do not believe in, and I think state them to advantage.

Most of our churches, it is true, have adopted covenants in which they take the Bible as the only standard of their faith and practice, and this is eminently proper and Protestant-like; but while the Bible is said, and rightly said to contain the standard of our faith and practice, church order and discipline, it cannot justly be said to contain either a system of church order or a mode of procedure in cases of church discipline. What we need I think is a system—uniform throughout the country—of church order, and a code of procedure in cases of church discipline. These should in no wise take the place of the Bible as standards, but should be merely the clearly understood and intelligible expression of the spirit and genius of the Scriptures bearing on these topics.

I know that this work needs the best talent and most careful attention of the wisest, purest, and most experienced men we have. Heaven would vouchsafe to such a company wisdom in so pious an undertaking, and then we should be nobly successful.

Nothing great or useful in form or religion can be accomplished without organization. The more compact, the more thorough, the more systematic that organization, the better, always provided, that it be governed by the Spirit of the Gospel of Christ. All human organizations, must of necessity be imperfect, and should some cases of seemingly harsh and tyrannous or despotic action arise it would not be strange, but for fear of this, shall we prefer certain anarchy to possible despotism? Is it not true of all bodies secular or religious, that their power depends upon the quality of their organization? Is not the church a body, and does not its power depend measurably at least, upon the quality of its organization, of its modus operandi. I am quite as ready as any other man to gratefully acknowledge the fact that God's grace and the influence of the Holy Spirit are necessary, indispensably necessary, to all christian work. But then, too, I know he works by means. He never makes a mob as effective in a campaign as an army of disciplined soldiers; he never smiles approvingly upon scenes of confusion and disorder. God helps them who try to help themselves. Man's extremity is his opportunity. When we have courageously and faithfully marched up to the Red Sea of our difficulties, then, and not till then, will he open a way for our escape.

And now a few words about the advisability of holding the proposed meeting. First, we have precedents enough, both in apostolic and in post apostolic times if any were needed. A very distinguished precedent in our own denomination was had in the great Albany convention of 1846 (I believe). Many supposed that the General Conference that met in this city in 1869 would be called again before this time. For my part I am profoundly impressed with the importance of holding General Conferences once in three or four years. A unity of interest and of feeling might thus be kept up between the East and the West, and sectional jeasousies very largely avoided by a better acquaintance between the members from the different sections. Such a convention as the one proposed should be in the highest sense of the term a deliberative body. Nothing should be done hastily or without due consideration. We cannot hold such a convention at the Springfield or at the Alton Bay camp-meetings. It is quite difficult to do even the routine business at Springfield as it ought to be done. Besides, what is still more obvious is the fact that some town more centrally situated should be the place of meeting. 2. As to the personnel of the convention, all will agree I think, that it should be composed of the wisest and best men we have—men of spotless honor and of unblemished integrity—men sound in both head and heart—men of experience and discretion—men of courage and capacity, and above all, men of deep personal piety, and of fervent love for one another. 3. The convention should I think, be composed of regularly elected delegates, and thus be a representative body and not a mass meeting. It will be difficult, perhaps impossible, to adopt at present any basis of representation that will be entirely fair to all sections. Perhaps if each State Conference should send three delegates, and all isolated quarterly Conferences one delegate each, the representation would be as fair as we can now expect to make it. However, this is only a suggestion that may be adopted, modified or rejected, as I give it only as a personal opinion.

I need not say to those with whom I am acquainted, that I am neither a partisan nor a bigoted sectarian. I have no personal ambition to gratify, and no axes to grind either for myself or for my friends. I desire the advancement of the cause of Christ. My sympathies with that cause and with all its true workers are neither sectional nor national—but world-wide. I am giving the best years of my life and all their energies to this work, and I feel it both a privilege and an honor to be thus engaged. But, my brethren, I need your sympathy and cooperation to make my work the most effective, and you shall have mine in return. The time for work is short; the need of work, wisely directed, well supported work, is urgent. Many of our good brethren are nearly discouraged because through our lack of system, irresponsible persons claiming to be Adventists, have in several places been permitted to tear down and destroy, what these brethren had with great pains and success built up. Shall we not try to aid each other in our work by devising some means whereby we can protect our churches against the destructive fanaticism of peripatetic adventurers, irresponsible empirics and church parasites generally. I want to hear personally or through our journals from every preacher and active worker who has clear and decided views on the subject of this address.

Let every writer who is favorable to the proposition generally—without committing himself to any special object herein mentioned—and who will give his influence to make such a meeting a deserved success if it be decided to hold one, let every such writer give his opinion as to the time and place for the meeting and how such a convention in his opinion should be constituted. On the other hand any who think that the proposed meeting would not advance, but rather retard the best interests of the cause of Christ, let them, too, write freely and clearly their opinion and their objections.

My address for April will be at East Shelby, New York. Hoping, dear brethren, and praying that heavenly wisdom may direct our efforts and control our acts, so that we may best work for God and humanity, I remain your brother in the hope of the Gospel. J. H. WHITMORE.

MAKE FRIENDS AMONG BIRDS.

Birds can provide quite well for themselves, but they are very thankful for any assistance. The robin asks only to be let alone, and he will be likely to choose some snug covert in the branches of an evergreen, or other thick foliaged tree near the house in which to commence housekeeping. He and his mate may be made very tame by frequently scattering bread crumbs and other dainties near their haunts. They have been rendered so familiar by such means, that they would come when called and feed at the feet and in some cases from the hands of their friends. The blue-birds will hunt all about the premises for some suitable hollow with a narrow opening in which to build their nests. They sometimes choose very singular dwellings. An old boot hung in the wood-house was for years a favorite nesting place for a pair of these birds. A workman once left his coat hanging on the fence in a back lot. Several weeks after, he remembered it, but found other claimants in possession, two blue birds being very busy rearing a family in one of the sleeves.

A few plain boxes with entrance holes just large enough, placed in trees or on the buildings, will attract these pleasant visitors. The pert and lively wrens, will quickly occupy similar accommodations, and give much pleasure with their sprightly songs and noisy chatterings. The martins go in flocks, and will require larger accommodations. A box three feet long, six to nine inches wide and a foot high, with openings six inches apart will suffice for a small colony. The barn swallows will find quarters in the barn, if openings be left in the gable end, and the mud swallows if undisturbed will make quite a cornice under the eaves. All these birds will work faithfully for the neighborhood where they are encouraged. Moths, caterpillars and worms will be devoured by wholesale where birds abound, and the music they make will certainly afford more pleasure than can be derived from shooting or stoning such innocent creatures. —Amer. Agriculturist.

CHANGES OF A CENTURY.—The nineteenth century has witnessed many and great discoveries.

In 1809, Fulton took out the first patent for the invention of the steamboat.

The first steamboats which made regular trips across the Atlantic ocean were the Sirius and the Great Western, in 1830.

The first public application to practical use of gas for illumination was made in 1802.

In 1813, the streets of London were for the first time lighted with gas.

In 1813, there was built in Waltham, Mass., a mill, believed to be the first in the world which combined all the requirements of making finished cloth from raw cotton.

In 1790, there were only twenty-five post-offices in the whole country, and up to 1837 the rates of postage were twenty-five cents for a letter sent over four hundred miles.

In 1807, wooden clocks commenced to be made by machinery. This ushered in the era of cheap clocks.

About the year 1833, the first railroad of any considerable length in the United States was constructed.

In 1840, the first experiments in photography were made by Daguerre.

About 1840, the first express business was established.

The anthracite coal business may be said to have begun in 1820.

In 1836, the first patent for the invention of matches was granted.

In 1845, the first telegram was sent.

Steel pens were introduced for use in 1803.

In 1846, Elias Howe obtained a patent for his first sewing machine.

The first successful method for making vulcanized India rubber was patented in 1869.

LORD, HUMBLE ME.

GEO. E. LEE.

Lord, humble me beneath thy cross,
And from my heart remove all dross;
Do thou my every helper be,
For always have I need of thee.

From vanity I would refrain,
And thy humility retain,
Protect me from the tempter's wile,
And on me shed thy radiant smile.

Oh Jesus, take me as thine own,
That I with thee may take thy throne;
Oh, keep and use me to the end,
For all my hopes on thee depend.

I seek not self, nor wealth, nor fame,
But to exalt my Savior's name.
Oh precious Jesus, thou dost know,
Where'er the journey, I will go.

I know that thou wilt safely lead,
'Tis but thy righteousness I plead;
Oh give me grace, direct my mind,
That I thy resting place may find.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A CHEERFUL HOME.

A single bitter word may disquiet an entire family for a whole day. One surly glance casts a gloom over the household, while a smile, like a gleam of sunshine, may light up the darkest and weariest hours. Like unexpected flowers, which spring up along our path, full of freshness, fragrance, and beauty, so do kind words and gentle acts and sweet dispositions make glad the home where peace and blessing dwell. No matter how humble the abode, if it be thus garnished with grace and sweetened with kindness and smiles, the heart will turn lovingly toward it from all the tumults of the world, and home, if it be ever so homely, will be the dearest spot beneath the circuit of the sun.

And the influences of home perpetuate themselves. The gentle grace of the mother lives in the daughter long after her head is pillowed in the dust of death; and the fatherly kindness finds its echo in the nobility and courtesy of sons who came to wear his mantle and to fill his place; while, on the other hand, from an unhappy, misgoverned, and disordered home go forth persons who shall make other homes miserable, and perpetuate the sourness and sadness, the contentions and strifes and railings which have made their own early lives so wretched and distorted.

Toward the cheerful home the children gather "as doves to their windows," while from the home which is the abode of discontent and strife and trouble, they fly forth as vultures to rend their prey.

The class of men that disturb and disorder and distress the world, are not those born and nurtured amid the hallowed influences of Christian homes; but rather those whose early life has been a scene of trouble and vexation—who have started wrong in the pilgrimage, and whose course is one of disaster to themselves, and trouble to those around them.—Friend's Intelligencer.

TREATMENT OF SPRAINS.—Sprains are usually very painful, and are accompanied with a high degree of inflammation and soreness. The indications are to secure perfect rest of the injured part, and to reduce the inflammation. The inflammation may be reduced by cold wet compresses, renewed as often as they become warm. When the patient has a great deal of vitality and there is a high degree of inflammation, the injured part may be immersed in cold water, or a stream of cold water may be poured over it until the pain and soreness has been partially removed, when the cold compress should be applied. When there is much pain and tenderness and but little heat, hot fomentations followed by cold compresses, are preferable. When the inflammation and soreness have subsided, friction is useful to promote absorption and strengthen the part. Great care should be exercised about using the injured part until the strength is restored, as it then requires but very little to sprain it again. A second sprain is more difficult to cure than the first.—Ex.

ALCOHOL.—It is a sad mistake to suppose that alcohol in any shape is beneficial to the interior economy of man's body. It is supposed to do all manner of marvelous things. This is not so. Alcohol is one of the few things that resists all attempts of the body to assimilation. It leaves the body in almost precisely the same condition as it enters it, having on its passage done nothing but inflamed the blood, excited the various functions to unnatural and furious action, stimulated combustion, weakened the brain and nerves, sapped the muscular strength, and done much mischief generally. Physicians who recommend a little whisky, or wine, or other tonic, are responsible for thousands of drunkards.—Her. of Health.

RETURN OF CHRIST.

H. M. LEVI.

As each day draws to a close,
And nature sinks into repose,
O, then we feel the time draws near
When Jesus will again appear.

Soon we'll hear the joyful cry,
Christ is returning from on high;
He comes to save, oh, can it be,
Such mercy is in store for me?

He will save his children then,
Who in sorrow long hath been;
Waiting for their Lord and King,
His everlasting praise to sing.

And he bids us watch and wait,
While living in this mortal state;
Fearing, if suddenly he comes,
He'll find us with the sleeping ones.

O, may we this warning take,
And from this hour all sin forsake;
For his return our hearts prepare,
And often go to him in prayer.

Then in that morning we shall rise
To meet our Savior in the skies;
In the new earth, all free from sin,
The song of triumph will begin.

DID CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, MAKE THE WORLD?---No. 3.

J. S. WHITE.

If Christ had no existence as a being before he came into the world, it would be true that he did not make the world. We will notice the testimony of John on this point beyond what we have already said. "He that cometh after me is preferred before me, for he was before me." ver. 15. How was Christ before John? He was not before him in this world, for John was born before Christ. It may be said, that Christ was before John in the purpose of God. But was not John in the purpose of God as soon as Christ was? or is it true that God is like a man, who may at one time purpose to do one thing, and after that purpose to do another thing? Are not God's purposes eternal, like himself? Again, if it was God's "speech" that produced Christ, it was his speech that produced John first. So, then, how was Christ before John? Suppose we read John, It was preferred before me, for it was before me.

"And no man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven." chap. 3:13. "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world." v. 17. "He that cometh from above is above all." v. 31. "For he whom God hath sent." v. 34. "He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father which hath sent him." "And the Father himself which hath sent me." "For whom he hath sent, him ye believe not." "That ye believe on him whom he hath sent." "For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven." "For I came down from heaven." "And this is the will of him that sent me." "And they said, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? How is it, then, that he saith, I came down from heaven?" (It seems that the Jews were as much puzzled to see how Christ could come down from heaven, as some are who live in our day. Probably it did not occur to them that Christ was only an it, that came down from heaven. And how could they think of such a thing, from anything that Christ said?) "Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God; he hath seen the Father." "I am the living bread which came down from heaven." "As the living Father hath sent me." "This is the bread which came down from heaven." "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he [not it] was before?" Chap. 6.

In this talk with the Jews, Christ repeats the statement over and over that he came down from heaven. This was the great truth he tried to have them believe. They understood him to teach this, as we have noticed, and this was what they did not believe. By not believing it they dishonored him, and they dishonored the Father who sent him. "Jesus answered them and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." "I am not come of myself, but he that hath sent me is true, whom ye know not; but I know him, for I am from him, and he hath sent me." Yet a little while I am with you, and then I go unto him that sent me." Chap. 7. "For I know whence I came, and whither I go." "And he said unto them, Ye are from beneath, I am from above." "And he that sent me is with me." "I speak that which I have seen with my Father." "I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me." "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw it and was glad. Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?" By this question, it is evident that the Jews understood Christ to mean that he was before Abraham. Did Christ correct them, or say anything to the contrary? Instead of that, he replied positively, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am." They did not think that he might have been before Abraham in the neuter gender in the sense of "it." No, they took him at his word. And "then took they up stones to cast at him." Not a few beside Jews have cast stones at the plain statements of Christ on his pre-existence, or that he was, before he came into the world in the flesh. Chap. 8.

"Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, Thou blasphemeth, because I said, I am the Son of God?" 10:36. "Jesus cried and said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me." 12:44. "He that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me," 13:20. When Christ was about to raise Lazarus from the dead, he said to the Father, "I know that thou hearest me always; but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me." 11:42.

Thus far the passages I have cited were mostly spoken to the Jews. We see how constantly Christ kept this great truth before them, that he was the Son of God before he came into the world, and that he came down from heaven, and that his Father sent him. This is the great foundation truth of the gospel,—the corner-stone on which Christ will build his church. If the Jews had believed this, they could easily have believed whatever else Christ said of himself. By rejecting this, they rejected and dishonored both him and his Father. "Except ye believe that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." John 8:24. Not to believe that Christ was what he said he was, was to reject Christ. No matter whatever else they believed that Christ was, if they did not believe that he came forth from God, that he was before Abraham, that he was going where he was before he came into the world, which truth Christ tried to impress on their minds with words plainer than which cannot be used, they must die in their sins. Jesus made this a test to the Jews.

What John has said, beyond what I have quoted on this point, was between Christ and his apostles. "But now I go my way to him that sent me." John 16:5. "For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God. I am come forth from the Father, and am come into the world; again, I leave the world, and go to the Father. His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb. Now we are sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee; by this we know that thou camest forth from God. Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe?" John 16:27–31. Here we see the difference between the faith of the disciples and the unbelief of the Jews. One class believed just what Christ said,—that he came forth from the Father, and was going back to the Father, where he (not it) was before he came from the Father.

After this, Christ prayed to his Father, in which he said, "For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me." 17:8. "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world." 17:18. Christ had disciples before he sent them into the world. So God had a Son before he sent him into the world. "For thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." 17:24. If so, then Christ was there to be loved. Or, did the Father love his Son that he was going to have, but not a Son that he then had? Or, in other words, did he love his Son in prospect only? If so, did he not love John in prospect? Where, then, is the difference between loving Christ before the foundation of the world, and loving John and all other believers in Christ? "O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee; but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me." 17:16. This is what the Jews did not know nor believe, and for not believing it they died in their sins.

Hear the prophet: "But thou, Beth-lehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." Micah 5:2. If this means that Christ was everlastingly in the purpose of God; or that it was the purpose of God from everlasting to have a Son; and that that Son first came into being when he became flesh, then all other beings were in his purpose from everlasting. If so, why speak thus of Christ in distinction from all other beings? "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." 2 Cor. 8:9. Christ was rich before he became poor. If this means that he was rich in God's purpose, then he became poor in God's purpose. Christ was poor all the while he was in the world up to his resurrection. It follows, therefore, that if Christ had no being before he was in the world, he was poor before he became rich. This would be reversing the text. Some, to evade the force of this text, have resorted to the absurdity of saying that Christ was rich all the while he was here until his death, and then he became poor. Jesus said, "O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." John 17:5. If this means that it was in the purpose of the Father before the world was to glorify a Son which he would have in some future period, was it not equally true that it was in his purpose before the world was to glorify all that would believe in his Son? This view of the passage makes no distinction between Christ and his people, so far as priority of being is concerned. This is bringing Christ pretty well down to the level with man. For neither Christ nor his people knew anything about any glory they had with God before the world was, for the reason that they were not there.

The whole argument against Christ's pre-existence is to bring Christ down towards man's level. Some claim that Christ was no more than a very good man. Others say that he was a very bad man. This is going to the bottom of the ladder. There are but three or four steps from the top to the bottom. The first and largest is to deny that God's Son made the world, and that he had pre-existence. The second is to deny that he was any more than a very good man, who came to do man good by teaching good morals. The third is to deny that he was a good man. This brings you to the lowest point. I submit, which class of persons is the most consistent? If Christ was not what he said he was, how could he be a good man?

To receive Christ as our Savior, sent from the Father to redeem the world, and at the same time deny that God had a Son to send, or that the Son did not come down from heaven as Christ has said, is adding insult to injury. It is like calling him Lord, and Master, and at the same time not believing what he has said, and so making him a liar.

In view of such plain and repeated statements of Christ and his apostles,—that he came down from heaven, that his Father sent him, that he had glory with the Father before the world was, that he was rich and became poor, and that he has ascended up where he was before;—in the face of all this, to say that God's Son never was in heaven, that God did not have a Son until he was born in the flesh, that Christ had no existence as a being till after John the Baptist was born,—if to say this is not directly denying what God has said in his Word, I know not how it can be done. We have Christ's word that he came down from heaven, and his word that he has gone back to heaven. If we may deny the one, we may deny the other. The evidence that Christ is now in heaven in person is no more direct than it is that he was there in person as God's Son before he came down from heaven.

But, says the objector, I don't deny that Christ was with the Father in some sense, and that he came down from heaven in some sense. In what sense? In the sense that he was in God's mind or purpose;—that God purposed, before he made man, that he would have a Son at some subsequent period. But were not all men in the mind of God before man was made? According to the objector's view, Christ was no more with God in the beginning than John or Paul were; and he no more came down from heaven than they did. Why, then, does not the Bible inform us that all men came down from heaven, and that all men who will have glory in the future, did have glory with God before the world was? For the very good reason that they were not there.

OUR PASSOVER.

J. H. BROWN.

"Christ our passover is sacrificed for us, ... therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." 1 Cor. 5, 7, 8. Our passover. Then we have a passover to keep. Our lamb has been slain, even the one ordained from the foundation of the world.

I find but two passovers in the Word of God. The first is the passing over of the destroying angel in the land of Egypt, of the children of Israel and their deliverance from death and bondage, commemorated by the slaying of a lamb, and eating it with bitter herbs and unleavened bread. In its main features it was a feast of commemoration or memorial, to keep in remembrance the mercy and goodness of the Lord in his past dealings with the children of Israel; also a shadow of good things to come, a type of the true passover, the true lamb slain, and feast of unleavened bread. It reached backward in remembrance of past mercies, and looked forward in faith to a manifestation of future mercy, so much greater than the past, as the substance is greater than the shadow.

Another important feature is the manner of its observance. The lamb without spot or blemish, was to be kept up from the 10th to the 14th day; killed between the evenings; blood sprinkled on the door-posts; roasted and eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, with staff in hand, loins girded, and shoes on the feet. None was to be left till the morning. All leaven was to be purged out of the houses as well as the bread; and the soul that ate any leaven was to be cut off. "Cursed is he that continueth not in all things written in the law to do them."

In the second passover we find the same characteristics as in the first, of which it is the antitype. Christ our passover. And if Christ is, then a lamb is not. If it is our passover, then it is another passover, and not the same as the Jews' passover. And if the first was the shadow, this is the substance. If the substance is reached, the shadow is gone. The schoolmaster has led to Christ and there is no longer any need of a schoolmaster; for in Christ all fulness dwells.

As in the type, so in the antitype. Christ was kept, was foreordained to be the passover lamb, was slain between the evenings, and his blood sprinkled for the redemption of man. Here the long looked for substance has come. The dim shadows give place to the glittering reality. The outlines of the one correspond with those of the other, and there can be no doubt that the true substance has been reached,—the real passover.

After receiving a thousand dollars that had been promised by a friend, would you be foolish enough to throw away the money and say the promise was good enough for you? But that is just what men are doing. "O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you that ye should not obey the truth; before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you? This only would I learn of you. Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Are ye so foolish, having begun in the Spirit are ye now made perfect by the flesh? As many as are of the works of the law are under the curse, as it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them."

Now if the old passover is to be kept, it must be kept in every jot and tittle; the sprinkling of blood, eating in haste, with bitter herbs, loins girded, staff in hand, sandals on the feet, none must be left till the morning, or if left, must be burned with fire. Unleavened bread must be eaten seven days; no leaven found in any house; and the soul that disobeys must be cut off from the people. But if this is of effect now, Christ is become of none effect;—ye are fallen from grace. If there is salvation in this, we need not Christ. What saith the Scriptures? "By the works of the law shall no flesh be justified."

But how is our passover kept? In our passover the flesh profits nothing. God desires worshipers neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem. It is a passover kept in spirit and in truth. A feast, not of bread or flesh of lambs, but of the Son of God, whose flesh is meat indeed, and whose blood is drink indeed; a passover kept not with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. Behold the bread! Sincerity and truth. The bread that came down from heaven, the which if a man eat, he shall not die. Oh, the paschal lamb has been slain, the passover is being kept, the bread of life is being eaten by thousands at the present time. The feast is not yet concluded, and will not be till the morning when deliverance comes to all the true Israelites, who all the long weary night have been feeding on the Lamb, often tasting the bitter herbs, while they have lived as pilgrims and strangers, with loins girt about, and staff in their hand, shoes on their feet, waiting, and looking, and longing for deliverance from Egypt, and for rest and home in Canaan.

As it was then, so it will be now; the soul that eats Christ, and is at the same time full of the leaven of malice and sin will be cut off. There will be no sprinkling of blood to atone and cleanse from sin, no lamb to eat, no righteousness to be attained when the morning dawns, when the destroying angel passes over those that have been washed in Christ's atoning blood. As then the house was to be purged of leaven, so the Gospel House—God's building—the church of the living God is to be purged of every thing evil,—fornicaters, idolaters, railers, drunkards, and extortioners. Know ye not that a little leaven leavens the whole lump? Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump as ye are unleavened. "Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person."

It is eaten by faith in the Son of God. By faith the ancient passover was kept; so now faith takes hold of Christ's forgiveness of past sins, his atonement by his death, and his free justification by his grace. By faith we eat him. His nature becomes our nature. As bread when eaten becomes a part of us, and is incorporated into our very being, so Christ, his nature, his love, his mind, becomes our nature, our mind and spirit. Christ in us and we in him. A law implanted in us that works life of its own inherent power, "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus." The law of sin and death works death. It is like the law of gravitation. A body will fall to the earth every time. Not once does it violate the rule; so the law of sin will work sin every time, and we are led to cry, "O wretched man that I am, who will deliver me? and when I would do good evil is present with me," &c. The law of the spirit of life works in the same manner as the law of sin and death, but in opposition. It works holiness as the other works sin, is found only in Christ Jesus, and results from partaking of him.

This is our passover. Jesus has passed our sins all over, and we commemorate the passing over by partaking of him. The commemoration also extends in symbol. As Jesus was about to be offered, he instituted the Supper. "This do in remembrance of me," he said. In this you show forth my death till I come. This bread represents my body, broken for you, the cup, my blood; this do till I come. As a supper was instituted in commemoration of the passing over of the destroying angel in Egypt, so here is a supper instituted for a remembrance of our passover. As theirs was a type that was to receive a fulfillment, so is ours; looking forward to the kingdom of God when Jesus comes, when will be celebrated the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Thus there are two distinct passovers, and the commemoration of each is just as separate and distinct. The first was kept with a lamb, unleavened bread, bitter herbs &c.; the second, with bread and wine used as symbols, accompanied by an examination of our own hearts, discerning in the symbols not the feast, but the Lord's body broken for us to purge us from malice and wickedness, and all uncleanness, being partakers of the true passover by faith, without which the mere ceremony of the supper is of no effect, but rather condemnation to the partaker.

But perhaps some one will say, Why all this? I reply, I write, not so much to point out the gospel form of celebration in the elements of bread and wine, but to guard against legalism, or a running into the law, and a falling from grace. One main point to be borne in mind is, that there is no salvation in forms or ceremonies. The moment we place undue stress upon a form, even if it is a gospel form, we are approaching dangerous ground. Forms are proper and right, but it is not the form that saves. The main point in the celebration of the Lord's supper is, "discerning the Lord's body," and if his body is discerned, it is not so important whether we receive the elements standing, sitting, or reclining around a table or in a congregation;—in the daytime, or in the evening; once a week or once a month. These points may not be unimportant, because the further we get from gospel simplicity, the deeper the wheat will be buried in a useless pile of chaff. Bible forms are best, but even Bible forms have changed. The Corinthians at one time made a supper of the sacrament; and one was hungry, and another drunken; wherefore the apostle says, If any man hunger, let him eat at home; and when ye come around the Lord's table, tarry one for the other. The real point to be observed, being a discernment of the body and blood of the Lord.

Beloved, peace be unto you, and let us walk in the light as he is in the light, knowing that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. Amen.

THOUGHTS OF JESUS.

M. A. TIFFANY.

Jesus is my theme, for who else is more worthy? Of whom in any age of this world's history can there be said so much that may thrill the hearts of millions as of that wonderful "Christ-man?" Who among all earth's great and noblest sons could claim such a place in the souls of men and hold it, as did that lowly Nazarene—that gentle suffering Christ? Who is there among men who could suffer willingly all contempt and reproach, and finally, an ignominious death for their enemies? None could be found in the whole universe who could have wrought such a redemption for sinful, fallen man, as the Son of God; none loved us sufficiently to be willing to sacrifice everything, but the Lord of glory; and how great a sin of ingratitude, if we do not, in return, give him what he asks of us—our heart—our love.

Jesus, who was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, "is the chiefest among ten thousand; the one altogether lovely." His glorious message of "peace and good-will" has been sounded in all lands. It has penetrated the dark and desolate places of the earth, and carried its joy and blessedness into the hearts of millions. The far-off isles of the sea have heard; the mountains and the little hills have echoed back the glad refrain; while through valley and over plain has rolled the music of its voice, while river, sea, and ocean have chanted its ever increasing melody. Jesus, who was esteemed stricken, smitten of God and afflicted, is become the mighty Savior and Redeemer. He is now exalted above all principalities and powers,—our High Priest and Intercessor; to whom we can ever go with perfect confidence, asking all needed good. He sympathizes with all our hearts, and knows how to alleviate our distress and woe. He is able and willing to take away all our darkness, and scatter its dismal dreary shades by his wonderful beams of light and love; and to each soul he may be its Morning Star and its Sun of righteousness. He has indeed become that to me; and my heart sings from morn till night of his boundless love. Praise God, for the light and peace that floods my soul. Christ has satisfied my thirst, and my heart is perfectly at rest. Oh, how my heart longs for him! Oh, that the blue canopy above would roll together as a scroll, and reveal to my longing eyes Him whom my soul loveth! Earth may fail, but he will never leave us, for are we not his betrothed? and is not our covenant everlasting? He, the Prince of Light will keep us faithful to himself, and at the end will bring us, his chosen ones to Zion, the city of our God, there to reign with him forever.

ORTHODOX.

Sound in doctrine, is the meaning of this word, and when applied to religion it must include a belief in the teachings of the Bible.

Men are orthodox when they believe the Bible as it reads. Infidels can never be orthodox and christians, though they may call themselves such. A christian will believe the whole Bible, and he, therefore, will be orthodox.

The claims to orthodoxy by certain men, is a most spurious one. They have no right to the title while they hesitate to believe the plain declarations of God, and attempt to make him mean the reverse of what he says. The devils are more orthodox than these men, for they believe the plain teachings of the Bible. They said to Christ, "Art thou come to torment us before the time?" They believed that Christ was to come. They believed that they were to be punished by him; and also that there was a fixed time for their punishment. They, therefore, are more orthodox than men who deny this and other as plainly taught doctrines in the Bible.

A man should blush with shame, who, while he claims to be orthodox, denies that God means what he plainly declares. This is claiming a title before God, angels and men that he has no right to, and therefore he is to be looked upon as an imposter, and despised by all in earth and heaven. But thousands to-day are making this claim, and without shame are asserting continually that they are orthodox—sound in doctrine!

FLESH AND SPIRIT.

FACTS.

O. W. STETSON.

We come now to facts; and it is an undeniable fact that there are many passages in the New Testament in which believers are spoken of as if they had experienced the second birth, the new birth; had been "born again,"—"born from above,"—"born of the Spirit." But do such passages speak of an existing fact, or do they speak of a fact proleptically; i. e., in anticipation,—antedating it? There are many facts also in Scripture in support of such hypothesis; let us duly examine and consider some of them, and see if they will not reduce our proposition to a thesis. Of the many passages, the strongest of all are John 1:12, 13, and 3:6, and we will begin with these; for if they cannot be satisfactorily elucidated and harmonized, we need go no farther, and might as well stop here.

Griesbach notes a different reading of Jno. 4:13, from that of the English version. Instead of hoe—egennectheesan, he has egenneethee, the singular pronoun and verb for the plural; which would make the passage read—"But to as many as received him, he gave authority to become children of God, to those believing into HIS NAME, who was not begotten of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of a man, but of God." Thus referring it directly to the physical generation of the Messiah, by the Spirit of God, rather than to the moral regeneration of believers." See Diaglott translation and notes in loc. This reading is evidently harmonious with verses 14 and 18 of the same chapter; with 1 John 4:9, and Luke 1:34, 35; and entirely so with Rom. 8:23, 28–30, as we shall show directly. John 3:6—"That which has been born of the flesh is flesh; and that which has been born of the Spirit is spirit." In verses 10, 11, he said, "If I told you of earthly things, and you do not believe, how will you believe if I tell you of heavenly things? and no one has ascended into heaven except the Son of man who descended from heaven." Diaglott Trans.

The best and most satisfactory, because the most authoritative exposition of the sixth verse of John 3, is that given by the apostle Paul, in 1 Cor. 15:44–47, agreeing with our Savior's words in John 3:10, 11, already quoted. "If there is an animal [flesh] body, there is also a spiritual body, and so it has been written, The first Adam became a living soul, the last Adam [became] a life-giving Spirit. The spiritual, however, was not the first, but the animal; afterwards the spiritual. The first man was from the ground, earthy; the second man is from heaven." In 2 Cor. 3:17, Paul says, "The Lord [Jesus Christ] is the Spirit," i. e., the spiritual man. Then in 1 Cor. 15:42 he says, "And thus is the resurrection of the dead; it is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; ... it is sown an animal body [flesh man], it is raised a spiritual body [spiritual man]..... Of what kind the earthy one [i. e., such in kind as the earthly], such also the earthly ones [will be in the resurrection]; and of what kind [such in kind as] the heavenly one, such also the heavenly ones [will also be in the the resurrection]. And even as we bore the likeness of the earthly one, we shall also bear the likeness of the heavenly one [in the resurrection]." "For our polity [citizenship] begins in the heavens, from whence also we are expecting a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who will transform the body of our humiliation into a conformity with his glorious body." Phil. 3:20, 21. "If he should appear, we shall be like him, because we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3:2. "And ourselves also, possessing the first fruit of the Spirit, [we] groan within ourselves, waiting for sonship—the redemption of our body; .... because those whom he [God] foreknew, he also pre-determined to be copies of the likeness of his Son, for him to be a FIRST BORN [prototokos] among MANY BRETHREN." "The FIRST born [prototokos] from the dead." Col. 1:15:18. The first born of the dead ones (prototokos). Rev. 1:5.

Joseph B. Rotherham, of England, is a translator of the New Testament, from the text of Tregelles. And in his "Exposition of the Gospel," as given in the Rainbow for Oct. 1872, I find the subjoined, and deem it worthy of being reproduced here, as giving light on the subject before us. He says:—"Let us consider what our rising from among the dead implies. It implies the triumphant attainment of everlasting life. It is characteristically a resurrection of life. John 5:29. It is the coronation, by virtue of which we are to reign in life. Rom. 5:17. It is our final entrance into life. Mark 9:43–45. Moreover, it is our admission, as inheritors and as kings, into the kingdom of God. 1 Cor. 15:50; Rev. 20:6; Mark 9:47. This last cited passage is valuable as showing that entrance into life, and entrance into the kingdom, are synonymous. Once more, our resurrection from among the dead will be the completion and proof of our being sons of God. 'The sons of this age are marrying and being given in marriage; but those accounted worthy to obtain that age, and the resurrection which is from among the dead, neither are marrying nor are being given in marriage; for not even to die any more are they able; for they are equal to messengers, and are sons of God, being sons of the resurrection.' Luke 20:35, 36. So, then, that resurrection will prove a birth into all the glories of divine sonship! that resurrection will impart an incapacity of death! that resurrection will usher into an age not otherwise to be obtained,—the kingdom, eternal life, unveiled sonship, all welded into one magnificent promise of a Christ-pledged resurrection from among the dead."

"Marvel not that I said unto you, Ye must be born again." "Because I live, ye shall live also." John 3:7, and 14:19.

ANGELS IN THE WAY.

J. A. GOODRICH.

To find a reference to what I was reading this morning, I turned to Gen. 32, and the first verse seemed to me so full of richness and encouragement to the christian, that I feasted upon it a long time. "And Jacob went his way, and the angels of God met him." He went on his way, not his own way, only that it was God's way for him; and while obeying the command and the leadings of the Spirit, such a wonderful blessing was vouchsafed to him, as meeting the angels of God. They might have come to him, it is true, had he remained in his place; but he saw them sooner for going on his way. He knew them, for he said, "This is God's host."

We all know that beautiful history,—his fear of Esau, his anxiety to find favor with him, his tenderness in providing for the safety of his family; and who can read unmoved that remarkable prayer, verses 9—12, where he takes God's own words and promises, and lays them before him as though he could not be denied. The Lord had said unto him, "Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee." All christians, if they will go forward in the path of duty, whatever it may be; whether a sacrifice of our own care, and pleasure for the good of another, a call to give a word of exhortation and prayer, an appeal to some impenitent one, when we know not how it may be received, or to stand by the couch of suffering; in any and all the daily experiences of the christian life, if we go in God's strength we shall surely meet the angels. But the trouble is, we do not know them when we meet them.

O how many times in our weakness and sense of want, do we pray to be filled with all his fulness;—to be made like Christ; and yet we shrink from the trial and suffering that he designs shall make us so. We do not know our prayers in their answers; but in our anguish cry, Did I ask this of thee? O how sweet to trust the Lord fully, and to know that he doeth all things well. Then we know that we shall meet God's host that he has given charge concerning us, to keep us in all our ways. Let us in humility and gratitude plead those precious promises which "are yea, and amen, in Christ Jesus." "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." "Commit thy ways unto the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass." Then with the eye of faith fixed on God, though to our dim, mortal vision there is only trial, darkness, sorrow around and before us, we shall walk with the angels in his light, as children of the light and of the day; for the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them.

THE INJUSTICE OF AN UNCHARITABLE SPIRIT.

SEL. BY THOMAS FOOTE.

A suspicious, uncharitable spirit is not only inconsistent with all social virtue and happiness, but it is also, in itself, unreasonable and unjust. In order to form sound opinions concerning characters and actions, two things are especially requisite, information and impartiality. But such as are most forward to decide unfavorably, are commonly destitute of both. Instead of possessing, or even requiring full information, the grounds on which they proceed are frequently the most slight and frivolous. A tale, perhaps, which the idle have invented, the inquisitive have listened to, and the credulous have propagated; or a real incident which rumor, in carrying it along, has exaggerated and disguised, supplies them with materials of confident assertion, and decisive judgment. From an action they presently look into the heart, and infer the motive. This supposed motive they conclude to be the ruling principle; and pronounce at once concerning the whole character.

Nothing can be more contrary both to equity and sound reason, than this precipitate judgment. Any man who attends to what passes within himself, may easily discern what a complicated system the human character is; and what a variety of circumstances must be taken into the account, in order to estimate it truly. No single instance of conduct whatever, is sufficient to determine it, as from one worthy action, it were credulity, not charity, to conclude a person to be free from all vice; so from one which is censurable, it is perfectly unjust to infer that the author of it is without conscience, and without merit. If we knew all the attending circumstances, it might appear in an excusable light; nay, perhaps, under a commendable form. The motives of the actor may have been entirely different from those which we ascribe to him; and where we suppose him impelled by bad design, he may have been prompted by conscience and mistaken principle. Admitting the action to have been in every view criminal, he may have been hurried into it through inadvertency and surprise. He may have sincerely repented; and the virtuous principle may have now regained its full vigor. Perhaps this was the corner of frailty; the quarter on which he lay open to the incursions of temptations; while the other avenues of his heart were firmly guarded by conscience.

It is therefore evident, that no part of the government of temper deserves attention more, than to keep our minds pure from uncharitable prejudices, and open to candor and humanity in judging of others. The worst consequences, both to ourselves and to society, follow from the opposite spirit.

We have on hand a large amount of matter for publication, which causes a delay; so you will excuse. We are very grateful that you have written so liberally for our paper, and hope you will continue to write as many articles as formerly, but would suggest that many of the long articles might be improved by abridgement;—sifting out unnecessary words and sentences. It will improve the paper to have every thing personal and local, as brief as possible; viz., notices, requests, appointments, obituaries, conference reports, and every thing that will interest but a small portion of our readers.

Some seem to have forgotten that it is against our rules to publish anonymous articles. We must have the writer's name before publishing an article. It is not necessary that the full name appear in print, at we must have it at the Office. Write ith ink and not with pencil; for pencilling metimes becomes so blurred in coming rough the mail that it cannot be read. rite plainly as possible, and if you cannot ite a readable hand, get some friend who can, to copy your manuscript. Our work is very trying and laborious, and if you can improve by some of these suggestions, it will relieve us of a burden. Give us a large number of short, sweet letters. May God bless you all abundantly with his Holy Spirit to assist you in helping proclaim the good news of salvation through Jesus, and the speedy coming of the King Eternal.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16: 3.

Following the instruction of the Savior in relation to the chain of events that was to reach from the first to the second advent, and having compared his prophecy and history till we have reached a period commencing at the end of the "great tribulation," near the close of the last century, we now proceed to inquire what is to follow next in the series of events.

> "Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together. Matt. 24: 23–28.

The twenty-third verse clearly indicates that following the "great tribulation," caused by the terrible persecutions under the Papal power, there would arise a class of persons who would falsely teach that Christ had come in various places. Of such the Savior says: "Believe it not." It is a well-known fact, that the spirits, who operate through their mediums, do teach, and cause their followers to believe, that the advent of Spiritualism is the second coming of Christ—all the coming that may be expected. He who fully adopts Spiritualism is said to receive the second coming of Christ. As strange as this may appear to the christian man, yet, it is nevertheless true. Resulting from this seems to follow the fulfillment of the twenty-fourth verse. It was said by a prominent Spiritualist that there are at the present time over two hundred persons, who claim to be Christ's. When the mediums arrive to a certain degree of development, the demons endeavor to persuade them to believe that they are on the same plane as was Christ, when in this world; hence, they should be called by the same name. In connection with these are to be "false prophets." A large number of Spiritualist mediums are led to speak prophetically; but it is known to all who are acquainted with the facts, that their prophecies are anything but reliable. Those who utter them, can most properly be called, "false prophets." Besides saying Christ has come, and uttering false prophecies, Jesus said they would "show great signs and wonders, insomuch that, if it were possible, they" should "deceive the very elect."

The "signs and wonders" are largely the means by which they deceive the people, and try to seduce them away from Christ. Of these things, Jesus gave timely and definite warning, so that when they should come, those who witnessed them might be sure they had passed the "great tribulation," and entered the period when the signs would indicate that the real coming of Christ was not far in the future. He tells those who trust in him to put no confidence in those who may say he has come in some "secret" place, like a chamber, where spiritual manifestations may be witnessed, or in some distant, obscure region, like a desert. When he shall come all will know it, for his glory will be as visible as the lightnings glare, that shines from the east to the west. When he comes, he says, "then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." This sublime event is certainly not in the past, but we think there are unmistakable signs to show that it is in the near future. The impression is becoming stronger and stronger and deeper upon the minds of devoted people, that our Savior's coming is truly an event soon to be witnessed. Satan seems to be making a terrible onset at the present time against those who are looking for the coming of our absent King.

This is the time when all should be on the altar of sacrifice, where we may suffer with Christ in patience, till the hour of deliverence comes. If possible, Satan will provoke and cultivate a smiting spirit, and thus gain an entrance into the hearts of those who may allow it a lodging place. This is the time to "endure hardness as a good soldier of Christ." Let all remember that those who have "hatred," or "variance," "shall not inherit the kingdom of God." If we, or our friends are cheated, slandered, misrepresented, or abused in any way, let all be borne with a calm patience, and let earnest prayer be daily offered for those who may be acting the part of an enemy. We cannot step too carefully at the present time. It is to be feared that many will be shipwrecked in the sight of the heavenly harbor. Remember the caution of inspiration, expressed as follows: "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord, looking diligently, lest any man fail (margin, fall from) of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled." Heb. 12: 14, 15. Should the Savior speak now from heaven, we think he would say: "Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is . . . And what I say unto you, I say unto all, WATCH." Mark 13: 33, 37.

It is perilous in the extreme to be sleeping now, so near the time of his coming. If a "root of bitterness," "hatred" "variance," or a "grudge," becomes seated in the heart, it will most surely produce moral sleep, by grieving away the Holy Spirit, and thus render the person unfit for the kingdom of God. He may be as sound in the doctrine of the Bible as ever, and defend it as faithfully, but if he has "not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9.

Dear Brn. and Srs., let us set a double watch against all the snares and devices of Satan; resign all into the hands of Jesus; then we may sing,

"All is well,"—
"I am trusting, Lord, in thee."

SANTA CLARA VALLEY.

Although we have frequently referred to the beautiful Santa Clara Valley, yet every time we visit it we see more and more to admire. While writing, we are now (April 11th) passing through it from Santa Clara to San Francisco. We think it is truly called "the garden spot of the world." Those who have traveled very extensively in the different parts of the globe, do not hesitate to say that this valley affords the most desirable place for a home that can be found on the earth. At this season of the year its scenery is really enchanting. The air is perfumed with the odor of fruit and flower blossoms; the fields are clothed with the finest growth of wheat I ever beheld; the meadows are beautifully ornamented with the most brilliant colored flowers, and the distant hills are fairly painted with them; while the noble live oaks—some moss-covered—stand here and there to afford a most pleasing shade for the flocks and herds in the bright summer day. While other parts of the country may be suffering with cold or heat, not so in this valley. Here the snows never fall, and even frost is only occasional; the flowers bloom all winter in the open air, and fresh vegetables may be had every day in the year.

It is said there is no other spot in the world that affords such a rich variety of choice fruits. It may be said, as was once said of a portion of Palestine, it is beautiful for situation, and the joy of the whole earth. In the summer the nights are pleasantly cool, and at about ten o'clock A. M., a soft cool breeze comes down the valley, producing a sensation quite like that from a fan. This continues till towards night, when a heavenly calm prevails, introducing the starry, cloudless evening, leading one's thoughts back to the first sunset on Eden's happy pair.

During the past five days, we have been enjoying very pleasant seasons with Bro. Wilson and family, Bro. and Sr. Reed, and other saints at Santa Clara. The meetings have been of more than ordinary interest; and several who were low in divine life have been much quickened, and have again taken hold heartily in the service of the Lord. We have much reason to thank the Lord for blessings received during this short series of meetings. Earnest requests were made for their continuance, but other engagements call us away this morning. The revival prospect was quite promising when we left, besides an earnest longing for the gift of the Holy Spirit, as expressed by a goodly number. They feel satisfied that the time has come for the bride to be ready to meet the coming Bridegroom; time to be filled and ornamented with the meek and quiet spirit of Jesus.

Brn. Reed and Wilson, also Bro. Abbott, who was ordained at the dedication of the Vallejo Chapel, are true men of God, and an honor to the cause of Christ. They do not shun to declare the whole truth, and to watch faithfully over the interests of the Lord's disciples. May they be blest abundantly in their noble, self-denying work on the Pacific coast.

We hear joyful news from the churches in San Francisco and Vallejo. They are happily united to Christ and each other, without a jarring note, pressing forward in preparation to meet Christ at his coming. Their prospect is bright and promising.

SANTA ROSA.

At this date (April 16th) we are holding meetings in Ridgway's Hall, Santa Rosa. We have the largest and best hall in the city. We commenced Monday evening, April 13th. The audiences have been large, and attentive. The prospect is encouraging. Thus far, we have been lecturing from the chart, on the prophecies, showing that we are very near the coming of Christ. We found two Brn. here who sympathize with us, and love the "blessed hope." On account of the expense of hiring the hall, and the lack of sufficient means in the contributions to meet the expenses, we began to feel last evening that we should not be able to continue longer than to-night, but to our joyful susprise, the Methodist minister, Bro. Walter, who has been attending the lectures, offered us his desk. We have decided to accept his kind offer, and commence in the Methodist house to-morrow (Friday) evening, to continue over the Lord's day, and perhaps through next week. Bro. Walter appears to be a true christian, who preaches the doctrine of holiness, as taught in the sacred Scriptures. We expect the blessing of the Lord on the effort.

The Seventh-day Adventists have a chapel here, and Eld. James White and wife, from Battle Creek, are now in the city. They have been making their home here for some months. We learn that in his special meeting, held last evening, he warned his people against receiving us into their meeting house, or their homes; that in case they did, they might consider him as excluded. Notwithstanding this note of warning and alarm, we presume some will venture to do as they please. Indeed, we understand that some of the leading men in their church, who have the right to say it, have decided that we can have the use of their chapel for meetings, when they do not need it for their own use. As the people are anxious to know our views in relation to the keeping of Saturday, as the day of rest, instead of the Lord's day, we may take occasion to say something on the subject. We are happy to state that our own mind is fully at rest on the subject. We could not ask to have the matter any plainer than it is, the seventh day Sabbath of the Jews, in the old covenant, is not now binding. There is much stir on this coast in relation to the Sabbath question. A very strong effort is being made by those who sustain Mrs. White's visions, to bring the people into sympathy with her teachings.

Santa Rosa is beautifully located, in a charming valley, surrounded by mountains. It is one of the most delightful places in the State. It is about fifty miles from San Francisco. The trip here is delightful by steamer and cars. The apple and pear trees are now in bloom, and look very promising. Every tree seems to be preparing to yield its portion of fruit. There are two colleges in the city, the Christian, and the Southern Methodist. This is the county seat of Sonoma Co., and bids fair to experience a rapid growth while time continues. M. G.

QUESTION.

We have been requested to state our views in regard to "talking in tongues," and "feetwashing;" which we will do briefly, as follows:—In relation to the manifestation of professed "spiritual gifts" we would say, we do not take the position that there are no genuine gifts in the church; but we do believe that the most we have in this age are counterfeit; for it does not answer the gospel description, either in letter or spirit. We believe it tends to division, confusion, and more unrighteousness. We have seen much of it in different places, and read the history of the same thing connected with Luther in Germany, and Irving in England; and do not hesitate to exhort all to stand aloof from it. If we witness any of the true gifts, we shall find them accomplishing just what they were given to accomplish in the primitive church. Tongues were not given for believers, but unbelievers; who could understand the language spoken, so that they were convinced by hearing in their own tongue. When we witness any talking in tongues like that, we should be careful and not reject it.

As to the washing of feet being a christian ordinance, we do not believe that Christ designed to establish it as such; and therefore cannot teach or practice it. But we have no doubt that there are good christians who do so understand it, and practice it. We think it was designed to exhibit the true humility which christians should possess; so that they will willingly perform the most menial service for each other when circumstances demand it.

Many, no doubt, understand this to be a divine ordinance, and they believing that Christ clearly taught it, we should be very careful not to despise them for this honest conviction of duty.

A GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The question is being agitated among some of our prominent brethren in relation to the advisability of holding another North American Advent Conference the present season. Many feel that the cause of truth and the salvation of the perishing demand it. Let all carefully consider Bro. Whitmore's article in the paper, setting forth the objects for calling such a Conference. We earnestly pray that God may impress our minds with duty in this matter. If more gospel and sanctifying order can be established by it, then it should be holden; but if it will increase divisions and strife, and unscriptural order should be established, then the subject had better be dismissed. We think the question is of sufficient importance to demand earnest prayer and careful counsel in its decision. Let us hear from the brethren in all parts of the country what their decisions are as to its being duty to hold such session. Let all State Conferences, which hold sessions, vote upon the question, and send us the vote. As President of the North American Advent Christian Conference, we ask the Executive Board each to send us answers to the following questions: Shall a session of Conference be holden the present year? If affirmatively answered, at what time and place? J. C.

N. B.—The members of that Board are J. Couch, W. Sheldon, W. L. Himes, A. W. Sibley, D. Mathewson, H. G. McCullock, S. G. Mathewson, D. R. Mansfield, J. Hemenway, F. Burr, and J. M. Stetler.

THE FUTURE OF EUROPE GLOOMY.

It is the special duty of God's watchmen to investigate every indication of approaching trouble and danger, and give seasonable notice to all exposed. God has given prophetic forewarnings of all important calamitous circumstances which would endanger his church and the world, in a way so that his servants could understand when those dangers were approaching, and has made it their duty to proclaim them, that all may find safety. We confidently believe and would faithfully publish, that the unerring Word of God teaches that a great upheaving of human society in every department is immediately to take place: and that the first and great movement will be in prophetic Europe. That the great monarchical powers, or the Roman "kings" will be seriously threatened by the revolutionary masses, which will compel them to ally themselves for defence, notwithstanding serious antagonisms among them, which will prevent a real union; and that these dividing questions and elements will soon prevail to the destruction of the present quadruple alliance, and result in a terrible war. Many expositors of the Scriptures have come to such conclusions, simply because they understand the Bible to teach it; while many politicians come to the same conclusion because they understand that the present political situation will produce it. A writer in the New York Daily Graphic, in commenting upon the Queen's recent speech to the Tory Parliament has said:—

> "The Queen has made her speech to the new Tory Parliament, and in it are the usual platitudes about England being at peace with all the world, coupled with the hope that the marriage of the Duke of Edinburgh with the Cesarovna will commemorate a new era of good feeling between the two countries. Doubtless this worthy lady hopes and believes the words which have been put into her mouth by her political conscience-keepers, but disinterested spectators at a distance can hardly take such a rose-colored view of the world's affairs. In truth the war clouds are gathering over all Europe, and it cannot be many more months before the storm will break. The conflict will, of course, be between France and Germany, for the possession of Alsace-Lorraine. The true significance of the Marshalate or septennial of McMahon is that France is determined to have a military man at the head of affairs in the conduct of the next war. All accounts agree that the most extraordinary exertions are being made to place the French army on the most effective footing; new forts are building around Paris; military stores are accumulating; the country is one vast armed camp, and all the youth of France are drilling for the new campaign. Von Moltke tells the Germans what they have to expect, and informs them, moreover, that their peace establishment must be 401,000 men. But the Germans do not like a large standing army. Their discontent is very great. The men who are drafted for military service are paid a mere pittance, and their families are compelled to seek from their friends that support which their husbands and fathers are unable to furnish. Accordingly the proposed army establishment is very unpopular, and the Government was beaten in the Reichstag on the Army bill and their estimates cut down to 350,000 men. But undoubtedly the Government will have its own way, as it has always had in military matters.
>
> The war, when it does break out, is likely to be a very complicated one. The Eastern question, that perennial source of disquietude to European statesmen, again looms up. Russia still dreams of the Bosphorus, and a magnificent Russian-Greek empire, with its capital at Constantinople. Austria may take a hand in the fight with a view of recovering some of her lost prestige, and England, under a Tory administration, will be strongly impelled to do something to restore the rather faded glories of her arms.
>
> Altogether the future looks gloomy enough to those who have been dreaming of universal peace, the federation of the world, and the parliament of mankind."

The Editor of the Boston Globe, in presenting this subject of the present European Alliance, in speaking of its purposes and the difficulties it has to encounter, says:—

> "There are, however, in the present position of some of the European nations, reasons why these ideas of political combinations are not wholly unreasonable.
>
> There is no doubt that Germany is anxious to be on such terms with the great powers as to be able to throw her whole force against France in the struggle towards which everybody is looking forward. This condition of things, it is obvious, is Russia's opportunity; for, by standing aloof from the Franco-German war, the Czar secured a virtual arbitrament in continental politics. The idea is, that Alexander intends to avail himself of this position to reopen the Eastern question. The weak condition of Turkey is referred to as favoring this design, as well as the fact that the position of France is such that her opposition would be of no avail as against a combination of the three emperors, while Germany, whose antipathy to Turkey and Mahometanism is accompanied by a jealousy of Russian aggrandizement, would be afraid to risk throwing her chief enemy into the arms of the Czar. As between her traditionary Eastern policy and a chance to deal a heavy blow to her conqueror, France would gladly seize the latter. Austria would naturally oppose the Russian movement against the Sultan, for the possession of the Danubian principalities and the control of Servia would naturally endanger her own power in that neighborhood. Of late years, however, the rapprochement between the Cabinets of Vienna and St. Petersburg has been marked, and the proffer of a large slice of the disputed territory involved in the Eastern question to Austria is considered a sufficient inducement to secure her assent to Russian plans. In this connection, the visit of Francis Joseph to the capital of the Czar is supposed to favor this view.
> The proposed journey of the Emperor Alexander to England is looked upon as in the interest of this grand scheme, and we are further assured that the assent of Great Britain would be secured by the promise of Egypt. We take it, however, that English influence would not be greatly considered, could the union of the three emperors be definitely assured. The difficulty would be to bring about such a tripartite agreement in the interest of Russia, for, despite the inducements held out, it is, to say the least, uncertain whether they would be considered sufficient to neutralize the jealousies and the dangers which such an arrangement would necessarily involve. The first Holy Alliance was made after the second abdication of Napoleon, and was in the interests of absolutist rule. Fifteen years was the limit of its existence, and, as the French Revolution of 1830 may be said to have ended it, there is little doubt that the growing power of France would be able to work upon the jealousies and antagonisms of the parties to the new league, so as to give it a much shorter vitality than was enjoyed by its predecessor. In fact, the recent visit of the Austrian emperor to St. Petersburg is considered in some quarters to indicate danger that France may in the future be admitted to a triple alliance, which would forebode danger to Germany. While there can be no doubt that the present position of affairs in Europe is attended with considerable danger to the existence of prolonged peace, and while the Eastern question is likely to undergo modifications, it does not follow that these conditions will be made the ground for a policy of Russian aggrandizement in the East, which would necessitate the formation of another Holy Alliance."

It seems to us difficult to conceive how writers could more fully express the anticipation of events perfectly harmonizing with the prophecies, than do these writers. They tell us this combination is to assist Russia in her "aggrandizement," by executing "her traditionary Eastern policy," because the "weak condition of Turkey" and the crippled condition of France, make this an opportune time to remove its "capital to Constantinople." They tell us that this alliance must have a much shorter vitality than the first one, because France will stir up the "jealousies and antagonisms of the parties to the new league," while God tells us that these last kings of Rome will mingle themselves with the seed of men, but they shall not cleave one to another, as iron is not mixed with clay.

If the kings of this alliance are not the kings in whose days the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom, we are at a loss to know where such kings can be found. We believe they are, and that their present position of union produced by mingling the seed of men, or intermarriage, and that union imperfect on account of "jealousies and antagonisms," is just the condition the prophecies show them to be in at the end.

Let us be ready, for the Lord is evidently soon coming, when the eternal destiny of all will be forever fixed.

SABBATH DISCUSSION.

We have found it stated by the apostle: "If that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Heb. 8: 7. It may be asked Wherein was the first covenant faulty? As it was only a national covenant, designed for the common, social welfare of the Jewish people, and had no reference to Christ or the plan of salvation through him, of course it was not sufficiently strict to fit men for eternal life. There is no evidence that it ever looked beyond the present world, or the literal Canaan, which was occupied by the Children of Israel. A brief examination will show the most careless reader, that the old covenant came far short of the standard for eternal salvation, as taught by Christ. The Decalogue does not condemn hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, envy, backbiting, evil surmising, evil speaking, scolding, pride, selfishness, boasting, busy-bodies, whisperers, fierceness, being heady, form of godliness, unthankfulness, despisers of the good, high-mindedness, fretfulness, malice, unmercifulness, unforgiving spirit, impatience, incest, bigamy, cheating, witchcraft, sorcery, divination, necromancy, pleasure-loving, heresies, revelling, vulgar talk, loving the world, sedition, uncleanness, nor drunkenness. What can be clearer than the fact, as stated by the apostle, that the "first," the "old," the national covenant, was not "faultless, if it "had been," "then should no place have been sought for the second." The moral precepts which the Jews agreed to observe, as specified in the old covenant, were all right and essential for the common welfare of any good society; and if they would not agree to abstain from such things, the Lord could not covenant to build them up as a people; hence, when they broke the covenant, he overthrew them as a nation. The mere keeping of that covenant fitted no one for salvation in the world to come. Their memorial rest day, of the fourth commandment, had no more to do with their final salvation, than circumcision, the keeping of the passover or any other feast day. The whole system of feast days, and other ceremonies, were peculiar to the Jewish people. They began, continued, and ended with them as a nation, and have no place in the new covenant, of which Christ was the Mediator.

The old covenant was not called "the Law." Like all covenants, or constitutions, it contained no penalties or rewards. Those were all specified in the law, which supported the covenant. The law fixed the penalty for Sabbath breaking to be the same as for murder. A law becomes powerless and harmless when its penalty is abolished. It never continues in force beyond the existence of the penalty. The penalty for Sabbath breaking ceased at the cross of Christ, hence the Sabbath law of the fourth commandment has not been binding in the Christian dispensation.

If it be said the penalty is transferred to the world to come, and will be "the second death," then it must follow that "whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day . . . shall surely be put to death" the second time. This being true, none will be saved from the Christian dispensation but a few seventh-day keepers, most of whom have lived since 1844. We see no other alternative: hence the question to settle is simply and only, is it a sin now to do any work on Saturday? Will all be condemned to die "the second death" who rest on the first instead of the seventh day? If it be admitted that there are now, and have been holy men in every generation during the Christian dispensation, who have labored as freely on Saturday as Monday, and have regarded the Lord's day—the first day—as the one on which to rest, as did the apostles, and apostolical fathers; then why should there be a division at this late day, and a separate sect raised up, in which the keeping of the Jewish memorial day, which was never once enjoined by Christ nor the apostles, must be made the test of fellowship? Is such a movement of the Lord? Nay, verily.

The Lord's day is the memorial day of the new covenant, and so far as is known, corresponds with the first Adamic rest day. If Adam rested with his Creator, then his first day corresponded with the Lord's seventh day, for he was the last object made at the close of the six creative days. His second rest day, or Sabbath, would be the eighth, and so on, just as at the present time. It is very evident he could not rest on his seventh day, if he rested with his Creator. Astronomical calculations give evidence that the Lord's day, now observed by christians generally, is the one first kept in Eden. It appears quite plain that the Jews had a new rest day, not observed by other nations. In Persia, where the patriarch lived, the people turned away from the worship of the true and living God, to the worshiping of the sun, and called it "Sunday." They did not lose the original rest day, but changed the mode of worship. We read in Neh. 9: 13, 14, "Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments: and madest known unto them the holy Sabbath, and commandest them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant." Here is a time specified when the Lord made known unto the Jews the seventh-day Sabbath, implying very cleary that it was a new day, not observed by their fathers. The reason given for its observance shows that it could not be applicable to any other people. They were commanded to keep that day, because they were brought out of the land of Egyyt, through a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." Deut. 5: 15. This reason for keeping the day could not be applied to any people, but the Israelites, for no other nation had such a deliverance from Egyptian bondage. Tertullian says the seventh day was "a temporary Sabbath," to be observed only by the Jews.

"STRUGGLE FOR LIFE."

Careful observers in Europe are convinced that we have entered a period of thrilling interest in the history of the Papacy. Ernest Renan, an eminent French writer, says of Pope Pius IX., "He will be considered as the destroyer of Catholicism."

We are truly living in a sublime period, among the closing events mentioned by the prophets, when every true disciple of Jesus may well lift up his head and rejoice, because his redemption is about at hand. We live to witness what prophets, apostles and martyrs longed to see, but died without the sight. Ours is a favored position in the world's history, because we may hope to live till the King of glory shall appear.

The all important question for each to ask is, Am I ready? If the witness of the Spirit is not clear and abiding, it should be the first business to surrender all to Christ, confessing every sin, asking pardon for the past, with a firm purpose to leave all for ever in his hands, and to do his will, so far as is known, in every thing, at any price, no matter how crossing to the old man. Having done this, then live by faith, trusting the Lord without fear. Then it is easy to say, "Come, Lord Jesus," "come quickly."

FROM BRO. A. J. YOUNG.

Dear "Crisis," and the Saints scattered abroad:—I thought you would like to know how the cause of our Master is prospering in this part of his vineyard, so I will communicate a few words. We are without a preacher, but God blesses and keeps us daily, and his Holy Spirit is still with us in power. We are enjoying richer blessings than for several months past. The brethren and sisters are coming together in earnest, confessing their faults one to the other, thus causing rich seasons in our midst. Their hearts are burdened for souls out of Christ. We praise God and lift up our hearts in gratitude to him that his cause is prospering, and in a good healthy condition on this coast. We rejoice that men and women, who love Zion's cause as they love their lives, are praising Jesus for his love which is shed abroad in their hearts daily. We feel encouraged, and are strongly impressed that the Master will soon come. We are designated everywhere as "Adventists." This question is settled forever, the world over. We will not contend for a name, but our real aim is to be true christians, pure in heart, having holy desires, ever cultivating that meek and quiet spirit which Jesus willingly gives to all who will receive it. Our earnest desire is to meet Christ as his children when he comes.

We have but two chapels on this coast, one in Vallejo, and one in San Francisco, both of which are known as Advent Christian Chapels. The Lord has blest us, so that we have been enabled to assist in the erection of them. That in San Francisco has recently been completed, in which Bro. Grant has been holding meetings, which have ended with good results. The cause there is advancing, and the church never was in so good condition as it now is. I had the pleasure to visit them several times while the meetings were in progress, and I must say, the results were blessed. Many have been converted, and some reclaimed. A spirit of unity and love seems to exist among them. Bro. G.'s labors have met with better success, and less opposition, thus far, than at any previous visit. We thank our heavenly Father that we ever urged his coming this time, and only regret that he cannot always stay here. We want just such men, who are able to meet the enemy's servants, and stand boldly in the defense of the Bible and its truths. We expect a visit from him soon. We accompanied him to Napa City a few weeks since, where he has been holding a debate with Elder Canright, a Seventh-Day man; and had great victory. A door is opened there for us. We intend to introduce Bro. Carpenter there, if the Lord sends him out to us.

We know of several new fields where a door is opened for Bro. G. We fear he will not be able to meet all the calls this time. He is now in San Jose holding meetings, where we hope good results will attend his labors. He then expects to go to Santa Rosa.

Now, dear brethren and sisters, everywhere, let us lay aside all malice, envy, and strife, and have our hearts filled with the Spirit of the blessed Jesus. We are just running into port. The old ship wants scrubbing up. All hands ought to clean up, so as to bear inspection. The banner floats from "topmast head"; so let us work for Jesus in earnest, and be found with clean hands and pure hearts. The little band in Vallejo is all alive, assembling themselves together often, comforting and edifying one another with the blessed hope of soon seeing the Master. We need a faithful shepherd here, to go out and in among us, to strengthen and encourage the weak ones, and build up the cause by inducing sinners to give their hearts to Christ. We are confident that great good could be done in Vallejo, had we a minister to remain with us. We want the Lord's will to be done, and if he wants us to have a preacher, we shall have one. We praise him for what he has done for us, and is now doing.

All the brethren and sisters here are in unity. We find our deacons side by side at their post, working hand in hand and shoulder to shoulder, staying up the hands of the flock; all of which causes great rejoicing. Dear saints, everywhere, pray for us, that we may advance higher and higher, and the cause still prosper.

Vallejo, Cal., Apr. 3d, 1874.

NEW YORK CITY.

There are many things in this city which will be interesting to our brethren, who never saw New York, to hear about. I have met some who never saw a city, or rode on a railroad; but they read the Crisis, and like to hear places described, and this is why I write.

This city has three Advent meetings; two of them think of uniting. I preached to both on Sabbath, April 5th, and dedicated a new place of worship in Green Point, L. I., in the evening, with encouraging results as to members and attention. Went to South Norwalk two evenings. Found a few holding on to the faith. Returned to Green Point, and stopped with my son two days. From there I went to New York

City. I visited Central Park, which has cost over seventeen million dollars. So says one of the Park officers, which astonished me. This city is about twelve miles long and two wide; and when you have rode up Broadway, six miles, to the Park, you have seen about all you would to ride three days; for you would see nothing but great blocks of buildings on both sides, touching each other, except where the streets part them. There are stores of all kinds, for miles, in different directions.

Our friends who live back in the country can form but a little idea of the magnitude of this great wicked Sodom. You are better off where you now are, where you can see things of nature. Here the people have to go to the upper part of this city, to Central Park, to see nature's curiosities, where they are in their natural state, as on the rough farms of N. H. or Vt. Rocks and trees all remain as nature placed them; even the wild laurel, vines, briers, and elder, all grow undisturbed, and men watching them every few rods to keep people from injuring them. This park consists of eight hundred and sixty-two acres. There are reservoirs, pools, ponds for sailing, in which are all kinds of water fowl, covering ninety-five acres; beside many fountains. There are forty-two miles of roads, about one half for horses and carriages, and the rest for foot people. They are the best roads I ever saw; with good seats every few rods, in the woods and out, on both sides of the paths, great or small, so one can rest when he chooses. It seems as if an effort had been made to make this Park a Paradise; but when we get a glimpse, by faith, of the Paradise God has promised, this looks small and poor; but it is the best the wicked will ever see. I told one of the officers of the Park so, which astonished him.

There were other curiosities,—the great Museum building, full of beasts from different countries, dead and alive; also birds and reptiles. It takes three hundred and twenty-two men to keep things in order in this Paradise of New York. I noticed the beasts had to be chained or caged, and were very uneasy. The great lions and bears, and other ferocious beasts, would kill a person if they could. No restoration yet. The two great sea lions, as they were called, were a great wonder. They are about eight feet long, two feet in diameter in the middle, and taper off with the tail of a fish, with two great fins for forelegs, with which they swim and crawl out on land. They weigh about one thousand pounds each. Would sink when they rolled off their platform into the water. They would come up once a minute to breathe, and then settle back out of sight again. Their heads were shaped like a large dog without any hair. Their eyes as large as the eyes of an ox. Many other wonders can be seen on this Park, which makes it a place to be visited by all lovers of art and natural curiosities.

Another new thing was to see a colored man in uniform, with a genteel white driver, in a splendid horse and carriage. This looks like reversing things. The white man was his servant. It helped to make up a variety. There were three teams of goats in a splendid little carriage, two harnessed together, driven by boys. For fifteen cents one could ride around for half an hour, perfectly safe, on a crooked road. Down around the ponds, where horses are not allowed to go, all kinds of water fowls can be seen, from the small dipper duck, up to the great white swan which is as large again as a goose. Few back in the country ever saw anything like this, nor will they till the restoration comes; then the first dominion will be brought back, and all things created by our God for the benefit of man will be restored; and if we are good, we shall see greater things than mortal eyes have yet seen. All these wonders are but faint shadows of what God has promised those who overcome. Every time we see such a stretch of man's ingenuity, it should serve to point our faith onward to the grand realities God has promised.

HERRICK. Fell asleep in Jesus, March 19th, 1874, Stephen Herrick, of East Granville, Mass., aged eighty-three years.

Also March 26th, 1874, Betsey Herrick, wife of Stephen Herrick, of East Granville, Mass., aged eighty-four years.

Thus death is doing its work steadily and surely; none can stay its power; all human means fail at last. None but Jesus Christ can save. Blessed be God! none can stay his hand when he comes to wake the sleeping ones, and change the living to a life that knows no death. Such was the faith of our father and mother-in-law, who for the last twenty years have been deeply interested in the truths of the gospel pertaining to the great work of preparation for the coming King; and we have good evidence that they were living in anticipation of the soon coming of Jesus. They hoped and had reason to believe they should live to see Jesus come. But death has claimed them as its victims. But, glory to God, the mighty conqueror will soon come and give deliverance, and stay forever the terrible devastation that has marked this world's history. Jesus has been in the grave, and he came forth triumphant—victorious. And so the promise is to all that fall asleep in Jesus. It is indeed a great satisfaction to have such an assurance as we have of these old, weary, way-worn pilgrims.

In early life they gave their hearts to God, and sustained their relations with the Baptist church until they heard the glad news of the soon coming King, which was about twenty years ago; since which time they have been faithful to their convictions of truth, especially those connected with this last dispensational message. They have stood firm in the faith of the blessed truths that so completely separate from the world, worldly objects, and worldly interests, amid much opposition and scoffing; and not from the world only, but more from those who profess to be the followers of Jesus. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

SOLOMON HALE.

GRANGER. In West Rutland, Vt., April 9th, 1874, Mrs. Lucy Granger.

Converted in Poultney, she afterwards removed to Castleton, and joined the church here, and was highly esteemed for her christian character to the day of her death. Services by her request at the Chapel in Castleton. Discourse from Job 16: 15. She no doubt sleeps in Jesus. W. L. H.

CHESLEY. In Byfield, Mass., April 12th, 1874, Mrs. Betsy Chesley, aged eighty-six years.

CASTLE. In Castleton, Vt., April 14th, 1874, Grace, daughter of John P. and Melissa Castle, aged four years.

The shaft chosen by the enemy to lay this little one low was diphtheria. She was active and strong, and struggled hard for her life. It was pitiful to behold her sufferings. But they were all she will ever know of pain. For awhile she will rest asleep in Jesus, in whom the lambs are all safe. Then she shall be rescued from "the land of the enemy," to live forevermore in the new earth, where the inhabitants shall not say, I am sick. Services at the Chapel, with discourse from John 11: 35,—"Jesus wept." W. L. H.

FOREIGN NEWS.

MADRID, April 20. The plan of the campaign proposed by Serreno and Admiral Topete has been adopted. Gen. Concha has disembarked 10,000 troops at Santana, and the Carlists will be attacked simultaneously at different points.

LONDON, April 21. Advices from Madrid, today, state that a vigorous cannonading is kept up by the national troops upon the Carlist positions before Bilboa, and is beginning to tell. Several points bombarded by the Republicans have been evacuated by the insurgents. It is reported that the food of the Carlists is exhausted, and that the men are eating horse flesh.

New York, April 20. Special London dispatches state that the funeral of Livingstone was attended by the French, American, German, Italian, Portuguese and other diplomatic representatives, besides the most distinguished people of England.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Within the past week dispatches have been received from the South announcing the usual crevasses on the Mississippi, which at this season of the year are not of unusual occurrence. On Friday last a dispatch from New Orleans announced a crevasse six hundred feet wide and ten feet deep west of Baton Rouge. Another was reported on Morgan's bend just below the grand levee. Railroad communication with the north was suspended, and four and a half inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours. The extent of the damage done by the overflow and heavy rain was immense, and the inability of the people or government to meet the emergency has led to the following requests for aid:

THE GOVERNOR ASKS AID FROM THE PRESIDENT.

Executive Department, State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, April 17th.

To President U. S. Grant:—

The unprecedented rise in the Mississippi river by violent local storms has caused a most destructive overflow. Six or seven of the largest parishes of the State are already under water, and thousands of people, white and black, are without food or shelter and in danger of starvation. The emergency is so great that I feel constrained to appeal to you directly, asking the General Government if possible to extend to these poor people the same relief that was given in the scarcely more disastrous calamity at Chicago.

(Signed) W. R. KELLOGG,
Governor of Louisiana.

The extent of the disaster in Louisiana from the overflow of the Mississippi appears more appalling as our information becomes more complete. The latest dispatches declare that several parishes, including some 2,000,000 acres of land, are overflowed, and that distress will be caused to no less than 50,000 people. The sugar plantations will be laid waste for two years, and the crops on the cotton lands will be delayed, as replanting will be necessary. The greater part of the overflowed region is occupied by small planters, who will be reduced to want by this misfortune.

New York, April 21. A letter from Mexico states that the Rev. Mr. Watkins, another American minister and companion of the murdered missionary Stephens, has received a letter signed by a Catholic clergyman, and sixteen Catholic students, threatening his life unless he leaves for America. They state that they have demanded his expulsion by the President, and if the demand is not complied with there will be a revolution. President Lerdo has given assurances of his protection to Watkins.

New York, April 17. A private letter from Valparaiso confirms the news of the loss of the steamer Tacna. Capt. Hyde took all possible means of righting his vessel and saving the lives of his passengers. Nearly all of the latter were, however, sleeping in their state-rooms, and the loss of life was consequently considerable.

Kenosha, Wis., April 9. Two fishing smacks capsized at this place in a gale, yesterday afternoon, and eight men were drowned.

Colebrook, N. H., April 20. Dr. Augustus Harris, of this village, took by mistake this forenoon tincture of aconite, and died in less than an hour.

A Portland special to the Globe says that Mrs. Mary N. Whitten, an old lady who has lived a secluded life for several years in a house on Brackett street, was found dead on a mattress on the floor, yesterday afternoon. Appearances indicated that she had been dead a week or ten days. There was no food found in the house. Her son is a clerk in the Second Auditor's office in Washington.

THE MARTYRDOM OF STEVENS.—Investigation into the murder of Rev. Mr. Stevens develops the fact that the military guard of the village of Ahualulco were the first to discharge their muskets into the body and head of Mr. Stephens, blowing his head to pieces. A Mexican, who occupied a room in the same premises, was then killed. Then Mr. Stephen's rooms were sacked, his papers and books taken to the public square and burned amid the ringing of bells, music and great rejoicings. The murder was occasioned by a sermon of the Catholic priest in regard to the necessity of "cutting down a tree which bears bad fruit."

In Brief.

— The greatest bell in the world, the "Emperor William Bell," destined for the Cologne Cathedral, has just been finished. It weighs about 60,000 pounds, is eighteen feet high, and fourteen feet wide. The first moulding of the bell proved a failure, and considerable difficulty has yet to be overcome in transporting the immense mass from Frankenthal, where it was cast, to the top of the tower of the Cologne Cathedral.

—Of the fifteen million inhabitants of Spain, twelve millions can neither read nor write. There are four thousand villages, towns and cities presided over by mayors, two thousand of whom are are unable to sign their names to any public document.

— Another tragedy in the Dorchester district, Boston. A child four and a half years of age the victim. Thirty-one wounds upon the body. The supposed murderer is in custody.

— Two young men at Stongington, Conn., were murdered on Sunday night—a ghastly welcome home for the shocked and bereaved parents. An awful mystery overhangs the affair. A hired man has been arrested on suspicion.

— Wheat planted in Selano Co. (Cal.), about the middle of February, now (April 15) is nearly ready to head.

— Twenty-four pounds of wool was recently sheared from a Spanish merino lamb, fourteen months old, at Sacramento, Cal.

— The lowest estimate of the grain crop in this State (Cal.) the present year is 30,000,000 bushels.

— A tornado at Erie, Pa., on Monday, destroyed considerable property and killed a man.

— Crevasses in the Arkansas river are spreading desolation and poverty over many plantations.

Fire at Yokohama, Japan; loss $150,000.

Nine frame buildings in Bangor have been destroyed by fire; loss about $100,000.

A fire at the tanneries just outside the city limits of Montreal, destroyed ten tenements, rendering nineteen families homeless; loss $15,000.

At Richmond, Va.; loss $200,000.

Two large barns at Southington were burned a few nights ago, with two hundred cases of tobacco and other property; loss $30,000.

At Saugus, Mass.; loss not stated.

Smith as above, or sent with the delegates. Let all who "wait for the Lord" and are "looking for that blessed hope" lay aside their secular affairs, and join with the "children of God" in their yearly feast of fat things. By order of the Directors,

AMOS SANFORD, Secretary.

A REQUEST.—We number about fifteen Adventists here, and have much opposition to meet. We have been circulating some tracts; and having a grist mill which draws custom from a large district in this western country, and being thus well situated to circulate tracts or papers on the Advent faith; I therefore make a request of the readers of the Crisis, who have any old papers or tracts for free distribution, to send them to my address, and I shall take much pleasure in distributing them. In this way much good may be done. Address me at Denver, Worth Co., Mo.

S. C. B. WILLIAMS.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—To the Brn. and Srs. of the Advent faith in Minn.:—We have in our State about 200 Mission Boxes, got up for the purpose of sustaining our cause in the following manner: They were to be put up in our houses to catch any loose change that the friends might be disposed to deposite in them, and just before our Quarterly Meetings each church Clerk, or Treasurer, was to receive what the boxes contained from the several families in their vicinity, and pass it into the hands of the Quarterly Treasurer, at each Quarterly Meeting; and at the Annual Conference, the State Treasurer was to receive the same from the several Dist. Treasurers, to be disbursed by the State Treasurer as the Mission Board may direct, for the purchase of tracts to keep our preachers supplied for free distribution, and the surplus to go to help spread the gospel as said Board may direct. This matter has been neglected the past year to a great extent. Shall we awake to the importance of this work, and have those little boxes help spread the last message to a dying world? S. C. WELLCOME.

HAVING accepted the invitation of the brethren to become their pastor and labor with them this year, my post office address hereafter will be Lower Cabot, Vt. E. N. MORSE.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.—As it will soon be time to commence our summer campaign with the Penn. Mission Tent, we should be glad to hear from those desiring Tent Meetings in their locality, especially in Southern New York and Northern Penn. We shall also be glad to receive orders from Brn. for the "History of the Faith of the Fathers," that is in the hands of the printers, and will be out by the first or middle of May. We have felt it duty to publish the work, as we did not have a work to answer many inquiries, when called for, although we had a good many good works on the stand. We shall be glad to have any send on a dollar or more; to help pay the printer, etc., by the 1st of May, and will send the books as soon as published. Said pamphlets will cost about 25 cents each. Also, "The Tree of Life and Colloquy," by Bro. C. F. Sweet, 25 cts. We will send two each on receipt of one dollar, postpaid. Let us hear from you. Address John T. Ongley, Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Pa.; or C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y.; or Wm. H. Spencer, 507 P. O. Box, Rochester, N. Y.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

WILL every minister and church belonging to the R. I. and East Conn. Christian Advent Conference please send immediately their addresses, and date of becoming members of the Conference? If church, send when organized, and present number of members to N. A. ANGELL, Conf. Clerk, North Scituate, R. I.

WILL the preaching brethren who are passing through Newark, N. J., give us a call? Please drop a note previous, to prevent any conflict, either to Bro. G. W. Libby, 42 Pennington St., or to me, 120 Bank St. WM. SHEPHERD, Sec.

BRN. wishing to visit Kennebunkport to preach will please correspond with A. A. Robinson, C. E. Clough, or H. A. Mitchell.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL."
An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"
BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

THE NEW EARTH.

Selected by E. L. Biller.

When the fires of the judgment all dross have consumed,
When the saints have been welcomed, and sinners been doom'd,
When the heavens together like parchment have roll'd,
And the ages eternal begun to unfold,—

Then the earth from its ashes renewed shall arise,
Transcendant in glory, scarcely less than the skies.
And purged from defilement, from sorrow and pain,
The world shall rejoice in Immanuel's reign.

And no sea shall be there; but broad rivers that flow
From mountains whose summits all uncover'd by snow,
Vast prospects of beauty the beholder afford,
While nature rejoices in the smile of the Lord.

Then the kingdom of Christ over all shall prevail,
And no foes shall be there who its peace would assail;
Since sin is not found, war and strife are unknown,
And righteousness reigneth, with truth on her throne.

No thorns and no briers the new soil shall infest,
For the earth and its products alike shall be blest;
Upspringing, spontaneous, shall its fruitage be found,
And the years as they pass with abundance be crowned.

Then oft shall be seen what to Jacob was shown,
When reposing at night on his pillow of stone;
The angels descending and returning again,
In intercourse sweet with the children of men.

Thus the earth and the heavens together shall blend,
And the dwellers in each, on each other attend;
And the song of all lips, both below and above,
Shall be "Glory to God" for his wonderful love.

DISTRICT MEETING REPORT.

The Hatley District Meeting, in connection with the Advent Christian Conference of the Province of Quebec, met as per appointment, March 4th, 1874; and although the roads were bad, yet the attendance was good, and the interest manifested encouraging. The President presided. A business meeting was held, which he addressed upon our Conference, Constitution, and work, offering a series of highly important suggestions, which were unanimously adopted.

Ministers present were—Elders Stevens, Merrill, Percival, Griffin, L. C. and M. McKinstry, and Dow, of the Hatley District; Elder John Ward, of the Farnham District; and Elder John Porter, of the Melbourne District. The afternoon and evening of each day were devoted to preaching, followed by addresses, while the forenoons and intervals were occupied by a committee on the case of C. E. Piper, submitted to them by him, whose decision will follow and sufficiently explain. The seven Elders who acted as Committee were unanimous in the decision arrived at. We have acted in the fear of God, and for his glory, and the ultimate good of all concerned. Elder J. G. Smith, of the New Hampshire Conference, was a member of the council, and assisted much by preaching. Several interesting sermons were delivered by different ministers. Especially was it interesting to hear from Elder John Porter of Danville, our oldest minister, now eighty-six. Sister McKinstry gave us a good sermon on Sabbath morning, which was followed by one by the President, appropriate for the occasion of the Lord's Supper, which was administered to a large umber. The business done on Saturday renoon, after hearing the address, was to ppoint Eld. L. C. McKinstry as Chairman, r President of the Hatley District, and Eld. C. L. Percival Secretary. The wants f the Montreal church were somewhat considered, and a few dollars put in the hands of our Conference Treasurer, Elder Merrill, as a nucleus around which we hope other sums will ere long accumulate, until means are raised to purchase land in Montreal to build a house where the truth may be preached.

It may be well to insert here a resolution passed at the Farnham District Meeting, which would give the feeling of this meeting, we think, as follows:—"Having listened to the statement of Bro. Ward, and believing it to be for the glory of God and the good of the cause that they have a church in which to worship; therefore, Resolved, That we as a Conference and people do sympathize with our brethren in Montreal, and that we will assist them as far as possible by our influence and example." We will close this report by giving the bond of C. E. Piper to abide the decision of the Council, and then the decision itself.

"This is to certify that I, Charles E. Piper, have requested a council of ministers for the consideration of, and to whom I refer, all matters relating to my conduct and manner of life for the several years last past, when I have been in a state of backsliding from God. Specially I wish to refer to the said council the consideration of my present marriage relation, both as to its legality, propriety and right, according to the doctrines of the New Testament relating to marriage. And I solemnly promise, and declare I will abide in good faith, in life and conversation, in harmony with, and according to, the decision of the aforesaid council, it being my sincere and heartfelt wish and desire to return fully to the path of christian duty and privilege, by the confessing and forsaking of all my sins, whereby, for the several years last past I may have grievously sinned against God, and brought reproach and disgrace upon his cause and upon myself; so that, through the blood of Christ, I may be restored fully to his favor and the favor of his church, and, if it please him, to the ministry of his Word; that the remainder of my life may be acceptable to him, and useful to his cause, so that at last, having been an humble follower here of the meek and lowly Savior, I may receive the crown of life at the appearing and kingdom of Jesus Christ.

DECISION OF THE COUNCIL.

"Whereas, Charles Piper, now of Dudswell, P. Q., but formerly of Boston, Mass., came into the Province six years ago, and was then regarded by most who heard him as an acceptable minister of the "gospel of the kingdom"; who, soon after, married a person of unblemished character, and, a few months later, ceased preaching, and became openly wicked, having at the time a wife in Boston, who had obtained a divorce decree from the court in due form of law, separating her from him; and having continued in that backslidden and apostate condition until a few weeks since, to the great injury of the cause of truth in these parts, and to the great grief of many good friends of the cause he once served; and he having lately confessed his wanderings and great wickedness with shame and tears, and representing himself as desirous of obeying God and making all possible amends for the past; and having himself required and nominated a council of Elders, to whom he submitted the question of his legal and New Testament right to live with the woman he now calls his wife, representing himself as 'undecided about the matter on New Testament grounds,' desiring 'a full, impartial hearing of the matter'; and also executing a written bond to abide by and carry out their decisions;—

"Therefore, We, the Elders selected, met in council, feeling all due sympathy for him and his present companion, but feeling also that Bible truth, the cause of God, and the conscientious discharge of our duty in the premises, are considerations paramount to all others; and feeling ourselves incompetent and utterly disinclined to attempt to decisively and finally legislate upon and determine such grave matters; and also remembering the last clause of Art. 9 of our Conference Constitution, which reads, 'This Conference (meaning its members of course) shall exercise no legislative power over the churches; it shall be advisory to them,' would not assume the right or power to finally decide this somewhat complicated and difficult case, but simply give our understanding of the scriptures bearing directly on the case in hand, and all similar ones, and offer our advice. And as to the legal question, we have referred it to competent professional authority for decision, and have received in answer from E. T. Brooks, M. P., of Sherbrooke, P. Q., Queen's counsel, with special reference to the case in hand, the following answer in his own words, thus:—'The marriage I do not consider legal under the circumstances.'

"After hearing a full statement, as elicited by questions freely put to Charles E. Piper, relative to his marriage relations, without confirmatory proof; and then having deliberately and carefully examined all the passages in the New Testament, and its references to the Old, as relating to divorce and marriage after, have to submit, that it is our unanimous opinion that Charles E. Piper has done wrong in marrying the last time, not being justified by New Testament law, the only scriptural cause by which a final separation can be justified, being fornication or adultery proved against one of of the parties without the possibility of mistake; it then being a question unsettled by plain Bible testimony whether they have a right to marry, even under such circumstances. We deeply regret that he had not wisely called for such action before, instead of five years after his formal marriage to the last woman, who is thus innocently yet deeply and sadly involved on this account. Therefore, we recommend him to serve God at the loss of all things, and do in the future as the Word of God, and his conscience enlightened by that Word, shall dictate; promising him all due christian sympathy in so doing. And further, we advise him not to attempt preaching, or public ministerial duties, until by a satisfactory christian character and the approval of the Conference he shall be authorized to do so.

With the reading of the above, the last thing Sabbath afternoon, our second District Meeting closed; the next one to convene in the church at Danville, in the Melbourne District, Thursday evening, June 11th, to hold over the next Sabbath. In love we met, in love we parted, hoping to meet again. C. P. Dow, Pres. of Conf.

THE OBJECTS OF READING.

CLARA A. TAYLOR.

To become wiser and more intellectual beings; to know more and more of all that our Creator has given us the power to know of nature, of the mind, of the eternal principles of truth and virtue; to add continually to the stock of just and valuable ideas, and to the power of just reasoning upon them; to cultivate all our faculties throughout the whole of life, as if it was a school to fit us for a noble action and a higher advancement in some loftier sphere,—these should be "the objects of reading."

We presume that we lay down the law of all intellectual, and also of all moral improvements, when we say, to this end the powers of our nature must be tasked,—more than amused, more than employed; they must be tasked. The heart, in its progress, must overcome temptation; the mind must overcome difficulties. To do what we did yesterday, is only to confirm ourselves in the position then taken. To advance, we must do more than we did yesterday. There must be a grappling with new thoughts, and new forms of thoughts, in order to become intellectual, and to grow strong in intellect. There must be something studied; something searched out which is not at first obvious; something investigated which will task the powers of reasoning; something on which the mind will feel that it must pause, and concentrate its utmost efforts.

To throw one's self into the current of an all-absorbing tale; to be borne in dreamy listlessness or with hurried speed upon its bosom; to make no other intellectual excursions than these, becoming no wiser at the end than at the beginning, and making no progress in thoughts, and becoming no better prepared for the duties of this world or another,—this is a folly and a sin, against which we would loudly protest.

All these efforts of the mind are intense, laborious, patient efforts. All real genius, all true originality, all lofty poetry, all powerful writing and speaking, consists in these, and in nothing else.

And in what way can you spend your unoccupied hours more pleasantly, than in holding converse with the wise and good through the medium of their writings? To a mind not altogether devoid of curiosity, books open an inexhaustible source of enjoyment. The grand volume of nature will always be spread out before us; and if we know how to read its wonders, the world will pour at our feet its treasures, and we shall hold converse with God himself. But to those who are unacquainted with books, and to those who are unaccustomed to read other books, this sublime volume must of course appear an unmeaning blank. They cannot read the glorious lines of wisdom and power, of majesty and love, which the Creator has inscribed upon it. All is to them a sealed book, and they pass through the world none the wiser for all the wonders of creative powers and goodness by which they are surrounded.

A taste for useful reading is an effectual preservation from vice. Next to the fear of God, implanted in the heart, nothing is a better safeguard to the character than the love of good books. They are handmaids of virtue and religion.

"The prudent motto for the young!
Write it in lines of gold
Upon the heart; and in thy mind
The stirring words unfold;
And in misfortune's dreary hour,
Or fortune's prosperous gale,
'Twill have a holy, cheering power,— Their's no such word as fail."

"WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?"

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

This question, propounded by our Lord himself, is certainly a proper one, but it has received various answers. It would be hardly possible for any one to express in full all his thoughts concerning this glorious person, so we shall only attempt to give a few, and shall to some extent use scripture language in this expression. We may not be able to banish entirely from our minds all the discussions between Unitarians and Trinitarians, but perhaps it would be well if we could do so. No doubt each party has been misunderstood, and perhaps misrepresented. Then let us approach this great question in such a manner as to avoid, if possible, the prejudice which exists against either position.

Without arguing about his pre-existence, let us freely admit that he now exists. Yes, he liveth in us, "except we be reprobates." He is our life, our hope, our all. There is no salvation in any other; for there is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved. He "hath power on earth to forgive sins."

When Joseph was in prison in Egypt, it is said that "whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it." Joseph was a prominent type of Christ; and as Joseph was the doer of all that was done in the prison, so Christ is the doer of all that has been done (i. e. well done) by his people. "He hath done all things well." After Joseph was brought out of prison, he was promoted to the highest position in the power of Pharaoh to bestow. The king says to Joseph, "thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled; only in the throne, will I be greater than thou." To such a position Jesus is raised, having overcome death and all opposing powers, he has ascended up on high, and says I "am set down with my Father in his throne." Verily, he is "highly exalted. Many wonderful works were done by him.

When mariners are out on the broad ocean, they are said to be beyond soundings. They do not ask if there is a bottom some miles below the surface. They are out on the "deep sea," practically beyond soundings. We may apply this figure to Christ. Without raising a question in regard to his omnipotence, omnipresence, or other attributes which belong to God, he is certainly beyond all human "soundings" in these directions. Without asking whether there ever was a time when he did not exist, we may be assured that he has existed a long time, certainly more than a thousand years. It seems evident that in "all things" he has the pre-eminence. He is not merely the eldest son, but the only son, "the only begotten," and is at the head, over all his Father's house. All others are sons merely by creation or adoption; Christ is (like Isaac) the only heir, the only Son of God. "What think ye of Christ?" "He is the root, and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star." He is the chiefest, among ten thousand, yea, he is altogether lovely. In him all fullness dwelleth. Others have special points in which they excel. He excels in all. He is greater than Solomon. He is King of kings, and Lord of lords.

"All hail the power of Jesus' name;
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all!"

MY EXPERIENCE.

S. P. LEAVITT.

At the age of fourteen, I was so powerfully converted as to preclude all doubts of my acceptance through Christ. Being a schoolboy surrounded by many evil associations, and not receiving the spiritual food by which I might grow, I fell again into sin. About seven years after, I tried to be religious, and joined the Methodists. After a while I got hold of some truths advocated by the Second Advent Brn., which I thought too good to keep in silence, and in consequence was politely, though with marked decision, instructed how I might get out of that connection. I followed the counsel, and thus losing identity with my people, nothing strange that I should become morally corrupt.

In 1854 I embraced the idea of Jesus' coming, and made ready, by the light I then had, to meet him. The time passed by, and I was taken captive by Satan, and so went on sinning and repenting, up and down, good to-day, wicked to-morrow, bearing many evil fruits, such as being a user of tobacco, and sometimes of inebriating drinks for a term of about thirty two years, or until the Alton Bay Campmeeting in 1873. I arrived on the ground at half past eight, from Lawrence, on the last Sat. eve. I heard a few remarks, which awakened an interest in the subject of holiness I never felt before. Being obliged to return to L. by the Sunday train, I got but little instruction there, but enough to beget a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and a deep cry for a clean heart.

I had tried so many times to keep myself, and as many times failed, that I felt the need of a Savior that could save to the uttermost. I set about the work of entire consecration. In this I struggled till the 25th of Sept., and I could yield all but my tobacco. I wanted to save a piece on hand for an emergency. It would not do. This severing text was ready, "Make no provision for the flesh to fulfill the lust thereof." That night, to be remembered in eternity, I gave all, believed and found Jesus in a nearer and more blessed sense than I ever had before.

Glory be to his dear name! he let the cleansing wave pass over me, and his blood cleansed me from all sin. He washed me all clean, and I was accepted in the Beloved. Three days after, went to Lowell to hear Bro. Grant, and on returning to Lawrence an indescribable flood of glory, sweet as heaven, filled all my being. Had I been in paradise itself, it seems to me that my sensations could not have been sweeter. Every thing my eye rested upon was shining with glory. Almost seven months have passed away, and I enjoy it still, sweet as ever. Jesus is mine with all his beauty and loveliness. Hallelujah to his dear name! I am all for Jesus. I have no desire, or returning appetite for former evil habits.

"THOU KNOWEST THAT I LOVE THEE."

L. J. ADAMS.

Blessed Master, amid the joys and sorrows, cares and trials of life, I hear thy voice asking "Lovest thou me?" and my heart replies, "Lord thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love thee." To thee my heart turns ever. Thou art the spring of every joy. "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee." When I was burdened with sin I heard thee say, "Thy sins are forgiven thee." How can I cease to love thee?—how turn again to the perishing pleasures of earth that never satisfied my heart, and cast aside the love that encircles me and crowns my life with happiness? "Bless the Lord O my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy name! Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits! Who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases, who redeemeth thy life from destruction, who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies."

In my weakness and helplessness I come to thee for the help and strength which thou alone canst give. Fold me in thy strong arms. "Teach me to do thy will." Make my heart quick to recognize thy voice and willing to obey.

"In life's bewildering strife and eager rush
I lose so much of thy sweet gentleness;
But in the peace and solace of this hush,
Strengthen and soothe me with thy blessedness.
Give to me what thou wilt here at thy side,
Whate'er it be, I shall be satisfied."

O make me pure and holy. Fit me to dwell with thee. Clouds gather o'er my head, lightnings flash, and peals of thunder burst upon my ear. I cannot see the way. Take my hand, and hold it fast. I would follow thee whithersoever thou leadest, though the way be very rough and thorny, and my tired feet find no resting place till they reach the pearly gates of the golden city. The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak; yet "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Make me strong in thee. Quench not the refining fire until all the dross is consumed from my nature, and thy likeness is reflected in me in all its beauty.

"I would be all like thee,
No breath, or thought, or work below
My soul would find, save such as thine.
O then let streams of pureness flow
Within; fed from thy fount divine,
Making me all like thee."

I only seek to know and to do thy will, whatever it may be. I only ask to know that thou art leading me. Thy blessed presence cheers and comforts me. Thy love makes every trial small. I take the bitter cup thy loving hand raises to my lips, and thank thee for it, knowing that to my heart it will bring a blessing. Thy tear-dimmed eyes bring to my mind these precious words,—"In all their afflictions he was afflicted." Blessed Savior, I love thee better than ever before. I thank thee too for the joys thy love brings to my heart, and for the blessed assurance that if I follow thee I shall see thee in thy glory, and be made like thee. "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

KIND WORDS.

H. S. MITCHELL.

They never blister the tongue nor lips, and we have never heard of any moral trouble arising from their use. Though they do not cost much, yet, 1. they help one's good nature. Soft words soften our own soul; angry words are fuel to the flame of wrath, and make it blaze more fiercely. 2. Kind words make other people good natured; cold words freeze people, hot words scorch them, bitter words make them bitter, and wrathful words make them wrathful. There is such an overflow of all other kinds of words in our day, that it seems desirable to give kind words a place among them. There are vain words, silly words, empty words, and profane words. Kind words also produce their own image on men's souls. And a beautiful image it is. They smooth, quiet, and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his sour, morose, unkind feelings. We have not yet begun to use kind words in such abundance as they ought to be used. Remember kind words.

Gems.

— People often want most that which is least adapted to their wants.

— It is always a sign of poverty of mind when men are ever aiming to appear great; for they who are really great never seem to know it.

— Some people live without purpose, and pass through the world like straws on a river—mere passengers.

— Remember that every person, however low, has rights and feelings. In all contentions, let peace be rather your object than triumph; value triumph only as a means of peace.

— If we seek our happiness in anything beside the peace of God and a good conscience, we shall as certainly be unhappy, as that anything in the world is uncertain.

— Cheerfulness is an excellent wearing quality. It has been called the bright weather of the heart. It gives harmony to the soul, and is a perpetual song without words.

— Honors and commendations are valuable in proportion as they are bestowed on us by One higher than man.

— The lovers of "some new thing" seldom have much taste for an old truth.

— The sunbeam is composed of millions of minute rays; so home-light must be constituted of little tendernesses, kindly looks, sweet laughter, loving words.

— To tell our secrets is folly; to divulge those of others is treachery.

— Some people have their thinking, like their washing, done out.

— A man who distrusts himself never truly confides in any one.

— Thefts never enrich; alms never impoverish; prayer hinders no work.

An old minister who, when advanced in life, showed great vigor, being asked the reason of this, replied: "I can easily account for it; I have had three great excellencies during my lifetime; I have always been on good terms with my conscience; I have always been on good terms with my wife; and I have always been on good terms with my congregation and my stomach."

OLD AGE.

It is seldom, says the Friend's Intelligencer, we see as beautiful a tribute to the worth of "old age" as is contained in the following, which recently appeared in one of our city periodicals, and is now offered for republication in our columns:

Not long since a good-looking man in middle life came to our door asking for "the minister." When informed that he was out of town he seemed disappointed and anxious. On being questioned as to his business, he replied, "I have lost my mother, and as this place used to be her home, and my father lies here, we have come to lay her beside him."

Our hearts rose in sympathy, and we said, "you have met with a great loss."

"Well, yes," replied the strong man with hesitancy; a mother is a great loss in general; but our mother had outlived her usefulness; she was in her second childhood, and her mind had grown as weak as her body, so that she was no comfort to herself and a burden to everybody. There were seven of us, sons and daughters, and as we could not find any body who was willing to board her, we agreed to keep her among us a year about. But I've had more than my share of her, for she was too feeble to be moved when my time was out, and that was three months before her death. But then she was a good mother in her day, and toiled very hard to bring us all up."

Without looking at the face of the heartless man, we directed him to the house of a neighboring pastor, and returned to our nursery. We gazed on the merry little faces which smiled or grew sad in imitation of ours—those little ones to whose ear no word in our language is half so sweet as "mother"—and we wondered if that day could ever come when they could say of us, "She has outlived her usefulness; she is no comfort to herself, and a burden to every body," and we hoped that before such a day would dawn we might be taken to our rest. God forbid that we should outlive the love of our children! Rather let us die while their hearts are a part of our own, that our grave may be watered with their tears, and our love linked with hopes of heaven.

When the bell tolled for the mother's burial we went to the sanctuary to pay our token of respect for the aged stranger, for we felt that we could give her memory a tear, even though her own children had none to shed.

"She was a good woman in her day, and toiled hard to bring us all up; she was no comfort to herself, and a burden to every body else."

These cruel, heartless words rang in our ears as we saw the coffin borne up the aisle. The bell tolled long and loud, until its iron tongue had chronicled the years of the toil-worn mother. One—two—three—four—five. How clearly, and almost merrily, each stroke told of her once peaceful slumber in her mother's bosom, and of her seat at nightfall on her weary father's knee. Six—seven—eight—nine—ten, rang out the tale of her sports upon the greensward in the meadow and by the brook. Eleven—twelve—thirteen—fourteen—fifteen, spoke more gravely of school days, and little household joys and cares. Sixteen—seventeen—eighteen, sounded out the enraptured visions of maidenhood and the dream of early love. Nineteen brought us the happy bride. Twenty spoke of the young mother, whose heart was full of bursting with the new-sprung love which God had awakened in her bosom. And then stroke after stroke told of her early womanhood—of the love, and cares, and hopes, and fears, and toils through which she passed during these long years, till fifty rang out harsh and loud. From then to sixty each stroke told of the warm-hearted mother and grandmother, living over again her own joys and sorrows in those of her children and children's children. Every family of all the group wanted grandmother then, and the only strife was who should secure the prize; but hark! the bell tolls on! Seventy-one—two—three—four. She begins to grow feeble, requires some care, is not always perfectly patient or satisfied; she goes from one child's house to another, so that no one place seems like home. She murmurs in a plaintive tone, and after all her toil and weariness it is hard she cannot be allowed a home to die in; that she must be sent, rather than invited from house to house. Eighty—eighty-one—two—three—four—ah! now she is a second child—now "she has outlived her usefulness, she has ceased to be a comfort to herself or anybody;" that is, she has ceased to be profitable to her earth craving and world grasping children.

Now sounds out, reverberating through our lonely forest, and echoing back from the "hill of the dead," eighty-nine! There she now lies in the coffin, cold and still; she makes no trouble now, demands no love, no soft words, no tender little offices. A look of patient endurance, we fancied also an expression of grief for unrequited love, sat on her marble features. Her children were there, clad in weeds of woe, and in irony we remembered the strong man's word's, "She was a good mother in her day."

When the bell ceased tolling, the strange minister rose in the pulpit. His form was very erect, and his voice strong, but his hair was silvery white. He read several passages of Scripture expressive of God's compassion to feeble men, and especially of his tenderness when gray hairs are on him and his strength faileth. He then made some touching remarks on human frailty and of dependence on God, urging all present to make their peace with their Master while in health, that they might claim his promise when heart and flesh should fail them. Then he said, "The eternal God shall be thy refuge, and beneath thee shall be the everlasting arms." Leaning over the desk and gazing intently on the coffined form before him, he then said reverently, "From a little child I honored the aged, but never till gray hairs covered my own head did I know truly how much love and sympathy this class has a right to demand of their fellow creatures. Now I feel it. Our mother," he added most tenderly, "who now lies in death before us, was a stranger to me, as are all her descendants. All I know of her is what her son has told me to-day—that she was brought to this town from afar, sixty-nine years ago, a happy bride: that she has passed most of her life toiling, as only mothers ever have strength to toil, until she had reared a large family of sons and daughters; that she left her home here, clad in the weeds of widowhood, to dwell among her children, and that, till health and vigor left her, she lived for you, her descendants.

You, who together have her love, and care, know how well you have requited her. God forbid that conscience should accuse any of you of ingratitude or murmuring on account of the care she has been to you of late. When you go back to your homes be careful of your words and your example before your own children, for the fruit of your own doing you will surely reap from them when you yourselves totter on the brink of the grave. I entreat you as a friend, as one who has himself entered the 'evening of life,' that you may never say in the presence of your families nor of heaven, 'Our mother has outlived her usefulness; she was a burden to us.' Never, never, never; a mother cannot live so long as that! No; when she can no longer labor for her children, nor yet care for herself, she can fall like a precious weight on their bosom, and call forth by her helplessness all the noble, generous feelings of their nature."—Christian Era.

Use of Good Men in Bad Times.—It is very necessary that good men should live in very bad times, not only to reprieve a wicked world, that God may not utterly destroy it, as he did in the days of Noah, when all flesh had corrupted its ways; also to season human conversation, to give check to wickedness, and to revive the practice of virtue by some great and bright examples, and to redress those violences and injuries which are done under the sun; at least to struggle and contend with a corrupt age, which will put some stop to the growing evils, and scatter such seeds of virtue as will spring up in time. It is an argument of God's care of the world, that antidotes grow in the neighborhood of poisons; that the most degenerate ages have some excellent men, who seem to be made on purpose for such a time, to stem the torrent, and to give some ease to the miseries of mankind.—Sherlock.

What is Needed.—Every thing in the last few years has shown us that a deeper tone of divine truth, in all who profess to hold that truth, is needed to meet the growing corruption of religion, and the infidelity and lawlessness which cast off all religion. God's own light, as given us in his own Word, must be more and more our guide through the darkness and conflicts of these days. We are assured also, that "when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." We may expect, therefore, fresh truth to shine out from the sacred volume. The word of prophecy in general, and especially the hope of the Lord's coming, is as a "light shining in a dark place."—Bickersteth.

OVERCHARGED.

MRS. SOPHIA CLEMONS.

Let not your hearts be overcharged,
The Lord and Master said,
With surfeiting and drunkenness,—
The judgment's just ahead.

We rise up early—labor much—
Are pressed with anxious care;
And this our greatest worriment,
"What shall I have to wear?"

The lillies toil not, nor do spin,
Yet grandly are arrayed;
The God who clothes them says to us,
"Trust me—be not afraid."

And yet we worry ne'er so much
As for to-morrow's store;
"What should we have to eat and drink,
Were sickness at our door."

Ah, human heart! when will you learn
To trust the Master's care?
He, who so great, yet stoops so low
To know where sparrows are.

And every hair upon our head
He holds the number fast;
Are not our lives of more account?
Then trust him to the last.

HOME AND HEALTH.

EXPERIENCE OF A PSYCHO-HYGIENIST.

F. P. DINGLEY.

Dec. 25th, 1871, I pledged myself to abstain from swine's flesh, doughnuts, cheese, mince pie, and all unclean and unwholesome food, as a diet. Since then, I have discontinued the use of all flesh meats, eggs, grease, all food prepared from fine white flour, and all condiments, but sometimes a little milk. Now, I live principally upon grains and fruits, and eat only two meals a day. I only eat vegetables occasionally, and never eat them at the same meal with fruits. Out of the many substances from which food is prepared, I value none so highly as wheat and the subacid apple. My food is all prepared so that when it is ready for the table it contains no more nor less elements of nutrition than are natural. I avoid eating apples, peaches, berries, or any fruit, or anything else between my regular meals. I drink nothing while eating, or for at least three hours after, and then I drink nothing but good soft water. I keep my skin clean and the pores open by taking whole baths in water, a little warm. I do this about two or three hours before my second meal, which I eat at half past one, P. M.

Persons should bathe and sleep only when their stomach is free from food. A nap soon after eating might do harm, while one an hour or two before might be very beneficial. I avoid feather beds, and sleep generally with my window open at both bottom and top. I wish to have pure out door air day and night, at all seasons of the year. Light, both of the sun and of God's Word, I think is of great importance to our present and future well being. The former helps to purify the blood and drive away disease; the latter to purify persons both physically and morally, and to fit them for the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. If we would shine as lights in the world, we should not reject any light which God has seen fit to reveal to the children of men. Let us have the Word of Christ dwelling in us richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in our hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever we do, in word or deed, let us do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father by him.

I commenced living in the above manner because I believed it was the Lord's will that I should. When I first made the change, I began to fall away in flesh, and it was sometime before I felt benefitted by it; but after the habit of eating meat, and three meals a day, and using condiments was broken up, I began to improve, and have been improving ever since. I always used to have a very disagreeable feeling in my head, and my mind seemed all the time to be in a cloudy, confused condition; but since I adopted this mode of living, these feelings have been gradually dying away. Although I have not yet arrived at perfect health, still I am on the road that leads to health and happiness, and which ends in life eternal.

I thank the Lord for such physicians as Jackson, Trall, and others, who can tell their patients how they may be cured without having to take poisonous medicines. And not only this, but I thank the Lord for physicians who thoroughly understand nature's laws, that after having cured their patients, can tell them how to live so as to preserve their health. This system of living not only gives me better health in body, but it helps me to fight the good fight of faith, and to lay hold on eternal life. It makes christians more joyful in the Lord. All who have adopted this system of living, can testify that these statements are correct.

A person that is pure in heart and has good health, cannot help being joyful in the Lord. You may cast such persons into the inner prison, and make their feet fast in the stocks, and they will shout and sing praises to God. A person in ill health is a poor instrument for the Lord to work with; while one in good health can every way answer the divine purpose. I do not mean to say that a person cannot live a christian life when in poor health; but I mean that they cannot so fully answer the divine plan. Paul commands to "Rejoice in the Lord always." Now in order for us to do this, we must possess every grace that composes a christian character. So in order for us to live righteously in every respect, I believe we have got to eat and drink, and do all that we do to the glory of God; or in other words, we have got to live healthfully. No unclean person hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ. Then I understand that if we have an inheritance in that kingdom, we must cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and be clean here. We, as pilgrims and strangers here in this world, ought to live just as near as possible like those in the country unto which we are journeying. Here is the only place that I know of where I can prepare to dwell in that country. The blood of Jesus Christ will wash away all our sins, and make us pure within; and that is what makes us ready to enter into that heavenly world. The grace of God, if heeded, will teach us how we may be kept in readiness till we reach the shining shore. We are journeying unto the place of which the Lord said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel.

Relation of the Cuisine to Brain-work.—Turgot could not work well till after he got dined copiously, but many men cannot think after a substantial meal; and here, in spite of the example set by Scott and Goethe, let me observe that nothing interferes so much with brain-work as overeating. The intellectual workman requires nourishment of the best possible quality, but the quantity ought always to be well within the capacity of his digestive powers. The truth appears to be, that whilst the intellectual life makes very large demands upon nutrition—for cerebral activity cannot go forward without constant supplies of force, which must come ultimately from what we have eaten—this kind of life, being sedentery, is unfavorable to the work of digestion. Brain-workers cannot eat like sportsmen and farmers, without losing many hours in torpor, and yet they need nutrition as much as if they led active lives. The only way out of this difficulty is to take care that the food is good enough for a moderate quantity of it to maintain the physical and mental powers. The importance of scientific cookery can hardly be exaggerated. Intellectual labor, in its origin, is as dependent upon the art of cookery as the dissemination of its results is dependent upon paper-making and printing. This is one of those matters which people cannot be brought to consider seriously; but cookery in its perfection—the great science of preparing food in the way best suited to our use—is really the most important of all sciences, and the mother of the arts. The wonderful theory that the most ignorant cookery is the most favorable to health is only fit for the dark ages. It is grossly and stupidly untrue. A scientific cook will keep you in regular health, when an ignorant one will offer you the daily alternative of starving or indigestion.—Hammerton.

An Excellent Remedy for Constipation, also a good substitute for Tea and Coffee.—Two teaspoons or less of molasses, and a little cream or milk, in a cup of hot water. The molasses and cream mixed according to the taste, makes a palatable and satisfying drink. It should be taken as hot as the stomach will comfortably bear. It warms the stomach when in a cold, languid state, and acts as a laxative. Molasses is preferable to sugar in its effect upon the system when taken in this way. The system needs variety in food and drink.

Another excellent drink, and more healthful than tea or coffee, can be made as follows: In a cup of hot water mix enough currant jelly, or any healthful acid to render it a palatable drink.

Cosmetics.—"Are the various cosmetics sold by druggists injurious to the skin? What ones can you recommend as the best?"

All the various cosmetics in the shape of washes, powders, and paints are more or less injurious. They contain carbonate of lead and other poisons, and if freely used, result in injury of the skin, partial paralysis, lead colic, etc. The best of all cosmetics and those which I can conscientiously recommend are not to be had at any druggist's shop. They are pure air and water, sunlight, good food, exercise, a healthy stomach, and a clean skin.—Herald of Health.

Sudden Disuse of Spirits.—Many think that the disuse of spirits should be gradual, but my observations authorize me to say, that persons who have been addicted to them should abstain suddenly and entirely. Taste not, handle not, touch not, should be inscribed on every vessel that contains spirits in the house of a man who wishes to be cured of intemperance.—Dr. Rush.

WATCH AND PRAY.

Watch! for thou knowest not
What time thy Lord shall come,
When he shall bid thee leave thy toil,
And rest with him at home.

Watch! for thou knowest not
How strong thy foes may be;
They did not spare thy Master once—
They will not pity thee!

Watch! lest thou slumbering lie,
Until the heavenly gate,
Fast closed against thy bitter cry,
Shall leave thee desolate.

Pray! for thine utmost strength
Shall fail thee in the strife;
On Jesus rest, and he at length
Shall crown with love thy life.

Pray! when the morning glows,
When noon is fair and bright,
When eve her purple splendor throws,
To greet the darkling night.

Oh! spirit bound for heaven,
Along the narrow way,
That prophets and apostles trod,
Christ bids thee watch and pray.

DID CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, MAKE THE WORLD?---No. 4.

J. S. WHITE.

We have been told that the Translation of the Four Gospels, by Nathaniel Smith Folsom, renders John 1: 1-5:—"In [the] beginning was the Word. This was in [the] beginning with God. All things through it arose into being, and without it arose not even one thing which has arisen. In it was life," etc. It will be seen that Mr. Folsom puts it in the place of him in the third and fourth verses. By thus doing, he would have us believe that the Word was not God, but only God's utterance, or speech, which he calls it, that became flesh. But in his note on this passage he says: "For the purpose, however, of defending the personification of the 'Word,' it makes no difference at all whether the 'Word,' or 'God,' be made the predicate; whether emphatic stress be on 'God,' or 'was,' or the 'Word.' If one reads, 'and the Word was God,' then it is to be said that by the Word thus personified, the Evangelist meant God, and no other person, or hypostasis, or distinction. It was God himself." Thus by Mr. Folsom's own showing, if John meant God himself, it makes no difference about the gender. He may be called an it, and so it may read, 'by it all things were made, and without it [that is, God] was not anything made that was made." We see the absurdities men fall into when they try to reason away what is plainly on the face of the text.

In his notes, Mr. Folsom says:—"The Word, what is it? The first impression on most readers of the common version, and also of the Greek original, is, that the writer seems to mean a person." Mr. F. admits that the first impression on reading this passage, whether in our version or in the Greek, is, that by the "Word," John means a person. This is true; and no one can have any other impression. But if they think that it cannot be reconciled with other portions of Scripture, as Mr. F. does; or if they are unwilling "the Word" should mean a person, they will undertake to reason away this first impression, even though they contradict themselves, and deny other portions of Scripture in doing so.

I know of no statement in the Bible that conflicts with the first impression every one has on reading John 1: 1-5. On the other hand, this impression is supported by the most plain and positive testimony. Before noticing this, I will give one or two extracts from other writers who take a different view from Mr. Folsom's reasoning, by which he tries to do away his "first impression."

"'The same was in the beginning with God.' This, though it was before expressed in that clause, 'the Word was with God,' is by no means a vain tautology, but a strong and emphatical repetition. He is said to be himself God, and is again said to be God, to show his real Godhead, and yet his distinct personality from the Father."—Dr. Tropp.

"Although St. John only, of the writers of the New Testament, mentions this title of our Lord, yet it was not new; since by the Chaldee paraphrase, written before our Savior's birth, it abundantly affirms that in many places of the Old Testament, which mention the name of God, the Jews did thereby understand a Divine person, and that person by whom the promised Redeemer was to be brought. So that St. John, declaring the eternal pre-existence of the Son of God—'In the beginning was the Word'—did not declare a point to which the Jews had been wholly strangers before the revelation of the gospel."—Dr. Claggett.

"The Messiah was called 'The Word of God' by the Jews. The Chaldee Paraphrasts, the most ancient Jewish writers extant, generally make use of the word Memra, which signifies 'the Word,' in those places where Moses puts the Jehovah. And it is generally thought that, under the term, the Paraphrasts would intimate the Son of God, the second person of the trinity. Now their testimony is so much the more considerable as having lived before Christ, or at the time of Christ, they are irrefragible witnesses of the sentiments of their nation concerning this article, since their Targum, or explication, has always been, and still is, in universal esteem among the Jews. And as they ascribe to Memra all the attributes of the Deity, it is concluded from thence that they believed the divinity of the Word. They say that it was MEMRA, or the Word, which created the world; which appeared to Moses on Mount Sinai; which gave him the law; which spake to him face to face; which brought Israel out of Egypt; which marched before the the people; which wrought all those miracles which are recorded in the book of Exodus. It was the same Word that appeared to Abraham in the plain of Mamre; that was seen of Jacob at Bethel, to whom Jacob made his vow, and acknowledged as God (Gen. 28: 20),—'If God will will be with me in this way that I go, . . . then shall the Lord be my God.'"—Alexander Cruden.

I have said that the impression every one receives on reading John is, that he by the "Word" meant a person, and that this impression is supported by the most plain and positive testimony. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus; who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Phil. 2: 5-8. The apostle says that Christ, "being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." Christ was in the form of God before he took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men. Or was it God's speech, or utterance, that was in the form of God in the sense of an it, and it humbled itself, and took on itself the form of a servant? If Christ was found in fashion as man, before he became obedient unto death, then was he in the form of God before he took on him the form of a servant. If not, then words fail to express ideas.

"Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature; for by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him; and he is before all things, and by him all things consist." Col. 1: 15-17. John says,—"All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." Paul affirms the same, while he enlarges upon John's statement, by naming the things more particularly that were made by Christ the Son of God. John says, "In the beginning was the Word." Paul says, "He is before all things," and is "the first-born of every creature." John says, "All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." Paul says, "By him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth. . . . All things were created by him and for him; and he is before all things, and by him all things consist." Thus do John and Paul affirm the same things of Christ.

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; who, being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." Heb. 1: 1-3. "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows. And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands." Heb. 1: 9-10. Paul here affirms that God did, by his Son, make the worlds. The Father affirms that his Son in the beginning laid the foundations of the earth, and that the heavens are the work of his hands. To say in the face of this testimony that Christ as God's Son was not with God in the beginning, that all things were not made by him, that he did not make the world, that he had no existence before he came in the flesh, that he was a nonentity before he took on him the seed of Abraham, or that he was only an it in the neuter gender;—to say this, is virtually to say that there is no confidence to be placed in the record God has given of his Son.

If such testimonies of Christ's pre-existence as the Son of God are not to be received as they are given, we know not that anything they have said of Christ is to be received. No doctrine in the Bible is more plainly and directly stated than this, neither can it be. If the words employed to express the existence of God's Son before he was in the flesh, and that he made the world, do not express these facts, then no words can express them.

Is it true, that in regard to the time God's Son came into being, he has no pre-eminence over man? that man preceded Christ more than four thousand years? He who is "the first-born of every creature," who is "the beginning of the creation of God," and who "created all things in heaven and in earth," had no existence for a long time after all things were created? "Tell it not in Gath; publish it not in the streets of Askelon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph." It is opening the flood-gate to all skepticism and infidelity. The skeptic will say, If the doctrine before us is not taught in the Bible, there is no truth in the book. The skeptic knows that this doctrine is taught in the Bible, if words can be used so as to express it. He, not willing to believe it any more than the Jews were willing to believe what is said about it, rejects the whole book as not being the Word of God. Just like the Jews, who would not believe that Christ was before Abraham, that he came down from heaven, and that his Father sent him; so they rejected all that he said of himself. As with the skeptic, so with the Jews,—their conclusion was consistent with their premises. Take the divinity and pre-existence of Christ out of the Bible, and you have taken God out of the Bible. The learned skeptic sees this and acts accordingly.

REBUKING THE NATIONS.

Divine legislation is indispensable to the welfare of men, and that legislation to be effectual, must be enforced by divine power. The Law of Sinai and the Gospel of Calvary, both divine, have been long in this world; but "the prince of this world," who hates both, is still at large, and, without difficulty, gets his multitudinous subjects to trample on the one and reject the other. For proof look around you! Take all the states, and kingdoms, and empires, all the islands and continents of the broad earth, and say whether the evidence is not overwhelming that some desperately evil and malignant power is constantly at work through the agency of men. Satan, the adversary, the devil, the prince of the power of the air, the god of this world, is untiringly active as a liar, a spoiler, a murderer, a destroyer. It is vain to talk of improving and blessing humanity, and bringing in the reign of universal brotherhood by education, and science, and commercial interests, while this awfully evil being is lord of the kingdoms. He said to Christ that the kingdoms are in his power, and he was not contradicted! Our Lord speaks of him as the prince of this world. This gigantic foe of God and man is not to be cast down from his dark supremacy by any wisdom of statesmen, or work of ecclesiastics. He is too wise and too strong for them. A stronger than he must do that, and the honor is reserved for him whom saints delight to honor, the Anointed of Jehovah, the Man of God's right hand, whom he hath made strong for himself.

Into the mystery of Satanic royalty we will not enter at present. Briefly stated, our conviction is that the potentate of whom we speak was the puissant head, the delegated sovereign of a race of beings that inhabited the world for many ages before the chaotic era of the second verse of Genesis; that that chaos was the physical memorial of his and their disloyalty, the awful epitaph upon the grave of a world of intelligent beings who kept not their first estate; and that the malignity with which he deceives the human race has its roots in the accursed passions of hatred, revenge, and jealousy. A splendid being at first as he came from the hands of his holy Creator, the magnificence of his position dazzled him, and, as there is nothing perfect except infinite perfection, pride turned that glorious angelic intellect into the mind of a devil! 1 Tim. 3: 6. Now the perverted nature, with its powers undiminished, directs all its force against the will of God; and, as the fallen prince knows that his years are numbered, and that he must die the death when the term of respite ends, his wrath increases, and his efforts to ruin mankind are multiplied. This is the secret of the appaling evils of the last days. "Woe to inhabiters of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time."

On this passage the Rev. James Kelly, M. A., has the following striking remarks in (his "Apocalypse Interpreted in the Light of 'The Day of the Lord'"):—"Thus, the event which gives joy to the inhabitants of heaven is pregnant with alarm to mankind below,—and it would appear, from the expressions used, that the whole compass of the globe, both its inland and maritime regions, will be exposed to the distressing consequences. Here the cause of alarm to mankind is expressly assigned—even Satan's ejection to the earth, whereto, being deprived of his vantage ground in the heavens, his pernicious agency is henceforth to be limited. And because of his consciousness of the short career that remains to him he will labor to fill up the time with proportionate malice." . . . .

Let us now return to our opening proposition—Divine authority, enforced by divine power, indispensable to human welfare. Sentimental philosophy sets forth the virtues of "moral suasion" as sufficient to conquer all the evils which stand between man and the golden age, which every lover of his race must desire. The "good time coming" is actually to come to all lands through the charming eloquence of moral suasion; and, therefore, the "notion of the millenarian," that destructive wars and divine judgments will precede the millennium, must be politely bowed out of court as "absurd." This is the substance of what has been said to us frequently by christian ministers, as it is the substance of tracts and pamphlets innumerable, whose writers feel that the Lord's advent would spoil their entire system of theology, if indeed, it did not somewhat disturb their peace. But the grace of God, which is the best moral suasion we know of, will not always be rejected with impunity. The same book which has the tenderly persuasive words, "To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts," and "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," has also the expression, "The day of vengeance is in my heart." Undoubtedly, to some persons, it is an extraordinary association of ideas which is suggested by the words, "The wrath of the Lamb;" nevertheless, they are in the Bible, and that they have a meaning of awful import may be taken for granted as certain.

One of the prophecies of Isaiah reads thus: "And it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-books; nation shall not lift sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Here war, with its manifold concomitant woes, is rebuked by the great Judge; his decision ends that scourge of nations; his law on the subject goes forth, and it is obeyed. "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire." Ps. 46: 9. How shall that be? The answer of the inspired poet is, "The Lord of hosts is with us." This accounts for it. He says to the raging heathen and the troubled nations, "Be still—desist—and know that I am God;" and he will be obeyed, for he says, "I will be exalted among the heathen; I will be exalted in the earth." He is now King by right; he will then be King in fact, and will have his law enforced instantly. Some time ago, a gentleman quoted, for our benefit, as a proof that the church is destined to convert the world to Christ, the following words:—"Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

"Pray proceed," said we. What is the result?"

"Their conversion to christianity, of course."

"Well, no; the next sentence is, 'Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.' And such will be the terrible experience of the Lord's enemies when he riseth up to the long-delayed battle."

"You astonish me!" said our friend, after a long pause.

"I! What have I to do with it? They are the words of inspiration regarding the King that Jehovah will set upon his holy hill of Zion;—has set in 'decree,' will set in fact; and, as a christian man, you will surely agree with me in thinking that we are bound to believe them."

"Well, but, sir, our minister ——"

"Hush! not a syllable, if you please. Your minister is an excellent man, whom I love, both for the sake of his work and his character; but I am profoundly impressed with the conviction that it is high time for us all to take the Bible, and see for ourselves what God has really said to us."

Christians, living, as they do, under the dispensation of grace, are too apt to forget that a time comes when the sword of justice will be drawn from its sheath to execute the long-delayed judgments of heaven. "For, behold, the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire and by his sword will the Lord plead with all flesh; and the slain of the Lord shall be many." Isa. 66: 15, 16.—Rainbow.

THE SIMPLICITY OF CHRIST.

The simplicity of Christ was one of the most prominent and remarkable traits in his character. At all times, in all his teachings and conversation, he was the same Jesus of Nazereth; and amid all his stupendous miracles we find him still the same mild, unassuming being, or as he truly said, the "meek and lowly one." There is nothing in the whole history we have of him that borders in the slightest degree upon parade or show of any kind. All is meekness and humility, from first to last, notwithstanding the mighty works he had done, and the fame of him on account thereof that had gone out into the land. In relation to these he never manifested anything like pride or arrogance. His unvarying answer was, "Of myself I can do nothing, but the Father that sent me, he worketh in me."

How muchsoever his enemies might speak against him as a public teacher; how muchsoever they might from prejudice and bigotry vilify and abuse him, yet they could never accuse him of ambitious views, never of deception, hypocrisy or pride. His amiable deportment, the disinterestedness of his labors, the simplicity of all his doctrines and teachings, could not fail to secure the approbation of those around him, and if not the love, yet certainly the respect of his enemies.

The same open sincerity and unadorned simplicity that characterized him in public life, marked his conduct also in private. Among his nearest and most familiar friends he was the same as when mingled with the multitude, or confronting his foes. To the very last hour of his life, he maintained this frankness and native simplicity; and it is especially seen in the institution of the memorial supper, where all parade and show is put aside, and everything is marked with the most perfect truth and sincerity.

Reader, let us strive to imitate our Master in this respect, and avoiding all pride and haughtiness, walk humbly before God and with our fellows. Let us study to attain to the same simplicity of speech and conduct, and in all things to drink of his spirit, and follow in his steps.—Selected by I. I LESLIE.

A PRAYER.

When the world no solace gives,
When in deep distress I groan,
When my lover and my friend
Leave me with my grief alone;
When a weary land I tread,
Fainting for the rocks and springs,
Overshadow me, O Lord,
With the comfort of thy wing.

When my heart and flesh shall fail,
When I yield this mortal breath,
When I gather up my feet
Icy with the chill of death;
Strengthen and sustain me, Lord,
With thine all-sufficient grace;
Overlean my dying bed
With the sweetness of thy face.

BORN AGAIN.

HENRY PRATT.

"We live in embryo here. Death breaks the bands that usher us into the life of gods and men." So wrote Mr. Young in his "Night Thoughts," and so many people believe. The first sentence is true. "It does not yet appear what we shall be"; therefore we must be in embryo. It doth appear what we are by the first birth; but the undeveloped state—the "shall be" state—we see through a glass darkly. By believing, we gain the right or privilege to become the sons of God. Born again is another development of our being. It does not subject us to a hidden, breathless, unconscious state to be in embryo now, but the principle by which this other birth is effected is a new endowment to all our faculties; it is a regenerating principle that is urging men on to a better and higher state. We now bear the image of the earthly; we shall then bear the image of the heavenly.

To be born is to be made manifest—brought forth. To be begotten is to be generated. And though the acts by which they are accomplished are so entirely different, yet they are translated from the same word, the one depending on the other; the birth being the result of begetting. We are begotten by the will of man to the first embryotic state, and born of woman. "Man that is born of woman," etc. In the second place, we are begotten by the will of God. "Of his own will begat he us by the word of truth." James 1: 18. A parallel passage in John 1: 13 reads thus: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Whatever was accomplished by the word born here, as in James, was by "the will of God." We cannot alter the translation in James,—"Of his own will begat he us." Why not then render John 1: 13 in harmony with James,—"Which were begotten, ... not of the will of man, but of God"?

As it is an embryonic state in which we have the right or power to become the sons of God, it is evidently a begotten state only. Men are not born of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man; but they are begotten by the will of man, and this other begetting is by the will of God. Paul says, "I have begotten you through the gospel." The gospel came not by the will of man, but of God; therefore is in harmony with James. Peter strikes the same key for his anthem—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which hath begotten us again to a lively hope, . . . not of corruptible seed, but incorruptible, by the word of God." James says, "Of his own will begat he us by the word of truth." Paul says, "I have begotten you through the gospel." Peter says, "by the word of God."

All is accomplished by the will of God and by his word, and it is a begetting, not a birth. It is by an incorruptible seed, and will produce incorruptible beings when developed. John comes into beautiful harmony here. "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born [gennas] of God; and every one that loveth him that begat [gennas] loveth him also that is begotten [gennas] of God." 1 John 5: 1. It will not make sense to render the word gennas born, in the last two places where it is used; why, then, render it born in the first, when speaking of the same thing? In the eighteenth verse we have the same thing over; and without aspiring to a translation of the Greek, I find the latest and most critical commentaries rendering it begotten, as it should be, to make harmony. Christ was born first of a woman, and in the second place he was born from the dead. This birth rendered him immortal, to die no more. And this was a birth of the spirit, and the only spirit birth of which we have any record. He is declared to be the first born from the dead; therefore there were no births from the dead before that.

No person was ever yet born of man, neither was there any person ever born of God. Persons have been begotten by men, and also have been begotten again by the will or word of God; but no one was ever born of either. The first birth is of woman, begotten of man, and ushers us into natural life; the second birth is of the spirit, from the dead, being begotten of God through believing in our Lord Jesus Christ, and it will bring us into eternal life, and into the kingdom of God. "For if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead [gave him a birth from the dead] dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also [just as he raised up Christ] quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Now as this Spirit's operation in bringing up Christ from the dead was a birth for him, and his second birth; so also it will be a birth for the church. It will be a birth of the spirit, consequently a spirit birth.

O brethren, let us retain the good, incorruptible seed, that we may be born again, and see the kingdom of God.

GENERATION AND REGENERATION.

G. W. STETSON.

THE EXAMPLE AND PATTERN.

In all things pertaining to life and godliness Christ is our example and the pattern. Nowhere does he set before us more than two births. Like the covenants, they are the old, and the new. Like his own comings, they are the first and the second,—the first in the flesh, to be a sin-bearer; the second in the Spirit, to be for salvation; and both personal and in person. First the flesh man, born of flesh, born of Mary; and Mary was flesh, and not spirit. But then, he was not generated by flesh, but by the Holy Spirit, and in death quickened by the Spirit, and then born of the Spirit from the dead. Thus we see that our Savior was the subject and illustration of the new, second, Spirit's birth;—was himself "born again," and yet not converted; proving that our birth is not at our conversion, and that our conversion is not the new birth. But the process for and by which we attain to a birth of the Spirit is analogous to that by which our living Head attained it.

1. We are regenerated by the word of truth,—the incorruptible seed (Jas. 1: 18; 1 Pet. 1: 23)—anagegennemenoi. The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John 6: 63. "He that receiveth seed into good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it, which also beareth fruit." Matt. 13: 23.

This first step, state, or condition, in the process of reproduction by ultimate spiritual birth is commonly denominated conviction for sin by the Word, and leads to repentance not to be repented of;—leads us to turn unto God; to return to the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls (lives). It is said to be of and in the heart, because "out of the heart are the issues of life" (Prov. 4: 23), and is the beginning of a new life,—the Christ, the divine, the spiritual life in us, or, to speak more definitely, it is the implantation of the incorruptible seed in us, in order to the development of the immortal life by and for us.

2. We are quickened by the renewing of the Holy Spirit. Eph. 2: 1; Titus 3: 5-7. This is commonly called conversion, and is now very generally supposed to be the new birth; but as yet there has been only a work,—and a mighty and wonderful work it is, too,—wrought on, in, and for us, by grace, all looking still ahead, "in hope," to an ultimate promised consummation, the attainment of sonship by an entire change of us when the sons of God will be manifested—brought forth—born of the Spirit—immortal, incorruptible, and imperishable. Then the believer will have what he has not now got—an inalienable possession of eternal life in fact; but now this life is in the Son (1 John 5: 11, 12); not in us, except in so far as we by faith have Christ, the hope of glory dwelling in us by the Holy Spirit imparted to us (Rom. 8: 15), as a pledge of our final attainment to sonship. Hence he is termed in this new relation to us the new, the inner, the hidden, the incorruptible man; and he is renewed in us day by day, by giving us "day by day our (super-substantial) daily bread," that true "manna," "of which if a man eat he shall live forever." But as Israel's children gathered manna daily, and ate daily, so must we day by day continue gathering and eating, in order to a daily renewal of the Christ life in us.

But not thus will it be with the sons of God born of the Spirit; for "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory," as "the many brethren," among whom he was the first born, when God by his Spirit "brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus."

It was this renewal of title to life (forfeited by sin), through "the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit," that enabled Paul to say, "I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God." By the law he was counted as dead, because of sin; but in Christ he was reckoned as having life, because of righteousness (Gal. 2: 16-21); and that not his own, but "the righteousness which is of God by faith." Phil. 3: 8, 9. He consequently stood in a new and different relation (position) to God from that in which he was placed under the law. There he was under condemnation,—condemned to die; now he was justified,—legally acquitted,—not by works that he had done, but by God's grace, through the washing and renewing. Tit. 3: 5, 7. Therefore, being in Christ, under grace, and no longer under the law, he was "a new creature" (margin, "a new creation"). "Old things"—those under the law—"are passed away [Heb. 8: 13]; behold, all things are become new." "For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature"—(a new creation). Gal. 6: 15. "For we are his workmanship [God's], created in Christ Jesus unto good works." Eph. 2: 10. "Against such there is no law" (Gal. 5: 23); "for Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. 10: 4.

Some make "the washing of regeneration" water baptism; but surely it is more than that, for Paul, in 1 Cor. 6: 11, says—"Ye are washed, ye are sanctified,"—"washed" in the name of the Lord Jesus, and "sanctified" by the Spirit of our God. "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 7. "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood." Rev. 1: 5. So it would seem that the washing is a work preparatory to regeneration—to renewal; for God will not place his pure mind, his Holy Spirit in an impure, unwashed vessel. "Therefore, ... let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." 2 Cor. 7: 1.

ALL MINE AND ALL THINE.

S. P. FRENCH.

We will suppose a family—father, mother, brothers and sisters. James, the oldest brother, for his many amiable and noble qualities, is the favorite of the home circle. They all claim him as their own. Annie says, James is my brother—my own brother. Mary says—James is my brother, all mine. So he is, just as much as though he had no other sister in the world. William says—James is my brother, and Charles claims that James is his brother. The mother says, James is my son,—all my own; and the father feels that he is his son; and they are all right.

Just so with Christ—the christians elder brother. He is all mine, just as much as though there were no other claimant in all the universe; and all thine, wholly thine. O blessed child of God! And Christ is God's,—his own Son. Then you are united with God in the possession of the dear, the mighty Savior. My brother, my sister, do you realize what a divine, glorious, living link unites you with God the Father? Can it ever be broken? No, the link will never break; if there is any break it must be in you. He is the channel through which life comes from God to you. "I am the vine, ye are the branches." "My Father is the husbandman." The Vine was of God's planting, and the root takes hold of Deity. The sap comes from the great eternal Fountain of all good, and from that Fountain it flows through the Vine to you. O blessed connection! Surely the branches ought to thrive and bear fruit to the glory of God. Weary, thirsty, and heavy laden, you may be travelling a dusty, tiresome road. You come to a spring of pure cold water gushing from the hillside. You cast down your burden and drink. How sweet and refreshing! From whence came that reviving draught? Away back in the hill is a reservoir of pure water; and through a channel a little rivulet finds its way to the surface to bless the weary traveler.

God is the great reservoir of grace, mercy, happiness and peace. Christ is the spring where we may throw down our burdens of sin, of care and heartache, and drink the water of salvation. He not only brings supplies from God to us, but he presents our supplications to the Father, endorsed by his own intercession in our behalf, and the Father, well pleased to bless those who have an interest in his Son, sends back, by that living way, sweet messages of peace—rich tokens of love, grace, and strength, to enable us to travel on to that better land—that glorious inheritance to which we have become joint heirs with the elder brother. Thank God for the divine connection. "Ask and receive that your joy may be full."

CHRIST'S EPISTLES.

As our Lord left no monument of himself in brass or marble, so he left no letters written by his own hand. He did not write his mind on tables of stone, or on sheets of parchment. Even Rome, with all her rage for relics, does not pretend to show a specimen of his hand writing. Yet he has not left himself without a witness. He has left letters behind him which truly reveal his mind: "Ye are epistles of Christ." Disciples, when he desires to let the world know what he is, he points to you. Nay, more and further, when he would have the Father to behold his glory, he refers him to the saved: "Father, I am glorified in them." It is not only that the world, in point of fact, judges of Christianity by what they see in christians, but they have authority so to do. The Lord himself consented that they should read him there.

So Jesus sends a letter to the world—sends many letters—sends a letter to every city, and every street, and every house. A merchant who is a disciple of Christ, goes to India or China. He sells manufactured goods; he buys silks and tea. But all the time he is a letter, a living epistle, sent by Christ to the heathen. A boy becomes an apprentice in a warehouse or factory; but before he was bound to a master on earth, he has been redeemed by a Master in heaven. He is now, therefore, a letter from the Lord to all his shopmates. In his truth, and love, and gentleness, and fairness, and generosity they should learn the mind of Christ. I confess that this thought is fitted to make us afraid How shall we fulfill such a function? The solution is, it is the Lord's own method. He has chosen earthen vessels in order that the glory may be to God.—Selected.

JOHN 6: 63.

J. FOSTER.

"The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life."

It seems when Jesus uttered these words that he would instantly banish the thought from every hearer and reader of his Word that human beings possess immortality. Dear ones, longing to see Jesus in his everlasting kingdom, cleave to God; he only hath immortality. O how ardently we do desire to see Jesus, and be made like him, and dwell forever with him on the earth made new by him. Parent Divine, hasten the time when the bride of the Lamb shall begin the song of the redeemed that shall have no end. You who are out of Christ, haste unto him, that you may be among his songsters. Amen.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—Matt. 16: 3.

We have now passed briefly over the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew to the twenty-ninth verse, which introduces the special signs to be witnessed in the last generation before the coming of Christ. We have noticed the "great tribulation" during the supremacy of the Papal power at Rome, and shown that its terrible persecuting work closed up near the end of the last century. In connection with that Jesus says: "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."

It should be remembered that the disciples asked the Savior the following question: "What shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?" Matt. 24: 3. We have been briefly noticing what the Savior said to the disciples in response, and passed over a long chain of events, including the supremacy of the Papal power at Rome, during the dark ages, when millions of saints were slaughtered, causing the "great tribulation," to which he refers, and are now beyond its horrors, where the dominion of the "little horn" is taken away. We have reached a period in this world's history, when, if ever, we should expect the signs that were to precede the coming of our Savior. According to his teaching, in answer to the question of the disciples, before his return, the sun must "be darkened," and also the moon, and the stars must fall. We fully believe the Savior refers to the literal heavenly bodies. When he came the first time one star went and stood over where the young child lay, as a guide to the wise men from the East, who were seeking the infant Savior in his humble resting place, but as forerunners of his second coming in great glory, the sun, moon, and stars were to be employed as heralds of the approaching, sublime event.

We come now to the fulfillment of this prophecy, which we believe began to be accomplished in A. D. 1780. At this time the Papal persecution, that had been continued for many centuries against "the saints of the Most High," had ceased. The Savior said: "immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened." The following historic accounts give, as we believe, the fulfillment of this prophecy:

"The 19th of May, 1780, was a remarkable dark day. Candles were lighted in many houses. The birds were silent and disappeared. The fowls retired to rest. It was the general opinion that the day of judgment was near at hand. The Legislature of Connecticut was in session at Hartford, but being unable to transact business, adjourned."—Pres. Dwight of Conn. Historical Collections.

"In the month of May, 1780, there was a terrific dark day in New England, when all faces seemed to gather blackness, and the people were filled with fear."—Tract No. 379 of Amer. Tract Society.—Life of Edward Lee, of Mass.

"Dark day of May 19th, 1780. The sun rose clear, and shone for several hours; at length the sky became overcast with clouds, and by ten o'clock A. M., the darkness was such as to occasion the farmers to leave their work in the field, and retire to their dwellings; fowls went to their roosts, and before noon, lights became necessary to the transaction of business within doors. The darkness continued through the day, and the night, till near morning was as unusually dark as the day."—Gage's History of Rowley, Mass.

It has sometimes been intimated that this great darkness might have been caused by fires in the forests. "I think no fire in our forests could have been sufficient to spread a dense cloud over the whole of New England, and even some parts of the middle States."

Five years after the event, D. Tenny remarked: "No satisfactory solution has yet appeared." About a week after the dark day, Elam Potter preached from Matt. 24: 29–30, and said: "Then, as in our text, the sun was darkened. Such a darkness as was probably never known since the crucifixion of our Lord. People left their work in the field, and in the house. Travelers stopped. Schools broke up at 11 o'clock. People lit up candles at noon day, and the fire shone as in the night. . . . For my part, I really consider the darkness as one of those prodigies foretold in the text, designed for our admonition and warning."

This dark day was not caused by an eclipse of the sun, because the moon was then at the full, and an eclipse of the sun can happen only at new moon.

History says the darkness at noon, on that remarkable day, was as great as it is an hour after sunset in a cloudy day. We find no record of any other dark day like this the Christian dispensation, but if there had been many during the progress of the "great tribulation" under the Papacy, none of them would have fulfilled the prophecy of the Savior; for that states that the darkening of the sun must be after the tribulation, not before, nor while it is being continued. The dark day came at the right time to meet the prophecy, and at the time was believed to be a fulfillment of that Scripture.

Soon after the dark day, a poetical description was published, entitled:

"A Warning Piece."

"A practical thought, or paraphrase, occasioned by that stupendous and unnatural darkness, or interposing cloud, which obscured the light of the sun on the 19th day of May, in the present year, 1780, which happened about the same time of the year, and on the self-same day of the week, as did the supernatural eclipse of the sun at the crucifixion of the Messiah."

This poetical account of the dark day was surrounded by a heavy black border, a quarter of an inch wide, indicating that an alarming event had happened. We will give a few of the thirty stanzas:

"Ye sons of light, who saw the night
Triumphing at high noon,
The nineteenth day of the month of May,
Mark well the dismal gloom.

No orb above in course could move
Thus to eclipse the sun;
Then understand, it was the hand
Of the Eternal One

Who drew the pale and sable veil,
Which interposed the light,
And overhead a curtain spread,
Converting day to night;

For every town all burning down,
And forest in our land,
Would not create a gloom so great—
'Twas God's immediate hand.

* * * * * * * *

Doubtless this sign bespeaks the time
When Jesus is at hand,
Who from his cloud will sound aloud
The fourth trump through our land."

It may be inquired if the darkness extended over the whole earth? We have no evidence that it did. Had it been darkened in Asia, Africa, and the islands of the sea, it would have been of no avail, because they were in heathenish darkness, with no Bibles, worshiping idols; hence it would be no sign to them that Christ was soon coming. It is reasonable to believe the signs of his return would occur where his church was most devoted, and loved him best, which at that time was most certainly in New England, just where the first signs did appear. The fact that the wonderful darkness was confined to a given locality, where the purest church was found, is only additional evidence that the darkness was supernatural, and given as the sign in the sun to be seen first in the series of signs that should precede the coming of Christ. When the children of Israel were in Egypt, there were three remarkably dark days where the Egyptians dwelt; while at the same time it was light as usual in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were living; thus showing the special interposition of the power of the Lord to produce the strange result. So at the time of the dark day in 1780. We can see no other way to account for its appearance. It came at the right time, in the right place; was received as a sign of Christ's coming, and was followed, as we shall yet see, by the other signs in their proper order. The Savior did certainly give this as the first noted sign to be witnessed in the series to be seen a little while before his return to this earth. The prophetic Scriptures of Daniel and John most clearly indicate that we have arrived at the period in the history of the world, when the signs of Jesus' coming should be witnessed. All seems harmonious with the position that we are near the glorious event.

A PURE HEART.

The word heart, in the Scriptures, does not usually represent the physical organ called by that name, but is applied in the moral or religious department. It is the "spring of all our actions and purposes; the seat of moral life and character; the moral affections and character itself." Webster. It is the moral element or nature with which man is endowed; in other words it is a constituent element of manhood. No being can be made amenable to or the subject of a law which does not recognize and is adapted to an element of that being's nature. If the law recognizes intelligence, it can apply only to beings of intelligence. If it is a law of liberty, it can can only apply to those in possession of liberty. An angelic code can only apply to angels, and a human code is only applicable to men; for it expresses their nature, being designed to govern it. No law produces nature or principles; it is designed to govern them. The law of a kingdom does not produce the subjects of the kingdom, but only their political status. So it is with moral law. It applies only to beings having a moral nature, and establishes a certain spiritual condition of that nature. A moral law cannot apply to beasts, for they have no moral nature, the action of which can be governed by law, so that it can be justified or condemned by its decisions. A law of intelligence can only apply to a class of beings having the degree of intelligence that code expresses. A child is not as amenable to law as a man of higher intelligence. Moral accountability commences with a certain degree of knowledge, and increases with the increase of understanding.

We understand the heart to be the combination of moral forces, producing love, adoration, joy, peace, gentleness, meekness, kindness, sympathy, &c.; but the opposite of these when in a different condition.

To be pure, is to be separate from all foreign matter or elements; to be unalloyed with any thing not permitted,—not authorized by rule or law; free from that which contaminates or is injurious. A compound article is called pure when its ingredients are in kind, quality and quantity, exactly according to rule or law. When God created man, he endowed him with certain moral principles or forces, which were designed to produce in him certain emotions, aspirations and acts, as an intelligent, social being. Therefore, every act of man in his manhood springs from and is characterized by those moral forces, or the heart, so that every act takes on a moral character exactly corresponding with the heart producing it.

All human acts, for which we are accountable, run through the heart, where they take on their moral shade of character—right or wrong, just as a web of cloth runs through a printing machine and takes on the color of the dye in the machine. If the dye is red, the cloth is colored red; if it is blue, it is colored blue. So it is with the heart; if it is pure, it produces acts morally pure; if defiled, it produces impure or sinful acts. Jesus expressed it thus,—"A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things." Matt. 12: 35. He made it still more plain that a corrupt heart could not produce a Scripturally good act, in his declaration to the wicked Jews,—"O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." They could not speak a good thing, for their words and acts were all purposed and designed in a defiled heart, which of necessity defiled the spiritual character of the act.

Our works may externally appear to be Scripturally right, conforming to the letter of God's Word, but their real character is not in the act itself, but in the motive or purpose which caused it to be done. A man may deliberately purpose to murder his neighbor, but fail to do it, because he has no opportunity. By the moral law he is just as guilty of murder as if the purpose had been executed; for the crime of an act is committed in the heart. If a man should purpose to kindly help his neighbor out of difficulty, and the act should kill him, he would be innocent of guilt; for there was no crime in the motive which was formed in the heart.

The heart is Scripturally pure when it is made up of just such elements, producing just such forces, which result in such emotions and works as the law of God requires. The elements of a pure heart originate in God and must be received from him. They consist in perfect love, divine adoration, heavenly joy and peace, Christ-like gentleness and meekness, with gospel kindness, and all the elements of the divine nature. Sin defiles the heart, introducing a carnal satanic nature, in which hatred takes the place of love, war that of peace, pride and arrogance that of meekness, and sedition and envy that of kindness. It so changes it that the God-given principles are suppressed, their forces and action destroyed—killed—reckoned dead—a moral death—dead in trespasses and sin. In that state, God cannot be loved or adored, his commandments cannot be kept, for love, divine love, is the fulfilling of the law. Every act proceeding from such a heart, takes on a moral defilement, and cannot be reckoned as obedience to God, because the divine law is a standard of human works, judging them right or wrong according to their moral character.

Two men may do the same thing externally, while God's law would condemn one, and justify the other. They could each give to a poor family five dollars. A gave the five dollars because he understood that God had given him his wealth, and made him a steward to use it as he directed. He knew that he had instructed him to use those treasures in feeding the hungry, and clothing the naked, and he found in his heart an earnest desire, a force of will to do his duty in that matter, which made it a pleasure—a sweet gratification to give the alms. B wished to ingratiate himself into public favor, and he gave the money, thinking that he, by that act, might obtain the applause of men, or more of their patronage, which would more than repay him for the outlay. A gave because his heart loved God, and reverenced his Word, while B gave because his heart was supremely selfish. He did it to gratify a carnal, unsanctified nature. The moral character of the act of one was pure and holy, while the other was defiled and sinful. God designed that man should serve him in all his acts; that is, man's works are accepted of God when they are designed as acts of obedience to him. A man may have a natural inclination to do that which in itself is right, but if he does it from that natural propensity, without any purpose or design to obey and glorify God, it will not be acceptable to him. A man may by nature be benevolent, and give all his goods to feed the poor, yet if he does not see God in this, and the act is not designed by the love of God in his heart, it will not be approved as an act of obedience to the divine law. It was prompted by a good quality of human nature, but the divine was lacking.

O, that all might see that fallen man, without Christ, cannot keep the divine law; for it requires a purer and more holy motive than humanity, unassisted, can produce. Christ alone, as man, has succeeded in keeping heaven's law enacted for our race, which was designed to produce a certain spiritual quality in our obedience. When he takes possession of our hearts, filling them with the principles and power of his heavenly nature, we feel the same promptings of love and obedience to God, which made it his meat to do the will of his Father in heaven. Then we feel the power of an endless life communicated through the Holy Spirit, which moulds our purposes and aspirations in harmony with the divine will, and establishes in the heart a fixed design to please God in all that we do.

Our works in this state, intellectually, will be imperfect, for we are liable to errors of judgment, but morally they must be pure. Paul says, "To the pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure." He evidently referred to the two classes having pure and defiled hearts. We therefore conclude that a pure heart cannot produce a morally impure act, neither can a defiled heart produce a morally pure act. A change of heart from impure to pure is only attainable in this state of our existence; none can be experienced at or after Christ's coming; and as a pure heart alone can obey God, and as none can enter the kingdom of God only the faithful and obedient, it is of infinite importance to us that we secure that purity of heart which Christ will produce in us if we submit it entirely to him.

God invites sinners to give their hearts to him, and he has promised to take away the stony, unimpressive, obdurate heart, and give one of flesh,—a yielding, impressive, controllable heart, which can be stamped with the divine image, and will readily yield to the demands of a holy law. The work of purifying the heart is of God by Christ, through his Word and Spirit, and is, therefore, never superficially, imperfectly done; but, like all God's work, is perfect. If we depend upon human efforts to accomplish this wonderful work of spiritual purification, it will prove fatal, for it is superhuman,—divine,—a grand miracle. It will require the same infinite skill and power that it does to raise the dead to immortality. The experience of the first is a pledge of the last. It is the link connecting divinity with humanity. It is the first ascension from the fall. The adoption into the family of God. It is rising to harmony with God, union with Christ, and fellowship with his people. It is a glorious work—a sublime experience.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The church in San Francisco is doing finely. The Spirit of the Lord is present specially in these meetings. Bro. D., one of the deacons, writes under date of April 15th:—

"We have never had so good prayer-meetings during the history of the church as now, allowing me to be judge; and all of the members that I have talked with about it say so too. The Lord seems to own us as his children, and bless us. Praise his name for his goodness and mercy to us."

This church has had many severe attacks from the enemy, and is in a city where wickedness abounds, and formalism is supported by popular professors and ministers; but amidst all the mighty conflicts through which she has passed, by faith she is affectionately leaning upon the arm of her dear Savior, longingly waiting for the hour to arrive when her faith will be changed to sight at his glorious appearing. We have great reason to praise the Lord for what he has done in San Francisco, in raising up a church to welcome his return. A harmonious spirit prevails, and brotherly love abounds. We have much occasion for thanksgiving to the blessed Savior for directing our steps to this coast the fourth time. We have felt conscious of his guiding hand continually since we arrived in the "summer land."

SABBATH DISCUSSION.

From a careful examination, it appears that the seventh-day Sabbath was enjoined only upon the Jews; and that they were required to keep it to commemorate their deliverance from Egyptian bondage. This was one means by which they were kept a separate people from all other nations. The Lord said they should "not be reckoned among the nations." Num. 23: 9. The ancient Persians, where the patriarchs lived, keep Sunday. They have not lost the original day, but have changed their worship from God to the Sun. Tertullian says: "If we spend Sunday joyfully, as well as they, it is for a very different reason from the worship of the sun." Apol. 5. Gent. 17. It seems fitting that the second Adam—Christ—should rest the same day of the week as the first Adam; that is, the first day of his existence in his new life. It is also specially proper to honor above all others the day that represents the new creation unto eternal life through a risen Savior. As says Ignatius: "Let every one that loves Christ, keep holy the Lord's day, the queen of days, the resurrection day, the highest of days." We cannot find the least intimation in all the teachings of Christ and the apostles that christians should keep the seventh-day Sabbath. Why are they all silent, if its keeping is so necessary for salvation as claimed by some?

We give below some historic evidence, relating to the observance of the Lord's day.

In A. D. 101, Ignatius, bishop of Antioch, who died only about half a dozen years after the death of the apostle John, speaks of the Lord's day familiarly and without explantion, as if everybody understood it. And he gives this title to the first day of the week exactly after the manner of the apostle himself." "Let us [christians] no more Sabbatize," he says (that is keep the seventh day, as the Jews did), "but let us keep the Lord's day."

He further says: "If we still continue to live according to the Jewish law, we do not confess ourselves not to have received grace. . . . Wherefore, if they who were brought up in these ancient laws come nevertheless to the newness of hope, no longer observing Sabbath, but keeping the Lord's day, in which also our life is sprung up by him, and through his death."—Magnesians. 3: 1–3.

Irenæus Bishop of Lyons (A. D. 167), a disciple of Polycarp, who had been the companion of the apostles, says: "On the Lord's day every one of us christians keep the Sabbath, meditating on the law, and rejoicing in the works of God."

Tertullian, who died A. D. 245, says: "The Lord's day is the holy day of the Christian church. We have nothing to do with the Sabbath (that is the Jewish seventh day Sabbath.) The Lord's day is the Christian's solemnity."

Barnabas, who, if not a companion of the apostles, lived in the apostolic age, says: "We [Christians,] keep the eighth day [that is the first day of the week] as a joyful holy day, on which day also Jesus rose from the dead."

Ambrose, bishop of Milan, who died A. D. 397, says: "The Lord's day is sacred, or consecrated, by the resurrection of Christ."

Augustine, who died A. D. 430, says: "The Lord's day was by the resurrection declared to Christians, and from that very time it began to be celebrated as the christian festival."

The persecutors of these christians were accustomed to put to them this question: "Dominicum Servasti!"—Hast thou kept the Lord's day? If they had, they were marked as christians. This was the badge of their christianity. And if they said they had, and would not recant, they were put to death.

Eusebius, said to be "one of the most learned and eloquent men of the Christian church," called the "Father of Ecclesiastical History," who died A. D. 339, in his commentary on the Psalms, says of Ps. 92:

"The Word [Christ] by the new covenant, translated and transferred the feast of the Sabbath to the morning light, and gave us the true rest, viz., the saving Lord's day; the first [day] of the light, in which the Savior of the world, after all his labors among men, obtained the victory over death. . . . On this day, which is the first day of light, and of the true sun, we assemble after an interval of six days, and celebrate holy and scriptural Sabbaths—even all nations redeemed by him throughout the world—and do those things, according to the scriptural law, which were decreed for the priests to do on the Sabbath; for we make spiritual offerings and sacrifices, which are called sacrifices of praise and rejoicing."

Theodoret, another ecclesiastical historian, who died about A. D. 460, speaking of the Ebionites, a party of Judaizing Christians, says: "They keep the Sabbath according to the Jewish law, and sanctify the Lord's day in like manner as we do.—Hæret Fab. 2. S. 1.

"This," says Prof. Stewart, "gives a good historical view of the state of things in the church. The zealots for the law wished the Jewish Sabbath to be observed, as well as the Lord's day; for about the latter there appears never to have been any question among any class of christians, so far as I have been able to discover. The early christians, one and all of them, held the first day of the week to be sacred."—Sabbath Manuel No. 2, pp. 111, 126.

It appears certain that "the eighth day," "the day of the sun," "the first day of the week," and "the Lord's day," are one and the same day; the one observed by the primitive christians.

Justin Martyr says the christians of the second century met on "the day of the sun," and did so "because on this first day God made the world, and Jesus Christ our Savior rose from the dead."—Dialogue with Trypho, c. 41.

He also says: "Christ rose from the dead on the eighth day," which he says, "may be called the eighth, and remain the first."—Apol. 1, ad finem.

In the third century, Cyprian represents the eighth day as both "the first after the Sabbath, and the Lord's day."—Epist. 64. Thus Barnabas, Justin Martyr, and Cyprian testify that these days are one.

Justin Martyr further says: "On the day called Sunday, there is a meeting in one place of all who reside whether in the towns or in the country, and the memoirs of the apostles are read. . . . The more affluent contribute of their substance as each are inclined. . . . We also assemble in common on Sunday, because . . . on the same day Jesus Christ our Savior rose from the dead."—Apol. 1, ad finem.

"And on the day after that of Saturn [Saturday], which is the day of the sun, having appeared to his apostles and disciples, he taught them these things, which we have submitted to you also for your consideration."—Apostolical Fathers, v. 1, p. 56.

Tertullian says the Christians solemnized the day of the sun, "the day after Saturday, in distinction from those who call this day their Sabbath." "We have nothing to do with the Sabbaths, new moons, and feasts in which God at one time took pleasure."—De Idolatria, c. 14. He says the seventh day was "a temporary Sabbath." Adv. Jud. lib. 4.

"The apostles introduced nothing at their own discretion, but faithfully assigned to the people the discipline which they had received from Christ." De Præscrpt. adv. Hæret. C. C.

Epiphanius, when contending against the Ebionites, who kept both days, says: "The disciples of Christ knew very well from his conversation with them, and from his doctrine before his passion, that the Sabbath was discharged." Contr. Ebion. Hær., 30, c. 32.

Augustine declares that "the Lord's day was established by Christ"; that "there is one Lord of the Sabbath and of the Lord's day"; that it is "called the Lord's day because the Lord made it," and that it "seems properly to belong to the Lord." Epist. 86. Young's Dies Domin., p. 71.

Mosheim, the celebrated church historian, when speaking of the first century, says: "All christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week, on which the triumphant Savior arose from the dead, for the solemn celebration of public worship. This pious custom, which was derived from the example of the church of Jerusalem, was founded upon the express appointment of the apostles, who consecrated that day to the same sacred purpose, and was observed universally throughout all the christian churches, as appears from the united testimony of the most credible writers." Maclaine's Mosheim, Cant. 1, part 2, c. 4, s. 4.

History seems to settle the point beyond all controversy that the primitive christians, in the first and second centuries, observed the first day, the Lord's day, as their rest day, instead of the seventh day.

MASSACHUSETTS CONFERENCE.

At our annual meeting at Worcester, the subject of tent meetings the coming season was fully discussed, and all felt that more must be done in this State to spread the message of Christ's speedy coming in those places where the way is not otherwise open for the preaching of this dispensational truth. There was quite a missionary spirit aroused, which we hope will increase mightily in carrying the same into effect.

Our old tent being worn out in the service, the Conference pledged and paid us $348 for a new tent, which we design to have in the field as soon as the weather will permit. We mean to have it ready for the grove meeting to be held in Belchertown, Mass., early in June, which will be our first quarterly session. As other matters came in and excluded our efforts in raising funds to carry on this enterprise, we are obliged to appeal to the brethren interested in the work of missions in this State. Will you give us your influence, prayers, and money, to assist in carrying forward this all-important work?

Dearly beloved, this will be a special season to reach the people; they must hear the last call, or we shall be in fault, and shall not have boldness at Christ's coming. Remember the cause is earnest, and not expect us to make brick without straw. There must be a strong effort made to save the perishing by converting them to the love of Christ's coming. There must be self-denial inwrought by the Holy Spirit, that means more than words. Then, dear brethren, send us the means so that when commenced there shall be no obstructions to responding to the calls of mercy. You will see that only one dollar and thirty cents are in the treasury. Pledges and money for carrying forward this work, also pledges and money for the tent may be sent directly to our Treasurer, C. Goodrich, Boston, 161 Hanover Street. He will credit the same. Come, brethren, give us a hearty response.

P. S.—The subscriptions for the tent we want paid by the first of June, as that is the time the new tent is to be done.

FIRST BORN NOT CHIEF BORN.

H. F. CARPENTER.

In an article written for the Crisis some time ago, entitled "Not a birth," I endeavored to show that a resurrection to mortal life was never in the Scriptures allowed to be a "birth," and that consequently no one need to be "begotten again" in order to have a resurrection to a mortal life. I reasoned that since Christ was the "first born from the dead," none were born from the dead before his resurrection. Only those, therefore, who experience the change which Christ experienced at his resurrection,—a change from mortality to immortality,—are said to be "born from the dead." To enjoy such a change, we must be begotten again. None of those resurrected to mortal life, previous to Christ's resurrection, were born, for he was the "first born."

In reasoning thus, I used the term "first born" in its numerical sense. Some think that the term "first born" should be used in the sense of chief born, and not in a numerical sense as I have used it. I give it the numerical sense, (1) Because this is the primary and ordinary sense of the Greek term here rendered "first." This term occurs in the New Testament, as an adjective, ninety-five times; and eighty-four times means "first," not chief. It is used sixty-one times adverbially, and sixty times at least means "first," not "chief"! Thus it appears that while it may mean "chief," its primary and ordinary sense is "first." (2) Because this term, when it is joined to and qualifies a verb, invariably means "first," not "chief." In the case before us it is thus used, and therefore means "first," as I have used it. (3) Because the Greek term, rendered "first born," means literally "first born" in a numerical sense in every instance where not applied to Christ. Why make an exception in his case? These facts confirm us in the correctness of our exposition previously given; that, while all them that are in the graves shall come forth, only those who, like Christ, are raised to die no more, are truly "born from the dead." To know such a birth, we "must be begotten again."

Corrections.—In article "Puzzled—Bewildered," published April 22nd, in the first paragraph, seventeenth line, for "quality" read duality; and second line of second paragraph, for "experiences," read expediences; and third paragraph, for "inentirety" read in entirety.

Bro. Sweet and Oagley's pamphlets will retail for twenty cents, instead of two cents, as advertised.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TO THE A. A. MISSION BOARD.

Dear Brethren:—I have not reported to you for some time, for the reason that I have not done much preaching during the extremely wet season. There has been so much mud and water that I have found it difficult to meet my appointments sometimes within ten miles of home. I have labored in mission work only about one fourth of my time since the first of December. I am now arranging a long series of appointments in remote points, from which I have the most urgent appeals to preach the truths in person that I have preached by tracts I have distributed by mail. I will note some instances. One old Baptist brother, to whom I sent your publications five years ago in Georgia, now turns up in Alabama. I learned that he was preaching on the coming of the Lord. I wrote him in February and sent him more tracts. He replies in a most kind spirit, inviting me to visit that section, seventy-five miles south by rail. He says he wants to hear me tell of the "good time coming." He believes we are living in an eventful age, that we are nearing the closing up of the gospel dispensation. "I preach that Jesus will come again just as he ascended; that he will descend with the same body, personal and not spiritual."

Another brother, whom I mentioned last summer as writing me for more tracts, has come out thus far in our views, as he writes me,—"I am resolved to follow the teachings of God's Word, regardless of the traditions of men. "I want more of your tracts." He insists that many want me to revisit them. I expect, the Lord willing, to visit them soon. At another place I visited last fall, they press me to come again. A preacher of the Christian Church, known as Campbellites, has fully come into our views, with several others who want me to organize them into a church. I hope to visit them soon and preach a series of six or eight discourses, and set them in order, if they seem right. I want several copies of Church Covenant and Constitution. Will you send them to me by mail; also a supply of tracts, by the 15th of May?

A Baptist minister in Arkansas writes me—"I do not intend to preach any more in that denomination (Baptist). I am an Adventist, and if I preach any more it will be as an Adventist. The Baptists have not excluded him for heresy, but have cried him down as such. In another letter, he wishes to know how he, standing alone, and unknown to us, can get into fellowship and connection with us as a member and minister of any of our churches. In another letter he says, "I do not preach—I can't, unless I am recognized by the Advent brethren; and there is no Advent minister nearer in all these parts than North Arkansas. I do not know what to do; but on every opportunity announce my opinion and belief on all the points of Scripture touching our Advent faith." Again he writes: "I long to preach the gospel under my proclivities to Adventism; for I verily believe the Lord is not far off; that he is near, even at the door." In a letter a few days ago he says: "I take great comfort in reading and studying the tracts you sent me; and I have never enjoyed the communion of the Spirit so rapturously as I have in the last few weeks. I have no use for the world or its allurements." Thus he seems to be absorbed in the love of the truth. He further proposes to furnish me with ample testimonials as to his christian character and former standing as a minister in the Baptist denomination.

I need your counsel in this case. If he presents satisfactory testimonials of christian character and standing as a minister, will it be proper in our little church to recognize him as a member with us, upon his signing the Church Covenant? or should I turn his testimonials over to your body? Please to advise me soon. I should have stated that he is seventy years old, infirm, and in moderate circumstances, but wants to do all he can, by tract distribution or other means. If you wish to send him the World's Crisis, or tracts for distribution, address Eld. George M. Prime, El Dorado, Union Co., Ark. I have also some very interesting letters from some of the scattered flock in Northern Ark. I hope, if the Lord spares us to labor another year, he may enable me to visit some of those dear ones that want to hear the truth from the lips of the living ministry.

In another direction, I am informed that tracts I distributed nearly two years ago, a hundred miles from here, afforded food for a pulpit warfare on us up to the present. Wish I could preach Jesus to that people in the true spirit of the gospel.

I will close this report hoping and praying the Lord's blessing on your labors, and that of all the missionaries under your supervision. Pray for your unworthy brother and fellow laborer in the gospel,

J. J. Smith.

Tell me what are the prevailing sentiments that occupy the minds of your young men, and I will tell you what is to be the character of the next generation.

QUARTERLY CONF. REPORT.

The first Quarterly Conference of the Advent Christian Church of Wellington Township, Kansas, convened March 27th, according to appointment, at Slate Valley schoolhouse. Bro. Virgil Hunt was appointed chairman.

The following resolutions were offered and adopted: 1st. This Conference shall be known as the First Advent Christian Conference of Sumner Co., Kansas. 2nd. Its officers shall consist of a President, Vice President, Treasurer, and Secretary. The officers to be elected annually. 3d. The President shall preside over all the sessions of the Conference, and shall have the power to call the Quarterly Conferences at the proper time, or at any time he may deem it necessary. A Terrible Boiler Explosion in Scotland.—The Liverpool Mercury gives the particulars of a boiler explosion which occurred on the evening of the 9th inst. at one of the pits belonging to the Hamilton Coal Company of Scotland. We condense the following particulars:

Within about twenty yards of some large boilers used for driving necessary machinery, stands a neat row of miners' dwellings, and a little further off a school-room. In the school-room at the the time of the explosion a prayer meeting was in progress, a number of persons being present. A hymn had just been sung, and the Bible was being read, when the crash of the explosion was heard, and ere any one could move, one-half of one of the boilers came crashing through the roof. On its way it was subsequently found it had unroofed four or five of the houses while the other half, driven in the opposite direction, caused serious damage to the railroad. In the school-house the greatest consternation prevailed. Three children were killed outright, and a number of persons, including the missionary, were injured more or less. The heat of the boiler added to the agony of those who were injured, and it was a long time before they could be relieved, as the weight of the boiler upon the debris was immense. A singular circumstance of the accident was that two boys who were playing quite near the boiler at the time, escaped without injury. The boiler appears to have broken fairly in two at the centre.

Pratt—Gilman. In Effingham, N. H., April 12th, 1874, by Eld E. G. Page, Mr. James E. Pratt, of Parsonsfield, Me., and Miss Hattie Gilman, of Effingham.

Obituaries.

Castle. In Castleton, Vt., April 21st, 1874, Melissa, wife of John Castle, aged twenty-six years.

Just one week after little Gracie's death, her broken-hearted mother fell on sleep. The family, the neighborhood, the church, all mourn. We are afflicted, and yet we are comforted. Her trust in Jesus and his Word was so complete, her testimony so clear, her experience so bright, that hope prevented our sorrowing overmuch. "Yes, all is well!" were her last words; and even while our eyes were brimming with tears, we rejoiced to know that the second coming of Christ, the resurrection, the restitution, reunion of friends, never to part or suffer more in the new earth, would in "a little while" be facts of experience, as on her death-bed they had been to her facts of faith. She desired that the preacher should use Ps. 17: 15 to suggest the discourse at her funeral. There was something inexpressibly touching in the manner and evident feeling with which she made her own the promise of an awakening in her Redeemer's likeness to a state of perfect satisfaction. "I shall be satisfied!" The funeral was largely attended, and deep feeling was expressed; sorrow for death's sad work; sympathy for the bereaved. God hasten the fulfillment of the text. W. L. H.

Mason. In Porter, Me., March 28th, 1874, Sr. Ann, wife of Gideon Mason, aged thirty years.

The subject of this notice neglected to seek the Lord until prostrated upon a sick and dying bed, which she very much regretted, as she had been deeply convicted of her need of Christ in the revival meetings held at the village last winter; but the pride of her heart kept her from yielding to the Lord at that time. A few weeks since she was stricken down with bleeding at the lungs, and for a time she was almost in despair for her soul, thinking her day was past. After a great conflict in her mind she found peace in believing in the Lord, and with confidence could say, "My heavenly home is bright and fair," and even in the dying hour she joined in singing with a strong, clear voice, one of the songs of Zion. Her end was peaceful and happy, and her death precious in the sight of the Lord. She sleeps, but not forever. May God bless the afflicted friends in this hour of their bereavement. C. H. Hurd.

Cook. In Porter, Me., April 12th, 1874, of consumption, Joseph Cook, Jr., aged twenty years.

Joseph was a pleasant young man, and highly esteemed by the whole community as a good minded and industrious citizen, whose departure from us is much regretted. He had endeavored to live a good moral life, but he felt that he needed something more than morality to save him, and during his sickness he sought the Savior and obtained a good hope, which made glad his heart and that of his friends, and sustained and comforted him to the last. May God greatly bless the widowed mother and the brothers in this hour of their deep affliction. C. H. Hurd.

Bean. In Sangerville, Me., March 30th, 1874, Fannie R., wife of the writer, aged twenty years.

Suddenly and unexpectedly my dear companion was taken away. After about sixteen hours of severe suffering she was overcome by the enemy death, and fell asleep in Jesus. Her sad loss we deeply feel, yet rejoice in the thought that she was prepared to go. For several years she has lived a praying life, believing in the soon coming of the Lord to raise the dead, to give immortality and eternal life to all that love his appearing. Therefore with a good hope that she will come forth in the morning of the resurrection to die no more, we lay her in the silent grave.

George W. Bean.

Morine. In Somerville, Mass., April 21st, 1874, Etta A., youngest child of John A. and Helen V. Morine, aged sixteen months.

"Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

T. M. Preble.

Lyman. In Norwich, Vt., March 29th, 1874, of palsy, which was caused by diphtheria, Eugene P. Lyman, aged seven years.

Little Eugene was a lovely boy. In his last hours of suffering he was exceedingly anxious that the family should sing some of the songs of Zion. May this severe stroke of affliction prove a blessing to the weeping ones. May it learn them more than ever to lean hard on Him that is mighty to save.

When shall this war and strife be done?
When shall the hard-fought-fight be won?
When shall the ransomed victors be
Enrobed in immortality?
When shall the bands of death be riven?
When shall the crown of life be given?
When Jesus comes.

Then while as pilgrims here we roam,
We'll cry "Lord Jesus, quickly come,—
Come, end our faith, our hopes and fears,
Our griefs and sorrows, sighs and tears.
Restore the kingdom, wear the crown,
O rend the heavens, appear, come down,
Lord Jesus, come!

A. Damon.

Sanborn. Fell asleep in Biddeford, Me., Feb. 24th, 1874, Bro. Nelson Sanborn, aged twenty-nine years.

Bro. Sanborn leaves a wife and other near friends. He met with a change of heart three years since, and felt that he had a precious Savior to call upon in time of need and suffering. His sickness was long and painful, but no murmur escaped his lips. He expressed deep gratitude to God for giving him such kind friends as he found in the church at Biddeford. His hope was in the resurrection of the just. Words of comfort were spoken from Prov. 14: 32, by the writer. Jer. Hill.

Hills. Fell asleep in Jesus in Melbourne, P. Q., March 30th, 1874, Bro. William Hills, aged seventy-one years.

He was a firm believer in the soon coming of Jesus, the resurrection of the dead, and other kindred doctrines that we as a people love. Bro. Hills leaves a dear companion and several children to mourn his loss. May the Lord sustain and comfort them in their sad affliction. The funeral service was held in the Congregationalist church. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Rev. 21: 4. F. M. Drake.

Shurtleff. In Bridgewater, Vt., March 30th, 1874, of bronchial difficulty, Arthur H. Shurtleff, aged three months.

"He may sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

Funeral attended by the writer. A. Damon.

Ellison. In Landaff, N. H., Jan. 24th, 1874, Minnie A., daughter of Orlando F. and Phebe A. Ellison, aged thirteen months and twenty days.

Funeral service by Eld. N. Wheeler.

Our hearts now are sad, but we will not complain,
For soon we expect to behold her again;
When Jesus appears in the clouds of the sky,
She, raised from the dead, will meet him on high.

Leighton. In Lisbon, N. H., July 9th, 1873, Harriet, wife of Simeon Leighton, aged fifty-five years.

The lady was dead when picked up by the terrified relatives, the head being nearly torn from the body and every limb being broken.

In Brief.

— The condemned murderer, Waltz, brutally murdered his keeper at Catskill, N. Y., by beating his brains out with a bar of iron he had pried up from his cell. It seems as if the depths of human depravity were being sounded, and the virus of the human heart was inundating the world with a flood of wickedness. Our world sadly needs the presence of a mighty Reformer, a Renewer of a degenerated world. J. C.

— Snow fell to the depth of fourteen inches at West Fairlee, Vt., April 26th.

— The English papers are full of accounts of strikes, lock-outs, etc., and grave fears are entertained for the future, especially concerning the iron trade.

The Wayne Co., (N. Y.) Advent Christian Mission Tent.—Lectures on the Prophecies.—We desire, the Lord willing, that the above tent shall be in the Mission field as early in the season as the weather will permit, reasonably, and remain there for a faithful campaign until Jesus comes, or autumn drives us from the work. The former, not the latter, we look for; but we patiently wait coming events. We wish to hear promptly from any and all localities that desire meetings, and will do something in their support; (1) in this country and its vicinity, and (2) from any place in Central or Western New York. Arrangements will then be made as the way opens, and the Lord seems to direct.

As we said in our bills last year, "the object of the meetings is to show that the prophecies are in so perfect a state of fulfillment as to warrant christians the immediate consummation of their hope,—to warn the world of swift approaching judgment, and to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. The times are ominous. 'Ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not dicern the signs of the times?'"

The work under this tent last season was greatly blessed of the Lord, as many can testify. We design, as then, to spend two Sundays in a place; and hope for like results. But we need the prayers and cooperation of all those interested in the proclamation, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." And any steward of the Lord who desires to help sound the cry, may feel assured that any means sent us for that purpose will be faithfully applied. Let all who desire meetings speak soon. Direct all communications, with inquiries, propositions, or means, to R. C. Brown, South Butler, N. Y., Wayne Co. For the brethren, R. C. B.

Nova Scotia Conference.—The annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held, the Lord willing, at Bear River, Digby Co., N. S., commencing Thursday, June 18th, and continue over the following Lord's day. We hope the brethren and sisters will come ready to work for the Lord. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of New Brunswick and the United States. J. J. Woodworth.

Conference Notice.—The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its annual session in connection with the Campmeeting at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 24th. A full representation of ministers and delegates are requested to be present. Ministers who cannot be present will please report by letter.

J. W. Burroughs, Sec.

Kansas Conference.—The Annual Session of the Advent Christian Conference of Kansas will be held, the Lord willing, at Melvern, Osage Co., Kan., commencing Friday, May 15th, 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Lord's day, or as long as the brethren may determine.

Those coming by rail from the North will stop at Arvonia Station, and those from the South at Burlington, where teams will be in readiness to convey them to the ground where the Mission Tent will be pitched, if they write to Eld. J. C. Smith, Arvonia, Osage Co., Kan., in time. Reports from the churches should be made up to and including the 18th of April, 1874 (By-laws, Art. 8, Sec. 1), and forwarded by mail to the Secretary, care of Eld. Smith as above, or sent with the delegates. Let all who "wait for the Lord" and are "looking for that blessed hope" lay aside their secular affairs, and join with the "children of God" in their yearly feast of fat things. By order of the Directors,

Amos Sanford, Secretary.

Dear Brn. and Srs.—As it will soon be time to commence our summer campaign with the Penn. Mission Tent, we should be glad to hear from those desiring Tent Meetings in their locality, especially in Southern New York and Northern Penn. We shall also be glad to receive orders from Brn. for the "History of the Faith of the Fathers," that is in the hands of the printers, and will be out by the first or middle of May. We have felt it duty to publish the work, as we did not have a work to answer many inquiries, when called for, although we had a good many good works on the stand. We shall be glad to have any send on a dollar or more, to help pay the printer, etc., by the 1st of May, and will send the books as soon as published. Said pamphlets will cost about 25 cents each. Also, "The Tree of Life and Colloquy," by Bro. C. F. Sweet, 25 cts. We will send two each on receipt of one dollar, postpaid. Let us hear from you. Address John T. Ongley, Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Pa.; or C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y.; or Wm. H. Spencer, 507 P. O. Box, Rochester, N. Y.

John T. Ongley.

Mechanic Falls Camp-ground.—I would say to those having property on the camp-ground, that we have arranged with Bro. Geo. Strout and his son to live on the ground and care for the property there. We think it advisable for all who wish to unite with us in this good work, in strengthening and encouraging the hearts of the Lord's people, to build their tents, and get ready for the meeting before it commences, so they can lay aside their work, and with one spirit pray and labor for the upbuilding of the cause and the conversion of souls.

Chandler Dennen, North Turner Bridge, Me.

THE DURATION AND NATURE OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

By Henry Constable, A. M., Prebendary of Cork.

Reprinted from the second London edition, with an Introduction by Prof. C. L. Ives, of Yale College. 8vo., 68 pp.

All things considered, we regard this the best work on the subject treated of now before the public, and the one to distribute, especially among our friends and neighbors who do not hold with us on the subject.

We have procured a large lot of the publisher, and put them at the following low prices:—One copy, 25 cts.; one dozen for $2.50; sent by mail, postpaid. $17 per hundred, by express. Please order freely. A'GT.

A NEW BOOK.
"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.,

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

RESTING IN GOD.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN.

Since thy Father's arm sustains thee,
Peaceful be;
When a chastening hand restrains thee,
It is he.
Know his love in full completeness
Fills the measure of thy weakness;
If he wound thy spirit sore,
Trust him more.

Without murmur, uncomplaining,
In his hand
Lay whatever things thou canst not Understand.
Though the world thy folly spurneth,
From thy faith in pity turneth,
Peace thy inmost soul shall fill,
Lying still.

Like an infant, if thou thinkest
Thou canst stand;
Childlike, proudly pushing back
The offered hand,
Courage soon is changed to fear,
Strength doth feebleness appear.
In his love if thou abide,
He will guide.

Fearest sometimes that thy Father
Hath forgot?
When the clouds around thee gather,
Doubt him not
Always hath the daylight broken—
Always hath he comfort spoken—
Better hath he been for years
Than thy fears.

Therefore, whatsoe'er betideth,
Night or day,—
Know his love for thee provideth
Good alway.
Crown of sorrow gladly take,
Grateful wear it for his sake,
Sweetly bending to his will,
Lying still.

To his own thy Savior giveth
Daily strength;
To each troubled soul that liveth,
Peace at length.
Weakest lambs have largest share
Of this tender Shepherd's care;
Ask him not, then, "When?" or "How?"
Only bow.

REDEMPTION.

J. R. SMITH.

Sweet, blessed, comforting word, richly laden with hallowed associations of a blissful future, and a glorious immortality in the kingdom of our God. How comforting to the heart of the christian, as with joyful anticipation he looks forward to that glorious day when the curse shall be removed, and he shall be delivered "from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Old earth is groaning heavily under the curse which covers the land. We are living in a world of corruption, sorrow, suffering and pain. "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth together in pain until now; and not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption; the redemption of our body." And we are often led to cry out, How long, O Lord, how long shall the earth mourn? Not always. Praise God. "The word of the Lord is settled forever in heaven," and it never can fail. Signs which are unmistakable proclaim Messiah near. Then lift up your heads dear saints of God, and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh. The curse will soon be removed, and sorrow and pain will never more be known. These frail mortal bodies, that are now filled with sickness, disease, and death, will then be made immortal, "fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body." "Neither can they die any more." I long to see that glorious day.

The grim monster—death has robbed me of many a loved one, and they are sleeping in the dark and silent grave; and while "the king of terrors" has been hovering around my dwelling, to bear away my dear companion, the prayer of my heart has been, "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Come and put an end to sorrow and mourning, and redeem thy groaning creation. In "the new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness," "violence shall no more be heard; neither wasting nor destruction within her borders." "The sun shall no more go down, neither shall the moon withdraw herself; but the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. The people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever." I believe it. Hallelujah! Then there shall be NO MORE curse; for the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it. (Query: Has there ever been any curse in heaven? "NO MORE CURSE" signifies there has been curse where the throne of God and the Lamb IS TO BE, and where the righteous are to dwell). There "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them (the righteous); and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose, it shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel, and of Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God." Then "the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped; then shall the lame man leap as a hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing; for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert." When the ransomed hosts of God shall come forth from their dusty beds, where they have so long unconsciously slumbered under the dark dominion of death, they shall then return from the enemies land, and shall "come to Mount Zion, the city of the living God, and to an innumerable company of angels." There shall be no more mourning there. In that bright world of everlasting life and glory, God's ransomed hosts will "come to Zion, with songs and with everlasting joy upon their heads." There they shall find "joy and gladness," and sorrow and mourning shall forever flee away. Hallelujah to God and the Lamb forever! Glory be to God for this blessed hope! We shall sleep, but not forever, for there will be a glorious dawn. Fly swift around ye wheels of time, and bring the welcome day; when "this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality." Then (consequently not before), shall be brought to pass the saying which is written (in the 25th chap. of Isaiah's prophecy), death is swallowed up in victory. And in that glorious resurrection morning, when the slumbering saints of God shall have been liberated from their prison house, and redeemed from the bondage of death, they can then look back and say, "O death, where (now) is thy sting? O grave, where (now) is thy victory?" You once held me in your cold and icy embrace, but you can hold me no longer, I have been liberated from your remorseless grasp by the almighty power of Jesus. "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Praise God! the time is not far distant when "death, the LAST ENEMY shall be destroyed," together "with him who has the power of death, which is the devil." Jesus is soon coming when he will bring our loved ones FROM THE DEAD. Mourning Rachel will then greet her darling babes, and fold them in her fond embrace; for they shall come again from the land of the enemy, saith the Lord. "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death."

I am expecting in a little while to see the loved ones that have fallen by the tyrants power. Soon we shall "see the King in his beauty," and our eyes will behold the land that was afar off. O how sweet it will be when we range fair Eden's fields, and partake of fruit from life's fair tree. We shall dwell forever with Jesus and our loved ones, in that healthy country where "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying: neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. Amen. Even so; come Lord Jesus and redeem thy groaning creation.

EVERLASTING CONTEMPT.

J. S. HILL.

In the 12th chap. of Dan., 2nd verse, it reads thus: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." By the phrase, "everlasting contempt," it has been taken for granted, that this passage teaches the eternal conscious misery of the wicked; but that such is not the fact is clearly shown, both from the context, and the signification of the original word translated contempt. The state of the wicked is put in contrast with everlasting life. Do the wicked go into everlasting life? Assuredly not. How then can they exist in eternal conscious misery? Without eternal life this is impossible. But I am met with the statement that eternal life means eternal happiness, and naturally would have eternal misery for its opposite. Is this the fact in regard to the English word life? It signifies animated existence; vitality; also the time during which this state continues. See Web. This seems to be its primary meaning. It is the opposite of death. When we would express happiness we use a different word, because life may be either happy or miserable. The assumption that it signifies happiness, is not (we think) founded on fact. Various Orthodox writers have admitted that its primary meaning is life, in the absolute sense. Even admitting that one of its meanings is happiness, it certainly signifies likewise, animated existence; so if the wicked do not have eternal life, they lose both eternal felicity and existence likewise.

The Hebrew word translated life, is ghahz. It is never translated happiness in one instance in the Old Testament. It means (See Gesenius Heb. Lex.), as an adjective. 1. alive, living; 2. lively, vigorous; 3. live, fresh, raw; 4. living, fresh. As substantive, life. Gesenius also says it signifies in some instances, prosperity, happiness, well-being. Any one can see that this is not its primary literal meaning. The Hebrew word ghahz is applied to the creatures the Lord made in the beginning. Such were said to be living (ghahz) creatures, or living souls; whether men or beasts. The word translated contempt in Dan. 12: 2, signifies (See Ges.) properly abhorrence. It comes from the verb dahrah to thrust away, to repulse. A word of the same meaning, nearly, is found in Isa. 66: 24; there rendered abhorring. The passage reads: "And they shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me; their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched. And they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." Here the abhorrence is occasioned by looking upon putrid carcasses, subjected to the action of fire and worms. What a perfect symbol of utter destruction and corruption. Our Savior uses this language when speaking of future punishment; and strange as it may seem, this language has been taken as one of the strongest proofs of eternal misery.

Ministers of Jesus, behold the figure! Let us go out, in our imagination, and view it. Here are dead carcasses, worms working in the loathsome masses of corruption, and the fire consuming. The fire not being quenched, and the worm not dying, makes the destruction complete. But says one, The abhorrence is everlasting, therefore they must continue to exist. Exist as what? As dead bodies if at all. The word eternal or everlasting is employed in a number of instances in the Bible, to express the eternity of effect; as Jude 7; Heb. 6: 2; 5: 9, &c. So we think it is here. No less a linguist than Dr. Adam Clarke, says this is one of the meanings of the Greek word aionios rendered everlasting or eternal. According to C. F. Hudson, the passage is rendered from the Syriac; some to death and the eternal contempt of their companions. Much more might be written on this interesting subject, but I forbear. May God bless truth, and overturn error is the prayer of the author.

FRAGMENTS.

W. L. HIMES.

A NEW YORK journal complains of preaching which one might hear for a week, and be none the wiser for hearing; that will fit one text as well as another; and bears the same relation to genuine Gospel exposition that Charlotte Russe does to a dinner; one can eat it for its pleasant taste, but it imparts neither life nor strength. It suits "itching ears."

> "He who hath and will not give
> The light of life to all that live,
> Himself shall lose the way."

If this sentiment be true, and it doubtless is true, is there not danger that we as a people may "lose the way" unless we soon begin to give more freely that which we have so freely received. We spend quite generously for our favorite preachers; but our Tract Funds, Poor Funds, and contributions for Missions, are no credit to us. Perhaps we owe it to a few generous souls among us, that we have not all wandered out of the way. A dozen of these will buy and furnish a tent for missionary work, and the thousands of Israel will not add enough to the sum to pay the expense of a summer campaign. Shall we give and save, or keep and lose?

"About the only thing you can be sure of when you attempt to draw a circle around the 'things essential to sound doctrine,' is that you have excluded more people—christian people, too—than you have included. This is pretty obvious to discerning minds."

This may be true, and yet it is only a partial truth. Bodies of men cannot work or operate to advantage without some kind of organization. No doubt it is bigotry for any denomination to define the "things essential" to orthodoxy; but it does not follow that persons holding opinions in common should never organize for mutual effort, nor presume to define their position. The important point for every sect to settle is, whether there is any good reason for it to exist. If it has a reason, and therefore a right to be, it also has a right to protect itself and its work by organization and declaration of its principles.

Judge John Worth Edmonds, whose adhesion to the Spiritists gave them prestige when they were comparatively few in numbers, more than twenty years ago, died at his residence in New York, April 5th. He was seventy-five years of age. Although he is now dead, and "knows not anything," we shall doubtless have numerous communications from him, which will be eagerly swallowed by one class of immaterialists, as proof that the dead know more than the living. And exceptionally fortunate will the Judge be if many of the mediums do not lay to his charge messages whose style and matter will indicate a shocking degeneration of intellect after his "departure from the form." The revelations ascribed to Shakspeare, Milton, Franklin, and other great men, exhibit such mental debility, such intellectual flabbiness, such vealy thought, as would make one wish Solomon were right, if it were not already certain that he is. Better "know not anything," than suffer the mental degeneration of the spirit life, as exhibited through Spiritist mediums.

SLEEPING.

LOIS LAURIE.

"Till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep."—JOB 14: 12.

How happy it must be to lay one down to sleep
Where all the soft fair ferns and mosses creep;
Where tenderly the roots wrap round your weary limbs,
And the dim forest corridors echo the evening hymns:
The gnarled, time-wearied trees chant low above your rest
The while they drop their bright leaves on your breast,
And lift their toil-stained hands, anguishing heaven
That the strong fetters may be quickly riven.
Guarding your low-laid head until that day be given,
They soothe you with their songs and miserere's rythm,
So that your wearied brain and aching heart soft keep
The sweetest and the purest earthly sleep.

How happy it must be to close one's eyes
Upon the leaden light of these dull, clouded skies,
And wake not from our sleep until they be no more!
To close our eyes, after one lingering farewell, o'er
The flowers, and groves, and streams we cherished so!
And wake with the clear, musical river of life's calm flow
Upon our listening ears, and on our wondering eyes
The silent grandeur of those cloudless, new, bright skies;
And all the trees that stretch in glad surprise
Their giant limbs, uncursed, do joyfully uprise
To the first Eden grace of fragrance, fruit and bloom,
After these deformed years of sin and gloom.

What a strange, wonderous thing it were to hear
Fall faintly on our death-dulled closing ear
The farewell words and sobbing tears of one loved voice,
And wake to hear a thousand happy tongues rejoice;
After the lonely years uncheered by kindred mind,
To come to all the just made perfect, and to find
Those loved, wide age-divided ones, and face to face
Hear their true, brave, wise utterances, that found a place
In our re-echoing heart. Our own ears listening to the grace
Sweet dropped from Jesus' lips. And with the angels trace
Again the way their guiding hands led us below.
Yes, it were sweet to sleep and waken so!

West Acton, Mass.

THE EVIDENCE.

The evidence that we love Christ is our obedience to his commands. Words prove nothing except this: that when they are alone, without acts to correspond, they prove us to be deceived or hypocrites.

Men will not believe that we are christians by our words. They should not do this. Not by the leaves of a tree should the tree be judged. These may be fair and the tree appear beautiful, but not by these can it be said, the tree is good.

Our good acts convince men that we are christians; and these alone prove to others that we believe what we say we do. Unless we can do this, our testimony has but little effect. If we can make men believe that we ourselves believe what we testify, we have gained their confidence in our honesty, and they may then hear us and become associated with us in the work we are doing.

I. I. LESLIE.

Correspondence.

From E. Cornell.

The weekly visits of the Crisis have been welcomed at our home the past year, and we are unwilling to do without it so long as time lasts, or we can raise the means to pay for it. How I love its enlightening, cheering, and stirring articles, so well calculated to inspire wakefulness and watchfulness in these days, when there is such a tendency to sleep. How it stirs the soul to its depths to know that most of the world are slumbering all unprepared for the great events just before them. I rejoice that God has raised up some faithful laborers, who are willing to go forth, sacrificing all for Christ, declaring the whole counsel of God in the midst of a gainsaying world; and my prayer is, Lord, raise up and send forth more laborers, filled with the Holy Ghost, who may yet arouse some to put on the armor of righteousness, and be ready for the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.

I praise God that he directed the steps of one of his humble devoted ones to Oregon, not quite two years since, who was willing to endure the cross and despise the shame, for the love of Jesus. He has been faithfully fulfilling his mission, regardless of threats and ill treatment, and his labor has not been in vain in the Lord. Last April Bro. and Sr. Reed and Bro. Wilson came here, and spent five months in different parts of our State, preaching the truth and scattering books and tracts. But who will follow them, and continue the work of watering the seed sown till it shall bring forth an abundant harvest? Will the Lord permit them to come back this year, or will he send some other laborers into this field? Open doors and hearts will be ready to receive them; yet such need not be surprised if they meet with opposition. I feel quite assured the Lord will hear our prayers, and send us more help from some quarter. Though so unworthy, I feel that I am united in sympathy and the bonds of brotherly love to those who are laboring and suffering for their Lord. To all I would say, "Be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." "Let our loins be girded about, and our lights burning, and we like unto men that wait for their Lord;" that when he cometh and knocketh, we may open unto him immediately.

May the Lord arouse many from the lethargy of sin and unbelief, and cause them to see their true condition, and come to the fountain that cleanseth from all sin, and be ready for that great day. And may all who are laboring for this great object prove the truthfulness of the word of the Lord by the prophet,—"As the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither again, but watereth the earth, and causeth that it shall bring forth seed for the sower, and bread for the eater, so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall accomplish that whereunto I sent it."

Portland, Oregon.

From M. L. Coburn.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us wake out of sleep, and get on the whole armor; for Jesus is coming, and we must all be ready to meet him with joy. Let us not have it said to any of us, the summer is past, and the harvest is ended, and we lost at last. Only think of it! Earth's story told, and we gone where hope could never reach us. Can any one bear the thought? It must take the power of the Holy Ghost to make us realize it. Then let us pray to the Lord earnestly to stir up our hearts and minds. Soon it will be too late. Look at the prize, that it may stimulate you. Eternal life and glory, in a world without end, full of beauty and perfection, with all the children of God and Christ, from righteous Abel down to the last one that shall be saved.

Some one may say, It is all good, but it is so hard to live a christian in this wicked time, that I get almost discouraged. Does not God say, Where sin abounds, grace much more abounds? so what is the great difference? Suppose a thing is worth twice as much as it used to be, and you have twice as much to buy with, is there any great difference? Enough is enough. I do not see any reason why we should be lost.

The Lord hath said too, that we should not be tempted above what we could bear. You cannot save yourself; you are saved by grace, through faith; and that is not of yourself, it is the gift of God. Do not trust in your feelings, but trust in God, and do his bidding, and you are safe. He will do all the rest in his own time and way. There is one thing very needful for us to do, and that is this,—We must be willing to give up all we have to him, so he can have a good chance to do for us, and we shall be well satisfied with the change. Try it once. If you are not satisfied, you can change back, and have your own way again. Make haste! Time is short. What is done must be done soon. O, wake out of sleep, and prepare to meet Christ. May God help us one and all. Amen.

Wakefield, Mass.

From H. B. Sevey.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Praise the Lord for his mercy which endureth forever. How good he has been to us. In looking over the past, I can but rejoice that his truth has ever shone upon my pathway, and can say it shines more and more. Bless his dear name. I hope to let my light so shine that others may be benefitted also; and for this I spend my life—my all.

As I felt the need of rest, I have for a few weeks been at home, assisting in making a tent to hold meetings in this summer, which will be pitched (the Lord willing) the first of June, in Vienna, Me., for the benefit of all the brethren and friends in these parts. Notice will be given in Crisis in due season.

I should like to have some of the brethren and sisters go with the tent this season, who can labor for the building up of the truth due this generation, and the salvation of men in new fields where our truth has not been preached. Jesus is coming, and to do as we would be done by is the only safe way. This has been my mission, and I trust will continue to be. Any who wish for a meeting will please write me, or any who would labor with the tent, and share its blessings and hardships.

I have a small tent also for boarding accommodations. I am confident much good may be accomplished by a few filled with the Holy Ghost, and faithful in God. Pray for me and the contemplated meetings, that right ways may be opened, and wrong ways hedged up, for Jesus' sake. We have but a few months more to work, then the crown of life will be given. May it be said "well done," is my prayer.

Mt. Vernon, April 18th, 1874.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Dear Brn.:—I have been drinking the bitter cup of affliction. I say bitter, though it is mixed with much that is sweet and joyful. The wife of my youth is gone, whence she will not return. Her eyes are closed, her voice hushed. She sleeps in Jesus. Death has got the victory over her, and holds her a prisoner in the grave. She is waiting the resurrection morn. But I do not mourn as one who has no hope. I feel to say from the heart, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

She was a pleasant, agreeable companion, a prudent, faithful wife, and a christian. There was a very large company of friends and neighbors attended her funeral. Mr. Depew, the Baptist minister, officiated. I had requested Bro. Wright to attend, and hold forth the resurrection, but he being sick failed, and I felt it my duty to be his substitute. I knew it was contrary to the customs of society for a mourner to speak at a funeral; yet I ran the risk of being thought eccentric, and after Mr. Depew had closed his remarks, I arose, though my knees would scarcely bear my weight, and I had to hold on to the coffin lest I should fall.

I said a few words in praise of my wife, and then said, She is dead—her breath has gone forth, and in that very day her thoughts perished. Her hatred, love, and envy perished; and she has no share in all that is done under the sun. I then inquired as Job did, "If a man die shall he live again?" and I answered the question by quoting the prophets, Jesus, and the apostles. Isaiah said,—"Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise," etc. Ezekiel says, "I will bring up flesh upon you, and lay sinews upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live. I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves; and ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live." Jesus says, "The hour cometh, when the dead shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." I showed how it was sown a natural body, but resurrected a spiritual body, or a holy, pure, immortal body. I spoke of the mystery of the living being changed in a moment into a state of immortality, at the last trump, and caught up to meet the Lord in the air. I said, She who lies before you in that coffin will be there, and if you and I are there, we shall know her. She will sing the new song, and her feet will walk the golden streets, and she will drink of that beautiful river, whose streams make glad the city of our God.

I inquired, Shall we be there? Are we worthy of that privilege? Do we love Jesus now? Do we love his appearing? Do we look for and expect it? Could we lift up our heads and shout, "This is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us"? Or should we call for rocks and mountains to fall upon us, and hide us from the wrath of the Lamb? Let me be there, is my prayer. Then I shall see Jesus, whom having not seen I love. There I shall worship him, with her with whom I used to worship here. There I shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Paul and Daniel, in the kingdom of heaven, where there is no sin, sorrow, sickness, pain or death.

Chelmsford, Mass.

From F. S. Morgan.

Dear Brn.:—I feel thankful to say that the Lord is still on the giving hand, and willing to bless all who will come unto him; and we are glad to say there are some in the localities where we have been permitted to labor that have given their hearts to God, and started to walk in the narrow way that leads to eternal life. How our hearts swelled with joy when we saw those who had become endeared to us by former associations, taking a bold stand before the world on the side of truth, and saw their honest faces beaming with joy as they stood witnessing for Jesus.

O, my brethren, what a responsibility rests upon those who have the light of truth as taught in God's Word. How I prayed that all might see and accept the truth as these honest farmers did; some of them who had listened to the preaching of different denominations could not believe until they saw the truthfulness of the Word, and some of them acknowledged they never heard the Scripture preached as we preached it. I thank God that there are honest hearts yet in the world, and we hope such may ever be kept from the tempter's power.

Our meetings at Bronson Lake lasted only two weeks, and we had the pleasure of organizing a church of thirteen members, and have a good prospect of an addition of two or three more soon.

I feel very thankful for the tracts that you sent me, for they could preach when all others were silent, and were a great help to me. God bless the Tract Society! We are still laboring among the people, and hope the Lord will use us as instruments in his hand in bringing many more into the fold while probation lingers. I think that I shall get more subscribers for the Crisis in a short time.

Lapeer, Mich., April 9th, 1874.

From E. N. Morse.

God is at work in Lower Cabot by his Spirit, gathering in such as can be saved. The old soldiers of the cross are being revived, backsliders are confessing their way back to the Lord, and children are starting for the kingdom. Prejudice is rolled away by the power of God, and confidence is being renewed again in the ranks of Zion. We have good attention, with a steady increase in our congregation since last October, when we first began to labor here, for all of which we thank God and take courage. We expect soon the return of that Nobleman with the long promised possession. Let us have our lamps trimmed and burning, with oil in our vessels. We read of some who have the form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. The Lord save us, is our cry.

Lower Cabot, Vt.

From J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—How often I have been cheered by your letters in the Crisis. I thought perhaps I might comfort some throbbing heart sighing for our Lord's return. Many are the afflictions of God's dear children here, for this is truly a vale of tears; but blessed be the name of the Lord, we are told to refrain our voice from weeping, and our eyes from tears, when our children are not; knowing that they will come again from the land of the enemy. But we may weep over the lost and perishing, for we are told to sow in tears that we may reap in joy. How can we but weep, knowing the shortness of time, and the mighty host that are living in pleasure, who are soon to meet God's righteous judgments? His Word declares the end of all things is at hand.

The people of God have always been a waiting people. If we go back to the good old patriarch Jacob, as he lay upon his dying bed, we hear him break out in language like this,—"I have waited for thy salvation, O Lord." Patient Job says, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change comes." Job is waiting to-day, and how many of the dear Advent brethren and sisters are waiting like Job. How many are sleeping to-day, waiting for Jesus, who started when the first cry was made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh! The Psalmist seems to have had a large measure of the waiting spirit. He says, "My soul doth wait for the Lord; in his word do I hope." "And again, "Those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth." Blessed thought! Hear the prophet Isaiah,—"They shall not be ashamed that wait for me." Habakkuk says, "If the vision tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry." The angel of the Lord said to Daniel, "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred five and thirty days." Would that all of us—that the people of God had more of this blessed waiting spirit! How blessed it is to trust in the Lord, for in him is everlasting strength. If there are any on the earth that trust with unshaken confidence in the living God, they are those who are looking for the speedy coming of Christ amidst opposition, scoffings, and perils of the last days.

I thank God from the depths of my heart that I have an abiding trust in the Lord, which enables me to trust in him through storms as well as sunshine. The Psalmist says, "All they that know thy name will put their trust in thee." Never was the Word of God so sweet and precious to me as at the present time. It is truly a light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. May the Lord bless both reader and writer is my prayer.

New Britain, Ct.

From Bro. J. W. Burroughs.

As you desire brief reports of our travels and labors, I would say that I have just returned from a tour West, to Sioux City. I received a call to go out there, and hold a meeting. On my arrival, I had a call to go out into Dakota, to attend a funeral. I returned next day and commenced preaching, and continued over a week with a very good interest, and I trust with good results, considering all of the disadvantages. No regular place could be obtained in the city to hold our services. I had to preach in different houses, as the way opened. At the close of our meeting, I gathered up a little band of true believers, baptized two, and left them with the Lord, hoping to return some time during the coming summer, to hold a tent meeting as the Lord may direct.

From P. Mitson.

To the little ones scatted over this world of sorrow:—Be strong, for we know by the fulfillment of God's blessed Word that deliverance is very near at hand. I am in the field, doing what I can to comfort the feeble on their way, and warning the poor sinner to flee to the Savior before the great cloud of God's long restrained vengeance bursts upon a rebellious world. I feel strong in the Lord, and am determined not to make any compromise with the enemy.

1 COR. 15: 58.

M. J. CLARK.

Not in vain the labor,
Not in vain the tears,
Not in vain the anguish
Of these weary years.

Not in vain, dear Jesus,
That I tread this road,
Though 'tis rough and thorny,
It leads me to my God.

I thank thee, oh! my Savior,
That I can labor still,
And though my path be lowly,
Suffer thy righteous will.

Oh help me, blessed Master,
Ever thy cross to bear,
Thus for my heavenly mansion
Do thou my soul prepare.

HOME AND HEALTH.

TWO WAYS OF DRIVING A TEAM.

So susceptible to gentleness and the contrary are the animals, that you may infer from their behavior the tempers of their owners.

Our neighbor, Mr. Nettles, for instance was a fractious, fretful man; and the behavior of his beasts was answerable to this. The gentlest and best broken horse in the world was sure to be spoiled in his hands. So were oxen. He came one day to the foot of a hill with a load of wood. The oxen were doing well enough, but, as they began to ascend, he must needs begin to bawl to keep them agoing. This disheartened and confused them. They stopped and settled back. And now, smarting under the lash, and whisking their tails, they would give, first one and then another, a jerk, no two of them drawing together.

"What does ail the cattle?" said Mr. Nettles, and began to whip and bawl again with vigor.

The effect of this was to make the forward yoke swing round on the off side against the hind ones. Being met there with the butt of the whip on their noses, they went round the other way. Meeting with like treatment there, they swung back again. They were all in confusion, "heads and points." One poor beast would lift his nose as high as he could, to avoid the thwacks that menaced it, while another would whisk his tail and make a deprecating moan.

At this juncture my grandfather happened to come along.

"What's the matter, Mr. Nettles; can't they draw it up?"

"Can't? They won't, and wouldn't if I threw off half of it. I never did see creeturs act as they do."

"Suppose you let me try 'em," said my grandfather. "I think they'll take it up easily enough."

Getting down from his horse, he passed round the team, patted each ox, spoke to them in kind and cheery tones, and by a little pushing at their hips,—for they were standing all ways,—got them straight and right for a united pull.

"Not yet," he said to their fretful and fretted owner.

"Not yet, there is too much white in their eyes for a good start yet;" and then waiting until they had become quite calm and re-assured, he took the whip from Mr. Nettles' hand, to prevent his using it, not to use it himself, and in a tone of gentle, but decided authority, said, "Come, now, come,—all together,—go along."

And they went, steadily and bravely, quite up the steep, their volunteer driver keeping along with them, and their owner following.

Arriving at the top, my grandfather said, "Let them stand and breathe a little now, they have done their duty very well;" and handing the whip to their owner, he passed round and patted them again.

"How strangely they behave!" said Mr. Nettles. "Did anybody ever see such cattle?"—Wayside.

WHY ARE AMERICANS DYSPEPTICS?

It has been truly said that man is a creature of habit, and if there is any one direction in which this saying is more applicable than in another, it is that which points to the dietetic habits of civilized nations. This saying is especially true of the American people. There is probably not another nation on the face of the earth where the people have so many artificial wants, and so many injurious habits in eating and drinking, as our own nation. The reason is obvious. Here, labor of all kinds is remunerative, and the so-called good things are easily obtained. In European countries, the laborer is compelled, by reason of low wages, to subsist, both himself and his family, upon the barest necessaries of life, hence he has not that opportunity for creating artificial wants and false dietetic habits, that is afforded in our country where the laborer is able not only to provide the necessaries, but also many of the so-called luxuries of life.

If we compare the average health of the laboring classes of America with that of the same class in the east, we shall see that the standard of health is much lower here than there; and the same is true of the wealthier classes, also. Why is this? Is it because the climate of this country is more unfavorable to health than that of Europe? or is it due to a difference in the habits of the people? A careful examination of the matter will convince any candid person that the origin of very many of the diseases of our people is owing to their unhygienic habits, and that the reason why the standard of health is lower in America than in Europe is, the habits of the people are more unhygienic here than there.

Thousands of girls belonging to the laboring classes come from Europe to this country yearly. They are, generally, strong and healthy on their arrival here, but in a few years many of them lose their health, sicken, or die prematurely. This might, at the first view, be considered as sufficient proof that the climatic influences of this country are less conducive to health than those of their native land; but when we take a closer view, and inquire into their habits, we find that the greater number of these girls were reared with simple habits, and on a plain diet, composed almost wholly of vegetable substances, and that they spent much of their time in the open air, performing out-door labor, and, as a consequence, they possessed almost perfect health while thus living. After arriving here, they engage as servants in the families of well-to-do people, and partake largely of rich food, to which they have heretofore been wholly unaccustomed. They consider condiments, rich gravies, flesh meats, tea, coffee, highly seasoned cakes and pies, as among the most desirable things to be obtained, and they use them so freely that their stomachs, livers, etc., are soon worn out by overwork, and many of those who, in their native land were so robust and healthy, find themselves, after a few years' residence in this country, miserable dyspeptics.

These emigrants are not the only cases that are thus affected by the use of improper food. Like causes produce like effects; and it matters not whether the individual is rich or poor, of high degree or of low degree, nor of what nationality or clime, if he pampers the appetite with highly seasoned food, or uses improper food of any description for any length of time, disease will surely follow.

It is proverbial of the American people that they are a nation of dyspeptics. Why are they such? There can be but one answer to this question. It is because they do not control their appetites. The ease with which the so-called luxuries of life can be obtained in this country is a very great temptation to their use; and that which at first is taken only as a luxury, to afford temporary pleasure to the vital instincts, soon perverts those instincts and becomes a necessity, and its continued use occasions disease. —Health Reformer.

FRUIT AND HEALTH.—Dr. Hunt said at a recent meeting of the Warsaw Horticultural Society, that "an absence of fruits implied doctors' bills." We have urged for many years the importance of a regular supply of ripe fruit to prevent disease, and insisted that the best medicine chest which an emigrating family could carry to a newly settled country, would be a box of early bearing fruit trees, currant, gooseberry and raspberry bushes, and strawberry plants. A family moved west, and took with them a large supply of dried fruit, which lasted them throughout the first summer. None of them were sick, although disease prevailed all about them that year; but the next year, with more comforts and less privations, but with no fruit, they suffered much from sickness. Other western residents have told us that so long as they could have ripe fruit, they have been free from all disease resulting from malaria.—Southern Farmer.

HAIR DYES.—We know very few physicians who have not treated cases of disease clearly traceable to their use. Nearly every one of them knows of a death or two as the result, while they count the cases of paralysis which have come from this one cause by the dozen or score. The New York Board of Health took the trouble a year or two ago to warn people against the danger corked up in hair-dye bottles. The chief medical officer of the Brooklyn Life Insurance Company tells us that a few years ago that company paid a policy on the life of a man who killed himself by dyeing his hair, as a post mortem examination clearly demonstrated.—Herald of Health.

"WHAT IS THE BEST STIMULANT?—There is no such thing as a good stimulant. Stimulants are all bad. What is a stimulant? It is a poison. To stimulate means to goad, to excite. Alcohol is a stimulant. When alcohol is taken into the stomach the vital powers recognizing it as a poison are excited to resist it and throw it out, which they do with all the force they are capable of exerting, and this action to rid the system of poison is stimulation. Stimulation is really poisoning and nothing else, therefore, if there is a best poison, there is a best stimulant.—Herald of Health.

NEURALGIA.—I have had a severe experience with neuralgia, and suffered the most excruciating anguish. Warm applications gave but temporary relief. I put three blisters on one arm, one after the other. A number of little boils followed on the same arm. It was a perfect cure. I have since tried it, when doctors failed, and it has wrought the self-same cure. Neuralgia seems to be an obstruction of the nerves. The blister draws that away.

ANTICIPATION.

GEO. W. HOWARD.

Hark! what sound earth's silence breaking?
  Gabriel's trump methinks I hear,
And the dead to life awaking
  Now before their Judge appear.
From the graveyards and the ocean,
  From the place where martyrs fell,
They have heard the voice of Jesus,
  And in dust no longer dwell.

Jesus comes in all his glory,—
  Comes to reign on David's throne;
Comes to end earth's painful story;
  Now he'll rule this world alone.
Earthly rulers bow before him;
  Kings and monarchs are dethroned;
Peace shall wave her rightful sceptre,
  Love shall dwell from zone to zone.

O, my soul, behold the grandeur!
  Jesus seated on his throne!
Thousand thousands round him gather
  While he makes his judgments known.
See the blest, who gather round him,
  Prostrate now before him fall;
Let us join with those who crown him
  King of glory—Lord of all.

Farewell now to earthly treasures,
  I have won a greater prize;
To the blest it will be given
  When the sleeping martyrs rise.
Farewell sin and death and sorrow,
  Now I bid you all farewell;
I would live in climes more genial,
  Where the saints forever dwell.

Welcome Jesus, welcome glory,
  Welcome now eternal rest,
Welcome friends whom I have cherished,
  Now I greet you with the blest.
Glory, glory, hallelujah!
  Praise the great Redeemer's name;
Let us join and give the glory
  To the Lamb who once was slain.

AN ADDRESS.

TO THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN CHURCH OF MASS., greeting:—The undersigned brethren were appointed a committee by the President of the A. C. Conference of Massachusetts, at its late annual session, in accordance with a unanimous vote to that effect, to prepare an address to you in regard to the proper organization of churches, and the proper methods of more effectually carrying on the work of God among you than our present system admits of. To this important subject we earnestly solicit the candid and thoughtful consideration of our brethren and sisters, both in the ministry, and among the lay members of our churches. We do not in any way presume to dictate to you in this matter, but, as representing our State Conference, we wish to advise, to offer suggestions, to point out certain paths which seem to us desirable to walk in, or avoid. That the subject may be properly brought to your minds, we would call your attention to the following considerations.

I. That which is lacking in our churches. That a lack exists and is felt to a considerable extent needs hardly to be proved, so obvious is it to careful observers. From our own observation we have been painfully impressed with this fact; and in conversation with many brethren and friends of our cause, we have heard the lack mentioned and deplored. Again and again has it been asked, "Can there not be some means devised whereby our church system can be made more effectual for good?" and we now answer emphatically, "We think there can."

1. There is a lack of union. By this we do not mean a lack of union and sympathy as christians, although in some places such a lack does exist; but we mean there is a lack of union for a particular, definite, well understood purpose. In many of the towns where our churches are established, while there is a perfect union of sentiment in regard to the glorious truths which we hold, there is hardly any union of all the believers for the purpose of extending the knowledge of those truths into the regions beyond which are ready to receive them, and rejoice therein. A few of the brethren in any given place are at their post, faithfully discharging their duty, bearing the brunt of the warfare, enduring hardness as is becoming in good soldiers of Jesus Christ, having in view at all times the spreading abroad of the gospel of the kingdom; while many others, who should be with them at their sides, ready to bear in part the inevitable burden that must be sustained, and ready to help stay up their hands, which must many times be wearied, seem, indeed, willing enough to attend the Sunday services, and listen to the preaching of the word of God, and perhaps contribute something for its support, yet as far as it regards the actual work of maintaining the meetings, and keeping alive the interest that already exists, they seem to think there is nothing for them to do,—that on them as individuals there is no responsibility in relation to the spreading abroad the knowledge of God among men. Many times has it seemed to us, looking at the matter from a human standpoint, that if two, three, or four brethren in a congregation of forty or fifty professed believers were to be taken away, there would be none left to fill the vacant place,—that there would be no Elisha, upon whom the mantle of the departed could fall.

2. There is to a great extent what we think is an erroneous impression concerning church organizations and membership. The impression we allude to, we have no doubt is held conscientiously, and in the utmost good faith, but we think it is one of the causes that has to some extent retarded the growth of our churches. We refer to the idea which some good and excellent people entertain, that it is unscriptural, and therefore wrong, to form churches upon any visible basis or platform. As a result of this, church organizations upon a proper and scriptural basis have often been wholly neglected, and in many cases rendered almost futile and ineffectual by the scruples of these well meaning, but, as we think, mistaken brethren, leading them to keep themselves aloof from all connection with them as churches, and therefore not sharing in the responsibility of them, thus leaving the burden to be borne by a few patiently toiling brethren and sisters who feel that a church should and must be kept in existence among them.

3. There is a lack of interest in the young. We have been many times made painfully aware of this, and it is from an imperative sense of duty that we call your attention to this deplorable fact. In some places where our churches are established, where preaching is regularly maintained, there are no Sunday Schools at all, and in many places where there are Sunday Schools, they are nothing near what they should be in point of attendance of scholars and teachers, and general interest. So far as active effort is made, it seems to be mostly directed toward the older portion of the community to the neglect of the children, the rising generation. And we feel that our brethren in the ministry are not wholly blameless in this matter, for we learn that even where Sunday Schools are carried on, they seldom receive the encouragement of their presence, and words of good cheer. To this neglect of the young, and the interests of the Sunday School, we largely attribute the lack of prosperity which has in too many cases attended the establishing of our churches.

4. There is a lack of proper spiritual oversight. By this we mean there has been, and is, a lack of pastoral labor among our churches. As a people, we have been very negligent in regard to this department of christian activity. Until within a very few years, hardly any of our churches were in the charge of a pastor, and even to-day by far the larger portion of them are without the spiritual oversight and watchcare of a faithful man of God. "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." God desires some of his servants to fulfil the duties of "pastors," (Eph. 4: 11, 12) but our churches have almost wholly ignored this branch of labor, as though it were a superfluity, and as a consequence they are suffering to-day. It is in the order of God that there be "evangelists," and our preachers mostly "do the work of an evangelist," yet not too many of them, if the other parts of the field are properly occupied, as we feel they have not been with us. Pastors have been but little sought, pastoral labor has been but little encouraged, and consequently the preachers and churches are in a less desirable condition, both as it relates to spiritual as well as mental culture, than they might have been had both ministers and laity sought as strict conformity to the teaching of God's word in this particular as in many other matters of less importance.

Beloved brethren, we regard the foregoing items as being the most important of the drawbacks under which we have been and are laboring, not that they characterize all of our churches, or that any one of them is lacking in all four points, but that in one particular or another, they characterize altogether too many. We call your attention

II. To the means whereby that which is lacking can be supplied,—the remedy by which this state of things can be removed. Various causes which have been in operation ever since we first became a distinct people, have tended to bring about this condition of affairs; but we think the following suggestions, if acted upon, will be found to contain the needed remedy.

There should be union. We do not mean union merely as christians, nor merely union of sentiment as it regards the doctrine of the Bible, but a union of heart and mind for energetic labor in the defence and promulgation of the truths about which there may be unanimity of sentiment. There should be a well settled, clearly defined purpose on the part of every believer to do all in his or her power to aid the rest of the brethren in the maintainance of meetings, and the spreading abroad the saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. Brethren, you do not realize how much good may be done in this way,—how great an advance can be made, and what a change for the better would be experienced, if you were thus to do. The influence which you are able to exert as individuals, may be but little, but if combined harmoniously with that which is exerted by the others, an aggregate will be realized which will not be insignificant, but mighty for the accomplishment of good. Make efforts to persuade people to come to the meeting, and listen to the preaching; be courteous to the strangers that may be present; let not one go away, if it can be helped, without extending to him a friendly hand, and expressing the pleasure you feel at seeing him present. Notice the young who may be present, so that all who attend the meeting, will go away feeling not merely edified by the sermon, but carrying away in their hearts sweet remembrances of the kind and friendly greeting they met with from the brotherhood in the church. There is altogether too much indifference, too much selfishness in the attendance of christians upon the sanctuary. Do not go merely to be pleased, to get benefitted, but go with the purpose of doing something, of speaking some word which will be encouraging, or doing some act, that the Master can bless to the good of some needy child of man that may be present. It only needs united action in our churches in the various branches of christian activity, to make them tenfold more powerful for good than they now are. Brethren, we pray you, be united in the love and strength of God in this matter.

2. There should be a proper organization of the believers. It should be our object not merely to conform to the New Testament in doctrine, but also in the establishment of churches, and the nearer we keep to apostolic practice in this respect, the better we think will be our condition. The church of Christ in any given place should be so set in order that the various duties which devolve upon bodies of christians may be properly performed. The New Testament enjoins the performance of certain duties upon christians, which can only be performed by churches, visibly founded upon some well understood and definite principles. It teaches the duty of raising money for missionary uses; the duty of observing the communion of the Lord's Supper; the duty of correcting evils which may exist among christians, either by the reproof of the erring member or members, or, as a last resort, by their expulsion from church fellowship, duties which could not be performed except there was a recognized body of believers constituting the church to whom the members were in a sense amenable, and members, some of whom, by the appointment of the body, were responsible for the details of the other arrangements alluded to. How can the Savior's directions in Matt. 18: 15-18 be followed and obeyed, unless there be a body of the believers existing in a church capacity, who, under proper circumstances, have the right to expel from their midst an unworthy member? How could the direction of the apostle Paul (1 Cor. 5: 13) have been complied with by the brethren at Corinth, unless there were certain well understood principles of action by which they were as a body guided and governed? And as the early churches were constituted in this respect, so we think our's should be. The details of the organization may, and should be very simple; as simple as is possible, and yet have the desired ends attained. Our cause has suffered from the presence of unworthy persons, whose course of life has been such as to reflect discredit upon the body, and from the perverseness and obstinacy of others, whose course, while perhaps not absolutely sinful, yet has been a detriment to the cause, but which things have not been avoided because there was no one vested with authority by the body, to correct or remove them in a scriptural manner. Where such a lack exists, it should be permitted to remain no longer.

3. There should be a well sustained Sunday School interest. We feel confident that this department of christian labor has not received among our churches that thought and care which it deserves, and we earnestly recommend to the churches that as far as it is practicable they form and sustain Sunday Schools, even though they be but small ones. From the Sunday School, if rightly conducted, the church may expect to receive some of her most useful additions. The older portion of our members are continually passing away, and from what source are their places to be filled? What better source can be looked to than the Sunday School, where should be congregated in the study of God's word the younger portion of our families? The Sunday School, when properly sustained, will be found to be the nursery of the church, and to it we may look without fear of disappointment for many gracious additions to the church membership. By far the larger portion of christians will be found to date their conversion before they became of age, and none are more desirable to receive into church fellowship than those who have in their youthful days given their hearts to God. Church troubles are more frequently caused by those who have lived so long without religion that they have become confirmed, as it were, in certain methods of thought, and ideas of right, so that even after conversion, they sometimes fail to manifest a becoming and proper acquiescence in that which is plainly a proper course. A church that is making more effort to build itself up by the conversion of those who have reached maturity, than from the young and rising generation in their midst, will discover in the end that they have been leaning upon a broken staff, but that church, which, while it makes all proper effort for the bringing into the fold of Christ those who have lived long in sin, and is also engaged actively in endeavoring to reach the young, will be found to flourish "as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drouth, neither shall cease from yielding fruit." (Jer. 17: 8).

We call to mind places where parents attend regularly the meetings of the Adventist church, but who are seldom accompanied by their children. Where are they? Ah, they have not been brought up to attend the Adventist meeting and Sunday School, but are permitted to go with their young associates to some other meeting and Sunday School, where, indeed, they learn many good things, but which are not calculated to render them efficient workers in the church to which their parents belong, when their places shall be made vacant by sickness or death; and in too many cases do we know that the children have but little, if any sympathy with their parents in their religious belief. We say then in all earnestness, let there be Sunday Schools formed at once in those places where there are none. Be content to begin with a few, even it be but one class, and let parents, if possible, attend. Form Bible classes for the older ones, and let the children see that an interest is taken in them, and if in connection with the truths received there, they receive good instruction at their homes, we think it will be found that the children of Adventists become as good coworkers with their parents, as the children of other denominations become in their respective spheres.

4. Our churches, as far as possible, should be under the spiritual care and oversight of pastors. We are glad that the churches are awakening to a sense of the importance of this work. No insttiution of God for the carrying on of his work of grace among men, can be thoughtlessly cast aside with impunity. No institution that he has ordained for the building up of the "household of faith" can be be set at naught as being undesirable or needless, without the church or people thus doing, experiencing the evils which such a course will inevitably bring upon them. God desires more than we possibly can the edifying of the body of Christ, which is the church, the perfecting of the saints; and for the accomplishment of this grand purpose, he has ordained that certain instrumentalities shall be used, and therefore said the apostle Paul, "He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." Eph. 4: 11. If we say, "We will receive the aid which an apostle can give, or the instruction which a prophet can impart, or the interest which an evangelist can awaken, but we do not approve of pastoral labor, we do not think it for the good of the church, we do not think the labors of a pastor would be satisfactory to our people, they need a variety of talent. Are you not, in such a case, placing your own foolishness and shortsightedness over against the wisdom and knowledge of God, who has instituted this very office? Would he have instituted the office of pastor, if their labors were needless? If he desired his people to be fed with spiritual food by the transient visits of evangelists, who in the nature of the case, cannot know much about the true spiritual condition of the body, would he have appointed some to be "pastors and teachers?" In accordance with this divine appointment, we find that whenever Paul established churches, when possible, he always ordained elders, or had bishops appointed to take the charge of them, for a bishop in the New Testament does not mean one who also performed the duties of a modern bishop, but was the name which designated the pastor of a church, the shepherd of a flock of Christ's sheep. To how few of our churches are the words of the apostle applicable when he says, "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves; for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account." And why inapplicable? Because so few of our churches are under the care of a man of God who faithfully watches for their souls. To how few of our preachers are the words of Peter applicable, "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; . . . being ensamples to the flock." And why are they inapplicable? Because so few of them have the oversight of a church, and in most cases live so far from the people to whom they minister, that though they lived lives the most blameless, they could not be "ensamples to the flock" because of the intervening distance.

Now, we earnestly recommend a more general compliance with this gospel institution, pastoral labor. We urge upon our churches this duty which they owe themselves to perform both for the sake of their own interests, and for the sake of being more in harmony with the will of God. At our annual State Conference in Worcester in 1871, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

"Resolved, that this conference recommend the Advent Christian Churches of Massachusetts to obtain, as far as possible, the services of faithful men of God, who shall take the charge of them, and watchcare over their interests."

This counsel of their preachers, the churches have, to a great extent, not heeded, and as representing the conference, we advise that the churches do place themselves under the care of some worthy and competent men to act as their pastors. If your numbers are too small to bear the necessary burden, unite with some neighboring church or churches that are also weak, and secure the labors of some good man to be divided between you. In this way, we think the meetings can be carried on with much better prospects of success, and with no more, if so great expense, than as now conducted. Let this means of usefulness be so employed, and see if God does not own it as proper and right by bestowing upon you abundant blessings which as yet you are comparative strangers to.

Brethren and sisters, our address is before you. With what reception does it meet from you? We have maintained our friendship, our love, our interest for you by speaking plainly concerning what we think to be evils that retard our progress, and that should be remedied. If our words indicate any real lack, and also point out the true remedy therefor, we beseech you to at once do what you can to remove them, and have our cause placed on that basis that shall be most effectual for good. Seek heavenly wisdom, seek it in prayer, seek it by reading God's holy word, and then seek to conform to it not only in matters of doctrinal belief, but in matters of practice, as individuals, and in the establishment of the churches of believers, and God, who does not permit his word to return unto him void, will not suffer you to conform to his precepts of wisdom in the matter of carrying on his work, without causing such conformity to be blessed to your abundant good.

J. S. WHITE.

We will turn our attention again to the first of John. We have been told that auton in vers. 3 and 4 should not be rendered him, but it, in the neuter gender. I have before said that auton is not in these verses, and if it had been it would not follow that it should be in the neuter; for it is in each of seven other verses in the same chapter; and in every instance in the masculine gender. Again, we are told that the word is autou in the Greek. This is correct so far as the third verse is concerned. But still it is claimed that it should be rendered it, though out of more than six hundred times where this word is found in the Greek Testament, it is rendered it but once. In nearly six hundred times it refers to persons in the masculine gender.

We are told that "Webster says him and his were formerly in the neuter gender, but the practice is obsolete." This is true; but when these words were so used, it did not make the nouns to which they referred neuter. When God and man were referred to by him and his, God and man were not in the neuter gender, and called it. Neither Webster nor any other author ever said this. Suppose it should be allowed that logos should be rendered it; it does not follow that the "Word" was not a person. John says "the Word was God." Besides, the word it is often used in the place of a person, or as meaning a person. Webster says "it often begins a sentence, when a personal pronoun, or the name of a person, or a masculine noun follows. 'It is I; be not afraid'; 'It was Judas who betrayed Christ.'" So John says, "the Word was God." If we put it in the place of Word, then it would read, it was God. But God would not be in the neuter gender, any more than Christ or I, because he said, "It is I."

We are told that Liddell and Scott say, "Logos never means a word in the grammatical sense, as the mere name of a thing." These men do not say that logos is never used as the name of a person. And if they had said this, it would not be true; for John says, "His name is called the Word of God." A number of persons have been referred to who have put it in the place of him in John 1: 3, 4. So far as numbers are concerned, I think that more than fifty to one among scholars and translators of the Bible have used the word him as we have it in our version. In the long list, we have forty-seven of the most learned men in the kingdom, each of whom translated our version. These men were not dictated by King James in this matter, as has been hinted.

We have been referred to Dr. Clarke, as if he were authority for settling Bible questions. I will give a part of what he has said on John 1:—"'In the beginning'; that is, before any thing was formed; ere God began the great work of creation. This is the meaning of the word in Gen. 1: 1, to which the evangelist evidently alludes. This phrase fully proves, in the mouth of an inspired writer, that Jesus Christ was no part of the creation, as he existed when no part of that existed; and that consequently he is no creature, as all created nature was formed by him; 'for without him was nothing made that was made.' v. 3. 'Was the Word'; or, existed the Logos. This term should be left untranslated, for the very same reason why the names Jesus and Christ are left untranslated. The first I consider as proper an appellation of the Savior of the world, as I do either of the two last. And as it would be highly improper to say, the Deliverer, the Anointed, instead of Jesus Christ, so I deem it improper to say, the Word, instead of the Logos. But as every appellative of the Savior of the world was descriptive of some excellence in his person, nature, or work, so the epithet Logos, which signifies a word spoken, speech, eloquence, doctrine, reason, or faculty of reasoning, is very properly applied to Him who is 'the true Light which lighteth every man who cometh into the world.' 'All things were made by him'; that is, by this Logos. In Gen. 1: 1, God is said to have created all things; in this verse Christ is said to have created all things; the same unerring Spirit spake in Moses and in the Evangelist. There Christ and the Father are one."

Thus we see that Dr. Clarke most fully agrees with John. Why should he not? John "was full of the Holy Ghost." He said that all things were made by Logos, and without Logos was not any thing made that was made; and that Logos was God. Dr. Clarke does not put it in the place of him, in verses 3 and 4, as if Logos meant a thing; for the very good reason that he did not believe that John meant to say that a thing made all things, and thus teach what all infidels claim. The reason given by Dr. Clarke why Logos should not be translated is, that Logos is a proper name, as much so as Jesus and Christ are proper names. John says, "His name is called the Word [Logos] of God." Rev. 19: 13. Does John mean that the word "His" is a thing, in the neuter gender, and should read it? When we say Jesus spake unto the people, we use the name by which he was called who spake. So when John says, In the beginning was the Logos, or Word, he gives the name of him who made all things.

'EPH. 3: 9. It is said that the phrase—by Jesus Christ, is spurious? Dr. Clarke and others are referred to as authority for this. Dr. Clarke does claim this, and says the text should read, "which from the beginning of the world had been hidden in God, who created all things." Having been told that the words, "by Jesus Christ," are spurious, we have the solemn warning, "Whosoever, therefore, will persist in quoting this phrase, 'by Jesus Christ,' in Eph. 3: 9, as the Word of God, after they have been warned against it, will they not be likely to incur what is mentioned in Rev. 22: 18?" The reader will please notice verses 18 and 19. He will see that a great judgment is to fall on those who add to, or who take from the book. While Dr. Clarke and others believe this phrase is spurious, a much larger number of learned men believe it is not spurious. So while we are warned on the one hand not to quote it as the Word of God, lest we fall under the curse named in verse 18; we are warned, on the other hand, not to leave it out, lest we fall under the curse in verse 19. For if verse 18 applies to this case, verse 19 must so apply. So we, poor souls, are placed between two fires. After being told that it is spurious, if we do not believe it, we are lost; and after being told that it is not spurious, if we do not believe this, we are lost. There is no hope for us any way; so we may as well be on the side of the majority.

Some would have us believe that if this phrase is spurious, the whole question is settled, and that Christ did not make the world. So far as this question is concerned, the objector may go on, and claim as much of the Bible to be spurious as he pleases, and there will be enough left to prove the affirmative, unless he can do as Prof. Goussen says some try to do, take God out of the Bible. After Dr. Clarke has given his reasons for leaving out the words—"by Jesus Christ," he says:—"No inferiority of Christ can be argued from a clause of whose spuriousness there is the strongest evidence." He did not think that, though this passage is spurious, it let Christ down. And why should he? for if these words are left out, it reads, God created all things. This agrees with John, who says, "the Word [Logos] was God."

COLOSSIANS 1: 15-17.

"Who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature." Ver. 15. From this it is supposed that Christ was a created creature, in distinction from other creatures. Suppose this to be true; then he was created before man was created. He was "the beginning of the creation of God." Rev. 3: 14. If this means that Christ the Son of God was created, it is plain that he was created before any other being or thing was created; consequently he was the Son of God before the world was made. Why then talk as if he had no existence till he was born in the flesh, or as if he was created at the time of his birth in this world? God's Son was the beginning of the creation of God, inasmuch as he began the creation. "Without him was not anything made that was made" (or created). You may put it in the place of him, and it does not change the fact; for John says that what you call it "was God."

"For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth; . . . . all things were created by him, and for him." Ver. 16. Why not say that the word it should be used in the place of him in this verse as well as in John 1: 10, which reads, "The world was made by him"? If we should say it in one place, we should in the other. In the effort to get the pre-existence of Christ out of this text, the word it is not resorted to. But it is claimed that the preposition is wrong; that it should read, "through him all things were created," and "in him were all things created." Prepositions, like many other words, are interchangeable. Any one of several of them may be used without changing the sense of the text. Jesus went up into the mountain, or on to the mountain. Paul went up to Jerusalem, or went up into Jerusalem. The man came to Boston by the way of Worcester, or he came through Worcester. He came by the Rail Road, or he came over the Road. These different words do not change the sense of the statements. These are only samples of a multitude.

Because the preposition dia is in ver. 16, which means through, some would have us believe that it cannot be properly rendered by. Those who have noticed the word dia in the Greek Dictionary, for the purpose of ascertaining the meaning of this word, know that one of the definitions is by. Why then speak of it as if it must be rendered through in this place? Another definition is, "by means of." We see, therefore, that the translators of our Bible did not use the wrong word in saying, "All things were created by him." Webster gives the following for one definition of through: "by means of"; "by the agency of." The meaning is not changed in the least, whether we say, the dispatch came by the mail, or through the mail. A man builds a house by his son, or through his son; either word may mean that his son did all the work. This effort to show that Christ did not make the world, and to take the pre-existence of Christ out of the Bible, by changing the preposition, is a failure, to say nothing of the absurdity of saying that God created all things by or through his Son, when he had no Son.

Prof. Whiting and others, who have rendered dia "through," in Col. 1: 16, did not suppose that it went to show that Christ the Son of God did not make the world. The Unitarians, some of whom do not believe that Christ had any existence as a being before he was in the flesh, do not found their belief on the use of the Greek prepositions. Their Greek scholars will tell us that, ir they have nothing but this to support them, they have no foundation to stand on. Rom. 3: 36,—"For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things; to whom be glory forever." In this verse, di (which is a contraction of dia, and means the same), is rendered through, I suppose it will be claimed that this passage refers to God the Father, which I admit. Now if dia in Col. 1: 16, which refers to Christ, should be rendered through, and by so doing it shows that Christ did not make the world; then dia in Rom. 11: 36, which is rendered through, shows that God did not make the world, and hence it follows that neither the Father nor the Son made the world, and therefore nobody made the world. This brings us directly out upon the infidel's platform. This is the direct tendency of every effort made to show that Christ did not exist as the Son of God before he took on him the seed of Abraham.

"He is before all things, and by him all things consist." Ver. 17. Who is before all things? He by whom "were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him and for him; and he is before all things, and by him all things consist." He is before all things, and he created all things. This agrees with John: "In the beginning was the Word. . . . . All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." He is "the beginning of the creation of God." Not that he is a creature, in the sense that some would have us believe, for the Bible says no such thing. And if it is claimed that Christ is a created being, it would remain a truth that he was created before any other being was created, and before any thing was created; for "he is before all things."

"The first born of every creature." Dr. Clarke remarks:—"I suppose this phrase to mean the same as that in Phil. 2: 9—'God hath given him a name which is above every name.' He is as man at the head of all the creation of God; nor can he with any propriety be considered a creature, having himself created all things, and existed before anything was made. If it be said that God created him first, and then he, by a delegated power from God, created all things, this is most flatly contradicted by the apostle in verses 16 and 17. As the Jews term Jehovah the first-born of the world, or of all creation, to signify his having created or produced all things; so Christ is here termed; and the words which follow, in vers. 16 and 17, are proof of this. The phraseology is Jewish, and, as they apply it to the Supreme Being merely to denote his eternal pre-existence, and to point him out as the cause of all things, it is most evident that St. Paul uses it in the same way, and illustrates his meaning by the following words, which would be absolutely absurd if we could suppose that, by the former, he intended to convey any idea of the inferiority of Jesus Christ. No; 'he is before all things, and by him all things consist.'"

How could the apostle use words more plainly to show that the Son of God was before any thing was made? "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." Ps. 90: 2. If this shows that God was before the world was formed, then does Paul show that Christ was before the earth and world were formed. These words agree with the prophet,—"His goings forth are from everlasting."

SANCTIFICATION.

J. S. HILL.

It is contended by numerous writers on this subject, that it is received at a period subsequent to conversion. They say at conversion men are justified, and sanctified at a time after that. What do the Scriptures require of those that accept Christ? Do they not command us to cast our all on Christ? Must we not be wholly the Lord's to be justified? If wholly his, are we not in possession of sanctification? It seems to me that we are. The Greek word translated sanctification, or holiness, is hagiasmós, from hagiazo, to separate from earthly or profane uses; or to set apart to a sacred purpose. The root of the Greek word is hazo, meaning to stand in awe of—to dread.

Can a person be a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ unless separate from all impure or defiling things of an earthly nature? Surely not. It will be contended that professed christians are impure or worldly after they embrace Christ. This is not denied. Does it not arise from the fact that they have grieved away the Spirit by disobedience? I think so. This being the case, it follows as a reasonable conclusion, that we obtain sanctification when we embrace Christ.

Ancient Israel were called a holy people, because they were separated from other nations, for God's service and worship. When they intermingled with the nations, they learned their system of idolatry, and other defiling things, and became unholy. So christians, if after sanctification they become entangled in the elements of this world, become unholy. The Bible says we are to perfect holiness in the fear of God. Be ye holy, for I am holy, is the command of Inspiration.

IT IS a good and safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness, or speaking a true word, or making a friend. Seeds thus sown by the wayside often bring forth an abundant harvest. You might so spend your summer among the people, that they and their descendants might be better and happier, through time and eternity, for your works and your example.

AS LITTLE rocks in the stream may trouble the water, but they do not hinder it from flowing on, but only give it greater force; so the difficulties and discouragements of the christian warfare only serve to make the christian double his efforts to go forward on his appointed course.

LET ALL THE MEN OF WAR DRAW NEAR. JOEL 3: 9.

This is part of a proclamation that God makes to the Gentile nations, given in the form of a commandment, requiring them to prepare for war. The language implies a great emergency—interests of great and vital importance, which demand the entire strength of the governments to defend themselves. Circumstances so grave and threatening, that all the men of war would be required. The proclamation contemplates calling so large a proportion of active men into the military service, that many would be called from the agricultural department, so that less plowshares would be needed, and more swords; less pruning-hooks, and more spears. "Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks (scythes) into spears; let the weak say, I am strong." Vs. 10.

Let those who have until this emergency considered themselves too weak for soldiers, and only able to plow the field, now take the sword. This war will not be a struggle between two nations alone, but all the heathen Gentiles will "gather" themselves "together" for battle.

At the time of this general war, God will "cause some of his mighty ones to come down" (vs. 11); and at that time "the armies which were in heaven" (see Rev. 19: 11-14) "and the kings of the earth and their armies shall come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat; for there will I sit to judge all the heathen roundabout." (Vs. 12). The prophet also shows that at the same time the sickle will be put in because "the harvest is ripe." The angel quotes this passage to the Revelator (chap. 14), and applies it to the last great battle, when blood shall flow "even unto the horse bridles." The Savior also uses the same illustration in the parable of the wheat and tares, and declares "the harvest is the end of the world." This takes place when the wicked are "cast into a furnace of fire" at the final judgment.

Are there now any signs that God has commenced to fulfil these wonderful predictions? We think there are. The first thing in the prophetic order is the introduction of a proclamation, of divine origin, to the Gentile or Roman nations, which is evidently the same message as Jesus predicted should be preached as a witness to all nations, continuing to the end of the world, or "harvest." This has clearly been in process of fulfillment for more than fifty years.

The next item is to "prepare war." The two departments specified to be prepared, are "men" and "swords," or armies and implements of war. The nations especially referred to are evidently the Roman or great monarchical governments of Europe. Their armies will be enlarged, so that the enrollment will include all the men of war, that is, all the men of suitable age and circumstances to be soldiers. And secondly, that this increase of soldiers will require a great increase of implements of war. This increase of soldiers will diminish agriculturists, so that they will need less implements of husbandry, and therefore will beat their plowshares into swords.

These foretold events are now clearly developing among the European nations. Mr. Baxter, a clergyman of the English Church, says:—

> "The immense preparations for war now being made by all the nations of Europe, cannot long continue without bearing fruit in the open outbreak of hostilities. Lord Derby just stated in a speech at Liverpool, on December 18th:—
>
> 'I look on the maintenance of a strong and effective volunteer force as more than ever important at the present day, and I do so for this reason,—we live in an age when armies have assumed more gigantic proportions than in any period known to us in history, and coincident with that state of things, our industrial prosperity, the demand for laborers in every branch of industry which is the result of that prosperity, and the tendency of men to try to better their condition by emigrating, are tending to increase the cost to the state of every individual soldier. Germany can bring into the field, as is supposed, considerably above one million of men. France, under the new laws of universal service, intends to have 1,200,000 available, though probably as yet not above a third of that number has been reached; and I believe that the Russian numbers, could, in time of war, exceed either of these figures. Never since the world began, have such masses of men been drilled and disciplined for purposes of war. Extremes meet. What we call progress is sometimes only oscillation, and the latest development of modern and popular ideas on the Continent, the converting of every able-bodied man into a soldier, whether he will or no, is merely a recurrence, after many generations, to the general practice—I won't say of barbarous, but of primitive and imperfectly civilized communities, whose fighting strength is simply the entire male population. Modern wars are now carried on not by a special and limited class, but by the community as a whole. I think that is a reaction injurious and almost disastrous to civilization; but there it is, and we must accept the fact. No doubt we, with our insular position and our fleet, are not required to compete with continental powers in the magnitude of our military preparations, but we can't be entirely unaffected by them, especially as we have not only England, but the British empire to guard; and we are just now being reminded by the Ashantee war in a practical and sufficiently disagreeable way that there are penalties to be paid for the glory and for the substantial advantages of a widely extended dominion, and that the ubiquity of our commercial and colonial relations, which adds so much to the wealth and strength of the country, involves the perpetual risk of unintended collisions with savage or half savage races. Well all these things point to the necessity of supplementing our small regular army by a large development of auxiliary forces.'
> These dark clouds which are now gathering on the political and social horizon, although the reckless world heeds them not, are to the prophetic student sure harbingers of the speedy advent of Christ."—Signs of our Times.

It is wonderful that a political man like Lord Derby, who doubtless was unconscious that he was duplicating prophecy when he announced the military status of the European nations, should give the facts in exactly the same order, stating first that the armies had assumed more gigantic proportions; and coincident with this, he shows there is an increased demand for laborers in every branch of industry. God contrasted war and industry,—the statesman does the same. God shows that war will infringe upon industry,—the statesman does the same. God said, Let all the men of war draw near,—the statesman says, "Wars are now carried on by the community as a whole."

It seems to us that divine predictions were never more perfectly accomplished than have been these relating to the preparation for the last great battle. Solemn thought! Are these enrolled men to march to Jehoshaphat's bloody vale, and drink from the last vial of Jehovah's wrath? Shall the last cannon's roar, and the prolonged wail of the last slaughtered soldiers fall upon human ears now living? Are these the days the ancient seers saw, and were overwhelmed with the magnitude of scenes and events which they beheld? Yes, these times are freighted with the transition scenes of the ages. The gospel day is evidently drawing towards its evening. This world has grown old and wrinkled by the curse. Human society is convulsed with its dissolution. All nature groans for redemption. The church of God is waiting in prayerful expectancy to welcome her espoused Lord. She retires from the hum of business, the perplexity of legislation, and the charms of social entertainments, to the sacred stillness of the closet, and devoutly prays, "Thy kingdom come."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16: 3.

Having noticed the darkening of the sun, as the first sign in the series that should indicate that Christ would soon return to this world, we pass to the second, which is expressed as follows: "The moon shall not give her light." Matt. 24: 29. As the moon shines only by reflecting the light of the sun from its surface, it would follow that in order to darken the moon, the sun should be darkened; hence the darkening of the two must of necessity come together. The facts are all in harmony with this position. The following from historic records give satisfactory proof that the moon was darkened as declared by the Savior. "The night succeeding that day (May 19th, 1780) was of such pitchy darkness, that, in some instances, horses could not be compelled to leave the stable when wanted for service."—Stone's History of Beverly.

> Night after the dark day of 1780. "The darkness of the following evening was probably as gross as has ever been observed since the Almighty first gave birth to light. I could not help conceiving at the time, that if every luminous body in the universe had been shrouded in impenetrable darkness, or struck out of existence, the darkness could not be more complete. A sheet of white paper held within a few inches of the eyes, was equally invisible with the blackest velvet."—Mr. Tenny, a preacher of the gospel, Exeter, N. H., quoted by Mr. Gage to the Historical Society.
> "In the evening of the 19th of May, 1780, though the moon was up and full, yet it was darker till twelve o'clock than ever seen by any."—Annals of Salem, Vol. 2, p. 144.

Thus we have the complete fulfillment of the second sign in the heavens. The darkness of the night following the full moon, on the 19th of May, 1780, surpassed any thing ever known in the entire Christian dispensation. Why did this happen in strict fulfillment of the Savior's prediction, if not for the very object specified, to show his coming was near? If these signs named in Matt 24, Mark 13, and Luke 21, are not the ones to be seen a short time before the coming of our Lord, then where are they to be found in the sacred Scriptures? The disciples asked him for signs, and he gave those to which we have referred. Did he deceive them? Will his word fail? Hear him in connection with what he says about the signs: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Matt. 24: 35. His words have proved true. The sun and moon have been darkened in complete harmony with the Savior's prophecy.

After the darkening of the sun and moon, he said: "The stars shall fall from heaven." Matt. 24: 29. We believe this sign was fulfilled on the 13th of Nov., 1833. In a sermon published in the Herald of Gospel Liberty, Sept. 15th, 1808, on the "signs" mentioned by our Savior, the author says, the "signs in the sun and moon" were fulfilled May 19th, 1780, and remarks of the "signs in the stars," "we may expect them soon."

Said Thomas Burnett, in 1697: "The last sign before the coming of Christ is the falling stars." Said a writer in the Annals of Salem, Vol. 2, p. 139, when speaking of the falling stars in 1833: "They looked like brilliant stars descending from the zenith. It was calculated that from two o'clock till daylight there were two hundred and seven thousand, eight hundred and forty of these bodies which fell. The whole number of stars that can be seen by the naked eye, in a clear night, is about one thousand; hence, over two hundred and seven times as many stars fell that night as can be seen at any one time. And these were not all, for they began to fall at about eleven o'clock at night; hence the thousands that fell from eleven to two o'clock, are not in the foregoing estimate.

In Bible language, the stars include all the heavenly bodies, excepting the sun and moon. Astronomers have divided the stars into four classes: the fixed stars, planets, comets and meteors. Of course the fixed stars and planets are not to fall upon the earth as a sign of the Lord's coming. If one of those bodies should fall upon this planet it would destroy the inhabitants. Several of the planets are hundreds of times larger than the earth, and the fixed stars are believed to be still larger than the planets. The comets do not appear to be the bodies meant that should fall, but the falling of the stars, called "meteors" by astronomers, fully meet the prophetic description. The Scriptures inform us that a "star" guided the "wise men," who were seeking the infant Savior, and "went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was." Matt. 2: 9. There is no evidence that this was a fixed star or a planet, but was of those known as falling, or shooting stars. Had a planet or fixed star came near enough to the earth to point out a particular house in Bethlehem, where the Savior was cradled, it would have been a most terrible occurrence, known to all, but we have no record of any such appearance.

We will now turn to the recorded facts in relation to the falling stars in 1833. Says Henry Dana Ward, of New York, in the Journal of Commerce, Nov. 15th, 1833:—

> "At the cry 'Look out of the window,' I sprang from a deep sleep, and with wonder saw the east lighted up with the dawn and meteors. The zenith, the north, and the west, also showed the falling stars, in the very image of one thing, and of only one, I ever heard of. I called to my wife to behold; and while robing, she exclaimed, 'See how the stars fall!' I replied, 'that is the wonder;' and we felt in our hearts that it was a sign of the last days. For truly 'the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.' Rev. 6: 13. This language of the prophet has always been received as metaphorical. Yesterday it was literally fulfilled. The ancients understood by astor in Greek, and stella in Latin, the smaller lights of heaven. The refinement of modern astronomy has made the distinction between the stars of heaven and the meteors of heaven. Therefore, the idea of the prophet, as it is expressed in the original Greek, was literally fulfilled in the phenomena of yesterday, so as no man before yesterday had conceived to be possible that it should be fulfilled. The immense size and distance of the planets and fixed stars forbid the idea of their falling unto the earth. Larger bodies cannot fall in myriads unto a smaller body; but most of the planets and all the fixed stars are many times larger than our earth. They cannot fall unto the earth; but these fell toward it.
>
> And how did they fall? Neither myself, nor one of the family, heard any report; and were I to hunt through nature for a simile, I could not find one so apt to illustrate the appearance of the heavens as that which St. John uses in the prophecy before quoted. 'It rained fire!' says one—another, 'It was like a shower of fire!' Another, 'It was like large flakes of falling snow, before a coming storm, or large drops of rain before a shower.' I admit their fitness for common accuracy; but they came far short of the accuracy of the figure used by the prophet:—'The stars of heaven fell unto the earth;' they were not sheets, or flakes, or drops of fire; but they were what the world understands by 'falling stars,' and one speaking to his fellow, in the midst of the scene, would say, 'See how the stars fall!' And he who heard, would not pause to correct the astronomy of the speaker, any more than he would be precise as to reply, 'the sun does not move,' to one who should tell him, 'the sun is rising.'
>
> The stars fell, 'even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.' Here is the exactness of the prophet. The falling stars did not come as if from several trees shaken, but from one; those which appeared in the east fell toward the east; those which appeared in the north fell toward the north; those which appeared in the west fell toward the west; and those which appeared in the south (for I went out of my residence into the park) fell towards the south. And they fell not as the ripe fruit falls. Far from it; but they flew, they were cast like the unripe fruit, which at first refuses to leave the branch; and when, under a violent pressure it does break its hold, it flies swiftly, straight off, descending; and in the multitude falling, some cross the track of others, as they are thrown with more or less force, but each one falls on its own side of the tree. Such was the appearance of the above phenomenon to the inmates of my house."

Says Prof. Olmsted, of Yale College, New Haven:

> "The extent of the shower in 1833 was such as to cover no inconsiderable part of the earth's surface from the middle of the Atlantic on the east, to the Pacific on the west; and from the northern coast of South America, to undefined regions among the British possessions on the north, the exhibition was visible, and everywhere presented nearly the same appearance. In nearly all places, the meteors began to attract notice by their unusual frequency as early as eleven o'clock, and increased in numbers and splendor until about four o'clock, from which time they gradually declined, but were visible until lost in the light of day. The meteors did not fly at random over all parts of the sky, but appeared to emanate from a point in the constellation Leo, near a star called Gamma Leonnis, in the bend of the sickle.
>
> Those who were so fortunate as to witness the exibition of shooting stars on the morning of Nov. 13th, 1833, probably saw the greatest display of celestial fire-works that has ever been since the creation of the world, or at least within the annals covered by the pages of history."
>
> When describing the manner of their falling, he says: "To form some idea of the phenomenon, the reader may imagine a constant succession of fire balls, resembling sky rockets, radiating in all directions from a point in the heavens, a few degrees southeast of the zenith, and following the arch of the sky toward the horizon. They commenced their progress at different distances from the radiating point, but their directions were uniformly such, that the lines they described, if produced upward, would all have met in the same part of the heavens. Around this point was a circular space of several degrees, within which no meteors were observed."

The Connecticut Observer, of Nov. 25th, 1833, has the following:

> "THE FALLING STARS.—The editor of the Old Countryman makes a very serious matter of the falling stars. He says: 'he pronounced the raining fire which we saw on Wednesday morning last, an awful type, a sure forerunner, a merciful sign of that great and dreadful day which the inhabitants of the earth will witness when the sixth seal shall be opened. The time is just at hand, described not only in the New Testament but in the Old; and a more correct picture of a fig-tree casting its leaves ['untimely figs,' ED.] when blown by a mighty wind, it was not possible to behold."

Thus we have the complete fulfillment of the signs in the heavens that were to indicate that we are near the second coming of Christ.

IS HUMAN SOCIETY IMPROVING OR DEGENERATING?

This is a mooted question, and is exciting much comment among the learned statesmen, churchmen, scientists—the profane and devout. It scans statistical tables, uncovers ancient lore, and calls forth arguments from the scoffing atheist and the devout christian. All look anxiously to the unfolding future, and hopefully and tremblingly wait for a more golden age—a more glorious state. Each class of human minds seem to be wonderfully impressed with the idea that the present status of our world has become old—has spent its day, and calls for a renewing, a more permanent and perfect state. The multitudes have come to the conclusion that this desirable change will be made by human skill and effort, by means that men can command, without a Christ, without his presence, and the direct interposition of Almighty power. They dream that men, by their reformatory powers, systematized and united efforts, will revolutionize the world, exterminate war and the social curse, and establish peace and the universal brotherhood. They also teach that the transition period has come, and that the means and instrumentalities are now here, and being employed to improve society, and that therefore society is being improved—regenerated. But God has taught in his Word that wicked men shall wax worse and worse, until Christ shall return to the earth personally, and by mighty power given him by his Father, shall with a grand and triumphant miracle, renew our world physically and socially. The Scriptures teach that the last period of the gospel age will be exceedingly corrupt and degenerate, equalled by no preceding periods, excepting those of Noah and Lot.

That this generation is degenerating in its social qualities and relations appears from the following witnesses.

Henry Ward Beecher speaks in the following scathing terms:—"All the framework of society seems to be dissolving. On every side we find men false to the most important trusts. Even the judges on the bench are bought and sold like meat in the shambles. One must go into court with a long purse to obtain justice. The judiciary of New York stinks like Sodom and Gomorrah. Men say they hardly know a court in which to trust a case. It is no longer an honor to sit on the bench; for if the judge be an upright man, his character will be contaminated by the great majority of his associates."

Says the Christian Herald:—"It is a fact that about in the same ratio that the cause of experimental religion declines, immorality and vice increase."

The Philadelphia Times says:—"Honesty has fled from the world, and sincerity has fallen asleep. Piety has hidden herself, and justice cannot find the way. The helper is not at home, and charity lies sick. Benevolence is under arrest, and faith is nearly extinguished. The virtues go a begging, and truth has long since been buried. Credit is turned lazy, and conscience is pinned to the wall."

Says the Hornellsville Times:—"The records of the past have never presented a more fearful and corrupt state of society than now exists throughout most parts of the United States. The newspapers from every quarter are becoming more and more loaded with the records of crime."

The North American says:—"From the terrible evidences of human depravity which develop themselves from day to day, we begin to think that our cities are rapidly descending to the level of Sodom and Gomorrah."

The New York Herald says:—"Crimes of all descriptions are on the increase, especially those of the blackest dye, the increase being much greater than the proportionate increase of population."

Says the Expositor, a political paper:—"Crimes, unprecedented in number and unequaled in atrocity, fill every section of our country with horrors, exhibiting a hardened barbarity, in their details, only to be exceeded in the bosom of demons," etc.

Says the Scientific American:—"It is admitted by all parties that crimes of the most outrageous and unprecedented character abound through the country, and probably throughout the world, to a degree wholly unparalleled."

Says the New York Tribune:—"The telegraph wires bend under their weight of woe; the old earth quivers with throbs of agony from the centre to the pole; cities are shaken down, countries are engulfed; fair domains are overflowed with red-hot lava; wife is arrayed against husband, mother against child, son against father; a hecatomb is sacrificed on one railway, half as many on another, and on still another the width of a hair stands between a thousand and sudden death. In social life, our newspapers are smutched all over with reports of divorce and separation trials, of infidelity and disgrace, of gigantic crimes undertaken, half accomplished, or completed. What shall be the end of these things?"

The Christian Inquirer says:—"Such an intense and insane rush and struggle for wealth; such reckless, ruinous extravagance of expenditure; such a delirium for vulgar display, this country has never seen. And alas! not only taste, refinement, purity and piety have gone down before the tide, but even honesty, etc. . . . . Every vice has increased in an alarming degree. Intemperance—not only are our streets and public places full of it; not only do young men and old men and mere boys fall before it by scores and hundreds, but even women, beautiful, accomplished, beloved wives and daughters, carry its fire-blush on their cheeks, and reel and totter under its influence on the sidewalks. There are more gaming places in the city to-day than there were dry goods stores twenty years ago; and the gamblers include all classes, from the boy of fifteen to the roue of fifty. But why enumerate? Every vice on the black catalogue of transgression has more than doubled in volume and in victims within these five years; and our youth, the pride and hope of our land, are falling beneath the subtle destroyer faster than ever they fell in the Southern campaign."

Says Dr. Griffin: "The world! the world! the world! This is the object which engrosses every care; this is the supreme deity that is adored. Buy and sell, and get gain;—out with the thought of death! away with the Judgment and heaven!—my farms, my merchandise; I will have them, though the earth trembles under my feet, and Heaven weeps blood upon my head."—Adv. Review.

Dark picture! sad story indeed! but every tongue proclaims it and every pen describes it. Every week adds to the darkness of earth's scenes, for the shadows of approaching judgments fall like the pall of death upon our world. The storm-clouds are gathering; the deep-toned thunders are nearing; a silent awe rests upon men as they view the angry elements gathering their forces for the final tempest of God's wrath upon a cursed and ruined world. O that men would find shelter from the approaching blast under Immanuel's wing in the Cleft-Rock.

A CATHOLIC BISHOP'S PREDICTION.

The late Bishop Hughes, of New York, was reported in the Boston Pilot as saying: "If the time has arrived for the Pope to lose his temporal power, it proves conclusively that the consummation of the ages is not far distant." We believe the learned Bishop was right in his conclusions that the prophecies contemplated no such radical ecclesiastical and political change as the taking away of the Pope's temporal power would make, until the ending of this age. When he uttered this sentiment the Pope had not lost his temporal power, but there were influences operating which threatened to take it away. Bishop Hughes and other learned Catholic writers contended that it could not be taken away at present, because the end of this age had not come, and therefore an event prophetically located at the end, could not now take place. But since that date—1868—the event of taking away the Pope's civil power has positively taken place; so that, according to his argument, the end of the gospel age must be near.

VALLEJO.

The church in Vallejo, Cal., is a living one. It is rare that we find one that gives a brighter and more steady light, or that has stood firmer in Christ and his Word, than this one has done during the past year. They have just moved their chapel about a quarter of a mile, to a desirable situation, in order to be nearer the heart of the city, so that the people who attend will be better accommodated. The house was re-opened yesterday (April 26th), and we had blessed meetings. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon us. Bro. and Sr. D. D. Reed and Bro. T. Howell were present to assist in the exercises. Bro. Hook was at San Francisco. His health is improving, so that he is able to preach some.

We purpose to hold revival meetings in Vallejo during the week, return Saturday to San Francisco, where we expect to have our last meeting on the coast next Lord's day, and leave for Chicago, Monday, May 4th, hoping to arrive Saturday P. M., May 9th, in season to preach on the Lord's day.

We hear good news in relation to the results of the Seventh-day Sabbath discussion in Napa City, with Eld. D. M. Canright, a few weeks since. The truth is spreading, and the people are looking away from Mt. Sinai to Mt. Zion. They read and believe that "if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain" (Gal. 2: 21); and that "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace." Gal. 5: 4.

LENGTH OF YEARS.—It is evident from the Sacred Scriptures that the antediluvians, and those living in the time of Noah, after the flood, reckoned three hundred and sixty days in a year. The ancient Chaldeans had the same number of days in their years, also the Egyptians, Phenicians, Persians, Greeks, Romans and others. Diodorus Siculus (lib.) states that, at the sepulchre of Oseris, the Egyptian priests appointed to bewail his death filled three hundred and sixty milk-bowls each day, to represent the number of days in the primitive Egyptian year used in his reign. Diodorus also speaks of an ancient custom at Acanthe, near Memphis, on the Lybyan side of the Nile, stating that three hundred and sixty priests fetched water every day from the Nile, and poured it into a vessel full of holes, to denote the three hundred and sixty days in the year.

BEWARE!!

We have received a notice from Bro. I. C. Wellcome saying a man is traveling about the country, professing sometimes to be a nephew of his, at other times of C. Goodrich and myself; also claiming to be an agent for Bro. W.'s book, and by misrepresentations obtaining money from brethren. Bro. Brooks, of New York State, and Bro. Storer, of Conn., also write in regard to a person who has been in their region trying to obtain funds by similar representations.

We repeat what we have before said, "Beware" of such strangers! Do not believe them. They obtain your money to serve the devil with. Do not lend or give them money.

SABBATH DISCUSSION.

When the Savior was on the mount of transfiguration, a voice came from heaven saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." Matt. 17: 5. Jesus says: "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." John 15: 14. In his closing instruction to his disciples, the Savior said, "teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28: 20. In Rev. 21: 13, 14, Jesus says: "I am Alpha and Omega. . . . Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life." Again he says: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." John 15: 10. Many such scriptures might be quoted to show the fact that the keeping of our Savior's commandments secure to us all the blessings and promises of the new covenant, or testament. The commandments of Christ are the commandments of God. He says: the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me." John 14: 24. As the Father has instructed us to hear him, and as by obeying him we become his "friends," and as by keeping "his commandments," we "may have right to the tree of life," it follows that what he has commanded is all-sufficient for salvation. Hence, when it is said in Revelation 14: 12: "Here is the patience of the saints; here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus;" there is no evidence that the passage just quoted has the least reference to any commandment not found in the New Testament. It is a very far-fetched idea to say that Rev. 14: 12, refers in part to the old covenant in the twentieth chapter of Exodus. Whoever keeps the commandments of God in the New Testament, as given through Christ and the apostles, is sure of eternal life. We think there is no room to doubt this conclusion.

Yet it is a fact, that in all the New Testament we are no where taught to keep the seventh-day Sabbath, neither is it once hinted that we shall sin if we do not keep it; or be condemned in the least if we work on the seventh day. Why this utter silence on the subject in a complete plan of salvation? If Sunday keeping is to constitute "the mark of the beast" and sure destruction, and seventh-day keeping will remove it, and secure salvation, why has not the dear Lord somewhere intimated in the new covenant that the Gentiles should observe the same rest day as did the Jews? We think only one reasonable answer can be given, and that is, the seventh-day Sabbath of the Jewish nation has no place in the new covenant, but the "Lord's day" is properly kept in commemoration of the resurrection of the Son of God to eternal life. But for the event, man could not live in the world to come. As the introduction of eternal life through the second Adam is of more importance than the beginning of temporal life through the first Adam, it is proper that the followers of Christ should commemorate that all-important event by a memorial rest day throughout the Christian dispensation. This they have done from the apostles to the present time. Does it look reasonable that all at once, what Jesus' most loving disciples have been doing, on purpose to honor him, because they loved him with all their hearts, should become a damning sin, that would fit all who observe the Lord's day for eternal destruction? Shall we have confidence in modern "visions" that teach such things? Nay, verily. We think it is too absurd to command the confidence of any one. Those who fear that keeping the Lord's day may become "the mark of the beast," will find they have feared without any just cause. If they have nothing but that trouble, then they may well lift up their heads and rejoice, because their redemption is near at hand. To suppose for a moment that our loving, precious Savior, or his Father, will condemn his children in the last generation (but no other) for keeping the Lord's day, because they love him and delight to honor the day on which he rose from the dead, is as hard to believe as infant damnation, eternal torment, or Catholic purgatory.

THE CORONER'S DEAD.—Under the above heading, in the San Francisco Daily Bulletin, April 10th, we find a list of persons who have died in such a way as to require the services of the coroner, to decide upon the cause of their death. This list of "sudden and violent deaths," during the months of Jan., Feb., March, and to the 8th of April, 1874, amounts to ninety-one. Among these are fourteen suicides, and several murders.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

EGYPTIAN ANTIQUITY.

The skeptic sometimes brings an objection against the Mosaic account of creation, by claiming that the Egyptians existed a long time before the time of Adam, as related in Genesis. But when we look at the real evidence produced to support the skeptic's claim, it is about as strong as that in favor of Gulliver's travels among the Lilliputians. The evidence rests on an "Old Chronicle," so called, that relates to the early history of Egypt. It speaks of three classes of dynasties,—the Aurites, Mesraites, and Egyptians. A learned monk says of this "Old Chronicle," "The time of Vulcan (first of the Aurites) is not set down, because he shines night and day. Helius, (the sun) son of Vulcan, reigned thirty thousand years. Then Saturn, and the rest of the twelve gods, reigned three thousand nine hundred and eighty-four years; then the demi-gods, who were eight, two hundred and seventeen years."

This is the way the great antiquity of the Egyptians is made to appear. Those who believe that the son of Vulcan reigned thirty thousand years in Egypt, next after Vulcan himself, and was succeeded by gods and demi-gods, will probably have no difficulty in receiving almost any fabulous story that may be forged against the Bible.

SPIRITUALISM.—The spirits are doing very strange things on the Pacific coast, if we can credit what is published in the daily papers. New and startling physical manifestations are being witnessed in Oakland, Cal. Strange noises—horrible—are heard: chairs and ottomans move around the room, the piano is wrenched about; an inside door was taken off its hinges and laid at the bottom of the stairway; but the house was securely locked, and no visible agents could be found doing the wild work. The inmates of the house were greatly alarmed. These strange phenomena are being multiplied on both continents. Truly the spirits of demons are "working miracles." More wonderful manifestations may be expected between the present and the coming of Christ.

M. G.

ILL-FOUNDED ENMITIES.—There is much truth in the following statement:—

> "I have remarked that ill-founded enmities are ever the most obstinate. The reason of this is clear. As offences of that kind exist only in the imagination, they never fail to grow and swell in that receptacle, too fruitful in evil fancies."

The enmities founded on imagination are usually not only the most difficult to heal, but are the sharpest and most bitter. When one takes a position against a person on an imaginary thing, and is unable to put his hand on facts to sustain himself, Satan at once endeavors to fan up his imagination to gigantic proportions.

BEWARE!—In a late tract published at Battle Creek, Mich., by the Seventh Day Adventists, we find the following on the last page:—

> "We cannot consistently give either countenance or place to him [Eld. Grant] as a religious teacher. In the name of Christianity, and for the honor of the truth of God, we warn the congregations of Seventh Day Adventists to have no fellowship with him, nor admit him into their houses, until he shall give evidence, by repentance and reparation, that he is worthy of the office which he has taken upon himself."

UNDER the head of "Religious Intelligence," a San Francisco daily Bulletin says:

> "Our exchanges from every quarter of the country give intelligence of revivals in their vicinity, and the awakening seems still to grow in interest. While there is much of the religious feeling that must be regarded as a species of excitement, which may or may not result in permanent good, there is an unusual amount of real and earnest interest, which, leading to sober questionings of self, is making a revolution in many lives."
>
> A St. Louis paper says:—"The great revival in St. Louis, Mo., has reached the inmates of the disreputable houses, and at one of the public religious meetings, a letter was read, signed by twenty unfortunate women asking prayers for their deliverance from a life of shame."

Correspondence.

From Bro. N. S. Ketchum.

Dear friends of Jesus, GREETING:—Inasmuch as good news from a far country is as cold water to a thirsty soul, I thought it would prove cheering news to some to know that the truth is taking deep root in the affections of many in this western field. It may be truly said that the fields are all white ready for the harvest. Eld. J. W. Burroughs has been with us a few days, and preached the Word of life to many that are now searching the Scriptures to see whether these things are so. Several were awakened, and two young ladies, on profession of faith in Christ, were baptized by Bro. Burroughs in the Floyd river. And I hear that the Baptist minister says that if Bro. Burroughs had remained a few weeks longer, he would have made infidels of half the people in the city. What a pity it is that he could not stay! But we expect him to visit us again some time, when we shall have a suitable house of worship. The people will be ready to hear. They are just now getting interested. At one hotel there are a number of boarders, one of whom attended our meetings and took "notes"; the result is, so far, that two other inmates of the house have embraced the truth. Thus the leaven is spreading through the city and all over the country. I have traveled some in Nebraska, Dakota, and Iowa, and I have yet to visit the school district where there are none in the faith. Pray for us and the cause.

Sioux City, Iowa.

From Bro. Geo. Thomson.

Brn. and Srs. in the Lord:—As many are anxious to hear from me, and I cannot answer all personally, I take this method of informing you how I have been since my last letter to the Crisis. I have been worse in some respects, but at the present I am better again. My heart is greatly cheered in the midst of my affliction by the reception of letters of sympathy from the dear saints. O, you don't know how much good they do me. May the dear Lord bless all who thus remember the poor invalid preacher. I am still able to read, and I feast on the Crisis weekly. It is a great comfort and consolation to me, and when I read the letters and accounts of revivals, I long again to be in the battle-field. I suppose in a great army ambulances and hospitals are necessary appendages; but I feel assured that in our army, when the last battle is fought and the last victory won, the sufferers and the fighters will alike be crowned with glory. O, how I long for the coming of that day. I believe Jesus is coming soon, and that I shall be permitted to greet face to face many of the dear saints whose kind words of sympathy have comforted me through the hours of affliction. Still remember me in your prayers.

DEGEER. In Lexington, Mich., Bro. John Degeer, in the seventy-second year of his age.

Bro. Degeer embraced the truths we hold dear about seven years ago, under the labors of Eld. J. M. Snook, who organized a small church here. Bro. Degeer was chosen ruling Elder. He was faithful and devoted. The Lord spared him to see what he greatly desired to see; viz., a neat and commodious chapel built in this place, and regular meetings established. The last prayer-meeting he attended he seemed unusually earnest. He leaves a wife, eight sons, and two daughters. Only two sons were permitted to be present, one of whom is Pastor of the Christian church in Assyria, Mich. The writer addressed a large audience from Ps. 37: 37, showing it was the christian's privilege to enjoy perfect peace now, and eternal peace and blessedness in the future life.

Sr. Degeer has the sympathy of a large circle of friends, and may the dear Savior in whom she trusts be very precious to her in this hour of sorrow, is the prayer of her Pastor,

REED. At Putnam, Ct., April 11th, 1874, Bro H. N. Reed, aged fifty-six years.

In the death of Bro R. the church at large, and especially at Putnam, together with his companion, have sustained a great loss. He, having embraced the Bible hope many years since, has found no sacrifice too great for him to make, or burden too heavy for him to bear, for the truth's sake. He was one of those men who dared to stand for the truth, though he stood alone. But he has fallen in the midst of his years of usefulness, at a time when, to human appearance, he was most needed. His last sickness was long, and for many weeks very distressing, but he was wonderfully sustained by Him who doeth all things well. He leaves a dear companion and a large circle of friends.

> "He sleeps, but not forever,
> There will be a glorious dawn;
> They will meet, to part, no, never,
> On the resurrection morn."

His funeral was attended by the writer, assisted by Eld. H. Davis. P. S. BUTLER.

LEONARD. At Putnam, Ct., March 26th, 1874, Bro. George Leonard, aged fifty-seven years.

In the death of Bro. L., his family have met with the loss of a kind husband and an affectionate father, and the church an earnest christian brother. He was converted about four years ago, and has ever since lived a devoted christian. He was ever ready to give to all a reason for the hope within him, with meekness. He died in the triumphs of faith, leaving a dear wife and two daughters, with many friends to mourn, but not without hope.

HUGHETT. In South Livermore, Me., August 29th, 1873, of lung disease, Henry T. Hughett, aged thirty years.

Henry was a man of steady and industrious habits, cheerful and liberal, and had a large circle of friends, who will mourn his loss. But most of all will he be missed by the companion of his youth, whose home will seem gloomy and sad without him. He had for some years been interested in the faith we teach, ready to lend a helping hand for the support of meetings and the cause we so much love; yet he had never made a public profession of his faith, or expressed a firm hope in Christ till just before his death. May God bless and comfort the sorrowing ones, and bring them to the land of promise. We tried to comfort them from John 11: 25, 26. JESSE GAY.

LIBBY. In Biddeford, Me., April 8th, of scarlet fever, John Bertie, youngest son of John B. and Bernice Libby, aged four years and eight months.

Bro. Libby's pilgrim home is bereft of a bright and active member, who helped to cheer the fireside and make home happy; and instead of busy feet and childish glee, there reigns a loneliness that burdens the sorrowing hearts of parents. May the Lord comfort them. JESSE GAY.

SOPHER. In South Poland, Me., March 4th, 1874, Sister Elizabeth, wife of Bro. Levi Sopher, aged sixty-nine years.

She knew Christ as her friend and Savior, and through years of failing health leaned trustingly against his blessed heart; and such we know death cannot find unready. The husband is left in loneliness, and an only son and his wife will miss the sweet voice of a mother; but may subnission to Jesus bring them all to wait in hope for a reunion beyond the shadows of the tomb.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

CHUTE. In West Poland, Me., Oct. 4th, 1873, Bro. Alonzo Chute, aged twenty-nine years.

He braved consumption month after month, for he loved life and friends; but when he found that he must die, he committed all to Jesus, exulting in the thought of a glorious resurrection. Through life his heart was full of music, and he loved to sing. May the lonely wife, with the little son, be prepared to come with him to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads, in the year of the redeemed. J. ALBERT LIBBY.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, May 4. Madrid advices state that the Government has been officially advised of the entrance of the Republican troops into the city of Bilbao. General Concha had the honor of first entering the city, at the head of his army. There is great rejoicing. Saturday evening there was a general illumination. The municipality have sent congratulatory despatches to Serrano and Concha. Small detached parties of Carlists are surrendering, but the main body of the insurgents retreated in great disorder in the direction of the province of Guipuzcoa. An attempt was made, yesterday, to assassinate Senor Margall. An insane priest fired twice at him without effect, and then killed himself. Additional despatches from Bilboa state that bodies of Carlists continue to surrender to the Republican troops. They hope by so doing to receive amnesty. Bilboa is already beginning to resume its usual appearance, and trade is reviving. The obstructions placed in the River Mervin to prevent the approach of Government war vessels have been removed. Jovellar, late Captain-General of Cuba, has arrived.

A Shanghae despatch reports that a riot has occurred in that city. Hostile demonstrations were made against the French there, in consequence of some alleged French interference at Ningpo. The demonstration culminated in a riot. It was found necessary to call out the military to restore order. The crowds refusing to disperse, the military were ordered to fire on them, which they did, killing several of the rioters and wounding many others. The utmost excitement prevailed in the city during the disturbances.

LONDON, May 7. A rumor has reached this city of a fearful hurricane at Madras, yesterday, resulting in great destruction to the shipping. The buildings in the city also suffered considerable damage, and many lives are reported lost.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 1. A famine prevails in Asia Minor, and many persons are starving. It is stated that in the town of Angira one hundred deaths occur daily from starvation.

The river Tigris is again swollen by heavy rains, and further floods are apprehended.

A Berlin despatch says that His Imperial Highness the Czar of Russia has arrived there on a visit to the Emperor William.

Her Majesty the Queen, with the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, intends to visit Ireland this summer.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, May 2. A Little Rock special contains the following additional detail of the engagement at New Gascony: Col. K. White's aggressive force was composed of forty mounted men, provided with horses from plundered stables at Pine Bluff, and of two hundred foot soldiers. They were all armed with Springfield and Enfield rifles and heavy shot guns. The village of New Gascony consists of one store and three or four dwelling houses, situated about sixteen miles below Pine Bluff, on the left bank of the Arkansas river. Brooks' men numbered about one hundred, commanded by Captains Murphy and Vandesande. They were poorly armed, and had bird shot for ammunition.

Col. White surrounded the store which they occupied and opened the engagement with a volley of bullets. Brooks' partisans returned the fire, but were soon overpowered by the superior force which attacked them. They were taken prisoners and all immediately disarmed. On the Brooks' side ten negroes were killed and twenty wounded. Of Baxter's forces, half of whom were whites, there were three killed and seven wounded. Several of the horses were killed and wounded.

Little Rock, Ark., May 4. Last night the Memphis and Little Rock train was boarded by a Baxter mob, and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, Bennett and Searle, were seized and taken to the country.

Portland, May 3. A dreadful murder was committed in the town of Stetson, about twenty miles from Bangor, Saturday. James Davis, a man thirty years old, had recently been released from the insane asylum, having been pronounced sane. He became insane again, and seizing an axe, Saturday morning, he struck his father. He then laid the body across a saw-horse, and, with a blow from the axe, nearly severed the head from the body. He was arrested, and when asked why he did it, replied, "Washington ordered me to do it."

Worcester, May 5. Robert Templeman, a Scotchman, about sixty years of age, residing in Merino Village, Webster, while in a state of intoxication, killed his wife about eleven o'clock, to-day, by shooting her through the head. Both parties were drunk, and had been quarrelling for several days. The woman lived but about twenty minutes.

Baltimore, Md. May 2. A negro, aged fifteen years, is in Lombard street hospital with his legs and back roasted shockingly, which he says was done by two men on the 15th of April, in Howard county, they first branding him in several places with a hot iron, then pouring turpentine on his legs set fire to it. It is said that one of his tormentors is arrested.

Burlington, Vt., May 3. Great excitement prevails over a shocking fratricide which took place here this afternoon. Two brothers, William and George Buchanan, employes of a manufacturing establishment in this city, had a quarrel, in which George stabbed William seven times with a jack-knife, one stab penetrating the heart, causing death in forty-five minutes.

Pittsburg, May 3. The mystery regarding the murder of a whole family near Homestead, about four miles from this city, early on Thursday morning last, has been solved. The hired man, Ernest Mintzinger, who was suspected of the murders, has been arrested and fully identified. He confessed to having murdered Mr. Hammit, his wife, two daughters, and adopted son, and that he then set fire to the house in order to destroy all evidence of the crime. Money was his object, but he says he only found fifteen dollars in the house. Officer Quirk, who arrested Mintzinger, will get the $2000 reward.

A DARING highway robbery took place on the road from Middlebury, Ct., to Bridgeport on Monday night last. Frederick Myrick and Joseph Wilson started from Middlebury about six o'clock, both considerably intoxicated. Some ladies driving in the same direction found Myrick's team standing still in a lonely place called the Ledges, about three miles from Middlebury. He lay in his wagon insensible, with his head badly cut with a stone, which was found in the wagon, covered with blood. His pocket-book was found with stains of bloody fingers upon it, from which two hundred and fifty dollars had been abstracted. Wilson was not to be found. The sheriff is in pursuit of him. Myrick lies in a critical condition.

McCULLOCH, President.

IF any of the preaching brethren should pass through Syracuse, N. Y., and find it convenient to stop here to speak words of comfort and instruction to us, a few scattered ones, we should gladly welcome and provide for them. We have regular prayer and conference meetings twice a week, Sundays in the afternoon and Tuesday evenings, and, thanks be to God, we derive strength and comfort by our gathering together. May God continue to bless us, and to add to our meetings such as shall be saved.

We expect ministerial assistance from Boston, Mass., which will be announced in due time.

THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 8. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

THE DAY OF THE LORD.

The day of the Lord, it cometh!
It comes like a thief in the night;
It comes when the world is dreaming
Of safety, and peace, and light.
It cometh, the day of sackcloth,
With darkness, and storm, and fire,
The day of the great avenging,
The day of the burning ire.

Not slowly, slowly, like twilight,
Nor like the cold, creeping tide,
Nor barque from the distant offing,
Moving on o'er the waters wide.
But instant, like sudden lightning
In the depths of a tranquil sky;
From the west to the east in a moment,
The havoc descends from on high!

The day of the Lord, it cometh
When the virgins are all asleep,
And the drunken world is lying
In a slumber yet more deep.
Like the sudden lurch of the vessel,
By night on the sunken rock,
All earth in a moment reeleth,
And goeth down with the shock.

The voice of the awful trumpet
Arresteth the march of time;
With terror, and woe, and judgment,
It soundeth through every clime.
It speaketh aloud to the living,
It speaks to the slumbering dead;
Earth heareth the final summons,
And boweth the trembling head.

The flash of the sword of havoc
Foretelling the day of blood,
Revealing the Judge's progress,
The downward march of God;
The fire which no mortal kindles,
Quick seizes the quaking earth;
And labors the groaning creation
In the pangs of its second birth.

Then the day of the evil endeth,
And the righteous reign comes in;
Like a cloud of sorrow, vanisheth
The ages of human sin.
The light of the morning gleameth,
A dawn without cloud or gloom;
In chains lies the ruler of darkness,
And the Prince of light has come!
—Dr. H. Bonar.

EPHESIANS 4: 8.

D. MATHEWSON.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

Who, that loves whatever things are pure, just, true, honest, lovely and of good report, can but hail the present temperance movement with joyful emotions, as preparing the way for the better reception of gospel truth? For who can properly appreciate the glad tidings of the gospel while their system is in any measure benumbed by the use of alcoholic liquors? But I hear an occasional voice disapproving, or deprecating the idea of temperance matters being carried so far as to interfere with the sacramental table.

Any thing interfering with the arrangements of Jesus Christ, I think I should deprecate as much as any; indeed, I should reject it entirely. But when it is claimed that Jesus Christ instituted fermented wine, to represent his spilled blood at the sacramental table, directing all who love him to use it until he comes the second time, I greatly demur. Let us examine the words of Christ, and also the circumstances of the occasion, and see whether we can find in either any thing to justify the idea that fermented wine was used? We are taught that Christ came, not to destroy the law, or the prophets, but to fulfil them; and as the time for the passover drew nigh, he directed Peter and John to a suitable place—a large upper room furnished, where they should make ready all that pertained to the passover; which, by consulting the divine record, at the place where it was instituted (Ex. 12), we shall find it consisted of a lamb without blemish, a male of the first year, which the congregation of Israel must kill, and roast whole; then eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs. The lamb, unleavened bread and bitter herbs, make up the viands God ordained for the paschal table, each of which were requisite to the fulfilling the divine command, as we must notice by the frequent admonitions given them in their cosmopolitan life through the wilderness, as well as gaining their promised Canaan. Lev. 23: 5, 6; Num. 9th chap; Deut. 16: 2; Ezek. 45: 21. And at each admonition the caution relative to the entire absence of all leaven stands out in high relief. Indeed, so exceedingly obnoxious and reprehensible was its presence during the seven days of the passover, that the sin was punished by entire excommunication. "Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses; for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, even that soul shall be CUT OFF FROM THE CONGREGATION OF ISRAEL, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land." Ex. 11: 19. . . . "Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters." Ex. 13: 7. Many other Scriptures might be given on this point.

Says Kitto, "The fourteenth of the month Abib may with propriety, as it is in some passages, be called the first day of unfermented things; since the ferment was removed on the fourteenth, before evening." The Scriptures are clear and positive on this point, and the customs of the Jews prove that they well understood the divine mandate. Says the historian, "They are first, very particular in cleansing all their household utensils, lest any taint of ferment remain attached to them. 2. On the night preceding the passover, they closely searched their houses with a wax candle, even to the mouse-holes in their cellars. 3. They burnt every particle of ferment found. 4. Follow this form of cursing or annulling ferment. 'All manner of ferment, or whatsoever fermented thing is in my possession, whether seen of me or not seen, cleansed of me or not cleansed, let it all be scattered, annulled and accounted as the dust of the earth.'"

Kitto mentions some thirteen kinds of wine in use among the ancients, and according to him, as well as other historians, there was, and is still, one kind much in use, of which one may freely drink when mingled with water. It is the Suba, or inspissated wine, made by boiling the juice of the grape immediately upon being expressed. Says Kitto, "The process of boiling appears to have been employed for the preservation of vegetable juices from the earliest times, and is founded on a correct chemical principle." Baron Tavernier, in his "Persian Travels" says, "The Christians of St. John's around Basrah make use of wine for the Eucharist, made of dried grapes. Casting water upon them, steep them for a given time," then adds, "this raisin wine was the passum of the Romans."

It must be apparent to every Bible student that some drink was used at the paschal supper, though none is commanded or forbidden at its institution; but Peter and John prepared a cup of which they all drank, and they were only directed to prepare the PASSOVER. Therefore only what was admissible for the passover was on the table. It is probable this drink was the "fruit of the vine," but by no means in a fermented state. Says Kitto, "It seems that water was the general drink at the original institution." Maimonides and Bartenora say, that "water and the juices of fruits were allowed to be drank at the Passover by the ancient Jews, who held an hypothesis that the water of fruits did not ferment." Again says Kitto, "We may consider it certain that on the special occasion of the Passover, when all fermented things were so cautiously banished, this practice of boiling the wine would be often resorted to as a well known means of destroying the fermenting principle, and securing the purity of the wine." Says Hyam Isaacs, "Their drink at the time of the feast is either fair water, or raisin-wine prepared by themselves, but no kind of leaven must be mixed." Says Professor Moses Stuart, "The word translated eating is, in cases without number, employed to include a partaking of all refreshments at a meal, that is, of the drinks as well as the food. The Rabbins, it would seem, interpreted the command just cited (viz., that they should not eat any thing fermented) as extending to the wine as well as the bread of the Passover. The Rabbins, therefore, in order to exclude every kind of fermentation from the Passover, taught the Jews to make a wine from raisins or dried grapes, expressly for that occasion, and this must be drank before it had time to ferment."

Much more historical as well as Biblical evidence might be given, but is not this sufficient to prove there could have been no such article as fermented wine in the house, much more on the table, where Jesus Christ and his disciples ate the Passover, and at the same time and table Christ instituted the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Who does not see, that had there been any fermented thing found in the house even, whether wine or any other ferment, Christ and his disciples would have most grossly transgressed the law of God and forfeited all claim to the church of God? Ex. 12: 15. It is not possible that the Son of God who came to do his Father's will could ever thus violate his Father's law, but most scrupulously fulfilled every jot and title of the same.

But it is remarked that the Savior gave that cup to his disciples to represent his blood. Most assuredly he did. Well, the wine made of dried grapes or raisins does not look as much like blood as old fermented wine. Did Jesus Christ say, or even hint that it must look like blood? Does not raisin wine look as much like blood as unleavened bread does like his body of flesh and bones? Perhaps human wisdom might have introduced the lamb, or some other animal flesh, as more fitly representing the broken body of Christ, as it certainly looks more like it than a cake of unleavened bread. But I trust none of us will question the wisdom of our divine Master in the elements he chose to represent his broken body and spilled blood.

In view of the clear and positive evidence from Scripture and history that Christ could not have used fermented wine when he instituted the Eucharist, can those who desire to be faithful in all things, and avoid the very appearance of evil, ever make use of fermented wine at the sacramental table? If Jesus would not use fermented wine then, do you think he would use it now, in this degenerate age, when there is such an inordinate appetite for stimulating beverages, and the use of such stimulus is liable to stumble some of the weak ones, and bring them down to perdition? In Matt. 18th he shows what estimate he sets upon the weak ones by showing that the one who causes them to stumble, or go into sin, had better have a mill-stone hung about his neck, and be cast into the depth of the sea; and do you think he will be pleased to have his children put a cup of fermented wine to the lips of the poor reformed inebriate, when he is unable to endure even the odor of it without grasping and swallowing all within his reach? I would not be guilty of such an act for the whole city of Worcester. "But," said one a few days since, "when the inebriate is converted he will hate the things he once loved." So he will; but does that prove that he is beyond the power of temptation? Said a poor man a few days since, "I had rather be carried home to my wife DEAD than in a state of intoxication; yet it has such power over me I fear I shall be overcome." But he had begun to pray, so we hope for him. What if he soon puts himself under the watch care of the Christian church, and they with the sacramental wine kindle up that terrible appetite, whereby the man falls? I ask in whose skirts will his blood be found? "But," says one, "this is mere imagination—a man of straw, etc. No such thing ever happened." Yes, my dear friend, just such things have occurred right in the city of Worcester.

Why will some argue that we may use any kind of bread or wine we please, because Christ did not forbid it? He did not say we should not use bread in which was sugar, butter, spices, and fruit; but is not his example sufficient? Bread made in that way would not seem much like the bread of affliction. Deut. 16: 3. Surely in commemorating Christ's suffering on the cross, we call to remembrance such sorrow as even the sun refused to shine upon. It was Jesus Christ's friends that he required to do this, and of course such would not need a book in their jaw lest they turn from the holy example of their divine Master, and endanger a weak brother for whom Christ died. But let us, like Paul, receive Christ as our Passover, and keep the feast of the same with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

Worcester, Mass, April, 1874.

THE WORD.

E. S. WILLARD.

"Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love; not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us."

Evermore give us this "perfect love."

Haddonfield, N. J.

ROCHESTER N. Y.

E. S. JENNINGS.

Elder J. H. Whitmore tendered his resignation as pastor of the Advent church of this city, August last. The church not accepting it, and earnestly soliciting his stay, he consented to remain with them, though for an indefinite period. He accordingly continued his labors among them till April fifth, when having previously giving in his resignation the second time, he closed by giving his last discourse and farewell address on Sunday morning.

The occasion will long be remembered by the many whose tearful eyes evinced the esteem and regard felt for one who had for more than two years ministered to them in spiritual things, sharing with them their joy and their sorrow.

As the table was spread with the emblems of our Lord's broken body and spilt blood, it seemed truly a befitting occasion, and one which many improved in pledging anew their faithfulness to each other, also expressing gratitude for and their appreciation of the labors of him who was about to leave them, while with tenderest emotion stirring the heart, they besought for him heaven's choicest blessings.

The evening was devoted to the interests of the Sabbath School, which forms an important branch of the Society. These meetings held monthly (though usually on a week day evening), in which old and young have been wont to participate, have been occasions of both pleasure and profit. In addition to the singing and recitations of Scripture; poetry, and choice selections in reading, as a closing exercise. Mrs. E. J. Wells gave a beautiful and appropriate selection written as an appeal to a departing pastor, in behalf of the aged, middle aged, youth and child. This was very feelingly responded to by Eld. Whitmore in connection with an affectionate farewell.

It is with sadness, and yet with a sense of duty, that I make mention of those who have separated from us. Stimulated at first only by a difference in opinion, which was the result of seeds of discord scattered by a foreign gift, or outside element. It is due Bro. Whitmore that we here state that he, hoping that leniency and forbearance might serve to preserve the peace and unity of the body entire, admitted to his desk those whose influence time has proven to be detrimental to the peace and harmony of our ranks. Instead of forbearance saving them, as we fondly hoped, it was used only as a license to persist in their own way until the seeds of discord blossomed in strife, and matured in the ripe fruit of separation, much to the sadness of the church, and the grief of their pastor, to whom they all alike once pledged their faithfulness, in choosing and calling him to the pastorate. We may safely say that all who remain true to the best interests of the church, will ever hold in grateful remembrance the untiring efforts of their pastor in endeavoring to plan for the building of a house of worship, so much needed in this city, and in which, seemingly, he would have been successful, but for the unpleasant circumstances named.

In presenting this memorial, we offer it in behalf of many friends, to whom our dear brother has endeared himself by his faithfulness as a teacher, his sympathy and kindness as a friend, while the unquestionable purity of his life, both as a citizen and christian, claims for him the highest respect of all who know him.

Hoping that whatever of trial or of joy has been his lot while with this people, will only serve to perfect and mature such qualities as shall fit him for greater good, and a wider field for usefulness, and that each successive year unfolding life's hidden mysteries, may find us all wiser and better, we unite in our parting benediction, in the simple words "God bless you."

"Though we meet on life's broad ocean,
But to love, to work, to part;
Mid its changes and commotion,
May we still be joined in heart;
Christ and christians parting never,
While before one throne they bow,
Praying till the bright 'forever,'
Shine away the darkened now."

PRAYER.

C. MENDENHALL.

The apostle Paul, in counselling the Thessalonians, says, "Pray without ceasing." If it was necessary then, it is certainly so now, in this dark and dangerous period of our probationary state to ever be in a prayerful frame of mind. That prayer does not altogether consist in an audible utterance is obvious. Prayer consists in making known to God the wants, desires and longings of our hearts. Without faith, and a deep, earnest sincerity, it becomes void and mere senseless formality. The repititions of the Pharisees had no force. The broken, trembling, spontaneous expressions of heartfelt longing, are more potent than all the nicely rounded sentences, the flowery language, or honeyed phrases of the learned formalist. He who knoweth all things—he who reachest the inmost recesses of the heart; judges not by externals, but looks to the motive, rather than to the result;—to the sincerity of the pleader, rather than to his rhetoric.

Some duties are periodical; others are called out by certain circumstances; a third class of duties are always binding—always incumbent and perpetual in their nature. Prayer belongs to the last order mentioned; hence we find it recorded in Luke that "men ought always to pray, and not to faint." Prayer can be made when engaged at our labors, whether they be mental or physical. A silent petition may be offered up when upon the busy street or, in the solitude of our closet. It is the secret of a christian's power; being always accessible and effectual in resisting the world, the flesh, and the devil. It is the essence, so to speak—the very life force of godliness, without which righteousness becomes a dead letter, and Christianity a hollow form. Our prayers to become effectual, must be accompanied with trusting faith and inward fervency. Men may appear earnest and zealous by an exhibition of animal spirits or excitement, but that which is prerequisite is more abiding, being deep seated and firmly stayed on the Rock—Christ Jesus.

We are always in danger, being surrounded by evil and temptations. The adversary is ever active and zealous, hence we must ever be on the alert to counteract all evil in doctrine or practice, inward or outward. While in this present imperfect state we are liable to stumble, to make mistakes, or to become cast-aways. We must, then, pray if we would become final conquerors and at last receive the reward promised to those who overcome.

Prayer is in order at home, abroad, in the church or out. It is true that secret prayer is perhaps most important to the child of God, but this fact ought never to lead us to a common error that we can, without neglect of duty, ignore public prayer, or neglect to set up a family altar. There is no danger of praying too much or too often, yet we are pained to acknowledge that many professed christians live without family prayer.

In these last days how watchful we must be; how careful, lest we come short of the glorious promises. Let us then pray without ceasing, worshiping God with all our house, striving by our words and deeds to bring many to the fold of Christ now, while it is called to-day. Many instances are on record of answered prayer. Every christian knows of personal blessings, temporal and spiritual so obtained. Let us then press forward with strong faith and fervent prayer, knowing that He for whom we long and sigh will soon come to relieve us, and to give us the long-looked-for reward. Pray for friends and foes, saints and sinners, and above all pray for yourself. We cannot consistently worship God by proxy. The whole plan of salvation is adapted to individuals. Reader will you with us "pray without ceasing?"

Wilmington, Del.

CHRISTIAN FORGIVENESS.

"For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you."—MATT. 6: 14.

Jesus instructed men to pray—
"Forgive as we forgive;"
Thus those around shall learn the way
That they on earth should live.

Should we repeat this simple prayer
While there's one foe we hate,
And God shall answer then and there,
Most sad will be our fate.

In vain for mercy they shall cry,
Who have no mercy shown;
All their "professions" are a lie,
The Lord will them disown.

Like Christ we should the "enemy" love,
And seek to do him good;
'Tis thus we best to men should prove
That we're the "sons of God."

Thus light from heaven will round us shine,
And we to Jesus come;
No more, as erst, shall they incline
In paths of sin to roam.

Thus men our christian life shall see,
And "God shall glorify,"
And we a holy people be,
Prepared to live and die.

TRACT MISSION WORK.

I. C. WELLCOME.

It is encouraging to know that good results follow our efforts in sowing the Word, whether by preaching, or by books and tracts. Tracts are often blessed of God in bringing souls to Christ, and in enlightening those who are in false traditions. We shall never know the amount of good which is accomplished by tracts; but we learn enough to encourage us in that work. Let those who have means scatter them more and more. A few months ago we received news of one converted by means of a tract, of a parcel we sent to Nebraska. Another brought to rejoice in the hope of Christ's coming by one of a lot sent to Missouri. Others awakened and led into the Advent faith by some we sent to Florida. Just now we got a letter from Bro. J. J. Smith of Alabama, saying, "Last October I made a trip down among the plantations on the Tenn., river. Bro. Cargile had just received a large supply of your tracts, which he divided with me. I scattered them as I went, and have been written to for more of them, and learn that two ministers have come into the truth as set forth in them;—one a Methodist, the other, of the christian order. I am solicited to go down again, and organize a church," etc. He calls for more tracts. We send them.

Not long since we received a letter from Georgia, stating that a large portion of a Baptist church was stirred to examine the Bible on the hope and faith we teach, and many of them were looking now for the Lord, and asking for an Advent preacher. This result, they said, was partially through books and tracts we sent them last year. Thus we take courage and work on. During the last two years we have published over two million pages, to send out into the South, West, North and East, most of them free. We shall print more as the Lord furnishes means. Let us work while the day lasts.

MY EXPERIENCE.

M. C. WHITAKER.

Dear brethren:—My experience for several years has been that of simple trust, and deep abiding peace. I can truly say with the Psalmist, "Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." Glory be to God! let what will come—trials, persecutions, or afflictions, we can feel that "nothing shall offend us." Then we not only rejoice in the hope of the glory of God, but we can "rejoice in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us." Blessed promise that all things shall work together for good to them that love God. Therefore if we have the evidence in our hearts that we love the Lord, we can claim that promise ours every time. O, the peace, the joy, the comfort and consolation there is in simply trusting and believing,—taking God at his word, —believe he means just what he says, and says what he means.

May the Lord help us all to trust him fully, look to him, for sustaining grace under all circumstances in life, and at last have a home among the sanctified, is the prayer of your unworthy sister in Christ.

RAYMOND, IOWA.

The work of the Lord is still prospering at Raymond. The church which was raised up there last winter purchased one half of the Wesleyan Methodist chapel, and at our last monthly visit we helped them put in a new bell, and organized a Union Sunday school. They keep up regular prayer and conference meetings twice a week, on Thursday and Sunday evenings, also on each Lord's day, at eleven, unless there is preaching. I make them a pastoral visit once a month, at which times we administer the Sacrament. My next appointment will be on May 17th. I intend to speak on baptism in the morning, and attend to the ordinance of baptism in the afternoon, immediately after services. May the Lord continue to bless the lambs of the flock; and to him be all the glory now, and in the world to come.

J. W. BURROUGHS.

Correspondence.

From Bro. S. Woodruff.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in the Lord:—I was thinking this morning how boastful at times is frail humanity. Nebuchadnezzar, in his boastful hours, could demand the three Hebrew worthies to bow down and worship his gods, and if they did not they should be cast into the burning fiery furnace; and the king could say, Who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hand? As he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon he said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty? But God's words to the boastful king were, The kingdom is departed from thee, and they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field. He did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dews of heaven, until the poor king learned in bitterness that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men. Belshazzar, his son, also lifted up himself against the Lord of heaven, and his kingdom was divided and given to the Medes and Persians.

God could take a Saul when he was meek, and through him rule his people Israel. But in a little while he rejected the word of the Lord, and God rent the kingdom from him, and gave it to one who would take counsel of him.

I think I have felt of late something as Solomon did, although he was placed under quite different circumstances. Yet we need the same wisdom. Solomon realized his inability to rule as king over Israel, and when asked by God what he should give him, his answer was, "Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad." This "speech pleased the Lord," and he not only gave him an understanding heart, but added riches and honor, so that he was more favored than all the kings.

Do we not need, as a people, much of the same wisdom? There is a great responsibility resting upon us who are nearing the judgment. O my Lord, give us understanding hearts to finish this great work. May we not cause the trump to give an uncertain sound while awakening men for the judgment. Praise the good Lord for the light and understanding he has given to his people, while waiting the dawning of the bright eternal day.

O, brethren and sisters, what an hour we are living in! The evil influences of this wicked world and the opiates of the arch deceiver would, if possible, prevent our doing the bidding of our divine Master; yet let us ever remember, "he that is for us is more than all they that are against us." Let us go in the strength of the Lord God, whose arm never fails his children, and whose promised rest is sure to all those who obey him. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." "Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only."

From Sr. L. H. Larrance.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I again desire the privilege of acknowledging through the Crisis the receipt of letters with money. I also wish to say that I thank you more than words can express, and could you know the joy that your contributions have brought to many hearts in this vicinity you certainly would feel like exclaiming, Indeed, it is more blessed to give than to receive. As it is not probable that any of us will ever have the opportunity of returning like favors to any of you, we pray that our heavenly Father will reward you.

Since I wrote to the Crisis, I have received sixteen letters, containing in all, $37.90. We have distributed the money according to directions as near as we could. There has been some sent for ourselves, most of which we have kept for our own use; though we have distributed a little of that, where we thought necessity required, notwithstanding we were quite needy; but feel it our duty to do all we can to relieve the suffering of others. One letter was from a friend in Kansas, which contained $5.00. Another was from M. M. P., containing $5.00. I will give initials of the names of the rest. M. L. P., $1.00. L. F. D., $5.00. E. S. T. H., $5.00. S. C., $2.00. M. W. G., $2.00. N. G. P., $2.00. J. H. B., $5. J. P. M., 50 cts. A. M. T., 15 cts. E. A. S., $4.25. J. W. D., $1.00. The following were letters of inquiry: T. P., A. M. A., and G. T. A.

O how I long for the time to come when there shall be no more suffering nor crying for help. Dear Brn. and Srs., when you approach the throne of grace, remember us.

Sheldon, Obrien Co., Iowa.

P. S.—If there are others who have sent contributions, not acknowledged here, I would like to know it. L. H. L.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear Friends in Jesus:—Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you, and blessings from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. While many of you meet to worship God to-day, I am unable to be off my bed, and still suffer with pain and distress. But in it all I see and feel a loving Father's care and kindly protection. The time seems long, in waiting for Jesus, but I would not "murmur and complain beneath the chastening rod," but would "rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him," knowing that "in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Everything now indicates that Jesus will come soon, very soon, and will right all wrongs; and those who have had trials and sorrows to pass through will then be freed from them all. With the beloved Peter we can say, When we do well and suffer for it, if we take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. How sweet and blessed it is to have an inward consciousness that we have done the best we knew how, and have a clear conscience. What matter is it if others accuse and censure? I do not think these things ever make any true friends turn away from us. The dear Lord was persecuted, afflicted, smitten; and it is no strange thing if his children have to suffer in the same way. It is enough for the disciple to be as his Master. If they have persecuted him, will they not his children? If they hated him, will they not hate us also? O, I am glad God can and does take care of his own, and will not suffer one thing to come upon his children but what is for their good. If ever I feel blest, it is when I am persecuted for Christ's sake. I can rejoice then if ever.

O, cheer up, dear brethren and sisters, for we are almost home. Jesus will soon come, and all the ills of earth be over. How I long for a pure, holy people, where all will be like Jesus. We shall soon be there, if faithful to God and his cause. Never did I, in all my christian life, long more for the coming of Jesus than now. Never did I sigh more for rest—for home, sweet home, than now. Remember me at the throne of grace. God bless you all.

To the dear friends at Warehouse Point, I would say, God bless you. You will have your reward soon. Also those friends at Enfield, Ct., who so kindly sent me words of cheer and aid in my needy situation, I do, and still will pray for you. Accept my heartfelt thanks. God bless and reward you evermore, I pray.

From Bro. J. Dix.

Dear Brn. of the Crisis:—As our lot is cast in the far Northwest, where the busy cities of the East hardly think of us, and know but little of us, yet we have messages from many of the faithful, through the Crisis (a blessed sheet). If we are separated by the Rocky Mountains, we love the Lord, and with patience wait for his soon coming to set up his kingdom, and redeem and crown his saints. Brethren, pray for us, in our lonely homes, where righteousness and true holiness have not yet become very fashionable.

We understand that you have a Tract Fund, and will supply the needy with tracts. Please send us a few of those little preachers, such as you would think best to go into a new field, as we are trying to break the ice, and want all the aid we can get just now. We would feel very grateful to you and the Giver of all good, for a few tracts and a dozen song books. Yours in hope of eternal life.

Glencoe, Washington Co., Oregon.

From H. O.

Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I wish to let you know through the Crisis that I am striving to enter in at the strait gate. It is my strong determination to follow Christ in everything, and to suffer all things for his sake. We should feel happy to have the chance to suffer, for we know that the suffering is not to be compared with the joy that is to follow. Let us compare our afflictions with those of the apostles; they were beaten, and imprisoned, and stoned to death; and others beheaded for the witness of the truth. What are these light afflictions? They are only intended for our good. Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way. Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. We should be able to rejoice evermore, pray without ceasing, and in everything give thanks; for this is the will of God concerning us.

From Bro. O. Lewis.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I want to make you glad, who read the Crisis, by telling you that Bro. and Sr. Smith have been to our place, and many souls are now rejoicing in the truth. Prejudice is giving way, and people are reading the Bible to see if these things are so. Backsliders have been reclaimed, prayer-meetings are being kept up with good attendance,—Methodists, Baptists and Christians all united with Second Adventists to watch and pray together, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven, and to ask the Lord of the harvest to send more laborers into this part of the field, with the blessed truth that makes glad the heart. A church has been organized of eleven members, and several are now waiting to be baptized. May the Lord bless them. Pray that the Lord may bless Kansas with more men and women who are filled with the Spirit of God, and that the people may hear, learn, obey, and rejoice in the truth.

No. Lawrence, Douglas Co., Kansas.

From Sr. A. C. Taylor.

Dear friends in Christ:—As there is an invitation given to the Brn. and Srs. to write for the Crisis, I thought I would try. I have taken the paper for the last two years, and should feel lost without it. It is a great comfort to me in my lonely hours. I have been deeply interested for two years past in what has been written on the subject of the speedy coming of our Redeemer, and I can say, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." I am tired of this wicked world; but I know if we trust in God he will bring us off victorious.

I thank you very much for remembering the poor, and sending the Crisis to me. I will try and pay you for it sometime. I believe it is two years since it was sent to me, but with poor health and poor means, I have failed to pay you any thing. I hope I shall be remembered in the prayers of christians, that I may be prepared to meet Jesus when he comes.

Winnebago Agency, Blue Earth Co., Minn.

From Bro. O. Sherwin.

Dear Brethren:—These are indeed perilous times in every sense, but there is one safe place, and that is to abide in Christ as branches abide in the vine. I lament the divisions that are so numerous among those who ought to love as brethren and be pitiful and courteous.

My heart is sad, and yet I rejoice in the Lord. Christ is made unto us of God, wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, so we may glory in him alone. I do believe the time is near when the Lord will come and bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the heart. Grace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I long to be with God's dear children. I feel sad and lonely in this world. Sin and sorrow, guilt and woe, have withered all my earthly joys; but I have a hope in Christ that never will fail, if I continue to the end. Then, let earthly friends forsake and leave me, God has promised me a home in his kingdom, and that is far better than an earthly home.

I love to hear of the near coming of Jesus,—that dear friend who has stood with me in all my troubles, and has promised to go through with me to the end. I must say every thing speaks in thunder tones that the Savior is near. O, may we all be faithful till he appears, then shall we appear with him in glory.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW OFTEN SHALL WE EAT?

Progress! "Never too old to learn," is as true in California as elsewhere. We have just made the acquaintance of a lady nearly sixty years of age, who, having exhausted the whole bill of specifics for dyspepsia, found herself debilitated, emaciated, and discouraged. Some old numbers of a Health Journal were placed in her hands. She read them as hungry men eat bread, and immediately adopted the "two-meal-a-day system." She followed this plan two years, and improved all the time, but still continued to have flatulence, headaches, and periodic sick stomach.

Satisfied that the final issues of life and death were in her own hands, she determined to adopt the "one-meal-a-day system." For one year past this white-headed mother has taken but one meal in twenty-four hours—that at noon. She says, "From the first day I began to feel like a new being, full of spring and elasticity. I have not had a headache or sour stomach; no ringing of the ears, or motes before my eyes. No troubled dreams or bad taste in my mouth. I work early and late. I visit and walk, and outrank in vigor and endurance all women of my age, and by far the largest number of the young women of the town and county."

Gems and fruit, or gems and vegetables, boiled meats and roasts, taken deliberately and well chewed, are used at noon.

We saw her, and neighbors who had known her many years. They say her restoration is a marvel and wonder to them. Her complexion is clear and rosy after a walk. She sleeps well. Her muscles are firm and general health excellent.

She is well satisfied that for fifty years of her life usefulness and vigor were both impaired by taking too much food. In other words, she was all that time trying to "dig her grave with her teeth!" This may seem harsh, but it is a fact known to many people, that the best of food, taken in excess, becomes an element of death rather than of life.

Whether one meal, or two, or three, best suit, each person must carefully observe and decide for themselves.

We know persons who constitutionally have a weak and slow pulse. Digestion and assimulation will be, or may be, correspondingly slow.. If of sedentary habits and brain-wise active—if, as soon as they read or converse, hands and feet become decidedly cold, then they better at least limit themselves to two meals, and a part of each should consist of crisp, dry food, to insure thorough mastication. Walking and working in the sunshine, both morning and evening, with rest in the middle of the day, will suit them best.—G. F. Young, M. D.

HOW LONG SHALL WE SLEEP?—The fact is, that as life becomes concentrated, and its pursuits more eager, short sleep and early rising becomes impossible. We take more sleep than our ancestors, we take more because we want more. Six hours' sleep will do very well for a plowman or a bricklayer, or any other man who has no exhaustion but that produced by manual labor, and the sooner he takes it after his labor is over, the better. But for a man whose labor is mental, the stress of work is on his brain and nervous system, and for him who is tired in the evening with a day of mental application, neither early to bed nor early to rise is wholesome. He needs letting down to the level of repose. The longer the interval between the active use of the brain and his retirement to bed, the better his chance for sleep and refreshment. To him an hour after midnight is probably as good as two hours before it, and even then his sleep will not so completely and quickly restore him as it will his neighbor who is physically tired. He must not only go to bed later, but lie longer. His best sleep probably lies in the early morning hours, when all the nervous excitement has passed away, and he is in absolute rest.—Science of Health.

SICK HEADACHE almost always depends upon an ill condition of the stomach from over-eating, and may be promptly relieved by drinking a teacupful of water, a little warm, every five minutes, until the stomach is so full of water that a feather, or finger in the throat will give it effectual discharge of all the stomach contains. If it is simply a nervous affection, sit in hot water for fifteen minutes. The philosophy of the action of the water is that it draws the excess of blood, which oppresses the interior organs, to the surface.—Hall's Journal of Health.

FAST EATING.—This is one of the most common, as it is one of the injurious habits to which the American people are addicted. Especially is this true of business and professional men, although it pervades all classes of society to a greater or less degree. Thousands of business men do not allow themselves over ten minutes for dinner and many not more than half that. They shovel food into their stomachs as a laborer would shovel dirt into a cart.

THIN SHOES.—Do thin shoes ever cause consumption? Yes, in multitudes of cases this is a prominent cause. In cold, damp weather, a pair of thin shoes should not be worn, except in the house, where they are always desirable.

— Intemperance in no form can exist where health is the uppermost aim.

THE BEAUTIFUL WORLD.

SELECTED BY H. STINSON.

There's beauty in the sunshine,
There's beauty in the showers,
There's beauty in the wildwood,
There's beauty in the flowers.
The valley and the mountain,
The ocean and the plain,
In beauty robed entrance the heart,
And every sense enchain.

But there's a world of promise
More beautiful and pure,
Where all that's bright and lovely
Forever shall endure.
No angry storms assail it,
No blast, nor sickly blight,
No chilling winds, no burning heat,
No dark and dreary night.

We weep, for here we languish,
But there's no sorrow there;
The eye that fondly gazes
Shall never shed a tear.
No pangs of sad bereavement
Shall pierce the mourner's heart;
No grassy grave shall mar the ground,
No death shall hurl the dart.

One season bland and vernal
Shall bless that hallowed ground,
And changeless and eternal
Shall beauty smile around.
From hunger, thirst, and weakness
The ransomed souls are free;
They drink the stream and pluck the fruit
Of immortality.

DID CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, MAKE THE WORLD?---No. 6.

J. S. WHITE.

It is supposed by some that if Christ did not make the world, he did not exist before the world was made, nor at that time, and that he had no existence till he was in the flesh. This by no means follows. Angels were created before the world was made, and of course before man was made; but we have no account that they had any hand in the creation. If Christ had no pre-existence, he was not "the beginning of the creation of God," though the Bible affirms it; for angels were created, the earth, and all things else named; and man was created more than four thousand years before the Son of God existed. If so, then the Son of God does not have the pre-eminence in all things; for angels, the world, man, and he who "was a liar from the beginning," are all much older than God's Son.

We now come to Hebrews first chapter. The reader will notice that Paul in this chapter shows the difference between the angels and the Son in point of dignity, and also in what God the Father has said to them and of them. "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds."

If we say through him, it does not change the sense in the least. The Greek dia is rendered by more than a hundred times in the N. T., when it means precisely the same as if it were rendered through. It is a mere choice of words, having the same meaning, as every one knows who has looked at this word in the Greek. God spake by the prophets, or he spake through the prophets. Either word shows that the prophets must have existed at the time the speaking was done. So if God created all things by his Son, or through his Son, his Son must have been there when the work was done. If we say that A did a piece of work through B, or by B, B must have been there when the work was performed. Or, could he do the work through B, before B was born?

We are reminded that "worlds" in the second verse is not from kosmos, but from aionas. Some seem to think that kosmos always means the earth. This is not so. It is rendered world more than thirty times, referring to the people of the earth. Aionas is the plural of aion, and aionos. Neither of these words is rendered age or ages once in the N. T. They are mostly rendered ever, forever, everlasting, forever and ever, eternal, etc. Aion is rendered world where it cannot apply to an age; as in Matt. 13: 22, Mark 4: 19. Aionos is rendered world where it does not mean an age, as in 1 Corinthians 1: 20; 2: 8; Galatians 1: 4; Eph. 6: 12; Heb. 6: 5. Aionas is used in four places connected with aionon, and rendered forever and ever. Rev. 15: 7; 19: 3; 20: 10; 22: 5. Aiosi is in Eph. 2: 7, and rendered ages. "That in the ages to come, he might show the exceeding riches of his grace." In Hebrews 11: 3, aionas occurs. The same word is in Hebrews 1: 2. "Through faith we understand that the worlds [aionas] were framed by the word of God." In Heb. 1: 2 it reads, "By whom he made the worlds" (aionas). In 11: 3,—"The worlds [aionas] were framed by the word of God" This agrees with John—"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." And Paul agrees with himself by using aionas in chap. 1: 2, and in 11: 3. If we should say "ages" in one place, we should in the other. But suppose it should read, By whom he made the ages? It would follow that the Son was there when the ages were made, and that this was done by, or through the Son; hence the pre-existence of Christ is established, turn it any way you will.

"But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever; a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows. And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning, hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands; they shall perish, but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed; but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail." Heb. 1: 8-12. The eighth and ninth verses are an exact quotation from Ps. 45. The tenth, eleventh and twelfth verses are a quotation from Ps. 102, nearly word for word. Paul affirms that God has said all this to his Son. What he has said is true, or it is not. No effort is made to show that the last three verses named are not translated as they should be. No trying to change the words to make them say something else. What then must be done to show that Christ did not make the world? Paul must be contradicted. It must be shown, if possible, that David, in Ps. 102, made no reference to the Son of God. If David did not refer to the Son, and if Paul did refer to David, then Paul was mistaken, to say the least, in applying David's words to God's Son. And if Paul said what he did, without any reference to David, as if by the inspiration of God, and if the Son did not make the world, then Paul was mistaken; and so in either case what Paul has said is not true.

We had a Mr. C. in Boston some two or three years since, who claimed that God had raised him up to correct the Bible, and that he was the only one that could do it. At one time, we heard him say publicly that what Paul said in Gal. 3: 16 "was a lie"; that Christ was not the seed of Abraham spoken of in the promise. We asked him at the time, if he meant to say that Paul lied? He said, No; but what he said was a lie, because it was not true. He said Paul was honest, and did the best he knew; he did not know any better than to say some things that were false. Mr. C. did not take a round-about way to contradict Paul, but met him, as it were, face to face, and told him plainly that what he had said was a lie. Paul does say that God said to his Son, "Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands." Whether David in Ps. 102 referred to Christ, or whether Paul referred to this Psalm or not, it does not affect Paul's statement, that God did say to his Son, "Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands." In the face of this, we are told that "CHRIST DID NOT MAKE THE WORLD." This is not saying in so many words that what Paul has here said is a lie, but is it not the same thing?

It is admitted that "the plural 'us,' in Gen. 1: 26 no doubt refers to God the Father and to God the Son"; yet it is claimed that God had no Son at the time he said this, and had none for more than four thousand years; and that the text and context show that Gen. 1: 26-28 is to be considered in a prophetic sense, covering a period of six thousand years of this world's history; God the Father making man of the dust of the ground, in his own image, at the beginning of the six thousand years, and God the Son re-making man at the end of the six thousand years. The context referred to gives not the least intimation that man would ever sin, or die, or that he would need a Savior, or that he would ever need to be re-made, or reconstructed. I have heard of another exposition of this text; viz., that when God said, Let us make man, he spoke as the Editor of a newspaper does when he says "us" and "we," meaning only himself! Which of the two expositions is the more absurd, is hard to say. God said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness"; using the plural three times, and yet there was no plural there! I don't know but the exposition of the Editor is to be preferred. And God did make man. Male and female made he them. This is all the making that is brought to view in the text and context. No other making is, in the remotest sense, intimated.

If a man should say that he does not and cannot believe that the All-wise, Eternal, and self-existent God "migrated, or was transmigrated into the Virgin Mary, and there so changed or reconstructed as to become Jesus of Nazareth," he would say what everybody else would say. I know of no one who believes this. This supposing what nobody believes, and then trying to overthrow it, is a side issue, and has nothing to do with the subject. Did the Son of God exist before the world was made? and did he make the world? and did he with his Father make man? and did that Son become David's son in the flesh? These are the questions before us. If one should say that he cannot see how this Son could be born of Mary, and become Jesus of Nazareth, and therefore he should reject it; then because he cannot see how God can be self-existent, how the world, and man, and all things else, could be created, he should not believe that. The objection is simply this: because we, finite beings, cannot see how God could do some things, therefore he did not do them. "With God all things are possible."

Christ is "the root and offspring of David." As the Son of God, he was before David. As the Son of man, he was after David. He could not be the offspring of David until David existed. And David could not have been the branch until the root existed. Speaking to the Romans, Paul said, "If the root be holy, so are the branches." "Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee." Rom. 11: 16, 18. Abraham was the root of the Jewish people, who were his branches. The root must precede the branches. Jesus says, "I am the root and offspring of David, and the bright and morning star." Rev. 22: 16. See Isa. 11: 1, 10. Christ, to be the root of David, must precede David. He was the maker of David, inasmuch as he, with his Father, did make man. He said to the Jews, "Before Abraham was, I am." If David came into being before the Son of God did, then the branch preceded the root. If this be so, then the figure used by Christ and Paul has no meaning. It would be like saying the branch is produced before the root, from which the branches come, or have any existence. "I am the root . . . of David." But if Christ did not exist until after David, David was the root of Christ. Who, then, has the pre-eminence?

"Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." After this statement, which shows that the Father and Son were present, and that they did make man, it was not necessary to repeat the plural. The Father and Son are one. In the work of creation they are one and the same. Hence it is said that God made man. This includes his Son, to whom he proposed to make man, and who was in the bosom of the Father. Where God is named as the maker of the world, the upholder of all things, the Judge and Savior of men, his Son is included in this work from the beginning to the end. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else." Isa. 45: 22. This text includes all passages where God is spoken of in the singular number as being the one and only true God, and Creator, and Judge, and Savior. God has as plainly said there is no Savior beside him, as that there is no God beside him. "I, even I, am the Lord, and beside me there is no Savior." Isa. 43: 11. "Yet I am the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt, and thou shalt know no God but me; fot there is no Savior beside me." Hos 13: 4.

Did God make the world? so did his Son. Does he uphold all things by his power? so does his Son. Is he the Judge of all the earth? so is his Son. Is he the Savior of the world? so is his Son. Is he the mighty and true God? so is his Son. Isa. 9: 6; 1 John 5: 20. And so we might go on. Christ is in the "Godhead." "He that built all things is God." Heb. 3: 4. "God was manifest in the flesh." 1 Tim. 3: 16. "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father." John 14: 9. "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Matt. 4: 10. "When he bringeth in the first-begotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him." Heb. 1: 6. "I am the Lord; that is my name; and I will not give my glory to another." Isa. 42: 8. But God does give his glory to his Son. Why? Because they are one. "Beside me there is no Savior." Yet God's Son is the Savior. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4: 12. "There is no God beside me; a just God and a Savior; there is none beside me." Isa. 45: 21. These phrases in the singular are not used to show that Christ is not both God and Savior. Might as well say, because Christ, God's Son, is the only Savior, and the true God and eternal life, therefore God the Father is not the true God and eternal life, and that he is not the Savior. "To us there is but one God." 1 Cor. 8: 6. If the apostle had stopped here, unless he included Christ in the phrase, it would have been a contradiction of all the places where Christ is called God. But he says, "But one God the Father." "One God and Father of all." Eph. 4: 6. There is but one God and Father of all; for Christ is not the father of his Father, but the Son of the Father. "Whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever." Rom. 9: 5. God is Judge, and he will judge men by or through Jesus Christ. God shall judge the world; and his Son will judge the world. They are one in this matter.

The same names that are applied to God, are applied to his Son, both in the Old and New Testaments. "The Lord [Jehovah] said unto my Lord" (Adonai). Ps. 110: 1. 1. Adonai is here noticed, as if it did not mean "Jehovah," and to show that Christ did not make the world. But this word is in Ps. 90: 1. "Lord [Adonai], thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." vs. 1, 2. "Jehovah" is applied to Christ. "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord [Jehovah], make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Isa. 40: 3. The Branch of David, who is to reign, is called "The Lord [Jehovah] our Righteousness." See Jer. 23: 5, 6. "They shall look on me whom they pierced." Dr. Gill renders it, "On Jehovah, whom they pierced."

Mr. Cruden says:—"The Hebrews give to God, generally, the name of Jehovah,—he who exists of himself, and gives being and existence to others; this is a name ineffable and mysterious, which denotes the eternity, the immutability and independency of God, and the infallible certainty of his word and promises. The import of this name is opened and predicated of Christ in Rev. 1: 4, 8. The Hebrews had such a veneration for this name, that they never pronounced it, but instead of it made use of that of Adonai, and of Elohi, or Elohim. They likewise called him El, which signifies strong; or Shaddai, whereby may be meant one who is self-sufficient; according to another pronunciation, the Destroyer,—the powerful One; Elion, the Most High; or El-Sabaoth, the God of Hosts; or Ji, God."

It will be borne in mind that the Hebrews called Jehovah Adonai. This is the word we have been referred to, to show that David's Lord was not Jehovah; that he was superior to Jehovah, and that he did not create nor make anything; and that he was nobody before he came down from heaven. The words in the N. T. corresponding with Jehovah—Adonai, etc—are Theos and Kurious, rendered God and Lord. These words are applied both to the Father and Son all the way through the book. "Is there a God beside me? Yea, there is no God; I know not any." Isa. 44: 8. In this chapter, as the reader will see, God reproves the people for making and worshiping idol gods. In so doing he says, "I am God, and beside me there is no God." This is said in contrast with all false gods that men worship. And so in 43: 11—"I, even I, am the Lord, and beside me there is no Savior."

Now to say that these and parallel passages prove that God had no Son, or that Christ is not both God and Savior, is to make God contradict himself all the way through the Bible. If these texts are not referred to for this purpose, for what purpose are they referred to? No other name is given under heaven by which man can be saved, than the name of God's Son. Without God the Father there is no Savior for man, and equally true that without God the Son, there is no Savior. When God said, There is no God and no Savior beside me, if he meant that his Son was not God and Savior;—to say this, is to say what is false on the face of it, and is a perversion of Scripture scarcely matched in the history of men. Peter said, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Does this exclude God the Father? Has not God given his name under heaven as the Savior, beside whom there is no other? Peter gives the name of Christ, in contrast with the names of men and angels, as the only one by which we can be saved. So God in the O. T. spoke of himself as God and Savior, beside whom there is no other, in contrast with all the gods and saviors in which men trusted, and which they worshiped. If the passages referred to in the prophets exclude God the Son from being God and Savior, then Peter in Acts 4: 12 excludes God the Father from being God and Savior.

What is affirmed of God in Isa. 44: 6,—"I am the first, and I am the last,"—is affirmed of God's Son in Rev. 1: 8, 11. If it be said that Christ is first and last in the work of redemption, it is true. But when did the work of redemption begin? Did it not begin as far back as when God said, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head"? Christ was a "lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Commence the work of redemption where you will, the Son of God was there; for he is the first, as well as the last. The Father and the Son made the world, and they made man. "Let us make man." And they will remake man, or restore man, by the resurrection from the dead. "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8: 11. Christ will raise the dead, and the Father will raise the dead by, or through Christ. Christ will judge the world, and God will judge the world by, or through Christ. Christ made the world, and God made the world by or through Christ. God's Word affirms all this, and there are some who can see through it. "I and my Father are one."

HEB. 13: 1.

"Let brotherly love continue."

This language was spoken by one who had some experience in church trouble. Some contended for him (Paul), some for Apollos, some for one, and some for another; and yet he never seemed to deny by his life and daily deportment, this teaching. It makes little difference how much men pretend to love God, his cause, and his people, if by their actions (which often speak louder than words), they deny their profession.

The fundamental principle of Christianity has been stated in such a manner that it is impossible for it to be changed so as to admit of any selfish, worldly object. The will of the carnal man cannot predominate, and the love of God be manifest at the same time. Hence Scripture affirms that christian love and fellowship is unfeigned. Says Paul (2 Cor. 6: 6), "By kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned." Says Peter—"Seeing that ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth, through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with pure hearts fervently."

Christian love and fellowship is not bounded by human creeds, faiths, or gospel, but is tested by its durability; consequently Paul says, "Charity (or love) suffereth long, and is kind; envieth not, is not puffed up; doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil. Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth. Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth." 1 Cor. 13. Then love for the brotherhood must dwell among all true believers in Christ. It cannot dwell in one who wishes to cause the ruin or downfall of any, or who works discord, contention, or division among God's people. Hence we see the propriety of the language, "Let brotherly love continue." The apostle tells us that if a man says he loves God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he who loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? "And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God, loveth his brother also." "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us." "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth." Paul continues this argument when he says, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling symbol. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." Therefore, I ask, do you love the brethren in deed and in truth? If you have the love of God, you will not work discord and division, and talk with evil design against them, small or great. We should manifest the love of Christ by kindness and goodwill toward all men, especially the household of faith. Souls are perishing all around, and you have no time to squander in opposing God's cause by evil surmisings or petty quarrels about who shall be greatest. Better be the least,—unnoticed by the masses, than to injure the least of God's little ones. It is better that a millstone be hanged about the neck, and such be cast into the sea, than they should offend one of his little ones. "Let brotherly love continue.

HOME-BORN CITIZENS AND STRANGERS.

OBJECTIONS AND DIFFICULTIES.

G. W. STETSON.

When our Savior began the work of redemption for the human race, by which he was to bring many sons unto glory, he did it by taking on our life, as the "seed of the woman," to the end that our human nature in him should be regenerated, i. e., reproduced in a birth of the Spirit, and so made into a likeness of a son of God; and having carried that nature through all its processes and transformations to perfection (Heb. 5: 9), he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him. So to speak, the divine nature stooped down to man, and received gifts in man, as man, for men; and now he reverses this order to man, and asks man to come to God, and take hold of the divine life that is now in him; that he may raise man up to God by a divine begetting, quickening and birth, into the family of God. "So is the kingdom of God; as if a man should cast seed into the ground, . . . and the seed should spring and grow up, . . . first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." Mark 4: 26-28. That last state is of the children in the kingdom,—the resurrected immortal state, the consummation of the "groaning creation, travailing in pain until now"; but to "be delivered from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Rom. 8: 19. "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened. Not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." 2 Cor. 5: 4. "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." Rom. 8: 18.

The result of a natural begetting, quickening and birth was manifested in the product of a natural body; and the manifested result of a spiritual begetting, quickening and birth will be a spiritual body.

Allowing this to be true, how can we properly account for the many expressions in the many passages spoken of believers, as children, sons, heirs, babes, new-born babes, and so on? I feel very grateful that God's Word does not leave us in the dark on this point, but is full of light and instruction.

The foundation for these endearing expressions of citizenship and kindred relationship are laid away back in Genesis, and God at a very early period began to unfold his plans and purposes in Christ to the children of men, concerning human redemption. In his covenant with Abraham, the children of Sarah, through Isaac, were the children of promise, and represented the regenerated spiritual seed, or that seed which was subsequently to be "born of the Spirit." On the other hand, the children of Hagar were not counted as the children of promise, being "after the flesh"; and they represented the race in an unregenerate state. These two classes were, in general terms, designated "Israel" (or Jew) and "Gentile." The one were (by terms of the covenant) deemed and called "children and citizens"; the other "strangers and foreigners," "aliens."

When God called Moses to lead the children of Israel out of Egypt, and gave him the ordinance of the passover he said, in Ex. 12: 48, "When a stranger [Gentile] shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the Lord, let all the males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land. . . . One law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger." The Gentile here became a citizen by naturalization, and a child by adoption, but not by birth.

Now Paul says, in Eph. 2: 12, 13, "We who were aliens . . . and strangers . . . who were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Verse 19,—"Therefore we are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and [are] of the household of God"; consequently spoken of as "children," as "new-born babes"; but not children by birth, for we are constituted children, citizens, and of the household, by virtue of naturalization through the true "circumcision made without hands" (in Christ), which is of the heart, spiritual, not literal; having received a spirit of sonship (Rom. 8: 15,—Diaglott trans.), but still waiting, looking, hoping and groaning for sonship. v. 23. So it seems we are now children, sons, heirs of God, by the adopting Spirit given us through faith, and are yet to be brought into the possession of the inheritance by actual birth,—by being born again of the Spirit.

To make conversion the "new birth" of the Spirit is to establish on an immovable foundation the doctrine of "once in grace, always in grace";—to tear up by the roots the very idea of any possibility of "falling away";—for such a thing as proving to be "a castaway" (literally, an abortion) subsequent to birth is a paradox that needs no comment. But the worst of all is, the terrible dilemma that little children are placed in by such application and definition of terms. They have never been converted, and not any probability that they will be in death. "Except a man be born," etc. John 3: 5. Man, in this sentence, is a generic term, and comprehends the race,—any and every person, each and all, old or young; so that, look at it as you may, work at it as you please, it cuts off and casts away all children, as well as adults not converted. To say they do not need it, is to contradict the Savior; for he says there is need of being born again, and he makes no exceptions or limitations, but he has made provision and devised a way in and by which these sin-atoned-for children may "come again from the land of the enemy, and be brought to their own border," through a birth of the Spirit, by a resurrection from among the dead ones; the same way in and by which he himself came,—by being "brought again from the dead"; by being "born again," "born of the Spirit," even though they have not been converted. But give to children or adults an immortal birth of the Spirit here, and now, and so long as the world stands in its present state, there will be plenty of work to do in "laying the ghosts" raised, by giving them life and being, by a birth, but which will neither "out" nor "down" at our bidding. Neither will men believe, nor can they be made to believe that they have been born, and live, and do not "cry" or "sing" somewhere. The unconsciousness of the dead may be preached, and sung, and printed, and prayed,—it will amount to just what the effort of the reformers did when they undertook to "squelch" purgatory by putting souls at death straight into heaven or hell, if we say they are born in conversion. Oh! oh! oh!

MAN.

E. P. FERGUSON.

By investigating the works of nature we find that everything seems adapted to fulfill the design of the Creator. We perceive the same adaptation and provision throughout the whole range of nature. And how is it with man? He is a being of a high order, and of course made for a high destiny. He has a mind, which is a thinking power. Man not only eats, drinks, sleeps and feels as animals do, but he brings many ideas together, and reasons upon tnem. This reasoning part of man is evidently the characteristic element in which he is superior to all the other animal creation. I do not say the animals do not reason to some extent, but I do say that reason is not the leading, controlling faculty as in man. Man, then, is an intellectual being; and is provided with all that is needed to enable him to fulfill his destiny as such.

One of the chief traits in man is a desire for happiness. This seems to lie at the very foundation of his character. He always acts upon it, and he never for a moment forgets it. It is as much a fixed law of his nature as attraction or gravitation in matter. All that a man hath will he give for his life, for without life, he cannot be happy. His desire for happiness reaches to immortality, or eternal life, in order to be eternally happy. This is one of the leading features of distinction between man and animals; for man looks forward to futurity, but the animal never.

Anticipation is one of the leading characteristics of man, but it does not dwell in animals. It is a faculty that belongs alone to mind. Man not only wishes for happiness, but for happiness which lasts forever. You tell him he must die, and his mind is filled with horror. He not only wishes to continue to exist, to think and act, but he has an innate desire to be himself.

Has God made man a thinking being, one that desires happiness and continued existence from the very necessity of his nature, and made him so that he expects such existence, without providing the means whereby he may gain the desire of his nature? Did God design that man should be born into the world only to see and admire its beauties and glories, and then cause him to lie down and die like the beasts that perish? No. Then having made man to hope for and expect eternal life, God has provided the means whereby he may obtain it. We are told that man is to seek by patient continuance in well doing, for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. It is true that with all our study, we cannot fully understand all the designs of the Creator, even in the works of nature which come under our observation; but does not this desire for eternal life correspond to the truth that God has made immortality attainable by us?

There is a principle in man which appears to be as extensive as the race. It is a feeling of obligation to do what is right. There are few persons, even among the most degraded savage tribes, in whom this feeling cannot be traced. If we have done wrong, there is something within which upbraids us for it,—something which seems to sit in judgment upon our conduct, and brings in a verdict of guilty. This inward monitor is called conscience; and it distinguishes man from animals. While they are only governed by their desires and appetites, man is made capable of acting from a sense of duty, and from a regard to the good of his fellowmen. He is made the subject of moral government. He can appreciate truth, kindness, charity, justice, candor, patience, benevolence, and other virtues; and can perceive the deformity of falsehood and vice. Justice implies the obligation to render to every one his due. But it has a still wider signification. It not only binds us to deal equitably, but it requires us to respect the feelings and character of others. If we take advantage of a man in a bargain, we cheat him; if we take away his goods or merchandise without his consent, we are guilty of theft. For these acts of injustice, human laws provide a punishment. There are many persons who would be shocked at the thought of cheating, who have no scruples in stealing away his peace of mind, or robbing him of his fair fame or good name. It should not be forgotten that justice requires fair dealing in the one case as well as the other. If human law watches over the rights of property, the All seeing Eye of justice watches over the more sacred rights of character. "He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who robs me of my good name, leaves me poor indeed."

Man was designed to be made happy by the gratification of his desires; but when the gratification of desire is at variance with virtue, then a greater happiness is to be obtained by self-denial; or, in other words, our greatest happiness is to be obtained, not by the various modes of self-gratification, but by simply seeking the good of others.

The Bible tells us that God made man upright. Can he by any fair means be said to be a man, in the Bible sense, unless he retains that uprightness, or obtains it from some other source? St. Paul says, "if any man be in Christ, he [is] a new creature;" and this alone makes us right before God.

FAITH.

L. A. [illegible]ABLER.

I thought I would pen a few lines from my own experience, thinking it might do for others what it has done for me. When I began to realize that earthly hopes must perish and pass away, I began to look about me in search of something for a hope that I could build upon, and feel certain of, and not be in constant fear of losing. Nothing but the Bible offered me anything of that kind. Was that book true? was the point. I had been taught that it was, but that was not sufficient for me. I must see it for myself. So I investigated day and night, all the time I could get from my daily cares. First, I read Nelson's "Cause and Cure of Infidelity," and then read the Bible and as much history connected with it as I could. The light I got from those books soon proved to be as Nelson calls it, a "powerful remedy." But when I turned my feet into the commandments of the Lord, and gave up all, and ventured out on what faith I had, I found I had an all powerful remedy. The apostle says, "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Faith is one fruit of the Spirit, so by the Word and by the Spirit, we have enough to make our faith a certainty to us. I cannot conceive how any honest person can carefully read the prophecies of the Old Testament, their fulfillment, the birth, baptism, miracles, death, resurrection and ascension of Christ, and the descent of the Spirit at Pentecost, without feeling that there is life or death for them in that book. Ignorance of the Bible is a very prolific source of unbelief in it. It commends itself to our reason as truth. Were it got up by designing men it could not teach the precepts it now does.

THE HALO.

B. S. WILLARD.

Oh! if ever the Sun of righteousness looks beautiful, it is when it rises so bright over the gloom of the grave, as to dispel it, and cause the believing heart to rejoice in hope of the glory of God soon to be revealed. "My husband is dead," said the stricken one, "My husband is dead," and not, as some believe, partly dead and partly alive; but he died in the Lord; therefore he will soon be restored to me, and I to him, where sickness and death can never come."

As she spoke these words, her tears ceased to flow, and a smile of joy lit up her face, that shed a halo over the scene. O, how my own heart swelled with praise at such blessed consolation, as the Bible pours into the wounded, bleeding heart in the hour of bereavement! Nothing short of the hope of a resurrection of the dead one, can meet the case;—the hope that I shall see him again,—that he will be restored to me and I to him in a perfect state only can make the stroke bearable. I'm glad I'm a christian.

IT is easy to shout with the multitude; it is hard to raise one feeble voice against their loud derisive roar. Yet if that single voice be that of truth, it shall at last be heard in tones of thunder, when the wild strife of tongues, which sought to drown it, is hushed in the eternal silence which awaits all lies.

DUTIES OF THE HOUR.

We need not spend time to show that the present hour is one of no ordinary interest to the inhabitants of the earth. It may well be said in the language of Scripture, "The hour of his judgment is come." He who carefully traces the prophetic stream of kingdoms from Babylon through Media and Persia, Grecia and Rome, must be compelled to admit that we are very near the end of the last things named by the prophet that will transpire before the coming of Christ. The prophecies have been fulfilled with an accuracy that leaves no room to fear that the few remaining items to be accomplished will prove a failure. The signs to be seen in the last generation of men, who shall be alive when our Lord shall appear, are the signs that have been seen in the present generation. The state of society to exist "in the time of the end" exists now; the political condition of the world corresponds with the prophet's description when speaking of the times just before the opening of the great judgment day; the moral aspect just fills the prophetic picture of "the last days," thus affording demonstration that Christ will soon appear to set up "the kingdom." There is a deep, settled feeling in the hearts of the saints that these things are so; and that the great event can be but a short distance in the future.

In view of these startling facts, we may properly inquire, What are "the duties of the hour"? What should be done and said? Before the opening of great events, there are usually special duties to be performed. Before the flood, the ark must be built to save the righteous, and the people faithfully warned, so that they should be without excuse, if destroyed by the flood. So in Sodom, the note of alarm was given by righteous Lot, in order that all might escape out of the city who would heed the words of the good man; so when Jerusalem was about to be demolished by the Romans, timely warning was given for all to escape who believed the word of the Lord; and is it reasonable to suppose the greatest of all events is to transpire without a corresponding warning and preparation? Certainly not. It would be wholly unlike the Lord's doings in any other case in the past history of this world. Warnings precede judgments, so that all who wish may be ready, if they heed the note of alarm.

Believing what we do, seeing what we see, knowing what we know, what is our duty as a people in this momentous hour? But one reasonable answer can be given, and that is, to do all in our power to arouse the people everywhere to a sense of the surrounding perils of these "last days." If the watchman sees the enemy approaching, and does not give alarm, he has betrayed the trust committed to his care, and imperilled what he was commissioned to protect. Such an one in the army might expect to lose his life for his carelessness; and according to the Sacred Scriptures, the watchman on Zion's walls who neglects to blow the alarm trumpet in the hour of danger is held guilty of the blood of the people, and is liable to lose everything because of his reckless carelessness.

Of course, it is not always pleasant for the watchman to sound the alarm. He may much prefer to remain silent and let another do it, as did Jonah; but he who refuses cannot expect to prosper. There are many, no doubt, at the present time who see the signs of the times, and also believe the Lord is soon coming, and yet are trying, like Jonah, to get around the cross, and avoid telling to the people their honest convictions, lest they lose friends, injure their business, or tarnish their fair reputations. Will the Lord say "Well done" to such when he comes?

The present hour calls for men who are willing to sacrifice reputation, friends, home, ease, business, all, for Jesus; and who will not hesitate to declare the whole truth on all proper occasions, with a kind, christian spirit, without stopping to inquire whether they shall receive the praise or frowns of those who hear from the stirring proclamation due at this time,—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" Men and money are needed now to send the good news in all directions. Those who cannot go themselves should do what they can to aid others who are called to herald the glad tidings to a ruined world that their holy King is about to return and reign in righteousness.

Let the farmer, the mechanic, the merchant, and all classes of christians, devote a portion of their means to assist in this great work of arousing a sleeping church and world to the importance of making immediate preparation for the world to come. There is no time to lose. Tracts and papers should be sent everywhere, that by all means some may be saved. Time is short. Are there not new men who will step forth to the front, and stand in the heat of the coming conflict, clothed with the whole armor of God, consecrating their entire being to the service of Christ, and the proclamation of the Lord's coming? men whose hearts are filled with the Holy Spirit, free from sectarianism, self-will, self-love, roots of bitterness, hatred, or variance? men who know from happy experience that the blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin, and are willing to bear the reproach that may arise when they declare this glorious, blessed, all-important truth that belongs especially with the judgment message? Let such men speak, and the Lord will be their sun and shield. Let them mount the watch-towers of Zion, and be true to their trust, and a crown of life will soon be given. Such will find themselves girded with more than human strength, filled with great peace, perfect love, and an evidence of their acceptance darkened by no doubts.

Praise the Lord. Bless his holy name. Dear saints, we are nearing home. Cheer up, lone pilgrim. The journey to the heavenly Canaan is nearly completed. We shall soon arrive at the celestial gate. Let all who expect admittance see that they are clothed with the spotless robe of Christ's righteousness, for without holiness "no man shall see the Lord." M. G.

"HERE A LITTLE AND THERE A LITTLE." ISA. 28:13.

God has been pleased to give his inspired truth in small detached portions—isolated sentences, like the manna in the wilderness, and is designed to be collected and associated so that one part will serve to explain and confirm another. It also serves to combine the testimony of different inspired writers, who presented the same subjects at different times in a variety of styles. Inspiration has given us just what is needed to a proper understanding of each subject revealed, and it is necessary to collect them into a class, so that the different parts of the subject may be seen in connection.

We will now group together a few passages which we understand the Spirit designed to apply to the same great events.

"God came from Teman, and the Holy One from mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. And his brightness was as the light; he had horns coming out of his hand, and there was the hiding of his power. Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet. He stood, and measured the earth; he beheld, and drove asunder the nations; and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow; his ways are everlasting." Hab. 3:3-6.

This passage seems ambiguous, but the events appear grand and wonderful, and are presented in a peculiar style. If the same events were not presented by other inspired writers in different style and in different language, its interpretation and application might be doubtful; but when the other littles are connected, we think the subject becomes plain, and its location definite. To find parallel passages to this, or belonging to this class, we must look for those describing the same circumstances. In passage number one, we have the following events presented. 1. The coming of God and the Holy One. 2. That coming was attended with glory which covered the heavens. 3. The earth was then filled with his praise. 4. His brightness was as the light—universal—extending every where. 5. He had horns coming out of his hand; and there was the hiding of his power. Horns symbolically represent regal, kingly power; therefore, the expression signifies that the Holy One, when he comes, will manifest kingly authority on the earth. 6. Preceding his coming will be pestilence, which will be an indication of his approach. 7. When he comes "burning coals"—fire—will be under his feet, or on the earth. 8. He will measure the earth, that is, comprehend it, invest it, take it into his power, to dispose of it according to his pleasure. 9. He will drive "asunder the nations"—dash them in pieces—break up their governments. 10. The mountains will be scattered, the hills bow, the earth will be terribly shaken. 11. His ways will be everlasting. He will establish every thing in a fixed, eternal, changeless state.

We will now look for passages presenting the same events in the same order. Isa. says:—

"Oh that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence. As when the melting fire burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil; to make thy name known to thine adversaries, that the nations may tremble at thy presence! When thou didst terrible things which we looked not for, thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence. For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him."

This passage evidently belongs in the same class with the first, giving a number of the same events in the same order. In this, the Lord's coming is presented, the "mountains" flow down, "the fire" burneth, "the nations" tremble at his "presence," as in that passage, with additions of the rending of the heavens and the "waiting" for his coming.

Jeremiah says:—"For my people is foolish, they have not known me; they are sottish children, and they have none understanding; they are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge. I beheld the earth, and, lo, it was without form, and void; and the heavens, and they had no light. I beheld the mountains, and, lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly. I beheld, and lo, there was no man, and all the birds of the heavens were fled. I beheld, and, lo, the fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at the presence of the Lord, and by his fierce anger. Chap. 4:22-26."

Here we get some of the same great events with additional specifications. The earth is shaken, also the "mountains" and "hills" at the "presence of the Lord," with the additional facts that these events would be preceded by a great lack of "understanding" of heavenly things, while they would be wise in worldly wisdom, and that these convulsions and this melting fire would destroy the earth's "form," and leave it "void" of "cities," men and "birds."

Ezekiel says:—"And it shall come to pass at the same time, when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face. For in my jealousy, and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken. Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel. So that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence; and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground. And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord God: every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire and brimstone. Thus will I magnify myself, and sanctify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations; and they shall know that I am the Lord." Chap. 38:18-23.

Ezekiel evidently saw, as recorded in this text, just what the other prophets saw. He describes the "shaking" of the "land" and "mountains," "men," "beasts," and "fowls," at the "presence of the Lord, with "fire," and brimstone. He specifies some of the "nations" referred to by the other prophets, who will figure in these scenes. Gog (the Czar of Russia), who will "at that day" go to the land of Israel, or Palestine, when all that dwell upon the earth shall "shake at the presence" of the Lord.

The Psalmist gives his testimony thus:—"Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Ps. 54:3-5.

We get in this text the same coming of God with devouring "fire," and also the judgment, when his saints will be gathered together.

Again he says:—"Clouds and darkness are round about him; righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne. A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about. His lightnings enlightened the world; the earth saw and trembled. The hills melted like wax at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth." Ps. 97:2-5.

And again he testifies:—"The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved; he uttered his voice, the earth melted. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah. Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolations he hath made in the earth. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire." Ps. 46:6-9.

Isaiah sweeps his glass around to the wonderful scenes again, and says:—"For, behold, the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire and by his sword will the Lord plead with all flesh; and the slain of the Lord shall be many. Isa. 66:15-16.

Daniel, the chronological prophet, gives the same events, and thus locates them on the stream of time.

He says:—"I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destoyed, and given to the burning flame." Dan. 7:9-11.

Micah adds his little to this grand testimony of God, thus:—"For, behold, the Lord cometh forth out of his place, and will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth. And the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft, as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down a steep place." Micah 1:3, 4.

In all these passages the coming of the Lord is presented on the foreground, and connected with it is the shaking of the earth, the melting of the mountains and hills with fire, which shall "burn up the enemies" of the Lord, and the "nations" shall "tremble" at his "presence;" and all the cities of the world shall be "broken down;" and he shall judge his people and "gather" his "saints together" who have made a "covenant with him by sacrifice."

If we can find these scenes and events presented by the New Testament writers, we shall there get a divine interpretation of the passages, and their application, historically and chronologically.

Jesus says:—"As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Matt. 13:40-43. "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24:30, 31.

This is the same coming of the Lord as the prophets foretold; for in both cases the tribes or nations are distressed, and the "saints" are "gathered together."

Paul applies the predictions in writing to his brethren thus:—"And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day." 2 Thess. 1:7-10.

He has grouped in this text the coming of the Lord, the burning fire, the punishment of the wicked and the glorification of the saints, exactly as in the other passages. Peter gives his testimony as follows: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. . . . But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?" 2 Pet. 3:3, 4, 10-12.

Peter's testimony harmonizes exactly with all who have preceded him in this classification.

The Revelator takes up the sublime strain in his visions and says:—"And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. 6:14-17.

Again he says:—"Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame. And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon. And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, It is done. And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great. And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell; and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath. And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found, and there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent." Rev. 16:15-21.

The inspired writers through these passages echo to us the voice of Jehovah. They describe a group of the most important and sublime events ever portrayed to the human mind. Their testimony is harmonious and clear. Their authority rests upon the veracity of Jehovah. The wonderful scenes foreshadowed are nearly due. May we all find safety in the keeping of the great Immanuel. J. C.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16:3.

After the signs are seen "in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars," as declared in Luke 21:25, then next are to be seen some signs "upon the earth," which shows that the signs already noticed were to be seen in the literal heavens, in the literal sun, moon, and stars. Indeed, we do not find a single figurative expression in the whole conversation that Jesus had with his disciples, as recorded in Matt. 24, or Luke 21, from the question asked at the beginning, till after he has given all the signs that were to be seen before his coming. When the signs to be seen in the heavens have been witnessed, then Jesus said there would come "upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity." We need not spend time in showing that such a state of things is at our doors, and is rapidly advancing with a terrible front, that makes stout hearts quail and tremble. Much is said and written on this subject by men who pay no attention to the teaching of the Bible, who seem not to know that the Savior and the prophets have told us "that in the last days," after the signs had been seen in the heavens, there would be just such a state of things as now exists in the world, and this sad state of affairs would continue to grow "worse and worse" till the end. He who looks for moral improvements in the management of Satan, will only look to be disappointed. His last work and spirit will be furious and powerful. He is rallying his forces for the last deadly conflict; hence, those who are intending to overcome him in the terrible onset now approaching will need to be clad with "the whole armor of God." They will need especially to be "filled with the Spirit," which is the "power of God" in the saints. We are prophetically "informed "that in the last days" some will have the "form of godliness," and at the same time be "denying the power thereof." The power of godliness, or a God-likeness, is the Holy Spirit. The virgins who went forth to meet the Bridegroom that were foolish, were found in that condition, not because they did not expect him as fully as the wise, but because they lacked oil, which evidently represents the Holy Spirit.

A time is most certainly at hand, when men are to be sorely tried. Daniel informs us that at "the time of the end," "many shall be purified and made white, and tried." Dan. 12:9-10. Signs indicate that this Scripture is in process of fulfillment. Sore trials have already come upon many who have made a full surrender to Jesus, and if they will only bear them all patiently they will be greatly strengthened for the final conflict that now seems to be just at hand. The saints need these trials to fit them up fully for deliverance. Those who murmur at them will suffer loss. The hot fires bring out the dross, and then they fit the pure metal for moulding into any shape. In the trials we learn our own weakness, and need of help from a stronger than a human arm. Blessings are received through afflictions that can be obtained in no other way. Trials are as polishing stones, to take off the roughness of human nature, and fit us up as temples for the abode of the Holy Spirit. Hence trials are the last thing named before deliverance. Let them be received as blessings instead of calamities. He who is offended when persecution comes, loses the blessing he might have gained by bearing all patiently. Do not forget, it is written, if we "live godly in Christ Jesus," we shall suffer persecution." This is a part of the christian's legacy in this world, while surrounded by the Lord's enemies. He must expect his most bitter persecution from professors of religion, who have left their first love. But let there be no murmuring because of these things. Soon deliverance will come, and then we may sing with the redeemed the song of Moses and the Lamb.

But just before the arrival of the glad hour, Jesus said there would not only be "upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity," but there would be a roaring of the sea and waves, as though they were specially agitated, by new forces. This was most literally accomplished in 1868, as the following statements will show: "A letter from New Zealand, Aug. 28th, 1868, speaks of an extraordinary tidal wave at several points. At Wellington the tide kept rising and falling two or three times an hour, from low water to extreme high water. It caused immense excitement in the town. . . . At Oamaree the tide rose and fell fifteen feet in fifteen minutes; and at Littleton it receded suddenly to six feet below extreme low water level, and then came in with such a rush that it tore all the shipping away from the wharves, and caused tremendous confusion, and considerable damage. The tidal wave fell on the island of Hawaii, destroying a number of houses, and causing much loss of property."

The New York Tribune of Nov. 12th, 1868, when speaking of these things says the "tidal disturbances" are "the most remarkable and extensive of which there is any record." It is said their velocity was "about a thousand miles an hour." The Tribune says that by the tidal waves, "Both the great ocean waters of the Atlantic and Pacific have been agitated in their whole extent. We mention in particular the tidal waves at St. Thomas, and all the neighboring islands, which were full fifty feet in height. . . . It is said by those who have witnessed these waves that the ocean's roar is exceedingly frightful." At Arica, the British Vice Consul was an eye witness. He exclaims:

"Gracious God, what a sight! I saw all the vessels in the bay carried out irresistibly to sea (anchors and chains were as pack thread) probably with a speed of ten miles an hour. In a few minutes the great outward current stopped, stemmed by a mighty rising wave, I should judge about fifty feet high, which came in with an awful rush, carrying everything before it, in its terrible majesty, bringing the shipping with it, sometimes turning in circles, as if striving to elude their fate.

At Lima, a writer says: "I saw the whole surface of the sea rise as if a mountain side, actually standing up. Another shock with a fearful roar now took place. I called to my companions to run for their lives on to the Pampa. Too late; with a horrible crush the sea was on us, and at one sweep dashed what was Iquique on to the Pampa. I lost my companions, and in an instant was fighting with the dark waters. The mighty wave surged and roared and leaped. The cries of human beings and animals were frightful."

These facts show that the roaring of the sea and waves, mentioned by the Savior, as one of the last signs to be seen on earth before his coming, has already taken place.

He next speaks of the effect of these and other signs upon the minds of the people living in the last generation, as follows: "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth."

Mr. Cunninghame, an able English writer, when looking at the aspect of things in the world, says:

"That the present moral and political condition of the world is altogether without a parallel in the past history of mankind, will be denied by no accurate observer. This is, indeed, universally acknowledged by thinking men, as well as by our leading political journals. And if any further evidence of it were wanting, it is found in that indescribable sensation of fear and expectation, which everywhere fills the minds of men, of some mighty event, they know not what, which is coming."

Says Dr. Seiss, of Philadelphia, an able writer and minister:

"Symptoms of a mysterious metamorphose meet us on every hand, causing some of earth's most far-sighted men, in church and state, to tremble with amazement and doubt." "All society, everywhere, with its politics, its philosophy and its religion, is in a perturbed condition, indicating revolutions and occurrences which no mere human foresight can at all comprehend." "Christians and Jews concede that we are approaching commotions and changes such as never have been since time began." "No one, acquainted with the existing aspects of the world, can have any doubt that we have fallen upon very startling and critical times."

A Paris correspondent of New York Journal of Commerce, when speaking of the signs of the times, says, the "distress of nations and perplexity," the "falling of the heart for fear" have become so "universal," "that one might almost be forgiven for supposing that the end of everything was really at hand, and that the universe itself was about to disappear amidst this general and fearful crushing of all its elements."

Many such sayings might be quoted from distinguished men, who are watching the signs of the times. Are we not living in the very neighborhood of the fulfillment of the last signs to be seen just before the second coming of Christ?

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"

FAREWELL MEETINGS.

At this date (Monday morning, May 4th), we are on the cars, just departing from the Pacific Coast, en route for Chicago where we hope to arrive Saturday P. M. 3.35, the 9th inst. We are leaving the coast with pleasing recollections. The meetings at Vallejo were a happy success. They were closed with a sacrament of the Lord's Supper Friday evening, May 1st. It was a heavenly season. Brn. D. D. Reed and J. G. Hook were present. They said it was the best communion they had ever enjoyed. It seemed as though we were breathing the very atmosphere of heaven. As said Peter on the mount of transfiguration, we could truly say it was good to be there. All seemed to be in sweet harmony with each other, as were the disciples on the day of Pentecost. Some sixty or seventy partook of the sacramental emblems. It was said by those best prepared to judge, that the church in Vallejo was never in a better condition than now. Its prospect is bright. We do not know of a church any where that stands in a better condition. This is on account of its devoted, faithful, working members. A careful observer, a business man, who belongs to no church, remarked that this church prospered because it contained some of the best persons in the city. They are fondly hoping that the Lord will send Bro. H. F. Carpenter to be their pastor, as proposed. While without a pastor, Bro. A. J. Young, the clerk of the church, has watched over its interests with most judicious care, aided by faithful Brn., and done what but few laymen could have accomplished to secure continued prosperity.

We left Bro. and Sr. Reed there to preach the word for a season. They expected to baptize some the next Sabbath. Several requested prayers that they might be christians. Members of other churches took an active part in the meetings, and were blest. They are beginning to see clearly the great truths of the Bible that have been long hidden by fables. One remarked, that she had lived a year in one week, and learned more than in her whole life before, concerning important Bible truths.

Saturday, May 2nd, we returned to San Francisco, in company with Bro. Hook, whose health is much improved. He was richly blest on "May day," by the power of the Holy Spirit, and brought into a state of unusual peace, in which he hopes ever more to remain. Previous to that he had been sorely tempted and tried, discouraged, disheartened, and inclined to hide away like Jonah. When in this state of mind, harassed by Satan, the Lord showed him his surrounding perils, when he decided to bow submissively, and bear all his burdens without murmuring, and continue to work as faithfully as he could in his divine Master's vineyard. At once, the Spirit of God came upon him when riding in the cars, and filled him with heavenly peace. The change was most marked, and the results blessed.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Lord's day, May 3d, was spent most pleasantly with the church in San Francisco. Four were baptized, and nine united with the church, receiving the right hand of fellowship, making in all fifteen baptisms, and fourteen who have united in church fellowship. The evening exercises were closed with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, enjoyed by some sixty or seventy. The church in San Francisco is doing finely—never better. Peace and harmony prevail among its members, and the blessing of the Lord rests upon them. Bro. Hook and Bro. Howell will continue the meetings. After the communion, some asked prayers that they might be pardoned and fitted for the coming kingdom.

The parting scene showed that the cords of christian love and sympathy had taken strong hold, and deep root in the hearts of those who love Jesus and his coming. None could ask for warmer and truer friends than these, who delight in the highway of holiness, anxiously waiting for the appearing of the heavenly Bridegroom. During the winter and spring, we have enjoyed together very pleasant meetings for divine worship. Blessed harmony has prevailed among the members of the church. We have never left them when their future prospect was better than at present. They are sound in faith, strong in love, being firmly settled on the Rock of Ages, with bright hopes of soon seeing "the King in his beauty."

We are thankful that our steps were directed this fourth time to the Pacific coast. We have very satisfactory evidence that we acted in harmony with the will of the Lord, when we consented to go. Nothing short of a very clear sense of duty could have led us to depart for the Pacific coast as we did last January. Our personal feelings would have led in the opposite direction, but we have long since learned that the Lord often leads where our own desires never pointed. We have also learned that the path of duty is the path of pleasure. Thus we feel now, as we look over the labors, sharp trials, perils, and bitter persecutions of the past few months. The dear Savior has kept us in "great peace." and not allowed a single cloud to cast a darkening gloom upon the bright, abiding witness of the Spirit, saying,

"All is well."

When we consider how much the dear Savior has done for us, we love to sing,

"Here I give my all to thee,
Friends and time and earthly store;
Soul and body thine to be,
Wholly thine for evermore."
"Still I'm trusting, Lord, in thee,
Dear Lamb of Calvary;
Humbly at thy cross I bow,
Jesus saves me, saves me now."

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

THE BIBLE ECHO.

This is the title of a new religious paper which is to be edited and published by Bro. W. Kellaway, in England. Bro. Kellaway designs making the Echo a medium of publishing the great truths of the Bible to this generation, and to make especially prominent the soon coming of Christ, the signs indicating it, the preparation of heart necessary to meet it, the re-living of the dead, the renewing of the earth as the future abode of the saints, the unconscious sleep of the dead, the everlasting destruction of the wicked, and the reign of Christ as earth's Eternal King. We earnestly pray that God may make this paper a glorious success in warning this generation of swiftly approaching judgments, and draw back the veil and expose to view the hideous ecclesiastical corruptions and political factions, and may echo the distant roar of coming war and overwhelming judgments. May it raise the standard of christian experience high, making holiness of heart, deep-toned piety, unreserved consecration, Abrahamic faith, and perfect love, essential to eternal salvation.

We desire that our brethren in America may give to Bro. K. and the Echo all the sympathy and help which God may manifest as duty. Satan is laboring to dry up our sympathies for each other and divide our efforts in proclaiming this last great message of truth; but Christ's Word and Spirit draw us together, and we should be careful not to let localities, personal interests, or particular associations, mar our union, break our harmony, or disturb our fellowship in this holy work. J. C.

BRO. CARGILE'S TRACT.

"TRUTH AND ERROR CONTRASTED."

Bro. J. A. Cargile, of Ala., was excommunicated from the Baptist church of that State for embracing and advocating the doctrines we teach, and Eld. R. Newton, a representative preacher of that church, was invited at the time of Bro. C.'s expulsion to preach against his position; to expose what they called Bro. C.'s heresy. Bro. Cargile was not allowed to reply orally to Eld. Newton's sermons, but wrote a review of them. He has since published the review in a tract of twenty pages. We think it very good, and can commend it to all who wish to read such a work, especially our friends in the South. It can be obtained of Eld. J. A. Cargile, Stevenson, Ala. Price 10 cts. J. C.

CORRECTION.—In our article on the "Signs of the Times," published in the Crisis May 6th, the following should have been credited to Noah Webster:—"I think no fire in our forests could have been sufficient to spread a dense cloud over the whole of New England, and even some parts of the Middle States." GENERAL CONFERENCE.

H. MUNGER.

I am interested in Brn. Couch and Whitmore's suggestion about a General Conference. Although I do not belong to that Board, yet I would like to express a few thoughts in reference to it. It does seem to me that it is necessary to have such a call made soon; and if possible settle on some plan of operation. For Advent people now occupy an important position in the religious world. Their influence is felt in almost every church in this land; and will be felt still more if we are all united in our great work. Such a gathering might be pleasing to God. Let us pray that he will guide us by his Spirit, as he did the primitive church, and enable us to arrive to a state of harmony.

INDORSED.—The articles in the Crisis of May 6th, headed, "Born Again," by Bro. H. Pratt, and "Generation and Regeneration," by Bro. G. W. Stetson, found on first page, and the one headed, "First Born not Chief Born," by Bro. H. F. Carpenter, found on second page, are articles which will well pay for reading—yea, studying. I indorse them as good, sound, gospel truth.

J. B. Cook, $5; a friend, Bath, Me., $5; C. Colburn, $10; Sr. S. M. Hall, $5; Emily Marsh, $2; E. J. W., $1; D. D. Reed, $5.

Those receiving the benefit of these gifts unite in a vote of thanks for the privilege of school and Sabbath School. Could friends step in and see our busy household, I think they would not regret their self denial to aid in giving religious instruction and mental training to this poor, neglected class.

I am greatly favored with renewed health, and inspired with hope. None but those who have labored for this people can conceive of the interest attached to the work. This evening, while I write, two girls are sitting by me reading the Testament. One has been at home but three months, and can read quite well. Both are almost white, and have more than one talent to cultivate. I have a Normal class of six, from fifteen to twenty eight years of age, fitting especially for teachers. They give me comfort by their reverence for the Bible and instruction. In scholarship they will not suffer in comparison with very many who have had far more teaching than they; and I have great hope of their usefulness. It gives me much pleasure as their understanding enlarges, to talk of the blessed hope of the gospel to them. It is not hard to convince the older ones that the coming of the Lord is near. The extreme irregularities of the seasons, and increasing wickedness of the land, they look upon as omens. But with mental powers all uncultivated, and contracted by disease, it is next to impossible to get correct ideas fixed in their minds. Hence the importance of mental training for the younger class; and I again ask, If we, as a people, consider education of any importance to our own children, should we not, to the extent of our ability, help the utterly destitute ones to the same blessing?

A person claiming to be an Adventist (address not given, but from the post-mark judge the letter to come from the South) writes, asking if I teach none but young men? and insinuates that I beg for an unholy motive. I beg leave to inform him, and any others who do not understand my position and motives, that I am an old woman, near fifty-eight years of age, the mother of two precious boys in Ohio; and with a heart full of love to them, I still find room for love and pity for other boys; yes, young men, women and girls, whom I am striving to fit for usefulness here, and for immortal life in the coming kingdom. Does that brother read the Word of God, our blessed papers, and tracts? If so, would he not like to have as many as possible of those for whom Christ died partakers of the same privilege? Let all be assured that it is not for myself I have begged. With the strength of past years and the present, I am able to more than obtain a livelihood in other employments, and with my little life-use inheritance, might have accumulated. Besides, beautiful homes are offered me among kind friends, and son. But these poor people look up to me as a friend for knowledge; and while I feel that God and his tried servants approve, sarcasm cannot dishearten. What I have of my own (as we are apt to say) I use as far as it goes, and the rest it seems as though God ordered just as we need; and my course is open to the closest criticism.

Let me have the prayers of the household, that many jewels may be gathered from these mission schools.

HOLBROOK—EATON. In Topsham, Me., May 10th, 1874, by Elder H. S. Mitchell, Bro. REUBIN K. HOLBROOK, of Topsham, Me., and Sr. MARY E. EATON, of Bowdoinham, Me.

Obituaries.

BENNETT. At Lapeer City, Mich., March 30th, 1874, Mrs. Emeline Bennett, aged forty-six years.

She became a christian when about twenty-six years of age. She embraced the hope of the near coming of Christ and kindred Bible teachings, and identified herself with the Advent people at Sandy Hill, N. Y. She lived a devoted christian life, and was known as a worker in the cause she loved as long as health continued. In Aug., 1872, in hope that a change of climate might restore her health, she moved west among her relations at Lapeer City, Mich. Here also she united with the people of her choice, looking for the return of the Nobleman from the far country; and when able could always be found in her place at the meetings of the church, ready to raise her voice in honor of Jesus and his words. Disappointed in her hope of relief, she gradually declined, and for the last few months of life was mostly confined to her room. She talked very little, at times suffered a good deal, but was always sustained by the "blessed hope." Just before her death she called her children and other relatives around her, bid them all an affectionate farewell, and said—"I must sleep, but only for a little while." She had been a widow about eight years. She leaves five children, her father, eight brothers and sisters, and other relatives. With the church also and many others her memory is blessed. We mourn, but not without hope.

"Rest, dearest mother, rest!
Thy labor now is o'er;
The toils and weary cares of life
Shall come to thee no more.
Thy words of comfort and of hope
We never more shall hear,
For thou art sweetly sleeping now
Till Jesus shall appear.
Sleep, dearest sister, sleep!
Death shall not hold thee long,
And in the morning thou shalt rise
And join the blood-washed throng."

Funeral sermon by the writer from Rev. 14: 13,—"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

JOHN H. PATON.

SMITH. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Portsmouth, N. H., April 9th, 1874, Eben H. Smith, aged sixty-five years.

He died as he had lived, in the full enjoyment and assurance of the blessed hope of the coming of Jesus and the resurrection of the dead. He was calm and patient in all his sufferings; and although he had desired to live until the coming of the Just One, yet he could say, "Nevertheless thy will, not mine, be done. A goodly number of friends gathered with the afflicted family to listen to words of gospel comfort spoken by Bro. Boutell. May God sanctify the affliction to the good of all, and help the sorrowing ones to prepare for the speedy coming of Christ and that world where sorrow's tear shall never fall, and the inhabitants shall not say, "I am sick."

CORNELL. In Fort Edward, N. Y., April 7th, 1874, Gilford D. Cornell, aged two years.

The bud as it began to bloom was plucked by death's ruthless hand, and laid in the silent grave, waiting to join the angel band. Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion by the writer. May this dispensation be sanctified to the good of the bereaved parents. A. W. SIBLEY.

COWLES. In Fort Edward, N. Y., Nov. 3d, 1873, Sr. Elizabeth Cowles, aged sixty-three yrs. She sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the time for Michael's clarion to awake the dead. Sermon from Ps. 17: 15, by Bro. M. Grant. A. W. SIBLEY.

HUCKINS. April 8th, 1874, near Charles City, Iowa, of scarlet fever, Hattie May, youngest child of J. L. and Sarah M. Huckins, aged seventeen months. Sermon by P. S. W. DEVO.

SMITH. At Marble Rock, Iowa, Nov. 15th, 1873, La Fayette, son of Bro. Ambros and Betsey Smith, aged thirteen years.

This family has been deeply afflicted by sickness most all the time since Aug.; and at the time of the death of this son, only two of the family were able to go to the grave. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 2 Sam. 12: 23,—"I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."

P. S. W. DEVO.

TRYON. Fell asleep in Jesus, April 14th, 1874, Mary, daughter of Joel Tryon, of Youngstown, N. Y., aged thirty-nine years.

A large concourse of sympathizing friends assembled at the Presbyterian church on the occasion of the funeral, to whom the writer spoke from Ex. 12: 13, on the subject of the atonement.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

The Flood in Western Massachusetts.

Springfield, May 16. Never has western Massachusetts experienced any thing like the stupendous disaster which has to-day laid waste twelve miles of the valley of Mill river in the western portion of Hampshire county.

THE CAUSE OF THE DISASTER.

There was a large reservoir of about 104 acres in extent, constructed six years ago. Last summer the water was drawn off and the dam, which was considered in rather a dangerous condition, was strengthened. People living in the vicinity of the dam say that it has been leaking more or less for several weeks, and it is believed that having thus gradually undermined the dam the water acquired a strong headway and suddenly the dam gave way, and the immense body of water poured through, carrying everything before it. The torrent rushed upon the doomed villagers with a loud roar, apparently a huge advancing billow of underbrush and debris rising rapidly through the deep gorges to the height of forty or fifty feet and again spreading out a wide expanse of seething angry waves as it reached the more open country. Houses, barns and shops followed like grass before the scythe. Men, women and children were caught and borne away.

Scenes of indescribable confusion and ruin, mills, shops and dwellings are mingled in one common desolation, while the green fields are buried beneath a mass of stones and debris of every description. Over one hundred precious lives and more than $1,000,000 worth of property have been sacrificed to the relentless destroyer.

Fifteen bridges are gone, twelve factories and seventy-five dwellings were swept away, and four hundred people are left homeless. The loss of life probably exceeds one hundred, fifty being drowned at Leeds alone. Hundreds of horses and cattle were drowned, and thousands of acres of land covered with debris.

The town of Northampton loses about $50,000 in bridges and roads. The loss of Williamsburg and Haydenville cannot be estimated as yet.

Several bodies and fragments of bodies were picked up in Northampton, nine miles below the break, and probably more will be removed between there and Williamsburg tomorrow. Even the countenances of those who were not torn and mangled presented a most horrible and hideous appearance, indicating a most fearful and desperate struggle for life.

The scene of the disaster has been visited by thousands during the afternoon, but the sights were of such a harrowing nature that the sternest and stoutest were glad to retreat from the sickening spectacle. The scene was most horrible and frightful, and made even the strongest men go frantic with fear. Many women fainted in the streets, and were borne away by the relentless current. So sudden was the inundation that many lost their presence of mind and rushed wildly from points of safety into very death itself. Others who remained to save loved and dear ones were themselves lost.

In Brief.

— The departure of the ice bridge at Quebec was attended with disastrous results. Piers, tugs, vessels, steamers were swept away, demolished or sunk, and the loss is estimated at $2,000,000.

— The miners at Nelsonville, Ohio, who are on a strike, have been making serious disturbances. One man was killed and two others mortally wounded Friday.

— The Internationalists are growing troublesome at Alcoy, Spain, and an outbreak is feared.

— It is said that the recent rebellion in Japan cost the Government two millions of dollars.

— The estimated damage by the Mississippi overflow is about $20,000,000.

— Twenty-two divorces have been decreed in the Supreme Judicial Court now in session at Concord, N. H.

— Four hundred and seventy-nine deaths in New York last week. The small-pox is reported increasing there.

— Weston commenced his five hundred mile walk in New York at midnight Monday, and in twenty-four hours had walked one hundred and fifteen miles.

— Advices from South Tirhoot represent that the distress from famine is spreading, while the prevalence of small-pox and cholera add to the direfulness of the calamity.

Four convicts attempted to escape on Monday from the Indiana State Prison. After a desperate fight, in which one of the officers of the prison and one of the convicts were killed, the villains were returned to their quarters.

— The cattle in some parts of Nova Scotia are dying of starvation, consequent on the scarcity of fodder. A farmer lost nine head of cattle last week.

The Young Men's Christian Union proposes not only to give to its members pleasant walks, during the season, to places and scenes of interest in the vicinity of Boston, but to encourage boating, base ball, foot-ball, cricket, and other games, for the better physical development of those who are so fortunate as to belong to the Union, whose praise is in everybody's mouth.

Brethren from all parts of the west are cordially invited to attend this yearly feast. Come praying that the Lord will revive and unite his people. THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

"A pamphlet of 60 pages (by W. N. Pile), giving an exposition of Rev. 2: 3. The epistles to the 'seven churches of Asia' (the author thinks) are shown to have been prophetic of the seven periods of the gospel age, in addition to their local application. An epitome of church history, from the apostolic age to the present time, is given, leading to the conclusion that we are now in the closing part of the Laodicean period, near the end of the dispensation and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth. Price, single copy, postpaid, 15 cts.; two copies, 25 cts."

An interesting Tract. We hope it may do much good. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

WHAT SHALL I GIVE?

Give prayers! the evening hath begun;
Be earlier than the rising sun;
Remember those who feel the rod,
Remember those who know not God;
His hand can boundless blessings give:
Breathe prayers; through them the soul shall live.

Give alms: the needy ask with pain;
The orphans mourn, the crushed complain.
Give freely; hoard gold is cursed,
A prey to robbers and to rust.
Christ, through his poor, a claim doth make:
Give gladly for our Savior's sake.

Give books; they live when ye are dead;
Light on the darkened mind they shed;
Good seed they sow from age to age,
Through all this mortal pilgrimage.
They nurse the germs of holy trust,
They wake untired when you are dust.

Give words, kind words, to those who err;
Remorse doth need a comforter.
Though in temptation's wiles they fall,
Condemn not—we are sinners all.
With the sweet charity of speech
Give words that heal, and words that teach.

WATCHING FOR HIS COMING.

WM. D. TUCKER.

"Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." Luke 12:37.

The second advent of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, is indeed a theme worthy of contemplation. How joyous it makes the christian's heart, as he reads from the Scriptures the "glad tidings"—"Behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be." Rev. 22:12. Also, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:2, 3. And it is only those who truly love the Savior, who also love his appearing. And how few are there to-day who can truly say, "Even so, come Lord Jesus, and come quickly?" They are so few that Jesus calls them, "the little flock."

Multitudes there are who profess to be followers of Christ, but when one asks them if they believe in the near coming of Jesus, they laugh him to scorn. But the apostle says, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." Do those people who hate the glorious appearing of our Lord have persecutions? Are they not free from the scoffs and frowns of the people? I think they are, for we see them (many of them) engaged in worldly pleasures—pleasures that the true lovers of Christ discard and abhor, and would not be found participating in for all the world. I can point out to-day (and oh, it fills my heart with sadness), professing christians, who enjoy the ball-room, and unite with those of no profession whatever;—people who love the intoxicating cup, and take God's name in vain; and they seem to feel justified in so doing. Says John, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world; and the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." "No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other, or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." If a man follow the pride and fashions of this world, he is not a disciple of Christ. "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

When he shall be revealed, those who have loved and longed for his appearing, and have lived holy and godly lives, will be saved, and crowned with eternal life in his glorious kingdom. O, what a blessed promise. It fills my whole soul with joy, to know that if I am faithful but a little while longer, and watch with sincere and holy heart, I shall be saved beyond the transitory things of this life, and in the new earth-home, with dear friends and companions, joy in a glorious and immortal existence beyond the cares and trials, temptations, and wickedness of this present age.

But those who do not love his coming will call for mercy when it will be too late. Then will they call for the rocks and the mountains to fall upon them, to hide them from the wrath and indignation of God.

This is the condition in which the greater portion are found to-day. No argument can make them believe that Jesus is coming;—they do not watch for that great event,—they tell us "the Lord delayeth his coming," and all through the land they cry, "peace and safety." But because they do not watch, sudden destruction will come upon them.

Dear sinner, there is still a chance for you, and with a heart full of pity, and a desire for your eternal salvation, I urge you to seek forgiveness of Jesus, and accept eternal life at his hand.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us who truly love and long for the glorious appearing of Christ, with holy and sanctified hearts watch for his coming, that we may obtain "the crown of life that fadeth not away." It will not be very long, ere he will come.

Haydenville, Mass.

TRINE BAPTISM.

WILLIAM HOBBS.

The advocates of trine immersion have but one passage in all the Bible to sustain their practice; and that does not directly sustain their view, but only inferentially. They infer from the words in Matt. 28:19,—"Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," that one dip is required to each name. This inference they seek to sustain by the claim that baptizo has a "frequentative sense." But it will be noticed that the word is connected with a plural pronoun, "baptizing them," and, therefore, does not signify a repetition on one individual, but on the many. "Baptizing" has a frequentative sense in English, for the word signifies a continuation of the art, but none would argue from hence, that the act is to be continuously repeated on one individual, till they were baptized literally "into death." And yet the inference would be about as logical in the latter case, as in the case of trine immersion. For if this implies repeated individual dips, because the word has a frequentative sense, each name would require a frequent repetition of the act, just as much as it would require a repetition to each name, and so the poor candidate by the hands of some fanatic might literally be baptized into death.

The argument, therefore, on which trine immersion rests, is rather shaky; and, the foundation, unlike the house which Samson overthrew, rests on only one pillar instead of two. It will not require much to overthrow the structure.

The doctrine that the three names require three dips, would be wholly vitiated, if the formula had been interpolated into the commission, or if the meaning is not understood. For the formula commences with the preposition eis, in the Greek; and some contend it should be rendered "into." "Into the name of" etc. They might, therefore, be baptized "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" on their confession of that faith which these terms scripturally teach, without the use of this as a formula.

But leaving this, we will examine Rom. 6:4–6, to see whether baptism, as there taught, does not consist of one single immersion by a backward burial in water. Says the apostle, "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection; knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." Two terms used by the apostle are worthy of especial notice, "buried" and "planted," as indicating the mode of baptism. "Buried with," is from the Greek sunetaphemen, literally, ensepulchred with. Now it is evident from the figure here used, that baptism bore some resemblance in form to Christ's sepulture,—ensepulchred with him by baptism into death. A single backward immersion would resemble his sepulture in death; for the hand of affection would lead to his being laid out gently backward in his sepulchre, while an opposite burial would be abhorrent to affection's instinct, especially if the act was several times repeated. And that the latter was not the form practiced is also evident from the figure used, that of planting,—"For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death." Planted, is here used to represent by figures the same idea as ensepulchred; and in planting we bury the seed once, and it comes up but once; while a frequentative repitition would be unnecessary, and would be apt to spoil the seed.

"The likeness of his death" does not signify his bodily convulsions while dying, and any attempt to imitate that, would be shockingly forsical. "The likeness" Paul makes to consist in the object signified; that is, a death unto sin. "Our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed." Christ's death was for our sins, "For in that he died, he died unto sin once;" (verse 10) and our baptism is to signify that, and our own death to sin through him. And since the phrase "planted together" reflects the same idea signified by ensepulchred with, there must be some analogy between these and baptism; and since ensepulchred signifies being laid out backward in death, this clearly indicates that this form should be used in baptism. And since "planted together" conveys by figure the idea of one act in baptism, there is no reason in ducking the head under water three times, as it spoils the figure used. For Christ died but once, and rose but once, and seed is planted once, and comes up but once; hence this figuratively shows that one immersion alone is required, and taught in the Bible, in being buried with Christ by baptism.

DRINKING BLOOD.

One of the most positive and impressive commands of God, given to man, is that which related to the eating of blood. Not less than seven times in the Bible is blood prohibited from being eaten, and in the most emphatic manner. Not only did God forbid the children of Israel from making any use of the blood, but as far back as Noah's time, when the earth was again to be repeopled, did he command that no blood should be eaten. Then and there at the starting of a new race was that law made which has been regarded by all in every age since, who have had a knowledge of God and a reverence for him. That the patriarchs and all who lived before the law of Moses, obeyed the requirement of God there can be no doubt. When the law in the wilderness was given, this original command to Noah and his race was incorporated into it, and repeated many times, indicating its importance, and that God meant it should be obeyed. When we leave that dispensation and come into the present one of grace, we might think that the Gentile church would not have this command repeated to it; but not so. It is one of the four things which the council of apostles and elders at Jerusalem directed the church at Antioch to observe. Acts 15:20, 29. It has, therefore, been brought through the history of the race and world to the present time; and by all who have regarded the word of God, it has been observed; yea, no civilized nation to our knowledge has in the past ever practiced eating the blood of its animals.

But we have entered upon a time when no command of God is of force, if it be thought that health and life can be preserved by its violation. What would Noah have said if he had found his children and grandchildren drinking blood for their health, or to cure them of disease? And what would have been the language of God to them? How long would the children of Israel have continued to exist if they had taken to drinking blood, asserting that it was to prolong their lives and invigorate their systems? What would Paul have said if he had seen converted Jews and Gentiles going to the slaughtering places, and there with cup in hand, catch the blood as it followed the knife of the butcher, and drink it while warm from the veins of the dying animal? Think you he would have approved of the act, or admitted it might be beneficial, because some Greek doctors had claimed to discover that blood was good for the cure of consumption and other wasting diseases? Would he have acquiesced in the violation of this fixed law of God, and supposed that he would bless such means to the recovery of health? Would the Apostle to the Gentiles have thus cast away his faith in God and leaned on the theories of men.

And James,—after directing how the sick could be healed, and saying that the prayer of faith should save them,—what would he have said if the church in his day had gone to drinking blood for the cure of their maladies? Could the christian church of that day have countenanced such a thing, after it had been enjoined upon them not even to eat flesh where the animal had been strangled? But as we have said, the practice of drinking blood has commenced in a professed christian nation, and by a professing christian people; and how far this heathenish act will extend no one can now tell, for faith in God, and reverence for his laws, are growing less daily.

In one of the districts of the city of Boston, there is a very extensive abattoir, a public slaughterhouse. It is built and conducted on the most improved and scientific plan. Here hundreds of animals are daily killed and dressed for the market. This place is now frequented by scores of invalids, who come to drink blood; and the number is increasing. It is said that it will soon be necessary to erect a large hotel and hospital for the accommodation of the many who desire to try this new remedy, the blood of bullocks and sheep, and it may be of swine! We have been told that some christian people have come here for a cure.

O fallen man! how far from God wilt thou yet go? O christian! where is thy faith? God have mercy upon this generation! I. I. LESLIE.

TRAINING HORSES.

I have been stopping with Bro. Rogers, of Poultney, Vt., who is a horse trainer. The following is his rule. Hitch the horse to a small log with short traces, so the whiffle tree will hit his heels. Then let him flounce and kick until he gets satisfied, which may take one or two hours. Then let the harness be so arranged as to allow some part to drop on his heels, and in a short time he will learn to stop if anything hits his heels, or the harness breaks. Next put him into a wagon without a front board, and let the wagon hit his heels occasionally, and he will seldom kick after he gets through with his training. Keep the blind bridle off while breaking, and let him see the ways of the world he is in. Next break him to different kinds of scarecrows; such as umbrellas, empty baskets, and papers blowing, wheelbarrows rattling around him, fire crackers and pistols fired, &c. A few trainings like this will completely break him of being afraid of these things. A few days spent in this way with a horse is of great use. Bro. R.'s horses do not get frightened or run away. Women can drive either of them with perfect safety.

The above plan looks reasonable. Five to ten dollars spent in this way will double the value of your horses, and save property, limbs, and perhaps some lives. Bro. Rogers breaks all his horses before they are three years old. There is less danger and less work when young. No doubt this suggestion will be a benefit to many. Try it, and your horse will give up much sooner than you expect, and conclude the case is with them as with us all, viz., that it is better to submit and take things easy. We all had better learn this, and teach it to our horses and children; it will save much needless trouble for us and others, and our beasts also. HIRAM MUNGER.

REPORT OF THE DELAWARE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Pursuant to notice, the Delaware District Second Advent Conference held its second annual session at the Second Advent Church, corner of Ninth and Spring Garden Streets, Philadelphia, commencing Thursday morning, April 9th, and continuing over the Sabbath. There were two business sessions held, the other meetings being devoted to preaching and other devotional exercises. At the business sessions, Dr. A. G. Jayne, Vice President, presided. There were preachers and delegates present from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, and District of Columbia. Several brethren reported by letter. A letter was read from Elder H. K. Flagg, President of the Conference, offering for their acceptance his resignation as their presiding officer, owing to pressing duties in a new field of labor, at the same time expressing his gratitude to all the members of the Conference, and also to all the churches within its limits, for the kind regard and christian love manifested towards him during his years of ministerial labor among them. By vote his resignation was accepted, and the following vote of thanks was tendered to him for the faithful discharge of past duties:

Resolved, that we tender to Eld. H. K. Flagg our respect and christian fellowship for the aid and assistance he has rendered us, and he has our prayers that wherever his lot may be cast, his labors may be blest of God.

Reports from churches by preachers and delegates were heard, from which it was learned that the truths we hold were spreading, and also there is a want felt for more laborers in the Master's vineyard. Owing to the district comprising the Conference being large, and the field being new, it was voted that in order to the further spread of Bible truths, this Conference procure a tent of its own. A committe of eight was appointed to receive subscriptions for that purpose, whose duty shall also be to procure a new tent, and to take the management of the same. One hundred and twenty dollars was subscribed for the tent while the Conference was in session, and one hundred dollars since, and it is thought there will be no difficulty in getting the full amount required for that pupose. The tent has been ordered, and is expected to be in the field by the latter part of May.

The Chairman of the Tract Committee reports that he has recived during the year thirty-seven dollars and eleven cents, for the purpose of procuring tracts to be distributed by the Tract Committee, the most of which had been expended for that purpose. It was also learned that good had been done by these messengers. The annual meeting being the time set for the election of officers of the Conference for the ensuing year, the nominating Committee submitted the following list of candidates, who were duly elected one by one: President, A. G. Jayne; Vice President, William Ashman; Secretary, E. King; Treasurer, H. Stetler. The Ministerial and Tract Committee who were appointed at the annual conference of last year were continued.

The attendance at the business sessions was not so large as could have been desired, but at most of the meetings for preaching and other devotional exercises the attendance was good. There was an excellent spirit of union and harmony manifested through all the meetings. We had preaching by a number of the brethren, and of that kind that was suited to build up and strengthen the people. Altogether, the Conference gave evidence of successful result for much good. On Sunday, Brn. Mendenhall and Taylor, of the Conference, left for the purpose of organizing the church near Phœnixville, Pa., which is some eighteen miles from Philadelphia; the church consisting of about eighteen members. Five were also baptized. The church covenant, as generally used by the Advent body, was adopted, and officers of the church chosen.

SABBATH DISCUSSION.

The following was sent to the California Christian Advocate by "S. B.," who listened to the debate.

Elder Miles Grant, of Boston, and Eld. M. D. Canright, of California, have just closed a discussion of the Sabbath question, in Napa City, Cal. It was continued seven evenings, before large and deeply interested audiences. The debate closed Wednesday evening, April 1st. They discussed the following question: "Do the Scriptures teach that the Sabbath of the fourth commandment of the decalogue is now binding on mankind?"

The following is a brief outline of Eld. Grant's closing speech, when he summed up the points he had sustained during the debate.

He said: "We have shown (1) that the early christians did not consider the fourth commandment binding. (2) The Pope did not change the day. (3) That Constantine did not change the day. (4) That the only reason given to the Jews for keeping the fourth commandment was because of their deliverance from Egyptian bondage. (5) That the Sabbath of the fourth commandment was a feast day, and all feast days have ceased. (6) That a Jew could keep the ten commandments and be lost. (7) That the decalogue had nothing to do with the motive, but only the deed. (8) That there is no distinction between the law of Moses and the law of God. (9) That all nations cannot keep the Sabbath of the Jews. (10) That the law could not give eternal life, but Christ can. (11) That the decalogue was the old covenant. (12) That the old covenant is abolished. (13) That the old covenant was one of bondage, from which we are now delivered, through Christ the mediator of the New Covenant.

[When we said the "Old Covenant was one of bondage," we included its "ordinances." Says Paul: "Then verily the first covenant had ordinances." Heb. 9:1. The moral principles in the covenant are eternal. The seventh day was not a moral principle, but a memorial day.] M. G.

The Elder went on to say: In defense of the affirmative it was claimed that there are two codes of laws in the Bible—one of which is denominated "the ceremonial law," and the other, "the moral law of God." We think the proof has been entirely wanting. The word "ceremonial" does not occur once in the sacred Scriptures. There is but one "book of the law;" but in this are found laws to regulate the offering of sacrifices, and all the "ordinances" pertaining to the old covenant; also certain moral precepts, that apply to all people, in all ages, such as the two great commandments: (1) "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." (2) "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself;" neither of which is found in the decalogue, but in "the book of the law." We have shown that the law never means the decalogue. The latter is called "the covenant," but not "the law."

The moral precepts of the old covenant were selected from "the law," being only a few among many, and by mutual agreement between the Lord and Israel, were adopted as a constitution, or covenant, to secure the temporal prosperity of that people, but had no reference to the plan of salvation through Christ. The Sabbath of the fourth commandment was put in the heart of this covenant, as the memorial day to commemorate the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage.

Moses says: "Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm; therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." Deut. 5:15. Their memorial and rest days were combined in one. The law specified how this day should be kept, as we have seen: "And on the Sabbath day two lambs of the first year, without spot, and two tenths deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil and the drink offering thereof; this is the burnt offering of every Sabbath, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering." Num. 28:9.

We have shown that the Sabbath of the fourth commandment is not now kept by any one according to the law. When the Savior says in his inaugural address, recorded in the fifth, sixth, and seventh chapters of Matthew, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot, or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Matt. 5:17–18. Again, he says: "The law and the prophets were until John." Luke 14:16.

We have shown that "the law" referred to in these passages relates to what Christ fulfilled as the antetype of what was written in the law that pointed to him; such as the lamb and the passover. When he came, he fulfilled these types in the law, and not "one jot or one tittle" failed; hence he was thus proved to be the true Messiah. When he says: "It is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail," Luke 16:17, it is evident he does not mean to say that "the law" shall not fail to be kept by the Jews or any other people; for if he did, it has not thus been; but he did mean to say every item of the law that was to be fulfilled as the antetype, should not "fail" of being completed or fulfilled. When he says, "The law and the prophets were until John," does he intend to say that all prophecy in the Bible, about everything closed up at that time? We think not; but that the prophecies relating to his coming the first time reached unto John and were fulfilled by Christ, like the law to which we have referred. There were about one hundred prophecies that ended at the first advent of our Savior in the time of John.

It has been claimed by the affirmative that there were two covenants made on Mount Sinai, but we have not seen any proof of his assertion. He admits the old covenant was abolished at the cross, but says the old covenant was not the one engraven on stones. The Bible speaks of but one covenant from Sinai, and that one was "written and engraven on stone;" therefore that is the one that was "abolished," and the one that contained the seventh-day Sabbath, peculiar to the Jewish nation. As the new covenant takes the place of the old, the seventh-day Sabbath is not binding, unless specified in the new. It has not yet been found; hence it is not binding upon all mankind, as claimed by the affirmative, but only on those under the old covenant. He who keeps the seventh day keeps the feast day of a broken covenant of a rejected people.

We have shown that christians never met for worship on the seventh-day Sabbath, only when they assembled with the Jews in their syagogues. Their own meetings were on the first day.

We have found it stated by the apostle that, "If that first covenant had been faultless, then would no place have been sought for the second." Heb. 8:7. The first says nothing against hatred, variance, wrath, strife, impatience, envy, back-biting, evil speaking, pride, selfishness, boasting, malice, incest, bigamy, cheating, witchcraft, socery, vulgar talk, drunkenness, and over twenty other sins condemned in the new covenant. Which shall we adopt, Moses and the old, or Christ and the new?

We have shown that Adam rested on the first day, if he rested with his Creator, and that his next rest day would be the eighth, and hence he never rested on the seventh day, as kept by the Jews, but that we are keeping the original rest-day observed by the first Adam, as restored by the second Adam at his resurrection.

The seventh-day Sabbath was an institution peculiar to the Jews; as Tertullian says: "a temporary Sabbath." It began and ended with that old covenant and people.

STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

M. P. SIKES.

"Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh." Eccl. 12:12

Is it not the case that we devote too much time and thought to the perusal of different kinds of books and papers, aside from the Bible? and that we spend far too little time in studying the Word of the Lord, and in meditation thereon? I fear such is the fact.

If the language of Solomon, above quoted, was applicable in the day in which he lived—if it could then be said "Of making many books there is no end," when every book had to be carefully written out with a pen, letter by letter, and a single book could be procured only at great expense, how much more applicable is this language at the present day, when through the agency of steam and the press, books seem to spring up as if by magic, and any quantity may be obtained at an expense comparatively trifling. How truly may it be said there is "no end to making books."

In this age, how strong the temptation to neglect the Bible. But where is the man or woman, whose dearest earthly friend is absent, who would not quickly throw aside any book, or paper, on receiving a letter from such a friend? Perhaps the loved one is a husband, or wife; a father, or mother; a son, or a daughter; how eagerly a letter from them is read and reread, again and again.

Now the Bible is in one sense a letter from heaven. It is a communication from a Friend who is far more dear to every christian than any earthly friend. True, the comparison is but a meagre one, for all uninspired writings lose their interest after being read a few times; but the Bible never. The more we read it, the more we love to do so. It is like a mine of golden ore; the deeper we dig, the richer it's treasures become;—yea, we continually find new treasures, where we thought all had been explored. All human compositions, from the coarse and vulgar gabble of the low-lived debauchee, to the wise sayings and sage reasoning of the philosopher are all the merest trash—miserable scribbling, compared with the Book of God.

Reading, and contemplating mere human knowledge is adapted to make us more and more worldly-minded. How often is the Spirit of God grieved away from our hearts by reading worldly books, or papers! We attend a religious meeting, or other means of grace,—get greatly blessed, and then go home and plunge into some vain, worldly book or paper;—the Spirit is grieved, and we become worse than before. Or, we get near to the Lord in prayer, either social or secret; and then read fictitious literature, or indulge in worldly conversation, and the holy influence is gone. Is this the way we are preparing for translation? Is it thus that the Bride—the Church—is preparing to meet her heavenly Bridegroom? If you wish to be completely filled with the Spirit of the world, spend much of your time in reading vain, worldly books. On the contrary, reading the Word of God, with contemplation and prayer, is adapted to make us more heavenly-minded, more Christ-like. Oh, for more heavenly-mindedness! Then let us be often on our knees before God, with the blessed Bible open before us. We need but to look at the character of Christ as displayed in the Bible, to inspire us with love and confidence towards him. Contemplating the character of eminent saints brought to view in God's Word, such as Paul, Peter, Elijah, &c., is calculated to excite our emulation to try to be like them. Studying the prophetic Word concerning Christ's second coming, keeps us looking, watching, and waiting for that grand crowning event.

What a wonderful book is the Bible. Well might John Quincy Adams, a man of capacious mind, and sound judgment, remark as follows: "Let a person study the Bible only, and no other book whatever, he would become a man of superior intellect."

Surely, life is too short—eternity too long—too awfully momentous, to allow us to spend scarce a moment of our precious time—our brief period of probation in the acquirement of mere earthly knowledge. Urgent, and imperative indeed should be the necessity that could impel us to do so. Better be exceedingly ignorant in mere human learning, and be wise in the things of God. Give me the knowledge of God and divine things, and I can well afford to be ignorant in all others.

MY EXPERIENCE.

GEORGE E. LOOMIS.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—In early life I was left an orphan in the city of Utica, N. Y., and grew up in sin, seldom having a thought of God and his goodness. I trampled his holy law and commandments under my feet, and rolled sin as a sweet morsel under my tongue. In 1865 I first gave my thoughts to the subject of religion, and my heart to God. I was buried with Christ in baptism, and joined the Baptist church at Cassville. But neglecting my christian duties, I soon got cold and indifferent, and went back again into the world. I left my Savior; he did not leave me first. I was ten times as bad as I was before. Would not go to church on the Sabbath, but would sit and read novels all day, instead of my blessed Bible, which since, I thank God, I have learned to prize above all other books. It seemed as though the devil had full possession of me, and would not let me go.

So it ran on until 1873, when I tried to turn my thoughts again to God, but it seemed as though my day of grace was gone. I had said so often by my wicked actions that I would not have this man Christ Jesus to rule over me, that it seemed as though the sword of vengeance hung over me to cut me down. O, how I tried to get back again to my Father's fold; for I was miserable out of it. I thought if God would take me into his confidence, I would be faithful. I sought after him night and day, and pleaded with him to have mercy on my soul. I was willing to give up everything, if God would save me. But turn which way I would I could not find peace until Christ, with one word, spoke peace to my troubled soul. O, how the light came in! Everything seemed changed and beautiful. I shall never forget it. It was on the 14th of Feb., 1873. Previous to this I said to my wife that I should never make an open profession again; but how I wanted to tell every one what a dear Savior I had found. I found that peace that the world cannot give nor take away.

I am a believer in the soon coming of the Lord, though differing with you on some points; yet I am studying the Bible and seeking the true light; and I do not mean to let it be hid. Dear reader, if you are one of Christ's, and have been born again, take warning from my experience, and never give up your hope. It is worth more than all this world. Pray for me, that I may work till Jesus comes, and then be gathered home.

Clayville, April 20th. 1874.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

SEDENTARY HABITS.

A man may be healthy without being strong; but all health tends, more or less, toward strength, and all disease is weakness. Now any one may see in nature, that things grow big simply by growing; this growth is a constant and habitual exercise of vital or vegetative force, and whatever checks or diminishes the action of this force—say harsh winds, or frost—will stop the growth, and stunt the production. Let the student, therefore, bear in mind, that sitting on a chair, leaning over a desk, poring over a book, cannot possibly be the way to make his body grow. The blood can be made to flow, and the muscles to play freely, only by exercise; and if that exercise is not taken, nature will not be mocked. Every young student ought to make a sacred resolution to move about in the open air at least two hours every day. If he does not do this, cold feet, the clogging of the wheels of the internal parts of the fleshy frame, and various shades of the stomachic and cerebral discomfort, will not fail in due season to inform him that he has been sinning against nature, and, if he does not mend his courses, as a bad boy he will certainly be flogged; for nature is never like some soft-hearted human masters, over-merciful in her treatment.

But why should a student indulge so much in the lazy and unhealthy habit of sitting? A man may think as well standing as sitting, often not a little better; and as for reading in these days, when the most weighty books may be had cheaply, in the lightest form, there is no necessity why a person should be bending his back and doubling his chest, merely because he happens to have a book in his hand. A man will read a play or a poem far more naturally and effectively while walking up and down the room, than when sitting sleepily in a chair. When a man does sit or must sit, let him at all events sit erect, with his back to the light, and a full free projection of the breast. Also, when studying languages, or reading fine passages of poetry, let him read as much as possible aloud; a practice recommended by Clemens of Alexandria, and which will have the double good effect of strengthening that most important vital element, the lungs, and training the ear to the perception of vocal distinctions, so stupidly neglected in many of our public schools. There is, in fact, no necessary connection, in most cases, between the knowledge which a student is anxious to acquire and the sedentary habits which students are apt to cultivate.—Herald of Health.

TREATMENT OF SCARLET FEVER.

When the premonitory symptoms begin to appear, a general bath may be given for five minutes at 95°, 98°, or 100°, taking care to cool down to 88° or 85° before coming out; if this precaution is not taken, the system being relaxed, will be in condition to take cold, and thus the bath may prove a failure. The head should always be wet in cold water before going into any bath, to prevent congestion of the brain.

If there is great restlessness, a hot bath 100° to 105° for five to eight minutes will be of great service; or a full pack for twenty to thirty minutes will sometimes do better. But if these conditions continue, give the spine a prolonged rubbing the whole length, first with a hot wet cloth, then with cool or cold. This being prolonged from five to twenty minutes will generally secure the desired results. If the throat is sore, keep on wet cloths, hot or cold, whichever feels best. These must be often removed. But if the danger increases, with diptheretic tendency, apply ice to the throat, which will generally soon cut it away, as no morbid growth can advance when the heat is below a certain standard.

When the danger from febrile action has passed, nature is exhausted, and then rest and not active treatment is demanded. Be careful to give but little treatment while the eruption is coming out, as too much may enfeeble the vital powers and cause a retrocession of the eruption, and fatal termination of the case.

If there is desire for drinks, cool water may be given, or bits of ice allowed to dissolve in the mouth, being swallowed, if needed, or spit out at pleasure.

Do not allow patients to go out too soon during convalescence, as the peeling off of the skin makes the body more sensitive to atmospheric changes. See that the bowels are regular; still it is not necessary to move them every day, especially in the latter stage of the disease.

Should there be much soreness of the bowels, give now and then a fomentation for five to fifteen minutes, and also knead the whole abdomen after the manner of mixing dough for bread. This may be repeated each day for ten minutes, for a few days, or until the soreness is gone.

Sometimes there arises a disturbance in the bladder; here the kidneys are at fault. Apply a cold wet cloth to the bowels, and a hot one opposite on the small of the back, following down to the bladder. A hot sitz-bath at one hundred degrees will also act favorably. Should the brain become involved by metastasis (transfer), lose no time, but apply hot and cold wet cloths alternately for ten to thirty minutes, then rest, keeping wet cloths on during the interval. These may be repeated to or three times daily, or as the fever and delirium return.

Fomentations to the head may also be used once or twice daily for five to fifteen minutes. This treatment is objected to by some; but when giving medicine, I never saved a case of inflammation of the brain, but since adopting the above. I have lost but one out of many cases. Care must be taken not to use it two freely, nor too long at a time; as hot treatment always tends to debilitate, cold should be applied afterward to prevent taking cold.

A great mistake is made in inflammation of the brain in applying ice or very cold water exclusively. If the design is to keep down morbid growth, as in tumors, cancers, croup and diptheretic membranes, then apply cold, ice, etc.—J. H. Gingley, in Health Reformer.

COMFORT FOR PORK EATERS.

Several deaths from trichinæ have lately occurred in Indiana, greatly to the injury of the pork market in that locality, as people who cannot be moved by reason, may yet be frightened by the appearance of such a horrible death before their eyes. It is strange that the report of these things does not cause a general cessation of the use of pork; many seemed determined to brave the danger, and risk their lives to gratify perverted appetites. But the trichinæ have, unquestionably, done a good work for the health reform. Many people, even in the pork-raising States, are losing their interest in that business. A few years ago a person could not refuse pork at the table without incurring censure, and subjecting himself to uncourteous remarks. Now there are so many who refuse it, and the reason, and even the necessity of the refusal are becoming so well-known, that it does not appear singular.

In the "Kaskaskia Bottom," in Illinois, it is reported that from ten thousand to fifteen thousand hogs have died within the last nine months. Examination shows that trichnæ are the cause. The hogs are literally eaten up with them. But the papers kindly assure their readers that there is no danger if the pork is thoroughly cooked, that is, if the trichinæ are subjected to a high temperature! It must be pleasing to know that the flesh of a diseased hog may be so cooked that it may be eaten without producing immediate death! If such are the habits of civilized and refined people, what must savages be? Thousands of hogs are dying of a terrible and loathsome disease; and thousands are killed and put into the market without examination. Surely, it is no wonder that deaths from unknown causes are constantly occurring. No wonder that diseases so often baffle the skill of physicians. There is no known remedy for a person affected with trichinæ.—Health Reformer.

UNCONSCIOUS INFLUENCE OVER ANIMALS.—The horse is like his driver, and the dog like his master. A nervous, timorous man is almost sure to have a skittish horse, shying at anything unsteady, and a runaway if he gets a chance. Many a cow is spoiled by lack of patience and quietness in the milker, and the amount of milk depends more upon the milker than the pasturage. If a man is afraid of a horse, the animal knows it before he goes into the stable. We have seen the most inoffensive cow in the herd so wrought upon by the nervousness of a greenhorn son of Erin, as to dexterously plant her foot in his breast and send him rolling heels-over head. A noisy, boisterous fellow about fattening stables will cause a serious loss in gain of flesh to the animals. So important is quiet to them when they are digesting their food.—Ex.

THE USE OF BORAX IN WASHING.—In Belgium and Holland linen is prepared beautifully, because the washerwomen use refined borax, instead of soda, as a washing powder. One large handful of borax is used to every ten gallons of boiling water, and the saving in soap is said to be one-half. For laces and cambrics, an extra quantity is used. Borax does not injure the linen, and it softens the hardest water. A teaspoonful of borax added to an ordinary sized kettle ot hard water, in which it is allowed to boil, will effectually soften the water.

WAITING FOR THE DAWN.

SELECTED BY M. G. COUCH.

This is the night before the morning.
Stars are fading through the dawn;
Moons are waning, midnight gone;
Slowly up the eastern way
Roll the chariot wheels of day;
While the universe makes room
For the tragic play of doom.

This is the night before the morning.
Dead hearts into beating break,
Dead eyes into brightness wake,
Hands unclasp upon the breast,
Millions rise from their long rest;
Leaving grave and leaving tomb
For the tragic play of doom.

This is the night before the morning.
Sea, her wave-wings, spreads to fly,
While the angel passes by;
Earth unfolds her worn attire
For a mystic change of fire;
And amidst the parting gloom
Waits the tragic play of doom

This is the night before the morning.
Through the gates of heaven doth ride
Bridegroom forth to meet his Bride;
She is coming, clothed in white,
From the chambers of the night,
Forth to meet him in the light.
Angels crowd, with wreath and plume,
To the tragic play of doom.

This is the night before the morning.
Flash the stars, by tempest driven,
Trailing fire from earth and heaven;
Lightnings, from far distance hurled
With their flame-lips kiss the world;
And midst fire, wail, light, and gloom,
Opes the tragic play of doom.

WHY I AM AN ADVENTIST.

BY ELDER J. HEMENWAY.

A synopsis of a discourse on Adventism, preached by request of Rev. Mr. Wiggin, Pastor of the Unitarian Church, Marlboro, Mass., May 3d, 1874; being one of a series of lectures delivered by clergymen of different denominations, presenting the reasons of their denominational belief.

The religious world is divided into sects and parties, as the result of free and independent investigation of Divine Revelation. Investigation develops and brings to light neglected truths, which form a nucleus around which men gather and promulgate those truths as important to the age in which they live. By these truths they are identified and known as sects and parties in the religious world. Divisions of the church are not the result of conflicting sentiments of the Bible, but of conflicting opinions of men in relation to the teaching of the Bible, arising from prejudice, tradition, or want of proper knowledge of the truth.

The Adventists are not known or understood by the masses yet. Many suppose that Adventism is confined to this continent, and to but a small part of that. The doctrines of the soon coming of Christ were preached by Joseph Wolfe of Asia about 1820, and, quite a body of Adventists was raised up through his labors. Irving, of Europe, became the founder of a large church called "Irvingites"; the same as the people of this continent were called "Millerites," after William Miller, the founder of Adventism in America.

As a people we have no creed but the Bible. We stand upon what is termed evangelical doctrine, as to faith and repentance being requisite to salvation, and believe Jesus Christ to be the Son of God, and our Savior through faith in him.

The doctrines peculiar to us as a people are—the personal advent of Christ near at hand, the literal resurrection of the dead at his coming, when the righteous and wicked will be rewarded according to deeds done in the body. We believe that the wicked will be destroyed—not tormented forever—and the righteous will be made immortal, to die no more. We believe that this earth will be purified by the fires of the last day, and restored to its Eden beauty, and given to the righteous for their everlasting home. Why we thus believe, we shall endeavor to show, is because the Scriptures thus teach, in language that need not be misunderstood.

I. THE SECOND ADVENT IS TO BE LITERAL. This was the expectation of the prophets, apostles, and the primitive church. Please hear what Job and others have said about it. "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job 20: 25-27. "And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Isa. 25: 9. "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Matt. 24: 30. "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 2: 9-11. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4: 16. "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9: 28. These are specimens of numerous texts we find to teach us to look for the second personal appearing of Christ. Without a perversion of language, it is impossible to make this testimony mean anything else.

II. THERE IS A NECESSITY FOR CHRIST'S COMING AGAIN to fulfill his mission to the world. The Scriptures teach a future judgment, with Christ as judge. In the Acts of the Apostles we are informed that God has appointed a day in the which he will judge the world by that man Christ Jesus; to which agree the prophets and apostles. Hear them:—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 31-34. "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess. 1: 7-9. "I charge thee, therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.

From this testimony we conclude that unless Christ comes the second time, there will be no judgment, and no reward for the righteous. Paul presents the same deduction to his brethren in 1 Cor. 15: 16-23:—"For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming."

III. THAT THERE WILL BE A LITERAL RESURRECTION OF THE BODY, is clearly proved from the evidence already introduced; but allow me to quote a few more passages. In John 5: 28, 59, we read:—"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." This language places the question beyond dispute. It is those that are in their graves. The body is what we place in the grave, and that is to come forth to life or damnation.

Again in 1 Cor. 15: 51-55,—"Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" There are many passages of the same import that teach us to expect a resurrection of the dead.

IV. THE FUTURE DESTINY OF MAN is a subject of deep interest to mankind; therefore, we should expect to find it clearly stated in Divine Revelation; for it is there, and only there that we can learn anything about it this side of the judgment. We read in the Scriptures that at the coming of Christ the unrighteous are to be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power." The term "destruction" denotes the nature of the punishment, and "everlasting" the duration. To destroy is to make an end of a thing or being; therefore the text teaches that the wicked will come to an end, with no hope of another life. To this agree the Scriptures from Genesis to Revelation. To denote the end of the wicked with the strongest terms in the English, Hebrew and Greek languages is evidence beyond question that they will come to an end. The terms "destruction," "perish," "burned up," "come to an end," and "be as though they had not been," cannot possibly, by any proper use of language, be made to signify that the objects or persons still exist. This truth magnifies the character of our Lord. He offers to mankind eternal life, on condition that he will avail himself of means provided, and develope a character that shall make that life a blessing to himself, and an honor to God; but if man refuses thus to prepare himself to live, he must die; for "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life."

We now pass to show the reward of the righteous. Life and death are Bible terms, that point to the results of life, or to a future state. The righteous have the promise of eternal life. As we have previously stated, the righteous are raised, or changed from mortal to immortality. Therefore it follows that living men, tangible beings, must have a place to live. We are not left to conjecture as to where this will be, for God has revealed it in as plain language as is possible to express it. Allow me to give a few quotations as specimens of the way that it is expressed in the Scriptures:—"Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." "For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth; and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off." "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever." "Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it." Ps. 37: 3, 10, 11, 22, 29, 34. We are here informed that the righteous shall inherit the earth. We are not left in doubt as to when this is to be fulfilled; for we are told it is "when the wicked are cut off." As to duration, we are told it shall be "forever."

To sum up this testimony, it is that the righteous will live forever on the earth after the judgment of God shall destroy the wicked. The prophet Isaiah and others corroborate this testimony:—"For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." Isa. 54: 17. "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5: 5. "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Pet. 3: 13. "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Dan. 7: 27."

Here we have four witnesses, living at different times in the history of the world, speaking of the inheritance of God's people. And to remove all doubt as to where the reward will be given, Daniel informs us that the saints will possess "the kingdom under the whole heaven."

These are some of the reasons why we look for a restitution of this earth, and expect it as our everlasting home.

(Concluded next week.)

DID CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, MAKE THE WORLD?---No. 7.

J. S. WHITE.

This trying to correct our English Bible by referring to the original has done more in our day to lead men into the utter rejection of the Bible than any other one thing, Spiritualism not excepted. It has had much to do in the support and encouragement of this spirit-delusion. Prof. Ripley used to say to his scholars who were studying for the ministry, "When you go out to preach, don't ever refer to the Greek or Hebrew, as if you could correct our Bible. For," said he, "the Bible cannot be translated better than it is in our version. And if you try to correct it, you will lead the skeptic further into skepticism." The Professor might have thought that by obtaining a little knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew, we might think we knew everything, and so be tempted to show our superior scholarship by correcting the mistakes and sifting out all the errors in our Bible; as if by so doing we could put the scholarship of the world to the blush, showing how the Bible should be translated; while such scholars as he, and Professors Griesbach, Gaussen, Stuart, Stowe, Whiting, and all of the most learned men in the ministry, would never attempt to do this; and for the reason that they would know better. Thousands of words may be changed, including nouns, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, and prepositions, without changing the sense of the text in the least. With the translators, it was a mere choice of words, which express the same thing. But when the preacher of the gospel takes another word, by referring to the Greek, which may not change the meaning of the text, many are led to think that our Bible is wrong; and if wrong in one thing, it may be in many; and so, as Prof. Ripley says, "the skeptic is led further into skepticism."

Profs. Griesbach, Gaussen, Stuart and Stowe have shown us, as the result of their laborious criticisms of the original, that not one doctrine of religion is changed, not one precept is taken away, and not one important fact is altered from the original, in our version of the Bible. Dr. Adam Clarke is often referred to as a profound scholar in the original. On the purity and correctness of our translation, Mr. Clarke says: "Those who have compared most of the European translations with the original have not scrupled to say that the English translation of the Bible, made under the direction of king James, is the most accurate and faithful of the whole. Nor is this its only praise; the translators have seized the very spirit and soul of the original, and expressed this almost everywhere, with pathos and energy." "This is an opinion in which my heart, my judgment, and my conscience coincide."

We see by this, that Dr. Clarke did not think his translation, nor any other, was superior for correctness to the one ordered by king James. Nor did he think that he was competent to change one doctrine, nor one important fact, nor precept, by sifting "errors" out of our Bible.

The object in trying to prove that Christ did not make the world is to show that he had no existence before he came down from heaven. Why, then, try to keep the main object out of sight? But, it will crop out. The direct course to take would be to try to prove that Christ did not exist before he became the seed of David. To prove this would be to prove the other. For if he did not exist at the time the world was made, of course he did not make it. But if it could be proved that Christ did not make the world, that of itself would not prove that he was not with the Father at the time the world was made. As the question of the pre-existence of Christ is in the question, Did Christ make the world? we have noticed this all the way, and shall do so in the conclusion.

The testimony of Moses and the prophets. "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." Gen. 1: 26. It is admitted that this means God the Father, and God the Son. We have already noticed the absurdity of saying that God the Son was not with the Father at the time God said, "Let us make man." An extract from Dr. John Gill may be in place here. Dr. Gill says:—"The first name of God we meet with in Scripture, and that in the first verse of it, is plural: 'In the beginning God [Elohim] created the heavens and the earth.' Gen. 1: 1. That there was more than one concerned in the creation of man, is clear from Job 39: 10; Ps. 149: 2; Eccl. 12: 1; Isa. 54: 5; in all which places, in the original text, it is—my Makers, his Makers, thy Creators, thy Makers; for which no other reason can be given than that more persons than one had a hand therein."

Micah 5: 2,—"But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." If this means simply that Christ was in the mind of the Father from of old, from everlasting; so was the object of Christ's coming into the world in his mind; and man and his salvation were in his mind. But this text does not mean the Father, but the Son, whose goings forth are from everlasting. Can this be said of man, that his goings forth are from everlasting?

The testimony of John. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." John 1: 1-3. "He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not." v. 10. This is so plain and direct that no words can make it plainer. Even Mr. Folsom, who has been referred to, and who does not believe it, says that the first impression one has on reading this, either in the English or Greek, is, that John meant a person. The course resorted to, to cover up what is on the face of the text, and to show that John did not mean a person, is to read it in the place of he and him, in the third, fourth, and tenth verses, and so make it read, "All things were made by it, and without it was not anything made that was made. It was in the world, and the world was made by it, and the world knew it not." If by putting it in the place of him and he, shows that John did not mean a person before Christ was in the world, then it shows that John did not mean a person after Christ was in the world, when he says, "he was in the world . . and the world knew him not." We have already shown that if the word it be used in the place of him and he, it no more proves that John did not mean a person, than when Peter said, "It is the Lord," he did not mean a person. What will not men resort to, in trying to sift "errors" out of the Bible? If you say through in the place of by in the third, fourth and tenth verses, the meaning is not changed in the least.

"This is the true God, and eternal life." 1 John 5: 20. John says, "the Word was God"; that "his name is called the Word of God"; and that he "is the true God." John, like all the Bible writers, is in harmony with himself. "He that cometh after me is preferred before me; for he was before me." John 1: 15.

Christ's testimony. "No man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven." John 3: 13. "He that cometh from above is above all." v. 31. "For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven." 6: 33. "I came down from heaven." v. 38. "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" v. 62. "I go to him that sent me." 7: 33. "I know whence I came, and whither I go." 8: 14. "For I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me." 8: 42. "Before Abraham was, I am." 16: 58. "I am come forth from the Father, and am come into the world; again I leave the world, and go to the Father." v. 28. "And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." 17: 5. "For thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." v. 24. Christ was there, for the Father has said that his Son "laid the foundation of the earth."

The testimony of Paul. "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature; for by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him and for him; and he is before all things, and by him all things consist." Col. 1: 14-17. If this testimony does not show that Christ made all things, how is it possible that any words can show it? Now what is done to set aside this testimony? for it must be set one side, or else Christ did make the world. Why, we are told that the Greek en, rendered "by" in the first part of v. 16, should be "in," and the Greek dia, rendered "by" in the last part of the verse, should be "through"; as if, by so doing, it is proved that Christ did not make the world, and that he had no existence at the time the world was made. Every one who has but little knowledge of the Greek, and has looked at these words to see how they are rendered in our Bible, very well knows that in a multitude of places it makes no difference in the sense whether either of them is rendered "by" or "through." As in English, so in the Greek, different words are often used, which have the same meaning, to avoid repetition. If dia in this verse is rendered "through," and if this would show that what is here affirmed is not true, then what is affirmed of God in Rom. 11: 36 is not true; for the Greek is dia, and rendered "through."

The following are a few of the many places where dia is in the Greek and may be rendered "by" or "through," without changing the sense in the least: "Spoken of the Lord by the prophet." Matt. 1: 22. "Into their own country by another way." 2: 12. "Spoken of the Lord by the prophets." 2: 15. "Of God by your tradition." 15: 3. "He that entereth not by the door." John 10: 1. "Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietness, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence." Acts 24: 2. "Who was preached among you by us." 2 Cor. 1: 19. "His knowledge by us in every place." 2: 14. "By the faith of Jesus Christ." Gal. 2: 16. "Obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 5: 9. "Acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 2: 5.

If we put "through" in the place of "by," it does not change the meaning. "For by grace are ye saved through [día] faith." Now if we reverse the order, the meaning is the same. For by faith are ye saved through grace.

Out of the six hundred times día is used in the New Testament, it is translated "through" sixty-six times. Now as dia is in Col. 1: 16, we are told that it must be rendered "through," as if that would prove that God did not make all things by his Son. The word "through" in this case would by no means change the meaning. "As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by [día] the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by [día] me." John 6: 57. "That we might live through [día] him." 1 John 4: 9. All can see that in the texts I have cited, it makes no change whether we say by him, or through him. So in Col. 1: 16,—"All things were made by," or through him. Both words in these places express the same thing.

YAHVAH; OR, THE MEMORIAL NAME.

SELECTED BY C. P. WHITTEN.

Exodus 3: 15,—"This is my name forever, and this is my memorial unto all generations."

"And he came. The long expected Deliverer, the Sovereign, came; heralded by angels." Luke 2: 8-15; and proclaimed by his messenger, Matt. 3: 1-3. "He came to his own"—"To the lost sheep of the house of Israel." He who had aforetime sent his prophets with "Thus saith Yahvah"—Himself now brings the message of deliverance from sin. Yahvah in the person of Christ speaks on earth. Yahvah, he who will become Christ, the Anointed, the Messiah. They know him not. His very name veiled in superstition, and represented by a false and foreign word, is indeed "incommunicable" to their blinded hearts. Yet some did know him. To this the apostle testifies. John 12,—"These things saith Esaias when he saw his glory, and spake of him" (Christ). Now this is the glory which Esaias saw. Isa. 6,—"I saw the Sovereign sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up; and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphim, . . . and one cried to another, saying, Holy, Holy, Holy Yahvah of Hosts! The whole earth is full of his glory! Then said I, Woe is me! for my eyes have seen the king, Yahvah of hosts!"

The above may stand as the illustration of the manner in which the New Testament writers refer to the Hebrew Scriptures as speaking of Christ. To cite the numberless instances would be superfluous. Their great aim seems to be to identify Christ, the Messiah, with Yahvah of the Old Testament. Thus they affirm: That Isaiah saw the glory of Christ, and spake of him. In Isaiah it is the glory of Yahvah. That Christ was the leader of Israel in the wilderness. Now in the narrative of their wanderings they were led by Yahvah. That Moses preferred the reproach of Christ to the treasures of Egypt. In Exodus it is Yahvah, for whom he endures all things. That at the giving of the Law, the voice of Christ shook the earth. In Exodus it is the voice of Yahvah. That the Spirit of Christ spoke by the prophets. The prophets themselves refer their utterances to the Spirit of Yahvah. This breadth of reference in the New Testament writers to Christ as pervading the history of the Old, cannot be explained on the ordinary view. So also their references to passages in the Psalms and Prophets, as prophetic of Christ, quite indiscriminate and incomprehensible on the narrow methods of interpretation of the present day, in the Christian church, in respect to the Christ of the Old Testament history. And yet there is a strong undercurrent of feeling that the mystery of Christ as related to that history is not solved.

The pressure of facts above set forth, the continued identification by the apostles of the New Testament Christ with the Old Testament Yahvah, has compelled by many the adoption of the theory, rather than the belief, that the "Jehovah Angel" (e) Yahvah Angel, was Christ. It is no new thing to assert that Christ appeared in the form of the "Jehovah Angel" to his ancient people. It is safe to affirm, however, indeed it cannot be denied, that no distinction of persons can be maintained between "Jehovah" and "the Jehovah angel of the Old Testament, or between Yahvah and Malak Yahvah. They are continually interchanged in such a way as to exclude the possibility of distinction, except on the ground of a "manifested presence." As an instance see Ex. 3: 2-7. When Yahvah appears to man, or gives any visible signs of His presence, that visible sign or appearance is called Malak Yahvah. This "manifestation," "messenger," or Angel, as a man walks and talks with Abraham, as an angel wrestles with Jacob, communes face to face with Moses, is seen in the heavens by the Elders of Israel. The pillar and cloud also were the visible signs of Yahvah's presence to the Israelites in the wilderness, leading them in their wanderings; each was to them in their turn Malak Yahvah, and out of the glory, and out of the cloud, was heard the voice of Yahvah when he spake with Moses. Malak Yahvah, then, is the manifestation of Yarvah to humanity, and the preparation for that more wonderful revelation of himself to the world, as the MESSENGER OF THE NEW COVENANT, of which great future manifestation the name of Yahvah is itself a prophetic MEMORIAL.

Not only in this special manner do the apostles assert the identity of Christ with Yahvah (or Jehovah), but they assume that identity as an established fact, by attributing to Christ, in his final coming and kingdom, all the glory and dominion everywhere throughout the Old Testament ascribed to Yahvah. The arguments by which they establish the divinity of the man, Christ Jesus, are always historical arguments. They do not begin with his humanity, and add on names and attributes to prove him divine. They begin with his divinity, which divinity or divine personality, they declare superintended the world from the beginning, manifested itself from time to time in history, and finally appeared on earth as the Messiah.

In the apostolic view, then, the manifested presence of Christ began at the very foundation of the church, the transient and varying forms by which he appeared to his ancient people, preparing them for the more permanent and universal manifestation of himself in the person of the great Malak Yahvah—Christ the Messiah. Thus, they declare in the most absolute manner the identity of Yahvah, the founder of the Jewish church with Christ, the great High Priest, who, by the sacrifice of himself, abolished the merely legal and representative ordinances, and completed the dispensation which he instituted.

This completed dispensation is set forth in the New Testament as a great historic fact and unit, containing, from the beginning to the end, the revelation of the work as Christ in the world; no one part of which can be comprehended without the other, and of which one Divine Person, under the successive names of Yahvah and Christ, constitute the sublime unity. Yahvah, or Yahvah Elohim, is a name of Relation. It is a name, growing out of the expectation of a DIVINE PROMISE. He who gave the promise adopted its name, and entered into a relation of affection with the race.

This name, originating in human want and need, having a human history and growth, and yet representing a divine promise, was fitly chosen as foreshadowing the incarnation of the divine person who assumed it to himself, and proclaimed it to be his MEMORIAL NAME forever to all generations. With respect to proper pointing, and literal rendering of the term "Jehover," or "incommunicable" name, there is now among scholars, no difference of opinion." The expression in Exodus 3: 14, "I am that I am," signifying self-existence, is really "I who will be," and contains a promise of a Deliverer. The expression in the Hebrew is in the most absolute form of the future tense. It is not possible for any expression to be more so.

The derivation of the word Jehovah was formerly a matter of contention. Many critics have striven to give it a source foreign to the Hebrew. It is sufficient upon this point to cite the remarkable change of opinion in Gesenius; the acknowledgement of which is a fact creditable alike to the candor and scholarship of this great philologist, who is at once the founder and the master of Hebrew Criticism. By comparing his former manuals with the last edition of his Thesaurus, it will be seen that while in the former, he holds to an Egyptian or Greek derivation of this term, in the latter he says "they lose their time and labor who endeavor to refer this name to a foreign origin." Its true derivation is from Havah, the old root of the verb "to be." It is this form Yahvah (literally, He will be), turned into the noun or name, Yahvah,—HE WHO WILL BE—which God adopts as his NAME and memorial to all generations.

The affections demand a personal object. They cannot be moved by abstractions, but only as they are moved can Christianity make progress. God as a personal being, then, related to our race, and acting in history is the proper object of affection. The affections coinciding with the perception result in faith, or a practical belief in a personal God.

Faith then becomes to the mind what sight is to the eye; it holds the affections to their true object, puts reality for abstractions, and restores to history her exiled king. His appearance in the world as the long-looked-for Deliverer—Christ—the Messiah (which term, in the Greek, is the exact equivalent of Yahvah in the Hebrew), who, coming as man, yet declares himself God, asserting the Fathership of Elohim—God—of whose glory he had himself been partaker, and from whom he proceeded forth, who came explaining the nature of that kingdom destined to prevail upon earth, and claiming it as his own; who, having conquered death, will deliver those, who, through fear of death, are subject to bondage, and thus finish the work of redemption.

From "Yahvah-Christ, the Memorial Name."

WANTED—HONEST MEN.

J. H. WHITMORE.

More honest men are every where needed. Not only in congress, but in the church,—not only in the city, but in the country there is a great scarcity of the pure article. When a man is honest in some department of life, and dishonest in others, he is not fit to be called an honest man. To say that a man is politically honest, is but scant praise compared to saying that he is an honest man, for "An honest man's the noblest work of God."

To be an honest man one must be truthful, sincere and honorable. Every one admits that it is dishonest for a legislator or a judge to receive bribes, or for any person to steal or rob. But there are many nicer shades of conduct, that are not so openly reprehensible, but which are really quite as dishonest. For instance, when a man professes to be what he knows he is not, or when he professes to believe what he does not believe, he is dishonest. Men are every where and daily assuming church relations that they cannot honestly sustain. You will find Calvinists among the Methodists, and Arminians among the Presbyterians, and open-communionists among the "regular" Baptists, and mirable dictu, one finds among all these churches some of the fiercest advocates of the soul's mortality and of the destruction of the wicked. Universalists have been in the habit of explaining the undoubted decline in the number of their churches during the last twenty years, by saying that there are thousand of Universalists in the different Orthodox churches, and that the mission of Universalism is less that of building separate and distinctively Universalist churches than of towing up and educating Orthodox churches. They assert, and probably with much truth, that there are thousands of Universalists now satisfied with membership in Orthodox churches who, if compelled to assent to a belief in everlasting punishment, or forfeit their membership, would flee with horror from the churches of which they are now members.

The plain question arises just here, Can a Universalist be an honest man and be a member of a church, one of the principal dogmas of which, is the eternity of hell torments? I know that the rules of admission to Orthodox churches are in many instances not observed; I know that often the odious parts of the creed are slurred over or omitted; I know that in some cases when the candidate plainly announces his belief of doctrine not esteemed orthodox, he is told that will not make any difference, but in spite of all these favoring and convenient customs on the part of churches anxious to increase their membership, I still persist in asking, Can an honest man join a church, or remain a member of a church, whose principal doctrine he not only disbelieves but hates? In such a case, does he not support by his personal influence, his sympathy and his means, that which he believes is false? If I was allowed to join, for instance, the Presbyterian Church without any formal or express assent to it's creeds, would not the act of joining be an implied assent to it's doctrines quite as binding as though I had in express terms formally said, I accept and believe the creed as read? Is a mental reservation of disbelief in such a case compatible with honesty?

One might suppose that if honesty was to be found any where, in its purity, it would be found, in the Church. And so doubtless it may, but it is useless to deny the fact that there are many church members who lack the honesty and moral courage to live true to their convictions. I am personally and familiarly acquainted with several men, members of Orthodox churches, who when talking with me are loud in their advocacy of several distinctive doctrines of Adventism, and yet with a woful inconsistency they give their means and personal support to churches that denounce as infidel those same doctrines. An honest man will not be willing to pass for what he is not. He will not hide under or behind a "mental reservation." He will neither give his express nor his implied assent to a doctrine that he disbelieves. He will be loyal to the church of which he is a member, loyal to its doctrines and ordinances, obedient to its rules. If one loves the praise of men more than the praise of God, and popularity more than the approval of his own conscience, and fears public reproach more than dishonesty, he will be apt to smother his convictions of right and truth, to hold an esoteric and an exoteric faith, to profess one thing in the church, and another thing in the street; and, in short, he will choose, as some have chosen, to be a dishonest man rather than to be thought heterodox in his belief. An honest man will show his true colors, whether they happen to be popular or not. It is bad to lack friends, and reputation, and a home, but it is infinitely worse to lack that one thing needful—MORAL HONESTY.

"THE WORD."

R. S. WILLARD.

"Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. Quench not the Spirit. Despise not prophecyings. Prove all things; hold fast that which is good. Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly: and I pray God your whole Spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16: 3.

In former articles, we have hastily passed through the series of events to transpire between the first and second advents of our Savior, as given by him in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, and in the twenty-first chapter of Luke, till we have reached the last event named to take place before his coming, which is the shaking of "the powers of heaven." The word ouranos, rendered "heaven," signifies that which is exalted, or elevated. Critics claim it may be properly rendered world, as well as heaven. Admitting this, and the subject is plain, and in harmony with the context; that is, the events that produce the "perplexity," and "distress of nations," result in shaking the exalted powers of the world. As the people see these things approaching upon the earth, it will cause their hearts to fail them for fear. It is not revealed that there are any "powers" in heaven that are to be shaken before the Lord shall come; but there are political powers on earth, that hold exalted positions, above their neighbors, that may be shaken, as France, Spain and Italy have been within the last three or four years. The prospects are strong in favor of much greater shaking than has yet transpired among the nations. To the careful observer, the immediate future looks very threatening. Men are trembling as when the first symptoms of the terrible earthquake begin to be felt. The omens indicate so certainly that startling events are at hand, scarcely any one expresses a doubt. It seems to be a foregone conclusion. But few believe that Christ's coming is the event indicated by these alarming symptoms, but the children of the Lord in all denominations and more and more fully impressed that the day of the Lord is near at hand.

When we have arrived at the point now indicated by the signs of the times, the Savior says: "Now learn a parable of the fig tree when its branch is yet tender and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things," "know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." This is a very strong illustration. As the putting forth of the leaves in the spring affords positive evidence that summer is at hand, so when we reach the signs that must precede the coming of Christ, their testimony is just as positive and certain in favor of his speedy coming, as that of the spring leaves for the approach of summer. As the signs have been seen in their proper order, at the right time, according to other prophetic events, we are driven to the conclusion that we are very near the coming of our blessed Savior. We are where we may lift up our heads and rejoice because our "redemption draweth nigh." It is glorious to live at this period of time, when we may expect soon to witness the resurrection of the dead, and the establishment of the everlasting kingdom of God. These are truly sublime moments.

As the leaves of spring do not tell the precise day and hour that summer will commence, so neither do the prophetic signs indicate the day and hour that our Savior will appear. They afford certain evidence that his coming is at our doors, and thus create the necessity and importance of watchfulness, that we may be fully prepared for the wonderful event.

After giving these sure signs in the sun, moon, and stars, followed by those on the earth, all of which are designed to remove every shade of doubt from the minds as to the nearness of the event indicated by these signs, the Savior says: "Watch, therefore; for ye know not what hour the Lord doth come." Matt. 24: 42. "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." Matt. 25: 13. "Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning." Mark 13: 35. "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." Mark 13: 37. These Scriptures just quoted are so plain, we can see no chance for any one to know the day and hour, and should any one assume to know, one of two things must be true; he is either mistaken, or the Scriptures have been broken. But Jesus has said, "the Scripture cannot be broken" (John 10: 35), therefore it follows, that all who should claim to know the day and hour when Jesus will come, would most certainly take a position directly opposed to the teaching of Jesus. Such instruction would be presumptuous, and result, no doubt, in sowing discord, and producing division among the Lord's children.

Satan knows full well that we are very near the coming of Christ; hence he will do all he can to lead honest, sincere souls, who truly love Jesus, to take some unwarranted position, in order to bring the whole subject into "the plane of popular contempt." If he can persuade some to set the definite day and hour, when that time passes without bringing the event, then he uses the failure as an evidence to persuade the world that Christ is not coming at all personally; but spiritually, by the spread of certain principles, as taught by the Spiritualists. We may be sure that the Lord will not lead any man to set the day and hour for the coming of Jesus, until the Scriptures are changed. For wise reasons, the Lord has decided to withhold the day and hour of Christ's coming, and for equally wise reasons, he has seen fit to give certain prophetic signs in the sun, moon and stars, and upon earth, in addition to the prophecies concerning the kingdoms of this world, which, when fulfilled, would afford positive evidence to the disciples of Jesus that his coming was but a short distance in the future. We most firmly believe this is the present position of the church of Christ, and the impression is daily in the minds of those who are interested in these things, that "the end of all things is at hand," and that what is done must be done quickly. It is most evident that we are very near the close of the last generation that will live on the earth in its present situation. Is the reader ready for the coming of the King of kings? If not, prepare immediately. M. G.

THE BEST WAY.

It is a question of some consequence, What is the best way to reach the people with the light and truth which are especially adapted to this closing period of time. We can never benefit people till their prejudice is removed. So long as we dislike a preacher, his preaching will do us but little or no good. Then the first object to be gained is to remove the prejudice that may exist in the minds of those who listen, or refuse to hear, because they have been wrongly informed. Much of the prejudice arises from the latter source.

Jesus compares his ministers to fishermen, and denominates them "fishers of men." A successful fisherman is careful not to scare the fish he wishes to catch. He endeavors to keep himself out of sight, as far as possible, and to present only that which is calculated to please the fish, by offering it something for which it has a relish. If one kind of bait will not attract it, he tries another. As soon as he stirs up the fears or prejudices of the fish, he cannot induce him to touch his bait, even though he should be hungry. A skilful fisherman seeking choice fish, such as pickerel or trout, would not go up to their resting place, and splash his line and pole into the water, saying, Bite, or go hungry, and thus frighten them into some dark hiding place. He who would feed a hungry dog should not throw a piece of frozen meat against him, causing him to to yell with anguish. He would be sure to make good his escape, if he did not pitch in for a fight. So he who would win men to Christ must be careful not to stir up their fears, or prejudices, beyond what is absolutely necessary.

When in boyhood, we remember of seeing our father set traps to catch foxes, wild cats, and other animals. When he wished to be sure of success in an important case, he would first bait the animal, by putting down choice food, without any trap. This he would repeat several nights. After the fox found nothing to harm him for several times, he would become careless, and only be on the look out for his food. Then father would set his trap very slyly, covering it with great care, wearing mittens when he did it, so as to leave no scent, and the next morning, he would be pretty sure to find the fox in the trap. So in fishing for men. He who would be successful, must present such things at first as are not calculated to increase their prejudices, but to remove them. It is quite easy to drive people away from us, but it requires special care in leading them to Christ. Labor is lost till their confidence is gained. Let that be secured by kindness, long-suffering, faithfulness in the performance of every duty in all places, by the avoiding of all evil, and by proclaiming great truths which all are compelled to admit, are clearly taught in the Bible.

One very important point to be observed is to avoid all unkind reflections upon those who may differ from us in their theological views. No one is won to the truth by hearing his own views treated contemptuously. No one is pleased to have what he holds dear turned to ridicule. It is always best to treat with respect the opinions of others, meeting them with kind words, a gentle and meek spirit, if we would be successful in leading them from the snares of error. As soon as we begin to say sharp things, we only wake up their combative spirit, and make the wall between us still higher and stronger. Love wins the victory, but unkindness warrants a defeat.

The minister of Christ needs to pay special attention to this principle in human nature, if he would be successful in introducing new and unpopular truths to the people. He will need much patience, as well as perseverance. Whatever is said or done to him by way of opposition, must be borne with much forbearance; and in no case should he retaliate in the least degree. His motto should be, "Good for evil; blessing for cursing"; that he may imitate his divine Master, and enjoy his smiles and blessings. Truth often suffers more from the rashness, harshness, and sectarian spirit of its supporters and defenders, than from its opponents. "He that winneth souls is wise." M. G.

TRACTS.

Gospel tracts which speak present truth, bearing good tidings of speedy deliverance to the sorrowing, suffering saints, and kindly and faithfully warning the unsaved world of coming judgments, were never doing so great and good a work as at present. The people are being more and more moved with fear and doubt as to the final issue of this perturbed, restless, revolutionary condition of every department of our world; and are anxious to learn, if possible, what great events are casting their dark shadows over this generation. Many are too much prejudiced, and too fearful of reproach, to go and hear a servant of God give a prophetic description of coming events, but would be glad to privately read a tract, or any published argument giving God's history of present and coming earth-scenes.

If the people were generally willing to hear the truths preached which we promulgate, but few could hear, for there are but few preachers compared to the extent of the field. These circumstances, with others, make the demand imperative upon us, who have received light upon present truth, to make it plain upon tables, published pages of tracts, books, papers and charts, and scatter them to the extent of our means, so that "he may run that READETH." Our missionaries and colporteurs report more and more success in reaching the people through tracts and other publications. We are constantly receiving intelligence of persons reading these publications, in places where the doctrines were never preached, and only evil reports of the people who teach them had been heard; but the truth, thus silently conveyed, killed prejudice, and awakened an interest, so that Bible classes have been formed, and anxious inquirers have gathered around the evening lamp, carefully comparing the contents of the newly received tract with the utterances of Inspiration. In some places ministers and churches have been converted to the faith of Christ's speedy coming and kindred truths, the subject being introduced by a stray tract, guided perhaps by an angel hand, and the contents impressed upon honest hearts by the Holy Spirit.

Reading truth has some decided advantages over hearing. The preacher's personal appearance may be repulsive, and a few unguarded sentences may and often do destroy the effect of a whole sermon; while others are so disturbed by unaccustomed and singularly toned responses, and many other confusing causes, that the preaching produces no beneficial results. These things should be avoided as much as possible, though they will exist to some extent. But in reading these disadvantages are not generally experienced. The reader, undisturbed, can carefully apply his mind to the subject without confusion, and retrace the argument so as to get the points much more clearly and distinctly than he can in hearing a verbal argument. It is true there are some great advantages in hearing over reading, especially with certain classes; so that the church is under obligation to preach and publish divine truth to the extent of her means and ability. When we fail to do this, we put our light under a bushel; but when we do it faithfully, we keep the commandment of putting our light upon a candlestick.

Dear brethren, do we realize the vast importance of the work God has called his church of this generation to do, and the mighty responsibility resting upon her to preach and publish the gospel of the kingdom, as a witness to all nations? If we have been called of Christ to trim and put in position God's last great head-light of divine truth, so it may shine upon the only track leading to the city of everlasting rest, we should give ourselves to the work, fearless of hardship or sacrifice. God will hold us responsible for the use we make of the sacred truths he has so plainly revealed to us, designed especially for the enlightenment and salvation of this generation. Does he require us to preach and publish them? He does. Shall we be faithful and guiltless in this matter? Not unless all who have the ability to preach do so; and those who can plainly express the truth due the world and church at this time with the pen, write for publication; while those who have the financial ability, liberally use their means to send these silent preachers everywhere, witnessing to all nations and men, great and small, that the end of all things is at hand.

New tracts should be written; who will write them? The Tract Fund should be greatly increased; who has got the money which God designs for that purpose? Send it at once to some place where it can be thus used immediately. Time is swiftly passing. Use it now, or it is lost forever. Earthly treasures will soon be worthless; use them now for the glory of God in the salvation of his creatures, or they are wasted and lost.

Brother, sister, do something for God worthy of Christ's representative. Raise your hand to strike for God, although it may be very weak; he will give it strength to accomplish his own design. When the angel-voice is heard with its thundering accents, "It is done," shall the great Judge say unto us, "Well done"? Will it then be known that we worked while the day lasted? Shall we enjoy the sweet consciousness of having done all we could for the salvation of those who must then perish? Let us devoutly pray our heavenly Father to give us more of the spirit of our Master, that we may be willing to become poor in perishable treasures, and thus make many happy in the enjoyment of eternal riches.

PLEASE notice that the time of the campmeeting at Brooklin, Iowa, is changed from June 26th to July 3d. M. G.

ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

The thought of starting on a journey of thirty-five hundred miles is not at all pleasing, especially if one looks over the whole distance at once; but if he will not load the present with thoughts of to-morrow, but simply occupy the passing moment in the best possible manner, he will relieve himself of the most unpleasant part of the traveler's burdens. Do not keep thinking at the outset, what a long journey lies before me, but be occupied with passing events, present duties, and reflections on pleasing subjects, as when engaged in the daily duties of life, or quietly seated in your own happy home. Never burden the present with the past or the future. This is the teaching of Jesus, whose counsel is perfect.—"Take therefore no thought for the morrow; . . . sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." The idea contained in the original would be more properly expressed as follows: "Take therefore no anxious thought for the morrow;" that is, do not worry. Be contented, rest, and trust all in the hands Jesus. By so doing, we get along splendidly.

As we have before given wayside notes when crossing the continent, we will not take up much room to repeat what has been already said, during our seven trips between the Atlantic and Pacific. Yet we can hardly forbear referring again to the beautiful flowers that bloom in California. We wish our readers could have a look at them as they adorn the gardens and the fields. California may not only be called the "Summer Land," but the flower land. The door-yards and gardens, trellises, verandas, and pathways, are most profusely ornamented with the largest, most brilliant and handsome flowers we ever beheld. They add a rich charm to the cottage homes. There is great pleasure in cultivating flowers in California, because they grow so luxuriantly, and are not killed by the frosts of winter. In addition to these, the door-yards are ornamented with the handsomest evergreen trees we have ever seen. They are kept trimmed with great care, looking almost as though they had been through a turner's lathe; and the foliage is so thick, that a bird would hardly find a place where he could get inside to build a nest. These beautiful trees are often ten or twelve feet in diameter, and fifteen to twenty feet high.

The wild flowers of the field are as remarkable as those of the gardens. They are so abundant and brilliant that they may be seen on the mountain sides at a distance of from two to six miles away. The plains and valleys present a most charming appearance because of these lovely wild flower beds, of varied hues scattered over thousands of acres, presenting a sight that must be seen to be appreciated.

Having noticed the flowers, the luxuriant wheat-fields next attract attention. The farmers never had a brighter prospect in California than now. An immense amount of wheat has been sown, and the prospect of a full crop was never more encouraging. This, with the increased success in the mining business, bids fair to make a very large addition this year to the wealth of this already rich state. Californians are much elated over their promising future. They live as carelessly as did the antediluvians or the Sodomites. The seem to have but little thought of the world to come, and appear to be making little or no preparation for the coming day of judgment. Indeed, it is quite probable that they have but few if any thoughts about religious matters. It is difficult to reach the people with such things. They look upon them as unworthy of their notice, and as belonging to past generations less enlightened. They consider him weak minded who pays them respect. Of course, this kind of feeling will increase and abound more and more, as we approach the great day of the Lord. Thirty years ago one sermon would accomplish as much as thirty will now. The people of the present day have resisted great light, and by so doing have thrown themselves into deep darkness. They have refused all the offers of salvation, trampled upon the word of the Lord, embraced fables with greediness, and are now treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath.

Leaving the people, the farms and the flowers on the Pacific coast, after riding about seven hours, we arrived at Sacramento, one hundred and thirty-eight miles from San Francisco, where we met several brethren and sisters at the depot. They have kept up their meetings the past year, although they have had no preaching. We met three who were anxious to have us stop and baptize them; but our engagements were such that we could not comply with their request. Bro. D. D. Reed thinks he will visit them soon. There we grasped the last christian hand in the "Summer Land," and again took the cars meditating with pleasure upon the hallowed scenes we had enjoyed with the dear saints in various places during the past three months. We long for the time to come when their society will be perpetual in the future "Summer Land," where sighs and tears, temptations, sorrows, and farewells, will be forever unknown. We firmly believe the glad day will soon open its smiling dawn.

Leaving Sacramento, we soon began to ascend the winding mountain road, surrounded by scenery, which for grandeur and sublimity is seldom found elsewhere upon the earth. While time lasts they will remain to challenge the admiration of the passing traveler. We will not stop now to say more about what justly deserves a whole volume.

Our homeward trip thus far has been pleasant, abounding with sights ever varying, changing from the monotonous plain to the wildest mountain scenery. We arrived in Chicago, this Saturday, May 9th, at the appointed minute, 3.55 P. M. M. G.

CHICAGO.—We had interesting meetings in Chicago from May 10th to 17th. We found new ones, from other churches, who are becoming deeply interested in the evidence that shows Jesus is soon coming. Two men, who have held prominent positions in religious bodies have recently stepped out boldly to proclaim the second coming of Christ as an event right at the door. One of them, who was Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association for some twelve years, took an active part in our meetings, and said stirring things on this glorious theme. He is holding meetings, and making earnest efforts to arouse professors of religion to this all-important subject.

The other Bro., to whom we have referred, is doing the same thing with blessed results. A new interest is being awakened in Chicago by these devoted men. We learn also that Bro. D. L. Moody, of Chicago, is in England, proclaiming the speedy coming of Christ, witnessing wonderful results. The time has come when every one, who sees this great, present truth, should do all in his power to help spread it in every direction. Let none be idle, nor fear the face of clay. Sound the alarm with unparalleled earnestness—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh." M. G.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."

BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

OUR GREAT DISASTER.

As I am well acquainted, and live within an hour's ride of this great calamity, and went with four hundred of our townsmen to take our turn as fellow citizens in hunting for the dead bodies of those swept off in a five minutes' flood, I thought a short account might be interesting to the readers of the Crisis. The great reservoir, as it is called, is a small one compared to many. There were men who volunteered from some five different towns that day, making ten to fifteen hundred in the twelve miles, and as many spectators. Our work was assigned just above Leeds village, at the bottom of a meadow of some four or five acres, where the lower line of the meadow was covered with woods, also a few rods up the river. This caused the flood-trash of all kinds to stop. Our company contained about four hundred, lined out on the river bank. With hooks and hands we moved over boards from the broken houses, with timber, and all kinds of building material, broken into fragments, interwoven with beds and bedding, men, women, and children, clothing, broken furniture, chairs, stands, tables, bureaus, and parts of pianos and melodeons, wagons, harnesses, farming tools, provision, two or three barrels of flour, etc.

It was a great work to handle over such a large amount to find the bodies (as there were some forty then missing, mostly, however, at this time being below us). We found one man with this trash on him. Part of our hands went down below Leeds village, and found a little four-year old boy, who had been overlooked in former searches. There were some one hundred and fifty to one hundred and seventy-five lost, mostly women and children; and some never will be found, as the mud and gravel is three to four feet deep over them, and no trace of them can be found. A little child was found the next Monday alive. It had been alone two days and nights in this valley of death, its parents being both drowned. Mothers yet mourning to find the body of a dead child will move men of all professions to work as they have in this case. Even dogs mourn, and at Haydenville one was seen digging. On going to the spot, they found he had dug down to his master, who was found by the dog, two days after the flood.

Many incidents of great interest must be omitted in this paper; but for five cts., you can send to the Springfield Republican, and get the extra, that gives the whole account of this awful calamity. It is more necessary that our foundation for eternal life be made sure, than any other; for sudden deaths are the order of the day, with an increase of wickedness. It is enough to wean us from this world. HIRAM MUNGER.

DANVILLE AND THE NORTH POLE.—With the exception of a small church in the city of Quebec, every tongue is tied between Danville, P. Q., and the North Pole! Not one tongue at large to cry, "Behold He cometh with clouds." It is hoped that this fact will draw attention to the notice given by Eld. C. P. Dow, President of the Quebec Conference, in last Crisis, of the District Meeting to be held at Danville, to commence on Thursday, June 18th. See notice. We are desirous, if the Lord will, that our mark should be made here, in the closing hours of this dispensation. JOHN PORTER.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 27th, 1873, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From S. J. Bushnell.

Dear Brn. and Srs. waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:—Having believed the preaching of the cross, which is to them that perish, foolishness, but unto us which are saved it is the power of God; how glad I am that there are a few who do not let their faith stop at the cross, but believe also the preaching of the kingdom of God, and have "hope towards God" in that which others allow "that there shall be a resurrection of the dead." Knowing that as Christ is risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept, so shall they that are Christ's, at his coming. And "as we have borne the image of the earthly, so shall we also bear the image of the heavenly." Oh what a joy will be ours when we receive the "end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls." When the tabernacle of God is with men, he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people; and God himself shall be with them, and be their God; when he "shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

Not only shall the curse be removed from us, but then will "the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted as a forest;" "and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as a rose." Truly this is sufficient inducement for us to "give diligence to make our calling and election sure." Let us be faithful to that which is entrusted to our care, not being afraid to give to the world the last notes of warning; and while we are warning others of their great danger, let us see to it that we "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again in the yoke of bondage." We may think there is no danger of our falling from grace, but let us remember this, that "in the last days, perilous times shall come." In what shall the perils consist? In a great tribulation such as was not since the beginning of the world? No; but in something far more likely to "deceive the very elect." It will consist in a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. O, let us, while we see so much professed godliness on every hand, take the apostle's warning, and "try the spirits, whether they are of God, for many false prophets have gone out into the world."

Perhaps some may say, How may we distinguish between the false and the true? Jeremiah and Ezekiel knew by their cry of peace and safety when their nation was in peril, and Paul says the same cry shall again be sounded, and then will sudden destruction come upon them. While we have a few faithful prophets that fear not to cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh," let us assist them with our prayers, and otherwise, as God gives us opportunity.

Pray for me that I may be found in my lot and place when the Lord comes. Would that all that have professed to look for the Lord Jesus might receive a wedding garment; but some will be among the foolish virgins. Let us each ask ourselves the question, Is it I?

From Bro. D. C. Thomas.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in the Lord:—A burden lies heavily on my heart, as I look over the world, and see how sin and iniquity abounds. Our neighbors and friends are going to the judgment unprepared. Shall we play with children's toys? Shall we waste our time discussing theory, when so much is to be done? Has God made it our duty to sound the last message to a perishing world? If so, will he not hold us responsible for a faithful discharge of our duty, that those who are in darkness, and ready to perish, may see the storm-cloud coming, and hide in the Rock before they are swept down to perdition? My heart is awake to this subject. No language can describe it, no symbol can illustrate it. Shall we act like men of God, and lift a warning voice so that a guilty world shall have no excuse? When our eyes are opened to see the position of the world about ready to plunge into the lake of fire, shall we hold our peace? The work is great, but it must be done. Let us pray earnestly that Christ may multiply our strength and increase our wisdom, that we may work more efficiently for God.

The great controversy between truth and error, good and evil, is drawing to a final close. The battle waxes hot. The mighty hosts are preparing for the last decisive charge. Spirits are aroused, divine and satanic. Look over the field! all is in motion. The world is stirred, and angels gaze with awe, as the contending hosts rush to the last mighty conflict. And will not multitudes of professed christians be lost when the light of the judgment day shall flash upon them? What wails of despair will ascend from millions of hypocrites, backsliders and nominal christians, when Jesus shall rise up and shut to the door. The day is hastening when the Lord will reward every one according to his work.

Kendall, Me.

From Sr. C. B. Douglass.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I love to read your letters in the Crisis from time to time, although it is seldom I know the writers; but I know by the chord touched in my heart they are from the Lord's children, and I shall be acquainted with you all when the scattered flock are gathered home. Sometimes trials and temptations are very severe as we journey along, but the dear Lord, who is leading us, gives us the comforting word,—"There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." So trusting in him as "mighty to save," I am still striving to walk in his footsteps. Looking back over years of the past I can sing,—

"With his blood he bought me:
And all along my pilgrim way
His loving hand hath brought me."

The future looks bright and safe with my hand in Jesus. He says to us, "I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, "Fear not, I will help thee." And I know the hold will never loosen, unless my hand grows restless in his and will not stay. Precious Savior! how sweet to be sheltered in his love. And if faithful, dear ones, we shall soon sing praises to our King, saying, "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and we shall reign on the earth."

Lowell, Mass.

From Bro. G. A. Streeter.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—My heart is in the work of the Lord, and I feel like trusting in his dear name. I have engaged to visit Enfield, Mass., and No. Rutland, Mass., the third and last Sundays of each month. I was at E. last month. There is a class there having no shepherd, and they are poor in this world, yet they love the Savior. The poor must have the gospel; so pray for me. If the Lord opens doors for the first and second Sunday in each month, I shall obey. We are in perilous times. Never did we need to stand side by side as now. As a people looking for the Lord, we should unite our efforts, and preach the gospel of Christ. Teach men to believe it, and nothing else. Away with strife and contentions, which cause divisions in feeling, if not in body. My heart is pained to hear expressed so much self-aggrandizement. O for more of the Spirit of God! then we shall love each other more. In the absence of love, hatred comes in as a natural fruit of the old man.

Let every reader of the Crisis, seek after holiness, Bible perfection, and purity. "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." God bless you all. I never felt more like standing firm than now. Hold up the banner. Jesus is coming soon. Let us be ready to meet him in peace.

No. Dana, Mass.

From R. L. Parker.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—We are a little pilgrim band here, striving to endure that we may gain the rest which is in reserve for the people of God. We, in common with all our dear brethren and sisters, have trials and difficulties to encounter, yet the dear Lord has blessed us above many, in that we have a neat little chapel to worship in, a well organized church, with an interesting Sunday school; and some of the children have learned to love the Lord. It has been sustained during the winter, increasing in interest and number. Poor children have been supplied with clothing, and in so doing the parents' hearts have been reached, and they have found Jesus, and have become rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom, for which we praise his holy name.

Sister Smith has closed her pastoral labors amongst us with a series of meetings. The Spirit accompanied the word, a deep feeling rested on the people, and some started for the kingdom. Five united with the church, and others are expected to after baptism. Sister Smith leaves with a good influence on the community, and has our prayers for her prosperity here, and at the end of the warfare eternal life.

Bro. H. Pratt has accepted an invitation from the church to be with us the first Sunday of each month, and take the pastoral care.

Scitico, Ct.

From Bro. Jos. Thompson.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—The Lord has been very gracious to us in this part of his vineyard. His richest blessings have been bestowed upon his followers, and his convicting Spirit has been felt throughout this place. Many have received the evidence of pardoned sin, and are now rejoicing in the hope of immortality and eternal life.

We have had a glorious meeting here, held by Bro. and Sr. R. F. Clark. We have had the gospel preached in its purity. Sr. Clark has labored with us nearly five weeks. The house has been crowded to hear the Word. Some started for the kingdom. Bro. and Sr. Clark have organized a church of twenty members. Others are coming in. I united with the Baptists one year ago, but when I heard preaching from the Bible upon the views entertained by Adventists, I began to study for myself. Now all is plain and harmonious.

Praise the Lord that I have got this Christ, and that I can live with him in his everlasting kingdom when he comes to crown us with the glory he has promised his children. Praise him forever! He deserves all our praise and all our service.

From Bro. Albert Gordon.

Dear Brn.:—I feel it would be proper for me to give a report of my labors the past winter. On the receipt of the aid so kindly sent me by the Mission Board, I arranged my business, and started for the field of labor in Northern N. H., and Canada. I have preached in several places, from one to two weeks in a place, and have seen some good done. Several have been reclaimed, many strengthened; but I do not know as I can say there has been any converted under my labors this winter. I have preached so constantly that my vocal organs have become weakened, so that I have of late preached only Sabbaths. I have been laboring with my hands, and have been improving in health, for which I feel to thank the good Lord.

I never received more urgent calls for labor than now. It is evident the Lord is at hand, and what is done must be done quickly. I think if it is the Lord's will, and I can find a good, able and faithful brother to labor with me, I will put the Coos and Grafton Tent into the field this summer. May God send some one to go with me,—one that will be able to win souls, and give the trumpet a certain sound. In a word, one that is adapted to the work. I will do the best I can in aiding.

From Bro. L. A. Bliss.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—Permit me to say the Lord has done great things for me. He has brought me from nature's darkness into his marvelous light. I am glad that he was mindful of me while I was in sin and rebellion against him. I am glad too that I heeded the call of God, and accepted mercy while it could be found. I find Jesus very precious, and a help in every time of need. It has not been long since I started in this good way, a little over two years; but I have enjoyed more real happiness in that time, than in all my years of sin; and I know if I am faithful, Jesus will save me when he comes to make up his jewels, which I believe is only a little in the future. It will be a glorious day to those who are ready. I praise God that we have in this place a goodly number who are looking for Jesus. He is soon coming to set up his everlasting kingdom upon the earth, where his people will live and reign with him forever. O what a glorious thought to the christian! I desire an interest in your prayers, brethren, that I may meet you in the kingdom.

North Wilbraham, Mass.

HEBREW FEAST.—Last evening, (May 21), began the Hebrew Feast of Weeks, also called the Festival of the Giving of the Law, as it commemorates the delivery on Mount Sinai of the Ten Commandments, revealed to the Israelites amidst thunder and lightning soon after their redemption from Egyptian slavery. The event, which formed the basis of the religion of the Hebrew nation, is naturally considered one of the greatest importance and most sacred significance, and the services in the synagogues are of a character befitting the event which the festival is intended to commemorate. It being the anniversary of the Decalogue, confirmations of the children of Israelites who have passed their thirteenth year customarily take place on that day.

GORDON. Died in Coaticook, P. Q., May 9th, 1874, Sister Melvina Demerse Gordon, wife of Otis Gordon, aged thirty-two years, two months and three days.

Sister Gordon gave her heart to the Lord several years ago, and when death came she was ready. She leaves a husband and a family of small children, besides other near friends to mourn her loss; but they "sorrow not as others which have no hope." She loved the appearing of Jesus, and fell asleep hoping soon to hear "the voice of the archangel," "and the trump of God." Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1st Thess. 4: 14.

M. McKINSTRY.

PATTERSON. Sweetly fell asleep, on Tuesday morning, April 28th, 1874, without a struggle or a groan, Wm. Patterson, aged thirty-two.

He leaves a widowed mother and one brother to mourn his loss. The last few months of his life were those of great suffering, yet he bore it with great patience, and gave good evidence that his trust was in God, and his hope in the resurrection. His death was caused by having a bone cancer on his face, which was so swollen for months as to disfigure his face so that many could not recognize him. He did not look like a human being. He was reduced to a skeleton.

SUSAN TEMPLE.

BRADFORD. Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 14th, 1874, of small pox, Bro. Philo Bradford, of Olmsted Falls, Cayahoga Co., Ohio.

Bro. Bradford embraced the Savior when ten years of age, and continued for fifty-six years a faithful and consistent worker for Jesus. In 1843, under the labors of Bro. Fitch, he embraced the truth of the comnig and kingdom of Jesus, also life and immortality through him. Bro. B. left a wife and four children, but they mourn not as those who have no hope; for they believe that Jesus died and rose again. Therefore with great confidence are we all looking for a reunion in the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

J. M. JUDSON.

SMITH. In Moultonborough, N. H., April 13th, 1874, Sr. Mary J., wife of Eastman Smith, aged thirty-nine years.

Sr. Mary experienced religion a number of years ago, and was a firm believer in the coming of Christ and its kindred truths. She was ever ready to stand up for Jesus. She leaves a husband and two daughters to weep. May the blessing of God abide with them. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

A special invitation to attend this meeting is extended to all churches and persons in Western Vermont, who have sympathy with the work of proclaiming the coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. Will those east of the mountain also come over and help our joy? May no trifles prevent one more blessed gathering on this old battle field. Let preachers, delegates, and letters from all quarters come to the help of the Lord. We expect a good meeting.

H. F. C.

Preaching brethren and others coming to the Conference will be met at Vergennes with teams to take them to the place of meeting on arrival of express train from the North, due 10.56 A. M. Those coming from the South (train due 7.50 A. M.) will wait till 10.56. Will brethren and friends please send card previously to Bro. G. B. Whitford or Daniel Smith, at Addison, Vt.? CONNECTICUT CAMPMEETING.—The Lord willing, the Connecticut Campmeeting will commence in the grove near Plainville; Saturday, June 20th, and continue over Sunday, June 28th. Campmeeting tickets will be sold at reduced rates from stations on the New Haven and Northampton Railroad to Plainville. Brethren from Massachusetts can get campmeeting tickets at Westfield by coming that route; the usual conveyance from Plainville to the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates. We have changed the time of the meeting to accommodate brethren wishing to attend other meetings later in the season.

With a high calling and a holy cause we hope our brethren and sisters will come, not because it is convenient, or can be done as well as not; but feeling our individual responsibility as bearers of the last judgment message to the world, put forth an effort and make a sacrifice to assemble and exhort one another in the tented grove. Seekers after worldly glory and honor are sparing neither time nor money to accomplish their ends; then let us exhibit a spirit of self-denial worthy of our Master, and that will inspire confidence in our faith. A cause that waits for convenience will surely fail. Come, ye lovers of Jesus, to glorify God and do his will; come, ye strong, and strengthen the weak; come, sinner, and prepare to meet thy God; come, ye ministering servants, slacken not your zeal in this time of need. The hour calls for men filled with faith and the Holy Ghost, who dare not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. That the meeting, under the divine blessing, may impart a higher degree of spirituality and a piety of deeper tone to the scattered flock, that they may be presented pure, and without spot or wrinkle, before our soon coming King, is the prayer of your unworthy servants,

THE church at Martville and North Victory will hold a quarterly meeting June 7th. We hope to see many of our brethren and sisters of adjacent churches present. Come to work for Jesus.

M. R. MILES, Pastor.

THE Lord willing, there will be a grove meeting at West Levant, Me., in Bro. J. Emerson's grove, July 4th and 5th. All are invited to come and worship God in the spirit.

I. DAMMAN.
J. EMERSON.

THE fourth session of the Maine Westerly Quarterly meeting conference will meet with the church at Bath, commencing Thursday, June 25th, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of your Master, and work for the good of the cause, and for the salvation of perishing sinners.

H. D. REED, Pres.
H. S. MITCHELL.

THE committee of the R. I. campmeeting are requested to meet at the next session of the R. I. and East Conn. conference, to be held June 3d to 5th.

E. R. WOOD, for Com.

THE Advent church in Portsmouth, N. H., have elected as Executive Committee for the present year the following brethren: L. Leach, S. W. Hoyt, J. B. Trefethen. All communications in regard to preaching should be addressed to the Secretary, S. W. Hoyt.

ADVENT meetings have been started in Hinsdale, N. H., in American Hall. Will the preaching brethren who are passing this way give us a call? Please drop a note previous, to prevent any conflict, to DUSTIN L. PERHAM.

THE Mechanic Falls campmeeting committee are requested to meet on the camp-ground June 8th, at nine o'clock A. M., to make preparation for the coming campmeeting. We earnestly solicit brethren to meet and help us build a preacher's stand, and do such other repairs as may be necessary. Are there any preachers who will volunteer to have a meeting on the ground June 7th? If so, please give notice in the Crisis.

C. DENNEN, for the Com.

GROVE MEETING.—There will be a grove meeting in Bro. C. W. Kimbal's grove, in Linden, Genesee Co., N. Y., Saturday and Sunday, June 19th and 20th. Bro. B. P. Stevens and M. R. Miles are expected to preach the word of life. A cordial invitation is extended to all who will come, as last year, to labor and worship with the "one spirit." Our meeting last year was a glorious success, and we desire this one to be even better than that. Come and meet with us. We will try and entertain all that come; but come Friday night or Saturday morning. Be early. Meeting Friday night at the school-house. Cars arrive here at eight in the evening and ten in the morning.

For the Brn., A. P. MOORE.

ADVENT CHRIS. CONF.—The annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Iowa, will be held with the church in Cascade, beginning Thursday, June 11th and holding over the following Sunday. As there is important business to come before this conference, we hope to see every minister belonging to the conference in attendance, also a full delegation from each church. Let the clerk of each church provide the delegates that are appointed with credentials. There were some churches that did not report last year, also some ministers, and by a resolution passed at the annual meeting in 1872, such churches and ministers will forfeit their membership unless they report (in person or by letter,) at the next annual session and give a satisfactory reason for not reporting last year. Time is short and we are living amid perils. We need your counsel (Heb. 10: 25, and encouragement. We desire those churches that cannot send delegates to report by letter. Address the undersigned at Manchester, Iowa; or to D. A. Dickenson, President, Cascade, Iowa.

J. RIDLEY, Secretary.

NEW YORK STATE A. C. CONFERENCE.—The Annual Meeting of the New York State A. C. Conference will be held at Sodus Point, Wayne Co., commencing Thursday evening, June 25th, and continue over the following Sunday.

Sodus Point is at the terminus of the Sodus Bay and Southern R. R. Those coming by the Lake Ontario Shore R. R. will change cars at Wallington Junction, and those coming by N. Y. C. and H. R. R. R. will change cars at Newark.

Let every church be represented by delegates, and remember a good liberal collection for the summer campaign with the tent. There is much need of "fervent and effectual prayer" that God will signally manifest himself unto us in rich blessings at this meeting. The "perils" of the last days are upon us indeed. Let every one come filled with the Spirit of Christ to serve and obey him.

D. COGSWELL, President.
A. P. MOORE, Sec.

QUARTERLY MEETING.—The Lord willing, the R. I. and East Conn. Christian Advent Conference will hold its next session with the Advent Christian Church on Hammond street, near Division St., Providence, R. I., commencing Wednesday, June 3d, at two o'clock P. M., and continue June 4th and 5th. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

N. A. ANGELL, Clerk.

DISTRICT MEETING.—The third Dist. or Quar. Meeting of the Adv. Chris. Conf. of the Province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada, will be attended in the Melbourne District, and convene, D. V., at Danville, P. Q., at the Advent Church, on Thursday, June 18th, at two o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sabbath. A full attendance is urgently solicited, as these meetings are of great importance. Ministers and official members of this District are expected to be present; and also from other Districts of the Conference, so far as is at all practicable.

CHAS. P. DOW, Pres. of Conf.

TENT AND BASKET MEETING.—There will be a meeting of days held in the Evangel Tent, Vienna, Me., near the Brick Chapel, commencing June 11th, five o'clock P. M., and continue as long as thought best. A general invitation is given to all. Those who can bring food and tents are requested to do so, that all may be provided for. We shall do all we can to make this meeting one of profit to all. Come, brethren, sisters and friends, to unite in labor for the salvation of sinners, and make a people ready for Jesus' coming.

H. B. SEVEY.

IOWA CHRISTIAN CAMPMEETING.—The Annual Christian Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 18th, and holding over two Lord's days. Brethren from all parts of the west are cordially invited to attend this yearly feast. Come praying that the Lord will revive and unite his people. It is thought best to make this meeting an especial one, for the spiritual benefit of the church; therefore we would say to every one, Come, but leave all hobbies at home. Come to build up, and not tear down. Come with your hearts filled with love. Remember the object of the meeting is holiness of heart. We expect ministerial assistance from Boston, Mass., which will be announced in due time.

I wish to further say that there will be no especial saloon or restaurant on the ground; but there will be an extensive boarding-house, sufficient to accommodate all who may wish to board on the ground, at reasonable rates. Any one wishing to engage board, or get other information, can address Eld. J. W. Burroughs, New Hartford, Iowa, President of the Campmeeting.

M. A. NEWCOMB, Sec. Campmeeting Com.

A. C. Times, please copy.

NOVA SCOTIA CONFERENCE.—The annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Nova Scotia will be held, the Lord willing, at Bear River, Digby Co., N. S., commencing Thursday, June 18th, and continue over the following Lord's day. We hope the brethren and sisters will come ready to work for the Lord. A cordial invitation is extended to the brethren of New Brunswick and the United States.

J. J. WOODWORTH.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.—The Iowa Christian Conference will hold its annual session in connection with the Campmeeting at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 24th. A full representation of ministers and delegates are requested to be present. Ministers who cannot be present will please report by letter.

J. W. BURROUGHS, Sec.

GENERAL UNION STATE CONF. AND CAMPMEETING OF IOWA.—The General Union State Campmeeting will be held in Brooklin, Poweshiek Co., in Bro. R. L. Clark's grove, commencing Friday, July 3d (instead of June 26th, as per previous notice), and holding over Sunday, July 12th.

Brooklyn is on the Chicago and Rock Island R. R., fifteen miles east of Grinnell. Every thing necessary for a meeting will be provided. A boarding tent will be on the ground, where board can be obtained at reasonable rates. Large tents will be provided in which to hold meetings in case of rain. Let all of the brethren, sisters, and friends, east, west, north and south, make a general rally and come to this meeting. Come with hearts filled with love to God and man; and as this is a union meeting, let all hobbies be left at home. Bring your bedding and tents if possible. The conference session will be held during the first part of the meeting; so let all be in attendance at the very commencement.

"THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL"

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a pamphlet of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We have a good supply, and hope the friends will order freely. We will sell at the following prices:—25 cts. per copy; $2.00 per dozen, sent by mail; $15.00 per hundred, by express.

THE VINEYARD.

SELECTED BY GEO. W. HOWARD.

Come, enter into the vineyard,
For the eleventh hour has come,
And the Master now stands ready
To hire you every one.
Ye who are "standing idle"
In the "market place," we call,
For the Master now is waiting,
And he will hire you all.

Come enter into the vineyard;
Pray do not tarry long,
For the time is swiftly passing,
And soon it will be gone.
Then enter into the vineyard,
And work till the day is done,
If you would receive a penny
When the eventide has come.

Come, enter into the vineyard,
And work with the faithful throng,
Then when the Master cometh
You may sing redemption's song,
And hear from the lips of the Master
The joyful words "Well done!"
Come, enter into the kingdom,
And sit with me on my throne.

We shall enter the blessed city,
We shall walk its streets of gold,
We shall see the apostles and prophets
Who to us its joys foretold.
Then we'll tell redemption's story
When salvation is complete,
And cast our crowns of glory
At our dear Redeemer's feet.

SABBATH DISCUSSION.

(Concluded.)

The following was sent to the California Christian Advocate, by "S. B." who listened to the debate.

The question arises, does the new covenant give instruction sufficient for salvation? Of course, all must answer in the affirmative. But it does not contain a word requiring us to keep the seventh-day; therefore, it is not in the plan of salvation as taught by Christ and his apostles.

The Jewish Sabbath of the fourth commandment was a feast day, a memorial day; and no other nation had any reason for its observance, because they were not brought out of Egyptian bondage, hence, there is none now why it should be observed by the Christian church at the present time; so long as Christ is accepted as our teacher. In Deut. 5: 15, we read, "Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm; therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."

The covenant on the stones was a separate thing from "the law." "The Book of the Law" contained the covenant as well as the law, and was sometimes called the "Book of the Law," and sometimes the "Book of the Covenant." After all had been written in the book, and dedicated by blood, the Lord wrote the covenant on the tables of stone. After all the words received on Mount Sinai had been spoken and written in a book, containing the law and the covenant, we read of the doings of Moses as follows: "And he took the book of the covenant and read in the audience of the people; and they said, All that the Lord hath said will we do, and be obedient. And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words." Ex. 24: 7–8.

After this was done, and the covenant had been adopted and ratified, being dedicated with blood, we find in the twelfth verse, of the same chapter, the following:

And the Lord said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there; and I will give thee tables of stone and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them."

This was the time when the covenant, previously written in a book, was engraved on the stones. In 2 Kings 17: 36, 37, we read:

"But the Lord, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power and a stretched-out arm, him shall ye fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice. And the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment which he wrote for you, ye shall observe to do for evermore; and ye shall not fear other gods."

Here we learn again, that the Lord first wrote the whole in a book, including "the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandments."

The new covenant was dedicated with the blood of Christ. Paul says: "Whereupon neither the first testament (covenant) was dedicated without blood. For when Moses had spoken every precept to the people, according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people, saying, this is the testament (covenant) which God hath enjoined unto you." Heb. 8: 18, 20. "But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, . . . neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place. . . . And for this cause, he is the Mediator of the New Testament" (covenant.) Heb. 9: 11–15.

We have shown that no definite portion of time was ever fixed as a Sabbath to be kept by all mankind. It would be impossible if the day must begin at sunset, as claimed by the affirmative. If the same particular twenty four hours must be kept, then some would be obliged to begin at sunset, others at midnight, morning, noon, and all the intervening hours and minutes. This point has not been met with anything satisfactory.

We have also shown that we are not required to adhere to a particular day in all cases. For instance, when persons go around the earth east, they may very easily gain a day; and when going west they may lose a day. This has frequently happened in the case of travelers. When they started, they were both keeping the same rest day; but when they came together again, to their surprise, they were keeping separate days. Would it be a sin for them to unite on one day? The affirmative will not venture to say it would be a crime. The Lord is not as particular about some things as are some men; and much more strict about others.

In Joshua's time the "sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down a whole day." Josh. 10: 13. At this time sunset was put forward about twelve hours, thus changing the beginning of the Sabbath day at sunset, and all other days to a time twelve hours later, so that even in Palestine, the same identical day would not be kept that was first observed at Mt. Sinai. There is no evidence to show that the seventh-day people are keeping the same twenty-four hours first observed by the Creator at the close of creation week; indeed, we think it is certain that they are endeavoring to keep another day, never enjoined upon the Gentiles, or any of the followers of Christ, since he rose from the dead. There is no proof that the time they are keeping is any more sacred than the first day kept by christians, during the entire Christian dispensation.

We have shown that all the moral benefit derived from the keeping of the seventh-day is secured in keeping the first day. All the law ever required was to work six days and rest the seventh. It did not say to the Jews that they must rest the seventh day of the week. The first day, now kept by Christians, more probably corresponds with the original seventh day of the week, on which our Creator rested, than the one observed by the Jews.

Paul shows plainly that the old covenant system enjoined on the Jews is done away in Christ, and speaks of his work at the cross as one:

"Blotting out the hand-writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in it."

He goes on to say: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath day, which are a shadow of things to come but the body is of Christ." Col. 2: 14–17.

The shadow never extends beyond the body. No institution passed from the old to the new covenant unchanged. This remark is equally true of the seventh-day Sabbath, which was peculiar to the Jews. Hence the inevitable conclusion:

"The Scriptures do not teach that the Sabbath of the fourth commandment of the decalogue is now binding upon mankind."

We have shown there is no possible way to sustain the affirmative of this question, but by proving one of the two things: (1.) That the old covenant is now binding upon all mankind; or (2) that the fourth commandment is incorporated into the new covenant. Neither of which has been done. The old covenant [with its ordinances, M. G.] has never been binding on all mankind; but only on the Jews, who came out of Egypt. It is not binding on them now, because it is abolished. The seventh-day Sabbath is not in the new covenant, therefore it is not binding on any one.

Mosheim, the celebrated church historian, when speaking of the first century, says: "All christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week, on which the triumphant Savior arose from the dead, for the solemn celebration of public worship. This pious custom, which was derived from the example of the church of Jerusalem, was founded upon the express appointment of apostles, who consecrated that day to the same sacred purpose, and was observed universally throughout all the Christian churches, as appears from the united testimony of the most creditable writers."—Maclain's Mosheim, cent. 1, part 2, c. 4, s. 4.

We have urged the affirmative to tell the benefits of keeping the seventh day instead of the first; also to tell us the penalty now for not keeping the seventh. Death was the penalty, when the old covenant was in force upon the Jews, but what is it at present?

We have asked for one word from Christ or the apostles, that enjoins the keeping of the seventh day; or a single text from the New Testament (or covenant) to show that work on the seventh day is mentioned among the sins of the people in the Christian dispensation, but we have asked in vain.

We think the negative of this question has been as fully sustained by the Bible, common sense, reason and facts, as that the Jews were ever in Egyptian bondage; or that they made a covenant with the Lord at Mt. Sinai.

Napa, April 13th.

JESUS' NAME.

E. P. ELDREDGE.

Jesus is a name most precious. It is a name above every other name. How full of life, peace, and melody. It is a name replete with every good, and abounds with healing and consolation. In it the nations of earth may confide and perpetually rejoice. It is a cordial to the wounded spirit, a balm to the stricken heart, and manna to the hungry soul. Jesus is the name that the babe in Christ learns to lisp, and upon which the old pilgrim, bound to the better country, dwells with peculiar delight. 'Tis the same name that charmed our pious fathers and mothers in Israel centuries ago, and for us, at this latter day, it still has overpowering charms. No name so glorious in earth or heaven. "His name shall be called Jesus, because he shall save his people from their sins." Let his name be sung in every land, dwell upon every tongue, and echo in every heart; yea, let heaven and earth combine to hallow this most sacred name; for he is worthy to receive all honor, power, and praise; and let this be freely and joyfully given by all our people. "Though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich."

"Jesus, the name that charms our fears;
That bids our sorrows cease:
'Tis music in the sinner's ears,
'Tis life, and health, and peace."

His love for his followers is as great today, as it was for those who first obeyed the gospel. How cheering the words he spake, and the promises he has left for our encouragement. "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

Again, he has said, "That when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." Precious promise! Dear brethren and sisters, do not your hearts exult at the thought of being made like Jesus when he comes? Well may those who are waiting and watching for his appearing exclaim,—"Come, Lord Jesus, Come quickly." Afflicted ones, who, like the writer, are treading a thorny pathway, be encouraged to suffer a little longer; for Jesus has said, "Lo, I am with you alway," and if he is with you, and you are firmly holding the invisible hand, ye need fear no evil. He proportions our trials according to our strength, and says, "My grace is sufficient for thee." And when weary, and almost ready to faint, how sweetly he whispers, "It is I, be not afraid." "As thy day, so shall thy strength be." Be of good cheer, for soon life's trials will be ended, and if faithful, you will possess mansions not made with hands, and crowns of glory that shall never fade away.

Should these lines be read by those who do not love the Savior and his appearing, who have no hope cast within the vale; to such we would say,—Unless you come to Christ, and have your sins washed away in the blood of the Lamb, when it is too late you will find that no mansion is prepared for you; that no bright crown awaits you. O, be wise! Embrace the gospel, and choose eternal happiness, that when Jesus comes, you may dwell with him in his everlasting kingdom. Make the decision, and say,—"I'll go to Jesus."

EXTRACT FROM SPURGEON.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon speaks again on the immediate coming of Christ. The following is an extract from a sermon of Mr. S. as published in "The Christian Era," Boston, April 23d, 1874.

SELECTED BY T. M. PREBLE.

Remember also, once again, that even if you knew that you should escape from accident, fever and sudden death, yet there is one grand event that we too often forget, which may put an end to your day of mercy on a sudden. Have you never heard that Jesus Christ of Nazareth who was crucified on Calvary, died on the cross, and was laid in the tomb? Do you not not know that he rose again the third day, and that after he had spent a little while with his disciples, he took them to the top of the Mount of Olives, and there before their eyes ascended into heaven, a cloud hiding him from their view? Have you forgotten the words of the angels, who said, "This same Jesus who is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Jesus will certainly come a second time to judge the world. Of that day and of that hour knoweth no man—no, not the angels of God. He will come as a thief in the night to an ungodly world; they shall be eating and drinking, and marrying and giving in marriage, just as they were when Noah entered into the ark, and they knew not until the flood came and swept them all away. In a moment—we cannot tell when, perhaps it may be ere next the words escape my lips—a sound far louder than any mortal voice will be heard above the clamors of worldly traffic, ay, and above the roaring of the sea. That sound as of a trumpet will proclaim the day of the Son of man. "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh: go ye out to meet him," will sound throughout the church; and to the world there will ring out this clarion note, "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which crucified him." Jesus may come tonight.

If he were to do so, would you then tell me that I am talking of far-off things? Did not Jesus say, Behold, I come quickly!" and has not his church been saying, "Even so, come Lord Jesus?" His tarrying may be long to us, but to God it will be brief. We are to stand hourly watching and daily waiting for the coming of the Lord from heaven. Oh, I pray you do not say that the Lord delayeth his coming, for that was the language of the wicked servant who was cut in pieces, and it is the mark of the mockers of the last days, that they say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Be not mockers, lest your bands be made strong; but listen to the undoubted voice of prophecy and of the word of God, "Behold, I come quickly." "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

"THE DAILY" ABOMINATION.

J. E. CLARK.

It is maintained by some that "the daily" or continual, brought to view in Daniel, is Pagan abominations, the word sacrifice not being in the original; thus indicating an ellipsis which is thought should be supplied by the word, abomination, making it read, "daily" abomination, instead of the daily sacrifice, as our translators render it.

The text reads as follows,—"And arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and shall take away the 'daily (abomination) sacrifice,' and shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." Dan. 11: 31.

This prophecy clearly implies that the abomination that maketh desolate, was to be placed in the sanctuary of strength; and it is as clearly implied that "the daily" was to be taken away from the sanctuary, as that the abomination that maketh desolation was to be placed therein; and so if the daily was an abomination, how could the power that placed the abomination that maketh desolate, pollute the sanctuary by taking an abomination therefrom, and putting another in its place? I understand "the daily," like the sanctuary, was holy instead of an abomination; also, I understand that the 11th and 12th chapters of Daniel is an exposition of the vision recorded in chap. 8th; consequently, "the daily sacrifice" and the transgression or abomination that maketh desolate brought to view in these three chapters are the same thing.

THE HOOSIC TUNNEL.

H. MUNGER.

No doubt it will be interesting to many to get a sketch of this great work in Western Massachusetts, begun some twenty years ago. No one can realize the magnitude of this work without viewing it. Being within two miles of the West end Saturday morning, March 21st, I went the third time to see the wonder of this continent. Before getting to the mountain, there is nearly one mile of deep cut in quicksand and rock, from one to three hundred feet deep. The tunnel proper is arched over with a three foot, brick arch, twenty five feet wide and eighteen feet high. At the foot of the mountain, west, is a shaft or well three hundred feet deep, to let in air for the workmen to breathe, and to hoist out the stones dug and blasted, and carry up and down the workmen, tools, &c. The work is done by lamplight. The air they breathe is forced down by steam power, which is so strong it carries the drills for blasting. When the blast goes off, this pressure of air is so great, that smoke is forced up through this shaft or chimney immediately, as the men and mules would suffocate with the smoke of the powder. The heading met within two inches, the engineering was so perfect. The hole was made through the mountain last Thanksgiving day, to the great joy of the people and contractors.

The tunnel is nearly five miles long. The current of air is so strong through this tunnel, that it is boarded up at each end, to allow the lights to burn and hats to stay on the heads of the workmen. These board partitions have large swinging doors that are pressed open when the blasts are made, though they are two miles away. It is virtually a great cannon five miles long, and of course when a great charge of powder burns, it will effect the muzzle of the gun. Any one in the tunnel will hear and feel the effect of a blast two miles off. The great doors at the end will swing out, the smoke and smell of powder goes up the shaft made for that purpose, and does not go back to the ends, so as to effect the men or mules at work. There is one mule that was let down the center shaft three years ago, and has not seen daylight since; being from twelve to fifteen hundred feet under ground. His feed is let down, and there is plenty of water there. He had the epozootic last year, three weeks. He could not have taken it from others, for he had no neighbors. This is the mule that gave the light I needed when there two years ago. He was hitched to a car loaded with stone, going to a place of delivery, with a lamp in his head stall for his own benefit; and as I had been stumbling over stone in the dark for some time, occasionally stepping into mud and water, the light was a great blessing. He was as independent as a Catholic priest with his wax candle in purgatory.

The water that flows from the west end of the tunnel from many springs has formed quite a brook, and the drouth last summer had no effect upon it. It runs over eleven hundred gallons per minute. This only comes from the center, as it rises from each end. This is sufficient water to drive seven horse power under twenty feet head, or fourteen horse power under forty feet head, which can be got in twenty rods by a ditch. This is quite a water privilege. In some places it is worth five thousand dollars at least, as it is fed by springs that will not fail. The work of excavation is nearly at a close, although some five hundred men are at work, clearing, trimming, and grading. The cars will run through in July. This great work has cost one hundred and fifty lives in various ways up to this time. It will be a good time to visit it at our next campmeeting at Springfield, as you can go on reduced fare at that time. Go in the morning, stay about four hours, and return the same day for about three dollars; or stay over night, and go through the tunnel, and come down on the other side to the camp ground the next day. Any that will come for that purpose, I will get them a reduced ticket if they will inform me a few days previous.

"HOW GREAT IS HIS GOODNESS."

S. S. CHAMBERLAIN.

While the goodness of our heavenly Father is manifested toward all the creatures he has made, how far exceeding and how unspeakably great is his mercy and loving kindness toward those who believe his Word, and who love and obey him. We can never praise him enough, but we would praise him with all our hearts forever more. How can any ever complain of the dealings of God toward them, if they have the assurance that they belong to the "little flock," to whom Jesus says, "Fear not, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

If the "sting of death" which is sin, is removed, we can bear all things, hope for all things, and believe all things that are recorded for our consolation and salvation. Recognizing the hand of our Father in all our losses and crosses, as well as in all those dealings usually called blessings, we can praise him in the calm as well as in the storm; praise him in adversity and in prosperity. For we know that all his chosen ones must receive chastisement, not for his pleasure, but for our good.

O then, whatever our lot, let us rest sweetly and patiently in his love, trusting that soon, very soon, we shall see that "all is well."

"How happy are the little flock,
Who safe beneath their guardian Rock,
In all commotions rest."

THE WAYNE CO. TENT.

To the Brn. and Srs. in Western and Central New York:—You will see by the notice in the Crisis that the Wayne Co. Tent is ready for the mission field again. This tent was placed in the field by a few brethren and sisters in Wayne and Cayuga Counties, N. Y. Therefore, being an individual enterprise, the N. Y. S. Conference is not responsible for its support.

As a result of our tent meetings last year, nearly two hundred were hopefully converted to the Lord and his truths. We baptized sixty-five. We make this brief statement so that all can see that our labor was not in vain in the Lord. Last year our tent was free from debt, and the reason is obvious. To wit: Two brethren volunteered to go with it without remuneration; also they paid for all the tracts out of their own funds. We scattered about $64 worth where we labored. Part of the time they paid board bills for themselves, beside their traveling expenses and freight on the tent. They cannot do it this year, because they cannot raise the funds; but their whole heart is in the work. I believe there are others who desire to aid us in carrying the truth to the world, and we now offer you the privilege of doing so, by contributing of your means as God has blessed you.

Some, who will read this, can look back when they heard for the first time under a tent the glorious proclamation that Jesus was soon to come. You can be the means of sending the light you have received to others, thereby causing them to rejoice in the "blessed hope." "Freely have ye received," therefore "freely give." All monies sent to R. C. Brinn, So. Butler, N. Y., or Jas. E. Wells, Rochester, N. Y., will be thankfully received and duly acknowledged.

JAS. E. WELLS.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

SELECTED BY O. R. MERRILL.

The sun not only gives light and warmth to the world, but he also produces by his intense heat, clouds, miasmas, storms, and whirlwinds, which result in disease, destruction and death. So the life of a holy christian is not only productive of gentle results, but it also stirs up the opposition and hatred and cruel wrath of wicked men and devils, to the persecution and destruction of the good. One result is as natural as the other.

Be not discouraged therefore, christian, if your godly life awakens a storm around you; never mind, but shine on just as the sun does, and this same shining will scatter all the clouds, and dry up all the stagnant pools, and hush the whirlwind and the storm. Shine on! Shine on! "Ye are the light of the world." Excuses from religious life and duty, are the devil's counterfeit coin, not only worthless to those who offer them, but perilous of their present interest and eternal safety. Such coin will never pass current at heaven's exchequer. Sin and salvation are incompatible. To be saved according to the gospel is to be saved from sin.

TALK TO ME OF JESUS.

IDA ASHBORN.

Talk to me of Jesus;
Tell me of his love,
Of the peace that falleth
From heaven above;
Of the joy that dwelleth
In the christian's breast,
Of the hope that cheereth,
Hope of endless rest.

Of earth's themes I'm weary,
I've heard them so long;
Oh! tell me of Jesus,
If but in a song.
He's balm for my sorrows,
He calmeth my strife,
He kindly hath taught me
The pathway of life.

Earth's beauties may glitter,
Christ's lovelier far;
He shines in the heavens,—
My own guiding star.
When all else is darkness,
And gloom like the night,
That one star still shaddeth
Its radiant light.

Talk to me of Jesus,
Oh! talk while you stay,
For oft I am lonely,
And dark seems my way;
But, oh! if you tell me
Of Jesus my friend,
I feel I can conquer—
Abide to the end.

HOOSIC VALLEY CONFERENCE.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

The late Quarterly Meeting of this Conference, commencing April 22nd, was well attended, and did not disappoint the anticipations we had indulged of a very interesting session. There were present Elds. A. W. Sibley, H. K. Flagg, R. Mosher, C. W. Baker, W. A. & M. L. Durand, R. L. Harrison, E. D. Kemp, W. L. Himes, and a fair number of delegates from various churches; besides Brn. Munger and Cheney, not members of this Conference. The church in Rutland was received to membership, at their unanimous request. Bro. E. D. Kemp, who had been rather inactive and fallen out of the ranks, re-united with us. Bro. R. L. Harrison desired his name dropped from the roll of preachers, because he was no longer able to preach. Most present seemed to feel indisposed to grant the request, and no action was taken. We deeply regret his withdrawal from the field. All the ministers appeared to have labored to the full extent of their ability since the last Q. M., and never were in better heart for future work. The most encouraging reports were from Rutland and Sandy Hill churches. The removal of Eld. Flagg to Rutland has been attended with salutary results in every department of the society. At Sandy Hill four had been baptized, and seven added to the church. There had also been several conversions at Saratoga, under the labors of Bro. & Sr. Durand, and the church there now numbers thirty-two members. Eld. Flagg offered this resolution:—

Resolved, That a committee of three persons be appointed to superintend operations with the Conference Tent the ensuing season, with full powers to act in the premises.

This motion elicited a very spirited debate. The past was fully reviewed, and all seemed of the opinion that an improvement in our use of the tent was not only possible but desirable. The resolution was finally agreed to, and Elds. Flagg, Sibley and Himes were appointed Tent Committee, with special exhortation to faithfulness.

It is particularly requested that all who desire Tent Meetings during the coming season within the bounds or in the vicinity of this Conference, make immediate application by letter to the chairman of the Tent Committee, Eld. H. K. Flagg, Rutland, Vt.

The preaching during the meeting was by Brn. Sibley, Munger, Mosher, W. H. and M. L. Durand, and C. W. Baker. It was all practical preaching, especially the prophetical and doctrinal sermons, which seemed to have a real edge to them. The sermon by the President at the opening of the Conference made a marked impression. But I cannot report them all. The prayer and conference meetings were of a high spiritual grade from the first; so excellent that special request was made that more time be allotted for them. The Rutland church received us with a hearty hospitality, and received in return our equally hearty thanks. The Rutland daily papers gave full and fair reports of all the services—a favor that was duly appreciated. Adjourned.

WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

P. S.—A new feature in this Conference was introduced, at the suggestion of one of the brethren present, which would no doubt prove beneficial in all Conferences. It was suggested that the preachers, at every session, have a private fellowship meeting, to resolve all difficulties or misunderstandings that may have arisen. This meeting was attended with happy results. Misunderstandings were removed, and some of Madame Rumor's tales discredited.

The method of procedure is this: The roll of ministers is called, and as each hears his name mentioned, he rises to his feet. The question is then asked: Has any one present any charges to prefer against ——; have they any misunderstandings with him; or do they know of any thing affecting his christian character unfavorably? If any one signifies that there is a difficulty to be settled, the question is asked, Have you obeyed the rule for such cases found in the 18th of Matt.? If not, the two withdraw together. If they return without effecting a settlement, then a committee, or the meeting, take the subject in hand and pass judgment. The proceedings of these meetings are of a confidential character. Also, if any one present having cause of action against another fails to mention it, and then afterwards utters the matter to others, he is to be considered as having broken fellowship, and a charge may be preferred against him before the Conference, for unchristian behavior, in direct violation of the precept of our Savior. The Bible way is always the best way. It is not only for ministers, but for all. In case of offense, deal with the party offending first, then, if necessary, take two or three; then, as a last resort, tell it to the church.

Allow me to say to the Conference that I have a full record of the late meeting for a record in the "Conference Book"; but have abridged this report for the Crisis, in accordance with the late editorial suggestions concerning brevity in the preparation of matter for publication; which suggestion I cordially endorse.

THE DEVIL IN THE FIRE.

HENRY PRATT.

Christ will say to those on the left hand, "Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." If, then, there is a fire to be prepared for the devil, when will he be put into it? Jude says, the angels that kept not their first estate are reserved unto the judgment of the great day. Peter says the same, and adds that ungodly men are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished. It seems certain, then, neither the devil for whom the fire is prepared, or his angels, or the wicked that are to be cast in there, will be consigned to the fire until the judgment. We have but one Scripture that announces the fact of the devil's being cast into the fire, and that is in Rev. 20: 10,—"And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone." This is the same being that was loosed from a thousand years confinement, and is called satan. This same being was bound a thousand years before, and was called "the dragon, that old serpen which is the devil and satan;" consequently is the same for whom the fire was prepared.

If a gallows had been prepared for Stokes for shooting Fisk, and he had been hung on that gallows, who would ever have supposed that it had been any other than the one for whom it had been prepared, unless it had been plainly stated to the contrary? Now as Christ declared that the wicked should be cast into a fire prepared for the devil and his angels, and then as Christ's own angel, commissioned with a revelation from him, announced prophetically that the devil was cast into a lake of fire, who could suppose that he had reference to any one, only him for whom the fire was prepared. Then we have the following facts:

1. That the dragon, that old serpent which is the devil, is to be bound for a thousand years. Then the same being is to be loosed, and is called satan, and goes about his work of deceiving as before.

2. After he has deceived the multitude, and they come around the camp of the saints and beloved city, and fire comes down and devours them, then the devil who deceived them is cast into a lake of fire, which Christ declares was prepared for him, and this we have shown to be after the judgment.

UNION BAPTISM IN HAVERHILL, MASS.

M. V. SALTMARSH.

One of the most solemn, and yet most beautiful baptismal scenes I ever witnessed, was May 3rd, 1874, when thousands of people gathered upon the banks of the Merrimac, whose waters were peacefully gliding past,—flowing on towards the great and mighty deep.

Significant indeed was this of the sweet peace the Spirit brought. The love of God as deep and unruffled as this river, was felt in many hearts,—hearts of those who had come hither to be buried with Christ in baptism. Nature seemed arrayed in adaptedness to the occasion. The sun shone brightly and beautifully above us, and every thing seemed fresh and new,—revived and awakened as it were from winter's dreamless sleep,—while the cheering, glowing beams of the "Sun of righteousness" were illuminating many a new-born heart. All heaven seemed interestedly engaged in the work. Angels were beholding from the heights of glory. Yes, it seemed as if the glad choir of the upper world must have been chanting hymns of joy as they looked down upon the scene. Four ministers, together, went down into the water, each leading a happy follower of Him who entered Jordan's rolling stream, and there they buried them in the likeness of Christ's death, and raised them again, with him to walk in newness of life.

One great reason that the baptism was a scene of such attraction, was the union that prevailed among God's children; for they had come from their different places of worship to engage unitedly in the services of this hour. The ministers were from four different churches of this place—Baptist, Christian, Free-Will Baptist, and Adventist. Truly, the words that were spoken by our Savior to his followers more than eighteen hundred years ago, were appropriate to repeat at this time,—"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another." Before they retired from the water, they joined in singing the beautiful verse,

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

As they were about to leave the place, unexpectedly to them came a colored minister, with three candidates for baptism. In love and sweet sympathy we lingered at the riverside, until these also had followed their Master. None could but feel as they turned from the spot, that it had been an hour of great blessing.

HOME AND HEALTH.

ON HEALTH.

To live well and do good work one must have good health—"a sound mind in a sound body"—the full use of all one's powers and faculties in their highest efficiency. I agree with all enlightened physicians that if individuals and communities would observe the laws of health, disease and premature mortality would be almost banished from the world. It is perfectly simple and practicable to reduce the death rate to twelve, perhaps ten in a thousand perannum; and this means the banishment of the whole class of what physicians call preventable diseases, and the great diminution of infant and all premature mortality. It is a matter of simple science. It is as certain as any fact in physics that if Parliament did its duty, and every municipal government took such care as it ought of the health and lives of the people, we should have no typhus or typhoid epidemics or endemics, no scarlet fever, no small-pox, no cholera. Half our children would not die in infancy. Half our population would not be suffering continually or at intervals from disease. If the doctors would do their duty, seconded by the authorities, in the prevention of disease, the medical profession would itself in a few years, be exterminated, and medicine perhaps become one of the lost arts, because no longer needed.

If doctors were paid for results, and in proportion to the sickness of their patients, there would not be one druggist where there is now a dozen. It seems a hard thing to enter upon a crusade against a great and a learned profession, and several important trades or callings; but some of the most enlightened men in the medical profession are with me in this matter. They are ready to sacrifice themselves, and medicine itself, for the good of humanity. It is surely better to save the lives of the thousands of children now dying in infancy, of men and women cut off in the very prime of existence, to save the suffering, and cost, and waste of pain and disease everywhere, even if doctors were driven to other professions and druggists to other trades, and there were no nurses needed, and no small coffins, and people, after long, healthful, useful and happy lives, were to die the only natural death of old age, from the gradual decay of their vitality, going out like a lamp when the oil is exhausted.—Herald of Health.

DAMP CELLARS.

A physician lately said that cellars under houses were nuisances, because of the dampness and impure air which they contain, which must affect the air in the house, and consequently, the health of the inmates. But a properly ventilated cellar is a benefit to any house. A house without a cellar, walled or underpinned all around, often has damp, foul air under it, which is beyond reach or control; but with proper care, the air may be kept pure under a house with a cellar.

But the usual method of ventilation, of having small windows at the top of the cellar, is insufficient. The heaviest, and often the most impure, air remains at the bottom, unmoved even by a current of air passing from one window to another. Of course the dampness is not removed, and fevers are often the consequence.

The following is a sure and easy remedy: Provide a pipe, similar to stove-pipe, or otherwise as convenient, from two to five inches in diameter. Place the lower end open within a few inches of the bottom of the cellar, and run it up through the floor and into the stove-pipe in the usual T fashion. This creates a draft and circulation from the very bottom. In warm, damp weather, if the draft is not sufficient to remove all dampness, occasionally start a quick fire in the stove, which will increase the draft. By this means, the entire air in the cellar may be kept constantly moving and changing, and accumulations of foul air will be impossible.—Health Reformer.

VALUE OF FRUITS.—Fruits are used as a staple food in many warm countries; but in most parts of Europe they are regarded chiefly in the light of luxuries. Deprived of their stones or seeds, they contain often not more than five per cent. of solid matter. They are very poor in albumoids; but they are usually rich in sugar, and many of them contain much acid. There is the greatest variation in the relative amounts of pectose, sugar, and acid in edible fruits. Berries contain, as a rule, more acid than stone fruit. The grape contains from thirteen to twenty per cent. of sugar; the cherry only one and a half per cent. In the peach there is about nine per cent of soluble pectin and gum, while the gooseberry includes only two per cent. of these bodies. In the common fruits the percentage of free acid varies from a mere trace to about three per cent. The pear is almost wholly free from acids, while the currant often contains three times as much free acid as sugar.

The grape is probably the best fruit adapted for the sick. As heat-and-force producing foods, five pounds and a half of grapes, six pounds and two-thirds of apples or cherries, ten pounds and three-quarters of currants, and twelve pounds and one third of strawberries are equal to one pound of starch. The dietetic value of the fruits is chiefly due to their fine flavor and their abundance of acid and saline matter.—Herald of Health.

TEA VS. SLEEP.—Many people stimulate with tea, coffee, tobacco, and alcoholic beverages, thinking the feeling of exhilaration they experience shows a gain of real strength, whereas it is only so much capital drawn from the vital principles which must ultimately be paid in for reaction, weakness, or shortened life. There are multitudes of persons who would scorn the temptation to swallow a glass of whisky, who do themselves equal or greater harm by swallowing largely of tea.—Ex.

THE QUICKENING SPIRIT.

MRS. ANNA HALL.

When the earth was without form and void,
And darkness upon the great deep;
The Spirit of God moved unheard,
And silence awoke from her sleep.

And when God said, "Let there be light,
Then forth from the darkness it sprang;
And sons of God from their blue height
Together with morning stars sang.

Lo! when o'er this dark, dismal earth,
The life-giving Spirit shall move,
A nation shall spring into birth,
A people whose life shall be love.

As, clothed with a vesture of light,
They sing with seraphic strain,
In the land where there shall be no night,
They worship the Lamb that was slain.

APPROACHING SECOND ADVENT OF CHRIST.

If christians really held Second Advent truth in the full power of the Holy Ghost, I believe their testimony would go forth with mighty energy throughout the land. If those of us who have obtained pardon for our sins through the precious blood of Christ, possessed that deep spiritual realization of his speedy coming which we should do, there would be a mighty awakening of the church of God. We shall do well to give more diligent and prayerful heed to the sure word of prophecy which is as a light shining in a dark place.

There is one thought to which I desire to call attention. We have in the book of Revelation two contrasted pictures of a false bride and a true bride (Rev. 17: and 12). One is the woman arrayed in purple and scarlet, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls—a counterfeit bride, professing to belong to Jesus, but in reality sold to the world, having the outward appearance of religiousness, but with her heart set upon worldly riches and enjoyment, and worldly grandeur. The other is a woman clothed with the sun, and with the moon under her feet, and upon her her head a crown of twelve stars—the true bride of Christ, heavenly in her appearance and character, and with her affections set on things above and not on things of the earth.

Now without entering into the strictly prophetic meaning of these emblems, may we not in a general sense regard them as apt representatives on the one hand, of mere worldly, carnally-minded professors of christianity, who have the form of godliness but deny the power thereof; lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; and on the other hand, of those true christians, whose hopes are heavenly and who can say like St. Paul, "our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." (Phil. 3: 20). Now let each one of us settle in our own mind, as in the sight of God, which of these two classes of christians we belong to; and whether we can truly say of ourselves, "our conversation is in heaven." Remember that this is an intensely practical matter. If we truly believe in the resurrection and ascension of Christ, and in his intercession for us at God's right hand as our personal Savior, and if our affections are fixed upon him, the desire of our hearts will naturally be, visibly to behold him whom our soul loveth; especially as he hath told us that he is coming back again to receive us to himself, that where he is, there we may be also. (John 14: 3). In such case we shall feel that we are strangers and pilgrims on this earth, having here no continuing city, but seeking for one which is to come. I have often refused to give out to be sung by a general audience that hymn "I'm but a stranger here; heaven is my home." I have felt it was a mockery for those words to be sung by persons who were wholly absorbed in the affairs of this life, and had little or no heart or disposition for the work of the Lord.

Is there not a lesson taught us in prophetic parable of the ten virgins in Matt. 25: 1-10. They are represented as at first all going forth to meet the Bridegroom in expectation of his advent. All of them are therefore in some sense believers in his second coming, yet they afterwards slumber and sleep; and in the end only half of them are found ready to enter into the marriage when the Bridegroom comes. There is then the solemn fact that even the foolish virgins, who will be shut out, once professed to wait for the Bridegroom. Let me ask you, have you turned to God from idols (including, among the rest, covetousness which is idolatry) to serve the living and true God? and are you, in the power of the Holy Ghost, waiting for his Son from heaven? (1 Thess. 1, 10). If so, your heart will not be seeking for or fixed upon an earthly resting place; but you will have the spirit of the bride who is not satisfied with anything but the Bridegroom; and you will be like the Thessalonians, who received the gospel, "not in word only, but also in power and the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." (1 Thess. 1.)

See to it that you are not in heart, one with the false bride, a mixture of worldliness and imaginary religiousness, but aim to be one of those who are marked with the very stamp, the very character, the very spirit of the elect bride adorned for her husband, indifferent about what the world thinks, not adorned for the world or heeding its opinion, but a bride adorned for her husband. One reason why the world so little heeds our testimony about the speedy coming of Christ is, that we hold it so feebly and not sufficiently in the power of the Holy Ghost. We require to humble ourselves in earnest prayer before God on this account, and to ask him for grace to be more faithful. Those who are really waiting in constant readiness for the advent of Jesus should be able to say, as in the sight of God, "Every hour of my life is consecrated to the service of my Master, whether in this or that way; and I live as a servant of the Lord, continually waiting for his coming." Of such we may truly affirm, "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh, shall find so doing." Matt. 24: 46.

In James 1: 22, we read, "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." Now just in proportion as we apprehend the reality of the speedy return of our Lord and Master, and feel that it is no matter of mere opinion but of actual fact; in the same proportion will our life and conversation be such as becometh the gospel of Christ, and will give plain evidence to the unbelieving world of the practical power of this doctrine. In Acts 1., testimony was borne by angels that Christ was personally to return to this earth. "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." And a few days afterwards on the day of Pentecost, in Acts 2: 25 to 31, Peter speaking of David's prophecy of the resurrection of Christ, that "God would not leave his soul in Hades, nor suffer his holy One to see corruption," explained that David, being a prophet, predicted this resurrection of Christ, because God hath sworn that of the seed of David, according to the flesh, Christ should be raised up to sit upon the throne of David; and then he further explained in verses 32 to 35, that Christ being thus raised from the dead, is now exalted to the right hand of God in heaven, until his foes are made his footstool. But it is not until this future conquest and subjection of his foes, that Christ will return from the right hand of God in heaven, to sit upon the throne of David in Palestine, and to reign personally during the millennium of a thousand years, as the Son of David and King of Israel over all the twelve tribes of the Jewish nation, converted and restored to their ancient land, as well as over the whole earth.

WITHOUT SPOT, AND BLAMELESS.

S. S. CRISTMAN.

To all the saints scattered throughout the earth, that profess to be watching for the glorious appearing of our blessed Lord and Savior. I feel constrained to ask, Do you realize the importance of this passage? To be their's, required a thorough and constant watchfulness of every emotion of the heart. It requires the righting of every wrong, in thought, word, or deed, that we may have been guilty of toward any human being, and especially toward any of the household of faith. Without this righting of wrongs, how can we be found of him without spot, and blameless?

The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, meekness, goodness, faith, temperance. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." "As we have opportunity, therefore, let us do good unto all, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

Let us all remember, that no person can be without spot or blemish, who can, by word, or deceit, wound the heart of a child of God, or any one else. Slanderous words, or words of censure, fall heavily on the heart which may carry every day a cross which none but Jesus can ever see. Let us do what we can to help each other by words of sympathy and love, remembering that we are not to judge each other here, or any where else. Christ alone is to say, Come, ye blessed; or, Depart ye cursed, and unless we possess the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his. "If ye have love one toward another, then shall all men know ye are my disciples." Blessed words!

How I do long to see that dear face, and hear the voice of him who spake as never man spake. He sees and knows every feeling and thought of my poor, aching heart, and did I not believe most firmly that he is likely to come at any hour, I should feel as Peter did, when he began to sink, and have to pray for a double portion of God's grace, through my present trials.

I know the word stands sure. I must be found of him without spot and blameless, or never hear those welcome words, "Come, ye blessed." I can say also with truth, that the spirit of forgiveness toward any who have wronged me by word, or in any other way, burns brightly in my heart, and I should do them good, and not evil, had I the opportunity.

Dear friends that are looking for Jesus, you must have on the wedding garment, every moment, pure and white, without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing, or never enter into the kingdom of God. It will not do to keep one besetting sin; perfect purity is the divine requisition. God help us to completely purify the old man, and be "found without spot and blameless."

WHY I AM AN ADVENTIST.

BY ELDER J. HEMENWAY.

A synopsis of a discourse on Adventism, preached by request of Rev. Mr. Wiggin, Pastor of the Unitarian Church, Marlboro, Mass., May 3d, 1874; being one of a series of lectures delivered by clergymen of different denominations, presenting the reasons of their denominational belief.

(Concluded.)

THE ADVENT NEAR.

This point in our faith is the great question which has separated us from other religious bodies. It is the burden of our mission to the world and church. Other sects may have their work, and we do not propose to interfere with it; and we claim the right to speak and be heard in our work, untrammeled. Therefore, we tell our brethren in the different churches that, as they are not specially interested in this matter, it is better that we occupy a position independent of their organizations, that neither may be hindered in the special work we wish to accomplish.

The Advent people in the past have given their attention to the time when the Lord should come. (I mean definite time.) I think I justly represent them now when I say, as a people they do not believe in any definite time; but look for the event as near at hand. The reasons we assign why we believe the event near are these:—The fulfillment of prophecy, signs in the heavens, and the moral state of society, indicate an approaching crisis in the history of this world. The next event of great magnitude marked in the prophetic calendar is the coming of our Lord and the establishment of his kingdom on the earth.

In Daniel's prophecy we have presented four universal kingdoms (Dan. 7), that are to have their time of reign on the earth. The fifth kingdom is God's. The four have had their time and passed away; the dividing of the fourth is in the past. The Anti-christian power that was to rise and rule, and make war with the saints for a time, times, and a dividing of time, has lost his power (civil) to rule within the last two years. The next event is due; viz., the coming of Christ to set up his everlasting kingdom. Will this fail? Here is a great prophetic chain of events covering a space of more than two thousand years. Each event has come in time and place indicated by the prophet. Will the last event fail? No. The wheels of prophecy are rolling us on with lightning rapidity to the final winding up of earthly kingdoms and the establishing of that permanent government of the everlasting kingdom of God.

There are four distinct lines of prophetic events in Daniel and five in Revelation that mark the history of this world to the time when Christ shall come in all his glory. The events in the political world to-day are filling up the last links of the prophetic chain that bring our Lord.

If we look at the physical condition of the world, everything speaks of ripeness for destruction; the earth utters its dying groans, and shakes with its numerous spasms in earthquakes, tidal waves, and marvelous changes in the atmospheric heavens, which the wise men of the age fail to explain. If we turn our attention to the heavens above, we read in the darkened sun and moon and falling stars the fulfillment of the words of the prophet as recorded in Joel, Matthew, and John:—"And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come." Joel 3: 30, 31. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." Matt. 24: 29. "And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places." Rev. 6: 12-14.

The signs were to appear in the heavens, and by these we are to know that the next event is the day of the Lord. That you may not consider this human speculation, let me refer you to Christ's application of these predictions. Let the Great Teacher tell us what next in the events of this age. After giving the signs named, Jesus says: "Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: when his branch is yet tender and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh. So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors." Matt. 24: 32, 33. Knowing that these signs are in the past, we look for the coming of Christ as being "near, even at the doors."

Looking at the moral state of the world, we find society now just as described by Christ and the apostles, as being the condition of society in the last days. "Iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." We are living in the perilous times named by Paul to Timothy. He says:—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." 2nd Tim. 3: 1-5. The characteristics here pointed out are those of the unrighteous; but here we are told that this class have the form of godliness and deny the power. It is a characteristic of the religious people of this age,—"covetous,"—grasping after money and position in the world. Swindlers' rings, cliques, plunder the treasury of the government, and at the same time occupy a good standing in the church.

"Lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." During the warm months, religious parties almost monopolize our railroad lines in pleasure seeking; while in the winter months these attend festivals, fairs, concerts, and theatres. We cannot tell the professor from the non-professor. These things were to come to pass in the last days. Are we there? What shall we do with our Bibles? shall we believe them, or not? If we do believe them, we must believe that the long-looked-for day is "near, even at the doors."

Believing these truths, dear friends, you may well suppose it inspires my entire being to work for the good of my dying fellow men. It enables me to welcome the reproach and shame that mistaken souls may bestow; yea, to welcome the labor, knowing we are commissioned by our Lord to warn the world of its approaching doom.

We stand on the eve of the most sublime event this world ever saw. With uplifted head, we wait the coming of our Lord and King—the Great Conqueror of the world. With this faith and hope, the Lord's prayer comes welling up from our hearts with new force and meaning, "THY KINGDOM COME." God bless you, my friends, and help you to "search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me"—Christ, and his coming. Amen.

WATCHFULNESS.

H. P. SIKES.

"And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." Luke 21: 34.

Who of us will be saved? Who of us will go straight through the perils of these last days, and finally be translated, like Elijah, and caught away to meet the Lord in the air? Will it be those who are careless about heeding the instructions of our Great Pilot, or those who watchfully, carefully, lean on the arm of the Lord continually? Will it be those who thoughtlessly throw themselves into the boiling vortex of this world's cares and pleasures? or, will those who devote just as few of their thoughts as is consistent with duty, to the affairs of this world, and have their minds chiefly occupied about the things of God? Can those expect to be ready for that great day, who are taking upon themselves more of the "cares of this life" than is strictly necessary? Can a man be straining every nerve to grasp all he can obtain of this world, and hope to be ready for the coming of the Lord? Will Jesus when he comes say "well done" to those who can now find but little time to labor, or to do anything for him, their time is so taken up with their own blessings?

O, how great the danger, that we shall permit cares, with which to some extent we are necessarily connected, to take up too much of our time and thoughts; so that we shall spend too little time in secret prayer; too little in the daily study of the Bible; and thereby suffer incalculable loss! Think not, my brother, that you are competent to grapple with the deadly influences of this fallen world, and the old arch Enemy beside, without having your heart well guarded and fortified by prayer and communion with God? How necessary it is that we should "take heed," lest we be "overcharged." How vast the interests concerned, and how important the consequences depending on our "taking heed!" Our all is concerned. Better, if need be, be as poor as Lazarus in this world, and have our treasure laid up in heaven. Better, far better, to sacrifice earthly gain, than go about our business and labor without getting our soul richly imbued with the Spirit of the Lord. Does the force of circumstances sometimes prevent the possibility of spending much time in prayer, before engaging in the ordinary affairs of life? Then do as Jesus did on one occasion, when "rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed." Better dispense with breakfast, than dispense with prayer.

Has your lot fallen in the midst of constant confusion, turmoil and strife? Then, how great the necessity that you should be a "peacemaker." Though it may often seem as though your head would be turned, and in spite of yourself, you would be carried down with the current; yet, beloved, it is your privilege, daily and constantly, to quaff such rich measures of the Spirit of peace, and feel such a union and communion with the "Prince of Peace," as to raise you into a high, spiritual atmosphere, where you will but look down upon these rocks of the flesh.

Are you compelled almost uninterruptedly to be in the society of those by whom death, judgment, eternity, heaven and hell seem never to be thought of; and you hear nothing from five in the morning, till ten at night, but how to get gain,—to make money? then, stand aloof from it all, be sure to testify against it, and pray God to keep you from getting entangled.

Are your ears continually harassed, and your heart sickened by the voice of mirth and frivolity? then, let your own sobriety, and solemnity of demeanor be a standing rebuke. Let your mind continually be so fortified by prayer, that all these things will seem utterly foolish and disgusting, as they indeed are. It may be some of these giddy triflers will yet see their folly and wickedness, turn to God, and go with you into the kingdom. Above all things, never for one moment descend to engage in the least degree, in their foolish mirth; never let slip a silly joke or witticism that will grieve your Savior, demean religion in their eyes, and for aught you know, imperil their souls.

Are you tied down with incessant toil, labor and care? Rest in Christ, will rest the weary body. Throw yourself into his arms, lean upon him now, and by-and-by the eternal rest will be given.

Northfield, Mass., April 16th, 1874.

DID CHRIST, THE SON OF GOD, MAKE THE WORLD?—No. 8.

J. S. WHITE.

God the Father's testimony by or through Paul: "And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thy hands." Heb. 1: 10. This text is so plain and direct, that even the Emphatic Diaglott, with all its Socinian proclivities, and which seems to be a text-book for most all kinds of doctrine, has not so changed a word as to leave even a shadow of a hook on which an objector has attempted to hang a thread of an argument, to show that Christ did not make the world. The tenth, eleventh and twelfth verses of this chapter are nearly, word for word, as in Ps. 102: 25-27.

It is claimed that Albert Barnes says that David in this Psalm spake of God the Father. This is taken as proof that Christ did not make the world; or, in other words, that what God has testified through Paul is not true. Mr. Barnes believes that what Paul has said in Heb. 1: 10 is true,—that Christ did make the world; therefore, it is very easy to "harmonize" what Mr. Barnes has said with David, and all the rest of the Bible. Yea, Paul and Mr. Barnes agree. Hence the "harmonizing" falls back between Paul in this place, and what he has said in other places, and what is said in all the rest of the Bible.

Does it follow that, if what David has said refers to God, what God has said of his Son is not true? Is this the way to sift out the chaff? Paul makes use of the same words in speaking of what Christ did, that David uses in speaking of what the Father did, admitting that he referred to the Father. Is it not possible for a man to use the same words when speaking of another man, without making a contradiction? But it may be said that Paul and David spoke of the world's being made, and that David says that God made the world, and Paul says that God's Son made the world. Does this make a contradiction? and if so, which shall we believe? Here is where the lack of "harmony" comes if anywhere. Now if one may say David spoke the truth, and that God did make the world, and so sift out as chaff what Paul has said; then another may say that Paul spoke the truth, and Christ did make the world, and so we may sift out as chaff what David has said; and so between them both, God and his Son, as makers of the world, are sifted out of the Bible as "errors."

But Albert Barnes, in his Notes, does not say that David in Ps. 102 spoke of God the Father, nor anything of the kind. He believed that God, in the proper sense, and Jehovah, apply to God's Son. In his notes on this Psalm, and Heb. 1: 10, he refers to John 1: 1 as being parallel,—"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." And he believed that "the Word" was God's Son who made the world. He says that the apostle, in Heb. 1: 10, referred to this Psalm; and as proof that David means the Messiah, Mr. Barnes says: "(1) The fact that the apostle thus employs it, proves that it was understood in his time to have such a reference, or at least that those to whom he wrote would admit that it had such a reference; on no other principle would he have used it. This is, at least, of some consequence in showing what the prevailing interpretation was. (2) It cannot be demonstrated that it had no such reference. (3) There is nothing in the Psalm which may not be applied to the Messiah. The passage quoted by the apostle (v. 25) of the Psalm is designed to denote the immutability of the Messiah. (4) Paul applied this language to the Messiah in accordance with the doctrine which he had stated (v. 2), viz., that it was by him that God made the worlds." This is what Mr. Barnes has said on Ps. 102, in its connection with Heb. 1: 10. He has said much more than this, by way of confirming what I have quoted.

From this we see that the quotation (which has been made from Mr. Barnes for the purpose of proving that David in Ps. 102 meant God the Father, who made the world, and quoted in such a way with "etc." added, as if he had said more of the same kind, and so leaving the impression on the mind of the reader that Mr. Barnes believed that David did not mean the Messiah, who made the world), is an entire misrepresentation of what Mr. Barnes has said on this Psalm.

We are reminded that the pronoun "Thou," in Heb. 1: 10, is from the Greek Su, and refers to Jehovah. This word is used in the place of, or refers to, persons of every grade and character, and in no sense qualifies the noun to which it is applied. But, suppose it does mean Jehovah when it is in the place of Lord, as in Heb. 1: 10—"And, Thou [Su], Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands." Then it might read, And, Thou, Jehovah, hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands. The objector, who thinks su in this place means Jehovah, may continue to think so if he pleases. It is God the Father who says to his Son, "Thou [su], Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands." Now to say, in the face of this testimony of God, by or through Paul, that Christ the Son of God did not make the world, and that he "has not made nor created anything"; to say this, is to say that what God has said of his Son is not true. There is no evading this; for, if what David has said of the Lord making the earth means the Father, and not the Son, here is the Father's testimony that his Son has done that work. We are told in so many words that what is said in Heb. 1: 10 "is said of the Father, and not the Son." And yet Paul says this is said by the Father to his Son. Now which shall we believe, Paul, or the man who denies it? Let God be true, though it make men untrue.

David has said nothing that conflicts with Paul. David does not say that the Father laid the foundation of the earth, etc. But Paul says that God's Son did this work. But if David had said that God the Father laid the foundation of the earth, etc., it would be true, and equally true, that his Son did this work. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." In this case, who builds the house? The Lord. And it is equally true that those who labor build it. Is it true that when a man says, I built this house, that the man or men who did the work did not build it? God has done all things by his Son, or through his Son.

The way David has been quoted in Ps. 102—"Thou [su], Lord [Jehovah]," might lead some to think that the Greek Su, rendered "Thou," must mean Jehovah. But this word su, as we have noticed, does not express the character nor quality of the person to whom it is applied. It is used in the place of God, and the Son, and of man. This word is applied to Christ, in the New Testament, more than twenty times. He is directly addressed several times, "Thou [su], Lord." Su does not mean Jehovah of itself; it means the person who is spoken to, whether God or man. To say that it means Jehovah, when the Lord is spoken to, would be to say that God called his Son Jehovah, in Heb. 1: 10; when he said, "Thou [su], Lord, . . . hast laid the foundation of the earth," etc. The words meaning "Jehovah" are applied to the Son of God. It has been admitted that Adonai is applied to the Son. This is simply another name for Jehovah, as we have shown.

And now we ask, Where is there any evidence to prove that Christ did not make the world? All the evidence that is brought to sustain this side of the question is wholly inferential; and they are inferences which are strained, far-fetched, and the most unnatural. These inferences are set in opposition to the frequent and most positive statements of God's word that his Son did exist as his Son before he came down from heaven, and that he did make the world.

On what are these inferences based? (1) It is said that the seventh verse in 1 John 5 is spurious; therefore Christ is not one with the Father, and did not make the world, though Christ says that he and his Father are one. (2) It is said that three words in Eph. 3: 9 are spurious; viz., "who created all things by Jesus Christ"; therefore, God did not create all things by his Son; though it is affirmed by John (1: 1), and by Paul (Col. 1: 15-18), and by God the Father, that his Son did lay the foundation of the earth, and that the heavens are the work of his hands. (3) It is claimed that two or three prepositions and pronouns in king James' Bible, as it is called, should be changed, and, therefore, Christ did not make the world; though by changing these words in the places referred to, does not change the meaning of the passages in the least, as we have shown.

(4) It is claimed that because God has said, "I am God, and besides me there is no other," therefore Christ, God's Son, is not God, in the sense of being the Creator or Maker of anything. Might just as well say, because God has said, I am thy Savior, and beside me there is no other; and again, beside me there is no Savior, therefore Christ is not the Savior in the sense of saving men; though it is affirmed that Christ is the Savior, and that "there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

(5) It is claimed that because God is called by the name "Jehovah," therefore, God's Son is not Jehovah; neither is he called by any name that means "Jehovah"; therefore he did not make the world. The same words that are used meaning God the Father, are used meaning God the Son, both in the Old and New Testament. The passages above referred to are quoted in this manner: "I am the Lord, and there is NONE ELSE. There is no God else beside me, a just God and a Savior; there IS NONE BESIDE ME." These, and other passages of the same import, are quoted in like manner, with a double emphasis, to prove that Christ did not make the world. Now if they do prove this, they prove more than this; for if this double emphasis is properly applied, and means anything, it means that beside God the Father, there is no God whatever. This would contradict the Bible from the beginning to the end. And if it is intended to mean that Christ is not both God and Savior, then it contradicts the objector; for he admits that Christ is both God and Savior. If the passages referred to do not include Christ with the Father, or if they do not except Christ, then they are made to contradict God in every place where he has, by or through the Holy Ghost in the prophets and in the apostles, declared that his Son is both God and Savior. God has said to his Son, "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever." Also, "And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands; they shall perish, but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail." Heb. 1: 10-12. Will the reader please read the whole chapter. If he thinks this portion of Scripture is not plain, will he find any Scripture that is plain? These statements by the Father to the Son are in perfect harmony with the whole Bible.

(6) It is claimed that "there never was but one Supreme, All-wise, Eternal God"; and therefore Christ did not make the world. How such inferences can be drawn from such premises it is impossible to see; to say nothing of the fact that they directly contradict the plainest statements of God's word. If there never was but one God, as stated above, how does it follow that he could not have a Son before the world was made, to whom he could give wisdom and power to make the world? Or, to say nothing of his Son, could not a supreme, all-wise, eternal God, create a being to whom he could give power to make the world under the direction of his infinite wisdom? Is God's power thus limited? Christ upheld all things by the word of his power, and was the express image of his Father's person before he took on him the form of a servant. Heb. 1: 3. "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took on him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." Phil. 2: 6, 7. Could not the all-wise God make the world by, or through, such a being as this? Christ is "over all, God blessed forever. Amen." Rom. 9: 5. The same power and the same work, from the beginning of the creation to the restitution of all things spoken of, that belong to the Father, belong to his Son; both alike to be honored and worshiped, as God and Savior. Both uphold all things by the word of their power. Heb. 1: 3. Both will judge the world, and fill the earth with glory; and in the end, equal praise and honor and glory will be given them—"To him that sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb." The Son does nothing without the Father, and the Father does nothing without his Son. "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." John 5: 17. "For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will." John 5: 21. Both forgive sins. "Who can forgive sins but God only?" Who can forgive sins against the government but the Chief Executive of the government. The Father does all things by, or through, his Son. "For what things soever the Father doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." John 5: 19.

(7) It is claimed that David, in Ps. 102: 25-27, does not speak of the Son of God; therefore Paul, in Heb. 1: 10-12, does not say that the Son laid the foundation of the earth; though Paul affirms that God the Father has said that his Son did do this work. Here ends the lesson.

Searching the Bible (which God in his good providence has given us) to find errors in it to sift out, and so to find an argument to bring against the plainest statements in the Book, that Christ was with the Father as his Son, and that he with his Father did create and make all things,—did make man; and that Christ is both God and Savior with the Father; this has been no part of my experience. This great truth I contend for is the rock on which Christ will build his church. Remove this foundation, and the whole superstructure falls.

In my forty years experience in the ministry, I have found it very much easier to reconcile the Bible which God in his providence has given me, than to find errors in it to sift out. Our Bible was translated by scholars who very well knew that their scholarship would be most rigidly criticized. The correctness of their translation is confirmed by the most learned men that have lived since their day,—by such men as I have referred to. It takes another class of men to find errors, or chaff, in it to sift out, so as to affect any doctrine plainly stated in our English translation. The translators were not dictated by king James in any sense, by way of affecting one doctrine or precept, or one important fact, throughout the whole of their work. I have no evil report to bring against our Bible. I find no chaff in it to sift out. I have no fears that any will be injured by errors, who take the Bible as it is, which God in goodness has given them.

JESUS.

E. S. WILLARD.

The love of Jesus as manifested in his sufferings, as set forth in the twenty sixth and twenty seventh chapters of Matthew, read at the blessed family altar the two mornings past, has captivated my heart afresh. O, what could I not do for him, that all may come and taste his love! Precious Jesus!

Many years ago, as I was wiping the soil from a front door, these resolves were finding place in my heart:—I will have as nice a house as any one in this city, and it shall be furnished equal to the best. I will also dress as well as any who walk these streets,—when, all of a sudden, came these words of warning,—"And they that use this this world, as not abusing it; for the fashion of this world passeth away." As a leveler for all time came these words, and swept from my mind every worldly aspiration, and my heart went up to God to help me walk in the narrow way that leads to life. And now, the bride is changed to the matron, wearing her "crown of glory," and looking back with the grateful reflection, I have renounced this world for the world to come. Amen.

HE that does good to another man does also good to himself; not only in the consequences, but in the very act of doing it; for the conscience of well-doing is an ample reward.

THE SOCIAL ASPECT OF OUR WORLD.

That the controlling element regulating human associations is changing, must be potent to all. Men are every where breaking loose from the principles which formerly governed them in all their social relations.

The family harmonies of husband and wife, parents and children, are seriously disturbed. Business corporations and mercantile houses, private companies, and single business men find a great change coming over them, which it is impossible to prevent. Men are becoming more selfish and treacherous; real integrity and truthfulness are rapidly diminishing, while speculating trickery, and unprincipled extortion are fearfully increasing.

There is a restless, feverish haste for change. In the church, the old minister, meeting-house, ritual and theology have become antiquated,—new—changed to meet the popular taste. In the state, fundamental laws have become unsatisfactory to the masses. They clamor for constitutional amendments and revised legislation. Reverence for office and official power are fast ebbing out, while insubordination and reckless rebellion against constituted authority is rising, and threatening the world with revolution. The pulse of humanity indicates a high fever—a rapid change—a speedy dissolution of the present social system. The world tosses from side to side, seeking for rest. Quackery is administering its prescriptions, which are increasing its alarming symptoms. To the faithless eye all is dark and hopeless, only as it sees a fancied remedy in some human effort, some newly understood worldly policy, some remedial system of man's introduction. But the eye of faith looks beyond the convulsions of the fever, and failures of human remedies, and views the operation of heaven's healing balm, purging away the virus of sin, and fully restoring the earthly social system to its normal state of heavenly unity, universal brotherhood, and eternal peace.

This mighty work of planting the social standard of perfect harmony, and heavenly oneness on Mount Zion, and rallying under its sheltering folds a unitized and harmonized race, has been undertaken by the Wonderful—Counsellor—Prince of peace. To enjoy the triumphs of his victories, and the fruits of his toils, we must cease from man and his schemes of redemption, and cling to Christ and his gospel, which promises his personal presence, and almighty power in the accomplishment of the establishment of perfect society.

Then let the world convulse, and men confederate and skirmish around the forts of sin, and battlements of Satan; they will only add darkness to twilight, and confusion to discord. Let the empires and kingdoms gird up their loins with strength, and summon to service the chief captains and commodores, calling from the plow and shepherds fold, additional warriors, bending all the energies of state to produce invincible armies and unconquerable navies, so as to stand the anticipated shocks of general war and revolution. Let the Catholics count their millions, and trust the infallibility of their Head to direct them to the field of sure victory and coveted supremacy. Let the Republicans of the Old and New world swear by the altar of liberty that kings and tyrants shall cease to oppress the rising masses, and draw their coils around the ancient thrones, standing by the guns of their concealed batteries, waiting for some auspicious morning to strike the fatal blow to monarchical oppression. Let the toiling multitudes raise the Communists standard, and sing the songs of the industrial sovereigns, thus uniting their hands and hearts for the mighty work of equality in the distribution and enjoyment of wealth, and raise their muscular arm to strike down the monopolists and break the strong bolted vaults of heaped up treasures, scattering the coveted "promises to pay" among the downtrodden millions. Let the social world boil and throw its scum to the surface, manifesting proud and heartless churches, factious and restless States, blasphemous and atheistic society. But let all the world know assuredly that these things prove the truthfulness of God's word, which testifies that they are the dying convulsions of sinful society, the last rally of satan's forces, the final charge upon truth and the Bride of Christ.

It is evident that the ship of state is drifting, in a howling tempest, upon a lee shore, and a worldly church is sinking beneath the fleecy waves, beside heaven's life-boat. But the voice of earth's great Ruler is heard, mid the tempest's roar, by a listening ear, saying, I will return to the earth once more, and hush the last day storm in an eternal calm. I will vindicate my word by dashing the angry nations in pieces, and opening the long covered graves, abolishing sin and the curse, give to my waiting people immortality, and renewing the face of the groaning earth. Let all the people of the Lord say, "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus." J. C.

"PERILOUS TIMES."

The prophetic statement of the apostle Paul, "that in the last days perilous times shall come," has been often quoted in reference to the state of things in the world; but now it seems to have a particular application to the church. We think that even the careless observer must be convinced that the present condition of the church of Christ is exceedingly perilous. On every side may be seen the sly snares of Satan, which are daily entrapping the unsuspecting, who have forgotten the special caution of the Savior, given for these last days—"Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." Many are led astray by the folly of fashion; others by parties of pleasure; others by business cares and perplexities, which lead them to neglect devotional exercises, thus producing coldness, formalism, stagnation, and spiritual death.

But those who have been enabled to live through all these, and lift a warning voice against them, are now in great danger themselves of falling into another snare of Satan equally perilous, against which we would give our friends a special caution. It is a well-known fact that we can bear injury ourselves easier than we can see those abused whom we love and esteem. Satan knows this full well, and is ever ready to take advantage of any opportunity to start a root of bitterness, knowing that a success may cause many to "be defiled." In the days of the apostles the same spirit crept in, causing some to say, "I am of Paul," and others, "I am of Apollos." For indulging this feeling they were called "carnal." It was the fruit of the flesh, and not of the Spirit. If the Lord permits our friends to be slandered, misrepresented, misreported, impeached, and charged with doing and saying bad things, of which they are entirely innocent, do not get stirred up, and say hard words in return, but bear it all patiently. Do not be in too much haste to correct the evil. Deal gently with the erring. Admonish in love.

We do not mean that one should see his friend abused and make no effort to correct the wrong; but let all be said and done with a kind feeling towards those who we think have done the injury. This is the best and only successful way of benefitting the one who has committed the wrong. Remember Jesus was terribly misrepresented, grossly insulted, and shockingly abused, but he bore it all patiently, and did not wish his friends to stir up strife, or a war spirit in his defense. If they had, it would only have served to make his trials greater, and make his enemies more bitter. It is our privilege to have so much of the Spirit of Jesus, that we can feel kind towards those who attempt to injure not only ourselves, but our best friends. While it may be duty to warn the innocent against the seducer, or to put up a guard against such as would carelessly divide the flock of God, let it be done in love, and only when it is a duty we owe the cause of Christ. In no case is the least spirit of retaliation innocent. "Recompense to no man evil for evil." If nothing can be done to correct what is wrong, let it alone. Be patient, and the Lord will send deliverance in due time. "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, . . . for it is written, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." Rom. 12: 19.

The Syriac reads: "It is written, If thou dost execute judgment for thyself, I will execute judgment for thee, saith God." Let every one be extra careful, at this time, lest Satan should succeed in stirring up a spirit of strife, causing them to "smite their fellow servants," and for this reason be found unprepared to meet Christ at his coming. We think we see special danger in this direction. These are "perilous times."

REMARKABLE REVIVAL.

We are receiving intelligence of a remarkable revival in England and Scotland through the labors of Bro. D. L. Moody, of Chicago, and Bro. Sankey, his associate. It is said some two thousand have been converted in their meetings during the past few months. We clip the following report from the "Signs of Our Times," May 14th, published in London:—

"Mr. Moody turned to Matt. 17: 1-9. After reading the account of the transfiguration he said, Luke says, 'Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep.' Asleep while Jesus was transfigured before them! Jesus in a glorified state, and they asleep so near the glory! This is a striking picture of the church of Christ in the present day. We are near the glory. No one can read the prophecies of Scripture with their eyes open and fail to perceive that, the second coming of Christ and the glory of the millennium is near at hand; and yet those who ought to be watching are asleep"

A new interest is being awakened among the churches on the subject of the Lord's speedy coming. We believe all who are ready to meet him love his appearing. We believe those who stand opposed to the coming of Christ will be found in a sad condition when he appears. A bride that does not long to see the bridegroom is not fit to be married. She would not be happy if united to one of whom she was afraid, and whom she desired to remain away from her presence. Such cannot expect to be received at "the marriage of the Lamb." M. G.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16: 3.

After Jesus had passed through with the various signs that were to precede his second coming, he says:

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24: 30-31.

He does not tell us what "the sign of the the Son of man shall be, but it will be something that will satisfy every one that his coming is a matter of fact. Then it will be too late to make preparation. The sign is so certain and convincing, it makes "all the tribes of the earth mourn," hence it must be known by all tribes. There is no proof that the event is in the past. Immediately following "the sign of the Son of man," the Savior himself will gather all the saints to bestow upon them eternal life in the everlasting kingdom. This will be the crowning event in the the history of the human race; the grandest, the most sublime, and the most glorious. Well might old Dr. Watts say:

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

When we consider the blessedness of "the world to come," it is no wonder the Savior taught us to pray: "Thy kingdom come."

After passing through the long chain of signs and events that were to precede his coming, and arriving at the closing ones, he says: "Verily, I say unto you, This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. Matt. 24: 34. Some have stumbled at this passage, supposing he meant the generation then living. He must either mean the first or last generation. We have seen no evidence that one of the signs, that were to herald his second coming, were seen in the generation living at the time of the first advent. He who claims that the generation witnessing the signs of Christ's coming was the one living eighteen hundred years ago, might well believe that that the signs of his coming took place a long time after the event was accomplished, which would show that they were not signs at all. To be a sign, it must appear before the event.

When the Savior was asked by his disciples to give signs of his second coming, he begins by cautioning them against being deceived, in thinking his return would take place within a brief period, and goes on to speak of things that did not transpire for centuries, and said they would be but "the beginning of sorrows." After those would come the terrible persecution of the saints, following which the signs of his coming would appear. Then we should have reached the last generation before the close of the birth of Christ: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Isa. 9: 6. When the prophet wrote, he said the "child is born," yet he was not born till about seven hundred years after the writing of Isaiah. The prophet was led through a chain of future events till he came to the time of the Savior's birth, and spoke of it as then taking place. So Paul, when referring to the second coming of our Savior, looks forward to the event, and says: "We which are alive . . . shall not prevent them which are asleep." From this language the Thessalonians drew the conclusion that Paul intended to teach them that Jesus would come the second time in their day; hence he wrote them a second letter in which he says: "Be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter, as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand, . . . for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and and that man of sin be revealed." 2 Thess. 2: 2-2. As declared by Paul, we find the Lord calls "things which be not as though they were." Before they come to pass he speaks of them as present. This was very proper in the instruction given by the Savior in relation to his second coming. Having followed the stream of time through a long series of events, when he came to the last, it was proper to say, "This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

It seems certain that we are now living near the close of the last generation, hence, these are truly thrilling moments. Let us all be ready for the glorious event. M. G.

NORTH EASTON.—We spent last Sabbath (May 31) at North Easton, Mass., and had good meetings. Six were baptized, and were much blest. In the afternoon, we preached in the Methodist church. We were pleased with Bro. Hammond, the pastor, who has recently come from California. North Easton is a pleasant village, noted for Ames' extensive shovel manufactory. They make five hundred dozen a day.

WAR CLOUDS.

Careful observers think they see alarming war clouds lowering over Europe, that threaten to burst with terrible fury within twelve months. The symptoms of the coming distress of nations are rapidly increasing on every hand.

The Pall Mall Gazette of May 7th, thus describes the present European situation:

> If it be true that rumors of war have a tendency to fulfil themselves, Europe is in considerable peril at the present moment, and the danger is increasing. Twelvemonths ago the belief was universal that France would never rest under her defeat, and that Germany was not quite satisfied with her victory; but at that time the prospect of renewed hostilities was cast years ahead, while now it would not be thought very rash to prophesy war before the summer of 1875. Apprehension grows steadily month by month. If for a little while men's minds are turned from the prospect, something is sure to happen to recall and to re-enforce attention; while in Germany and France what was once a vague anticipation, deepens and darkens into a dread of approaching trouble. That the French long for revenge we know; we know that their forces are being rapidly reorganized on a grand scale; we also know that the main result of the Bazaine trial was to convince France that her defeat was due not so much to the superior strength of her foe as to the blundering, the treachery perhaps, of some of her own generals.
>
> Not only does all official and all military Germany regard another war as inevitable, and its outbreak sooner rather than later as desirable, but it is the common sentiment. This is certainly so, at any rate, as regards the inavoidability of conflict; and if war must come, it follows that it can hardly come too soon for Germany. War now would in all likelihood mean the utter destruction of France, together with every dream of reconquest for ages to come; and utter destruction of France is the avowed desire, the declared necessity, of German statesmen and the German people. This, and the fact that Germany is ruled by men who flinch from no means of accomplishing their ends—this is what creates so much uneasiness in Europe; and Prince Bismarck is so curiously outspoken of opinion and purpose that the feeling of uneasiness is constantly kept up. He speaks with such contempt of France, people and government alike, as to prove that he is rather anxious to irritate than to soothe whatever sentiment of revenge may exist in the country. From time to time we have fresh reason to suspect that he is ready to resort to any plausible stratagem for forcing another war on them at the earliest moment. Thus to forestall France in her meditated war of revenge."

CHRISTIAN PERFECTION.

We are well convinced that many are opposed to the subject of christian perfection, because it has been put before them in a false light. If they should look at the subject as taught in the Bible, it would receive their admiration and most hearty acceptance, causing them to rejoice more than ever in the glorious possibilities that may be experienced by the christian in this life. The standard of religion has been so low in many localities, and so poorly exemplified by many professors, that the conclusion has become quite general, that he who preaches in favor of christian perfection must be a fanatic, or trying to cover up some dark deeds by professing to be extra religious. Satan, no doubt, has a special hatred against this subject, and has done, and will do all in his power to make it unpopular, hoping thereby to crush this precious Bible doctrine, and those who defend it. One of his most successful words of attack is to select for a sample, some one who has not lived in harmony with his profession, and then assume that his erroneous conduct was the result of his connection with the doctrine of christian perfection. He might just as well say that when any one backslides and does wrong, that he committed the crime because he was a believer in christianity and a professor of religion. The fact that some do not live in harmony with the Bible standard, affords no satisfactory evidence that others may not be kept free from condemnation.

By christian perfection, we do not mean perfection in knowledge, or wisdom. The Bible does not intimate that man will occupy a position in this life, where he is not liable to make mistakes, and err in judgment for lack of wisdom and knowledge. The more fully he is given up to Christ, the more completely he feels his own weakness, infirmities, and the need of a guide every moment. The christian can no more expect to be infallible in this world, than omnicient. Christian perfection does not imply freedom from temptation, infirmities, ignorance, mental and physical defects and weaknesses, or a conditon that does not admit of continual growth. Whoever claims to have reached a state where these things are unknown, we believe is self-deceived, and is in danger of falling into the snares of Satan, and bringing a reproach on the cause of Christ. To such it may be well be said, when ye think ye stand, "take heed lest ye fall.

Having said thus much on the negative side, we turn now to the positive, and remark, that we understand christian perfection to consist in freedom from sin, loving the Lord with all the heart, and our neighbor as ourselves. This blessed state is secured by entire consecration on our part, and then follows the gift of the Holy Spirit, which produces the perfect love, giving at the same time the witness that the heart is clean and free from sin. As we receive the gift, so we keep it, by complete submission to Christ, and unwavering trust in him, moment by moment.

Practical christianity may be summed up in three words: submission trust, and obedience, or yielding, faith and works. Neither of these alone will constitute a living member of Christ's body. But if our submission, trust and obedience were perfect, we should not then love God with all the heart, if he did not fill us with his Spirit. We cannot have true righthousness, or true holiness," only as the fruit of the Holy Spirit. Without that, we are like a machine with no power. The strength of the christian does not come by his own ability, "but by my Spirit saith the Lord." One may have submission and works, but "without faith it is impossible to please him" [God.] He may have submission and faith, but "faith without works is dead." He may have faith and works, but without submission he is still a rebel. He may have submission, faith and works, but without the aid of the Holy Spirit, he is still but a natural man. None can be christians without the help of divine power communicated by the Spirit.

Christian perfection, then, is the result of being filled with the perfect Spirit of God. The perfection is not ours, but his, and continues no longer than while we are filled with his Spirit. We can be thus filled no longer than our submission, trust, and obedience are complete. Hence it is left with us to decide whether we will be holy or unholy temples. The power of choice is in our own hands, and the Lord will not take possession of the heart against our wills.

It is a sad fact that but a small portion of professors of religion are ready to consecrate themselves unreservedly to the Lord, consequently, only a few know from happy experience their high privilege in Christ. Their peace is intermittent, instead of being like a flowing river, growing continually wider and deeper, as it approaches the ocean. Their sky is often clouded, their sun eclipsed, and condemnation is in their hearts. They have a taste for hymns like the following:

"Prone to wander, Lord, I feel it, Prone to leave the God I love."

Such language would not sound very well in a song coming from a young bride to her husband just before or after marriage. Does it sound any better when sung by one who professes to be a follower of Christ? Can he be pleased with a heart where there is so little room for his presence? One from which comes such a mournful, disconsolate song? Can such be the heart of a lover? Would such an one delight to hear that Jesus was coming soon? The promised "crown" is only to those who "love his appearing." This "Prone to wander" feeling may be all taken out by the gift of the Spirit, and we then feel just like singing:

"I am trusting, Lord, in thee,
Dear Lamb of Calvary;
Humbly at thy cross I bow,
Jesus saves me, saves me now."

When filled with the Spirit, the christian loves to sing:

"My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time and voice;
Myself, my reputation,
The lone way is my choice.
The cross for Christ I'll cherish,
Its crucifixion bear;
All hail, reproach or sorrow,
If Jesus leads me there."

TENT! TENT!
